DUKE—DAUGHTREY HOLLAND.

For the third time within less than a year, death has made a claim upon the Board of Deacons of the Holland Christian Church. This time, on February 14th, death claimed our dearly beloved friend and brother, Dr. Job G. Holland, a prominent citizen and physician of Nansemond County, Va. He was preceded to the great beyond by his brother-deacons, A. T. Duke, on April 26, 1930, and Eli Daughtrey on September 22, 1930; and,

Whereas, these three brother-deacons were not only citizens of the highest standing in the community, but loyal, generous and devoted workers in the Church, beloved and trusted as neighbors, friends and co-workers; now, therefore,

Be it resolved, That we graciously submit to the inevitable, which in the loss of these three brethren from our midst and from our Church, we trust shall also result in an eternal gain for the forces of the redeemed in Christ.

Be it further resolved, That we express our devoted sympathy to the bereaved members of the three families, and pray for the richest blessings of our Heavenly Father to be upon them and cause each dearly bereaved one to strive nobly in the faith that she had lived. The funeral services were conducted at Pleasant Hill Christian Church by the writer, assisted by Rev. J. U. Fogleman, and her body laid to rest in the Church cemetery. May the all-wise Father bless and comfort the bereaved.

Be it further resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be sent to each of the bereaved families, a copy to The Christian Sun, and a copy filed with the Church records.

THE CHURCHES vs. WAR.—

Rev. Cornelius Greenway, of All Souls' University Church, Brooklyn, N. Y., is a collector of autograph messages from the great or near-great. While Albert Einstein was in New York City, he gave Mr. Greenway an autograph photograph, written in German, reading as follows, in translation: "What we expect from the Churches of all denominations is the complete destruction of militarism." The Churches can do it if they will.

MISSIONS DEFICIT.—

The foreign mission deficit of the Church of Scotland for 1920 was 23,000 pounds, and the accumulated deficit 53,000 pounds. The committee has voted to pay off this deficit by using some spendable invested funds which were not earmarked by testators or donors for any special purpose. The announcement has just come of prospective funded legacies whose interest will help to overcome the loss of revenue, and the committee hopes the Church will support it in carrying out the minimum of reduction.

UNEMPLOYMENT PROMOTES READING.—

Unemployment continues in large volume in Portland, Oregon. Bond issues are projected in several cities to help care for the situation in the Northwest. This larger leisure produces some unexpected social results. Thus the Portland Public Library reports that the book circulation for the four months beginning November 1st has been 110,000 greater than for the corresponding period last year, and 52 per cent of the volumes drawn have been non-fiction. Serious times promote serious reading.

VISIT GERMANY.—

At a total cost of less than $40 to each scholar, a party of 350 Edinburgh school children are to make a tour of Germany this summer. The sixteen-day visit will embrace several of the larger towns of the Rhine district, where the authorities are making great preparations to welcome the children, and have arranged a number of public receptions. The visitors, who will include a number of Boy Scouts and Girl Guides, will entertain the German children with folk-songs and dances. Here is a new and better kind of "children's crusade." It will promote better international relations.

IMPORTANT APPOINTMENTS.—

A number of important appointments are announced in the Church of England. Dr. Percy Dearmer is to be canon of Westminster in place of the late Canon Charles. Dr. Dearmer is lecturer in art and professor of ecclesiastical art in King's College, London. He is a most eminent authority both upon the art and hymnology of the Church. Dr. Blunt is to be bishop of Bradford, and the archdeacon of Sheffield. Canon Darbyshire goes to be bishop of Glasgow and Calloway, while in the deanery of Canterbury Dr. Hewlett Johnson, dean of Manchester, succeeds Dr. "Dick" Sheppard.

BEECHER LECTURES.—

Rev. George A. Buttrick, of Madison Avenue Presbyterian Church, New York, is to deliver the Lyman Beecher lectures on preaching this year at the annual convocation of Yale Divinity School to be held April 13-15. Among his themes are, "Is There Room for the Preacher Today?" "Is Christ Still the Preachers' Authority?" "Preaching Christ to the Mind of Today," and "The Cross the Preachers' Supreme Inspiration." The Taylor lectures on theology will be delivered by Dr. Harris F. Rall, of Garrett Institute. Dr. H. Richard Niebuhr, of Eden Seminary, will be the alumni lecturer. He will speak on "Theology in a Time of Disillusionment."

SHANGHAI MISSION CENTER.—

Two buildings are being added to the growing center of missionary headquarters in the Yuen Ming Yuen area of Shanghai. One is being erected by the China Baptist Publication Society, and the other by the China Christian Literature Society. The structures are "twins" and are to be connected in such a way as to make them essentially one building. Close by are the mission building, the Central Y. M. C. A. and a Y. W. C. A. The Baptist body is moving its headquarters from Canton, where it has been for thirty years. Followers of Aimee Semple McPherson also announce the early erection of a temple in Shanghai to seat 2,000 persons.

STUDY INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS.—

The National Student Forum on the Paris Pact, Washington, D. C., is organizing an international relations observation tour for two months of travel and study in Europe the coming summer, July 23rd to September 21st. The group is to be composed of not more than fifteen high school students, carefully selected on the basis of the interest they have already shown in the elementary study of international relations. These selected fifteen will leave New York July 23rd and, during the two months of travel, will visit, among other points, London, Paris, The Hague, Berlin, Prague, Vienna, Milan, Geneva. Lectures and conferences will be carried on during the tour.

WHAT THRIFT IS.—

Thrift is a determination to live with a margin for future advancement; to earn a little more than one spends or to spend a little less than one earns, getting meanwhile the value in strength, in satisfaction or in other worthy return for the money one feels free to spend. The spirit of thrift is opposed to waste on the one hand and to recklessness on the other. It does not involve stinginess, which is an abuse of thrift, nor does it require that each item of savings should be a financial investment. The money that is spent in the education of one's self or of one's family, in travel, in music, in art, or in helpfulness to others, if it brings real returns in personal development or in a better understanding of the world we live in, is in accordance with the spirit of thrift.—David Starr Jordan.

PROJECT FOR SUNDAY SCHOOLS.—

The children and young people of this country now have the opportunity of extending a hand of friendship toward the children of Porto Rico. Governor Theodore Roosevelt, of the island, in his appeal to the American people, stated that 200,000 Porto Rican children are undernourished and starving. The Porto Rico child-feeding committee has been organized to meet this emergency. Arrangements were made for the co-operation of the Committee on World Friendship among the children with Col. Roosevelt's committee through a friendship project during March, April and May, friendship treasure chests being the goodwill symbol. Chests are to contain articles for school use, toys, friendship letters and cards indicating how many lunches (at 5 cents a lunch) have been provided by the sending group. Sunday schools are urged to make one item of their observance of World Good Will Sunday, May 17th, the sending of one or two chests. Full details of the plan may be secured from the Children's Committee, 289 Fourth Avenue, New York City.

PORTO RICANS GOOD CITIZENS.—

There are few in Porto Rico who fail to recognize the commercial advantages which have come to the island as result of its absorption by the United States. There are very few who would be willing to go back to the old relationship with Spain. There are few who are not loyal to the United States and who do not consider their destinies finally linked up with those of this great republic. One fine example of this is seen in their attitude during the World War. As soon as the United States declared war, Porto Rico asked that the draft act be made extensive to that island, although this was not necessary, and when the nation's call sounded, 121,241 of her sons responded. Porto Rico filled the quota assigned to her in the purchase of Liberty Bonds and carried to completion every work commended to her. In any other national crisis the Stars and Stripes will find no more loyal defenders than the manhood and womanhood of Porto Rico. Our mission work among such a people is worth while and should receive our liberal support. The mission call of the Church at this time should receive a hearty response in behalf of this people.

NOTES-PERSONALS

"The heavens declare the glory of God, and the firmament showeth His handiwork."—Psa. 19:1.

Rev. J. E. McCauley, pastor, is conducting a series of meetings, First Church, Norfolk, himself doing the preaching, assisted by Rev. J. F. Morgan and others as song leaders. Much interest is being manifested in the meetings.

"It is easy in the world to live after the world's opinion; it is easy in solitude to live after one's own; but the great man is he who, in the midst of the crowd, keeps with perfect sweetness the independence of his character."—Emerson.

Many of our Churches, particularly of the cities, are holding their evangelistic meetings following their Easter services. A most natural and logical consequence of services leading up to Easter and growing out of the spirit of that good day and the resurrection season.

Rev. H. C. Caviness recently held an evangelistic meeting of three weeks in First Church, Portsmouth, of which he is pastor, the meeting resulting in renewed and quickened life in the Church, the conversion of many, and the accession of fifty or more to the Church membership.

Only through self-denial on the part of Church members can the work of the kingdom be carried on. It was so intended of our Lord, and we follow Him and His teaching when we deny ourselves, take up our cross and give out of our living and out of our need, that His work may be carried on.

Rev. F. C. Lester, pastor of our Waverly Church, is planning, with a party of four, to take the trip to Seattle on automobile and give himself sufficient time in attending the National Council and General Convention of Congregational and Christian Churches to see the sights on his journey across the continent and back.

Rev. M. T. Sorrell, Danville, Va., recently held a meeting of a week at Ingram, Va., Rev. H. C. Caviness assisting and doing the preaching for four nights of the week. Bro. Sorrell reports a glorious revival, with ten accessions to the Church. Pastor Sorrell is this week attending a school of religion at Vanderbilt University, Nashville.

Dr. N. G. Newman, pastor of the Holy Neck Church, who suffered illness some weeks ago, is entirely recovered and in the work again, THE SUN's editor having the privilege of worshipping with and preaching for his congregation at Holy Neck, Sunday, April 5th, at 11 A. M. Despite the constant downpour of rain, the congregation was good for such a day and in a rural section.

Dr. G. O. Lankford recently celebrated the tenth anniversary of his pastorate of the Burlington Christian Church. The Burlington Daily Times carried an appreciative account of the event, which is published elsewhere in THE SUN. There is no pastor held in more loving esteem, not only by his people but by the whole Church. It may be said of him as of but few, "They love him."

Easter Sunday throughout the section where THE CHRISTIAN SUN circulates was a day of thick clouds and heavy rains. On this account, thousands were kept from Church who would otherwise have been there for Easter services. Those Churches that had planned to take the mission offering on that day and did take it will give opportunity for further offering in the next two or three Sundays.

Practically all the pastors of the Eastern Virginia Conference attended one or more of the woman's missionary rallies held in the four groups of that Conference last week. Our Eastern Virginia pastors have at heart all the work of the Church, and this is as it should be. There were from six to ten pastors at each rally, and the women were happy to have them and felt encouraged by their presence and counsel.

One of the very happy pastors of our Eastern Virginia Conference is Rev. J. F. Morgan, who now rejoices in the completion of a beautiful and impressive house of worship, with numerous and ample rooms and accommodations for Bible school and religious education. The Church was paid for as built, and the larger plant is already attracting larger audiences and increasing numbers in Church and Sunday School.

The Woman's Missionary Society of Union Church, Union Ridge, N. C., held its monthly meeting at the home of Mrs. Willie Pace Thursday night, April 9, 1931, with twelve members and four visitors present. The topic of the lesson, "Breaking Down Other Barriers," was a study of the ninth chapter of the Book of Acts. An hour was spent in the discussion of the lesson. After being served delicious refreshments by the hostess, the society adjourned to meet with Mrs. Jasper Garrison in May.

"Why are the men of the Christian Church not interested in missions like our women are?" is a question often asked with painful emphasis. One reason is our men do not take the time to learn about missions; and secondly, they do not give, as the women do, to missions. "Where your treasure is, there will your heart be also." In our annual offering for missions in all the Churches now, the men should be given a chance and urged to make contributions somewhat equaling at least the contributions by the women.

The Associated Press states that Secretary of State Stimson, in Washington, D. C., held a telephone conversation the other day with William M. Jardine, American minister to Egypt, who was then in Cairo, a distance of 6,000 miles. Ours also is a day of wonders and miracles. There was no wire to connect and no links that bound the two capitals together other than the infinite and intervening spaces. That one may talk with another 6,000 miles away with no visible chord or coil to carry the message seems incredible. Only the great, infinite and all-powerful God could make such a thing possible.

Our Holland Church, Dr. W. M. Jay, pastor, put on an Easter missionary cantata Sunday night, April 5th. The ladies of the missionary society sponsored the cantata and, assisted by the choir, certainly gave a wholesome and inspiring program. At the conclusion of the cantata, the Mission Secretary had the privilege of addressing the congregation on the subject of "Missions," which followed naturally in line with the program of the evening. Dr. and Mrs. Jay are happy in their good work of the pastorate, with increasing congregations and growing interest in the various organizations and phases of the Church life.

One of the best equipped plants for Sunday School and religious education work we have seen in connection with our Churches is that at Waverly, Va. At great cost a religious education building has been joined to the Church, and there are some fourteen or fifteen rooms, with auditoriums for the senior, junior and intermediate departments; and there are rooms for the little tots, the primaries, and in fact for all ages in the Sunday School. These rooms are just now being completed, but the Sunday School enrollment has almost doubled without any particular drive or pressure as a result of better facilities with which to work. We know nothing that adds so much to the worth of a Church as that of an adequate plant for Bible school and religious education purposes. We congratulate Pastor Lester and the good people of Waverly on their splendid achievement in this field.

TEN YEARS OF SERVICE.

The following is reprinted from the Burlington, N. C., Daily Times of April 3rd:

The approaching Sunday marks the tenth anniversary of the services of Dr. G. O. Lankford as pastor of the First Christian Church of this city. He began his work in this Church on the first Sunday of April, 1921, and during the years that have followed, the Church has experienced an era of growth and progress. All departments of the Church at present are active, aggressive and growing.

It will probably not be without interest to the people of the community that certain statistics be given indicating in some measure the service rendered and the progress made during the period of service involved. The following figures, therefore, are given: Sermons and addresses delivered during the period, 1,362; visits, 8,000; funerals conducted, 132; marriages solemnized, 101. During this decade the pastor has received into the Church a total of 450 members, this being a larger number than the total enrollment at the beginning of this period.

In addition to the statistics mentioned, it is not without significance that the Church's offerings in all departments have steadily gone forward from year to year. Although there is no way of determining the exact amounts that have been given to all causes during these years, it is estimated that $50,000 has been contributed to missions and benevolences, and a total of more than $150,000 to all causes.

During the years that Dr. Lankford has been in Burlington, he has been connected with various community enterprises. As pastor of this Church here, he instituted the daily vacation Bible school work in the community. He has been active and interested in the Boy Scout work, being in a large way responsible for the success of this work in the community. He has always stood for a wider spirit of co-operation and fellowship among the Churches in the community, and the fine spirit of good will and co-operation which exists between the Churches today is due to a large extent to his untiring efforts along this line.

The Church is honoring the occasion of his tenth anniversary as pastor in various ways. There have been phone calls, cards and personal greetings. The outstanding event in this connection was the gathering on Wednesday night last after the midweek service. At this time, J. M. Fix and D. E. Sellars, speaking for the Church, stated that in honor of the pastor's tenth anniversary and as an expression of the Church's friendship, love and good will and as an evidence of the Church's appreciation of the services rendered during these ten years, a supply of gifts were to be presented him and his family at this time. Consequently, an old-time pounding followed and the parsonage pantry was loaded to capacity. Besides this, many personal gifts of various kinds were presented.

CONGREGATIONAL NEWS

REV. E. C. GILLETTE, Editor; REV. F. P. ENSMINGER, and REV. M. J. SWEET, Associates.

PALM CITY, FLA.: This Church has recently organized a Christian Endeavor Society. It has also paid the first half of its apportionment for the year.

REV. JAMES W. DAVENPORT, former pastor at Thorsby, Ala., was welcomed back by the whole town as the annual preacher for the pre-Easter services.

REV. JAMES I. BARKER, of Tallassee, had a special day at his Church on Palm Sunday. Rev. Lucy T. Ayres and Miss Marguerite Davison spoke and helped with the program.

TAMPA, FLA.: This Church greatly enjoyed an Easter visit from their former pastor, Rev. Milo J. Sweet, and Mrs. Sweet, accompanied by Miss Grace Thompson, Mrs. Sweet's sister.

MRS. MARION DOPSON, who has been seriously ill in a Montgomery hospital, is improved in health and has returned to her husband, who is pastor of two Churches of the Central Alabama Association.

DR. JASON NOBLE PIERCE has written music which the Collegese Church used on Palm Sunday. It was printed on the Church calendar. A choir from Ward-Belmont College led the singing for this Church.

DR. C. REXFORD RAYMOND has received much favorable newspaper publicity for his contribution of themes on current interest. In discussing the evolution law, which is a topic of perennial interest in Tennessee, he has been able to bring out the special values that come from an unbiased study of God's truth in nature.

ONE PASTOR (full-time service for two Churches): Rev. J. M. Trosper, of Corbin, Ky., has discovered how to maintain morning and night preaching services at his Churches at Corbin and Evarts. At Evarts, school teachers supply in his absence; at Corbin, the Y. M. C. A. secretaries render their service. Mrs. Trosper helps at Corbin.

REV. M. L. THRASHER, in the South Alabama Association, entertained Secretary A. W. Sparks, showing him three of his fields and having him speak three times at Antioch Church. The two then paid a visit to Rev. C. E. Burkett and Rev. J. H. Bell, holding a service at Liberty Church. Secretary Sparks was pleased with the trip.

JUPITER, FLA.: The Young People's Society of this Church recently entertained the members of the Young People's Society of the West Palm Beach Church at a swimming and supper party, followed by a meeting on the beach. The men of this Church recently conducted an every-member canvass, which was so successful as to arouse special enthusiasm on the part of the Church.

PROF. C. C. HAUN, of the Vanderbilt University School of Religion, Nashville, Tenn., has been very busy enrolling students for the Rural Church School, which meets from April 6th to 17th, and is the largest of its kind in America. He is also a lecturer in the school. One of Prof. Haun's activities is supervision of two schools of religion students, Mr. Sidney Davies and Mr. Arnold Slater, in the work of the Community Church at Ridgetop, Tenn.

WEST TAMPA MISSION: Rev. Carl H. Corwin, pastor, writes: "The special Communion at the close of Lent was held this year on Palm Sunday, with deep interest. Five mothers and three children were welcomed to Church membership on confession of faith. All the mothers had children in the services. Some of them had little children in their arms when they came forward to take the Church covenant and receive the right hand of fellowship. This was a beautiful sight."

SECRETARY A. W. SPARKS returned to the national headquarters of the Christian Church, in Dayton, Ohio, after three months spent in Alabama, with headquarters in Birmingham. He visited Churches in the Christian Conferences and Central and South Alabama Associations and also the educational institutions at Wadley and Thorsby. In his written survey, he is to relate the needs of the rural Churches of a central Church in Birmingham representing both Congregational and Christian. He made many friends and pleased the people by his preaching. Birmingham, with its rapid growth and wonderful opportunities, interested him. The survey revealed an excellent location and fine property for the United Church.

COCONUT GROVE, FLA.: Rev. J. Delman Kuykendall, D. D., pastor. A very beautiful garden party was given for members and friends of this Church by Mrs. Arthur Curtis James at her beautiful estate, "Four-Way Lodge." Dinner was served for about two hundred and fifty on the beautiful lawn, followed by entertainment. This Church has a most unusual young people's organization, known as the Yomarco Club. The name indicates its character, being the first syllables of the words, "Young Married Couples." Only those can join who are married, and there are about twenty such couples in the membership. The president is a husband and wife, and the same plan obtains for each of the other officers. The organization is for social and serious purposes.

MISS MARGUERITE DAVISON, in a personal letter, writes as follows: "Here is the latest news of my doings. I attended the Southern Mountain Workers' Conference, held in Knoxville, March 24-26, a most helpful and inspirational meeting. Folks from Pleasant Hill were there with bells on. Dr. May Horton, of the Up-lands Sanatorium, Principal and Mrs. Elder, and ever so many of the teachers and staff. It was a regular old home week, as far as Pleasant Hill folks are concerned. Rev. and Mrs. Day, from Robbins, were there, too. The work in the mountains was threshed out from every point of view almost, and we all thought we knew more when it was over. I know that I am much better acquainted with the scope of the work and the workers. These interdenominational group conferences are very helpful, I think, from a contact standpoint, if for no other reason."

CHRISTIAN LIFE Conference of Georgia and Alabama, March 27-29th, was a great success. It was held at Lanett, and everybody rises up in praise of the unusually splendid way in which the people of Pastor Dollar's Church entertained the crowd. It was interesting to see how the Christian young people and those of the Congregational Church so heartily unite. It surely looked good. These young people know how to make the union of the two denominations work. Pastors and delegates from both groups co-operated in every conceivable way, and pastors from both were on the program. Among the Congregational people participating were Miss Annie Campbell, extension worker for South Georgia; Miss Dora Brackin, Sunday School organizer and extension worker in Alabama and part-time service in South Georgia; Prof. Lyle Percy, of Piedmont College; Rev. C. C. Hamilton, now of Columbus, acting pastor; a group of students from Piedmont Church, other delegates and the pastor-at-large. Rev. W. C. Carpenter was elected president for the third time, and Rev. L. L. Stanley, vice-president. Next year the meeting goes to LaGrange.

NASHVILLE, TENN.: Collegese, the pastorate of Dr. Jason Noble Pierce, has opened up most auspiciously and during the first two months there were 38 additions to the Church, including 14 members from the faculty of Vanderbilt University and other educational institutions in the city. Congregations are increasing. The Church school is functioning in a strong way, and the Collegese House social and educational activities are proving to be very much worth while. In addition to his regular pastoral work, Dr. Pierce is lecturing to the students of Vanderbilt University School of Religion in connection with his appointment to the chair of preaching. The purpose of Collegese Church is expressed as follows: To bring a spirit of love to little children; instructions and high ideals to youth; inspiration to men and women in the midst of life; comfort, peace and fellowship to the aged; to labor together under the leadership of Jesus for a better civilization of brotherly men. In addition to the regular Church and educational activities, the Collegese membership is interested in the Ridgetop and Tennessee Ridge rural communities, the leadership of which includes a group of students from Atlanta Theological Seminary Foundation. Three other students are also on the staff of Collegese Church School.

EASTER IN THE CHURCHES.

We have heard from some of the Florida pastors relative to their Easter services, but no doubt others have had equally fine observances of the day. Rev. O. T. Anderson, of Fort Myers, writes that, in spite of the heavy rains, they had the largest Easter attendance they ever had. They received seven new members into the Church at the Holy Week Communion service.

Dr. E. A. King writes that at Miami Beach the Sunday School met out-of-doors with 350 children on the lawn. The morning service was attended by an audience that began coming at 10:15 for the 11 o'clock service. Two hundred and fifty children attended the annual Easter egg hunt on Saturday, one feature of which is the visit of old Rosie, the elephant. Forty thousand attended the Easter sunrise service on the beach.

Rev. Watson L. Lewis, of New Smyrna, writes that, in spite of the torrents of rain, they had a fine Easter. The Sunday School had a wonderful program, "one of the best I have ever seen in any Church." In the evening, an Easter concert was given, the music being of very fine quality.

At Palm City the Sunday School gave a fine program, and the same was true at West Palm Beach. There the young people gave an Easter pageant. The pulpit was supplied both morning and evening by Superintendent Gillette, and there were fine congregations in spite of the rain.

The Coral Gables Church also enjoyed a beautiful Easter service, with an attendance of over five hundred. At the Sanford Church, an Easter pageant was presented in the evening entitled "Barabbas." At the morning service fifteen new members were received, twelve of them being upon confession of faith. As many families in this Church are of Lutheran traditions, those who wish may unite by confirmation.

PRINCIPLES OF THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

(1) The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.

(2) Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.

(3) The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.

(4) Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship and of Church membership.

(5) The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by, all.

THE PURPOSE OF THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

The purpose of this Church is to cultivate a spirit of union among the followers of our Lord Jesus Christ of every persuasion, and to secure, if possible, the associate efforts of all true religious teachers in pointing the wicked to "the Lamb of God who taketh away the sin of the world."

The peculiar doctrines and tenets which have confused and distracted the Christian world are remanded to private judgment, and hence cease to be matters for debate, only in so far as may be necessary to prevent a sectarian influence from entering the Church.

This Church requires no compromise of faith on the part of any child of God in order to communion or fellowship; here, denominational distinctions cease to exist, and Christian love binds the brotherhood together.

The purpose of this Church will be consummated in the conversion of the world and the union of all Christians.

COLOR.

After the dull, drab chilling repose of winter, how glad and glorious is the newly awakened life and the revelry of spring color! Every shade, hue and tint of green now greets and gladdens the eye. There are more shades and degrees of green than of any other color, we presume it is more restful and furnishes more richness and relief to the human eye. But for the prevailing green and over-hanging blue of field and forest and sky, mankind, all of us, would go blind; the eye would simply become exhausted and its energy depleted. Green greets the eye to gladden it, to rest and refresh it, as well as to accelerate its energy and activity for the keen enjoyment of other colors.

Next in richness and restfulness to the eye is yellow. No wonder gold is counted one of the precious metals. Its very color is priceless and precious to the sight of man. For the past ten days the rich and prolific jonquils, God bless them, have painted the landscape with their rich and wavy yellow blossoms. The writer passed a field of jonquils, spreading acres, a wide sea of yellow, where they were picking and packing thousands of dozens of these delicate blossoms to go by hurried mail and fast express to Northern markets. The field was an intoxicating revelry of color to look upon; gladsome indeed to the eye and the soul. The human being who can't enjoy a waving field of gold hasn't much soul.

And then wherever there is a peach tree in a field or garden, forest or lawn, there now is a lovely tint of blushing pink or a deepening red to greet the eye and rejoice the heart. The pear and the plum are blanketed, their entire foliage with spotless and immaculate white. Along every branch and hedge, buds are bursting and fragrant, nameless blossoms blink and beam forth, as they spread their blankets of beauty over a landscape come but now from death to life. When we poor mortals paint and blend our colors, we are limited to a canvas 10x12 and to two or three colors only on the canvas. When the good God gets ready to exhibit a picture, He paints a landscape of rich color, so that the human eye may be gladdened in its every niche and nerve, and that the whole soul of man may rejoice and be glad. Blind indeed is the man now who cannot say with the writer of Genesis 2:8: "And the Lord God planted a garden; and there He put man." Whether man keeps and beautifies the garden which God has planted, or whether he desecrates and destroys it, God has done His part. He has glorified His creation with color and charm and unmatched beauty.

Recently a friend wished to know, "Where is paradise, and when does it begin, here or hereafter?" Our reply was that "Paradise begins here or hereafter, whenever and wherever there is perfect happiness." One is constrained to believe that God planted a garden and painted it with infinite and profuse color, that man might be blessed in it, get a taste or at least a glimpse of Paradise and perfect happiness here, and through this happiness that comes from cultivating and keeping and looking upon the rich riot of color be the better prepared for that infinite and eternal happiness to come.

If a human being cannot enjoy the color in garden and field and forest and landscape now, one must, indeed, have not only a dull eye, but a cold, dead heart also, and certainly one that is not yet ready to enjoy Paradise or have complete happiness here or hereafter. Spring-time beauty, with its bounty of life and blessings of color, is, indeed, a gift of God, and, like the heavens above, joins in declaring that God is good, gracious and glorious, worthy of our highest praise and holiest adoration.

FAILING OUR OPPORTUNITIES.

Rev. F. C. Lester, Waverly, Va., in a recent public utterance, gave some interesting statistics from the Eastern Virginia Conference, showing how far results failed of measuring up to opportunities. The Conference reports 47 Churches, in 29 of which there are Woman's Missionary Societies. That is to say, about two-thirds of the Churches in that Conference have missionary societies. The average membership of the societies in the Conference is 30. The average amount given by each of the 30 societies is $154.62 annually, or $5.28 per member. The average membership of the Churches in which there are societies is 230. The average membership of Churches in the Conference not having societies is 89. That is to say, 13 per cent of the Church membership is in the Woman's Missionary Society, 10 per cent of the Church membership is in the Young People's Missionary Society, and the young people who are members of missionary societies gave last year $2.60 per member. The 13 per cent of the Church membership in the Woman's Society, and the 10 per cent Church membership in the Young People's Society gave last year $6,090.23. If they had had 100 per cent in their societies giving at the same rate, the gifts to missions through the missionary societies alone would have been $26,408, giving at the same rate as those did who were in the societies.

These figures prove conclusively, if any proof were needed, that the missionary society in a Church is the leaven in the lump, and that if the whole Church membership could be enlisted for missions, even to the extent that the women of the societies are now enlisted, and give as the women and young people of the societies now give, we Christians would not have to hang our heads in shame and regret as we now have to do when our missionary giving is compared with that of other and with real missionary denominations.

The saddest and most pitiful fact that we Christians face is the meager amount we give to missions in proportion to the amount that we could and should give, and in proportion to the amount we must learn to give if we are to grow as a people and take our places along with other denominations in enlarging the kingdom of our Lord on earth. With polity and principles as heavenly and as holy as any branch of the Church ever had, the one reason why we have not grown any more rapidly as a people is because of our indifference to missions, and because we have not obeyed the challenge and the command of our Lord to make His love and life known to others.

J. O. A.

THE WORST KIND OF RELIGION.

James Russell Lowell many years ago wrote that which we may yet profit by:

"The worst kind of religion is no religion at all, and these men living in ease and luxury, indulging themselves in the amusement of going without religion, may be thankful they live in a land where the gospel they neglect has tamed the beastliness and ferocity of man, who but for Christianity might long ago have eaten their bodies like the South Sea islanders or cut off their heads and tanned their skins like the monsters of the French Revolution."

The irreligious, the indifferent and unconcerned receive the blessings and benefits of religion, and yet give neither their influence nor their money to its support. And the greatest movement of religion, a movement instituted of God and carried on through His Son in the Church, is that of missions. There are many in the Church who get the benefits and blessings of missionary preaching and teaching, of missionary activity, and yet they are unwilling to give their consent, their prayers and their money to missions. They do not want, they will not have, a non-missionary God or gospel. They can't believe in a God who wants to save some people in one land and is not equally anxious to save people of another land. They can't and they won't believe in a God who is a respecter of persons and who wants the few to be saved and the many lost. They know if they have any religion that God and not man instituted the missionary program, and has carried it on through the years, and that they today have Churches and preaching and the benefits of it, solely because of missions, even foreign missions, in previous generations and to their ancestors. They would possibly be bowing down to idols today, worshiping they know not what gods of their own creation, but for the fact that there were missionaries, foreign missionaries, in other days who made religion possible for them today. Lowell was right, the worst kind of religion is no religion, and next to the worst kind is a restricted religion, a religion that is paralyzed, religion that is selfish, religion that cares for one's own soul and household, but careth not that those to the uttermost parts shall perish. To all such we commend most heartily some further words of Lowell:

"When the microscopic search of skepticism which has haunted the heavens and searched the seas to disprove the existence of the Creator, has turned its attention to human society and has found a place on the planet ten miles square where a decent man can live in decency, comfort and security, supporting and educating his children unspoiled and unpolluted; a place where age is revered, infancy respected, womanhood honored, and human life held in due regard—when skeptics can find such a place ten miles square on this globe where the gospel of Christ has not gone and cleared the way and laid the foundation and made decency and security possible, it will then be in order for the skeptical literati to move thither and ventilate their views."

No, James Russell Lowell wrote the eternal truth when he declared that there is not a place on this planet, ten miles square, where a decent man can live in decency, where the gospel of Christ has not gone and cleared the way and laid the foundation. The security of our property, our lands and our lives depends upon religion which we need so much, and yet which we often scorn and treat so indifferently. J. O. A.

HE SPOKE WISELY.

Hon. Nicholas Longworth, speaker of the national House of Representatives and who died in Aiken, S. C., April 9th, in adjourning a recent session of Congress, is quoted by the Washington Post of April 11th as using the following closing words:

"My colleagues, I need not say that I am profoundly grateful for this demonstration of your affection. Perhaps this is the last time that I will address you from this rostrum (laughter and applause). I do not mean to insinuate that I regard it as a probability, but I must admit it is a possibility. The decision lies with none of us here. It is a decision that lies with an all-wise Providence. With whatever Providence may decree, I am abundantly satisfied."

The Post, in commenting, says that Speaker Longworth used the remarks as an ironical illusion to the uncertainty of politics. Politics are uncertain, and so is life. Very often that which is said in jest comes true in earnest. The speaker's words were fraught with more meaning than at the time he could have anticipated, since he was to breathe his last in a few, brief weeks, and so was in the hands of Providence, and went out to meet face to face the one in whose hands all of us are and who controls the destinies of mankind. No man knoweth what a day, much less a month or a year, will bring forth. "Be ye also ready, for in such an hour as ye think not the Son of man cometh." J. O. A.

TAXES AND CONTRIBUTIONS.

Tax is a compulsory contribution upon persons, property, or business for the support of government. It differs from contributions to support the Church in her effort to save the world. Both State and Church have their obligations and problems to solve, and people find fault and make mistakes in both fields. Most citizens feel that tax is a burden, some of them maneuver to avoid the payment of taxes, and most of them put off the payment until the last date allowed. Those who sit in the legislatures and levy the taxes are exposed to criticism and often are incompetent to work out a system of taxation that will meet the needs of government and be just to all subjects of taxation. Often the leader in the solution of this problem is one without experience and limited in business judgment. Under such conditions, unjust taxes may be imposed that fall too heavily upon some persons, some property and some business. The effort may be honest and the conclusion may be unjust. It takes time and patience to solve such questions as really change with changed conditions. When business is prosperous it is easier to pay taxes than when business is depressed. The same is true of raising money by voluntary contributions to carry on the work of the Church. In both cases it is necessary to reduce personal expenses to be able to meet taxes and Church obligations. When real estate is high, assessment for taxes is raised; then when real estate drops in price, taxes are burdensome.

The same is true in the Church when expenses are increased in prosperous times, debts are contracted on that scale, and then hard times come and money is hard to raise.

It is said that there are two sides to every question, and it may be so in both of these cases. We overlook the benevolent side of such burdens. Poor people sometimes think they have the hardest time; and yet, those who pay no taxes and make no Church contributions, share in the benefits and blessings of both Church and State equally with those who struggle to pay their taxes and their Church dues. The concrete sidewalks, the street lights, the police protection are in use for the non-taxpayer as well as the citizen who finds it hard to pay his taxes. The same is true of the Church. The individual who is unable to pay anything to the Church has the same privileges as the largest contributor in the Church and that group struggling to pay off Church debts. The children can go to Sunday School, get the literature, enjoy the heat and music, the instruction and fellowship of the Church as well as the richest who attend. The Church and the State are both benevolent. The public school, which is the product of Christianity, is opened with equal opportunity to the rich and the poor. The people who have the most for what they earn are the poor in the Church and in the State. W. W. S.

WHAT GLADSTONE DID.

Where certain lines in the face of Gladstone came from, we learn from such incidents as that related by Sir Francis Crossley, to whom it was told by the vicar of St. Martin's-in-the-Fields. The vicar had recently been to see a crossing-sweeper in his parish, who was ill.

"Has any one been to see you," he asked.

"Yes, Mr. Gladstone."

"But how came he to visit you?" inquired the vicar, who could not understand why the chancellor of the exchequer, although then living in the parish, should call upon a sick crossing-tender.

"Well," answered the crossing-sweeper, "he always had a nice word for me when he passed my crossing, and when I was not there he missed me. He asked my mate, who had taken my place, where I was, and when he heard that I was ill he asked for my address, and put it down on paper. So he called to see me."

"And what did he do?" asked the vicar.

"Why, he read from the Bible and prayed," was the reply.

To be loyal to the interests of every man, how characteristic was this of the magnanimous Gladstone! Indeed, how Christ-like was such a service!—O. S. Marden.

Fifty Thousand Dollars for Missions!

A CALL TO SELF-DENIAL

Through self-denial, the Kingdom of Heaven is built on earth. The cattle upon a thousand hills are His; likewise, the gold and the silver, and the world's wealth. Yet, in financing His Kingdom on earth, Jesus, the Son of God, saw fit to adopt and use the method of self-denial. He gave the great example and denied Himself of even a place on which to lay His head. He gave all for our sake. He calls upon us to give something for His sake, not out of our abundance, but out of our need.

The greatest task conceived by the mind of man, or the wisdom of God, is that of giving the whole Gospel to the whole world, and this task has been, and is being, borne and achieved solely through self-denial.

It is a spiritual challenge, and must be accepted, if at all, through self-denial. If CHRISTIAN SUN readers shall reap the benefits and enjoy the blessings of spiritual enrichment, they will do so by following their Lord in denying themselves of some real value in His name and for His sake.

To this end, the Mission Board, in trying to carry forward the work assigned to it by the Church for which $50,000 is called for this year, is inviting all SUN readers and Church members to deny themselves of some valuable thing, or indulgence, and give the price of it to Missions. Only through self-denial will our own lives be enriched and will our goal for our Lord be achieved. Jesus proved Himself our Friend by the supreme sacrifice. Now He wants us, and needs us, to be His friends, and we can only prove that friendship by making a sacrifice for His sake. This we can do through self-denial.

SUFFOLK LETTER.

Miss Florence A. Harvey, a graduate of Obelin College and music, was once a teacher of music in the Suffolk Collegiate Institute, and leader of the Suffolk Christian Church choir for thirty years. At the present time she resides in the Presser Home for retired music teachers in Philadelphia. While in Suffolk she taught a private school of music and also taught music in the Finney School for Young Women. By these three contacts, as a music teacher, and by reason of her musical gifts and education, she did more in the field of music than any other person who has ever taught and led in Suffolk. It is safe to say that Suffolk is a city of fine Church music in all the Churches; and much of this is due to the personal life and musical instruction of Miss Harvey. She put her pupils forward on all public occasions instead of herself; and thus, unconsciously, demonstrated her ability as a teacher.

Recently some of her private school pupils in Suffolk conceived the idea of a unique entertainment by getting a number of them together to repeat, in dress as well as music, school-day experiences. The girls took to the idea with willingness to do what was necessary for such an occasion. The idea was conceived by Mrs. Telza Miller, and the following took part in the services: Mrs. Telza Miller, Mrs. J. C. West, Mrs. W. T. Elliott, Mrs. J. E. Rawls, Mrs. Emma Moseley, Mrs. Robert Hotton, Mrs. Clyde Nelms, Mrs. Emily Crocker, Mrs. William Crumpler, Mrs. Alfred Bowen, Mrs. S. S. Stallings, Mrs. Addie Barham, Mrs. C. M. Yerby, Miss Inez King, Miss Marie Woodward, Mrs. Ethel Saunders.

The meeting was held in the fellowship hall of the Christian Church. Photographer Hamblin took a picture of the class before the exercises began. The hall was filled with anxious gazers, who listened with admiration to a commencement repeated by sixteen women, dressed as they were for commencement when they were girls. It was an inspiring picture of other days and a commencement equal to commencements of the present time. The hall was decorated and the two hundred and fifty auditors were thrilled by the program from start to finish. It was as follows: Opening class song, "Jinkle Bells," by the school; piano solo, "At the Party," by Rosa Bruce; recitation, "Minuet," Mary Truitt; Piano duet, "The Race Course," Jamie Carr and Katie Brown; vocal solo, "Once in the By-Gone Days," Ethel Butler; reading, "Well, Then, I'm Yourn," Em Holland; piano solo, "Carissinea," Telza Smith; musical reading, "I Doubt It," Emmie Butler; vocal solo, "April Ecstasy," Telza Smith; piano duet, "Under the Linden Tree," Viola Saunders and Rosa Bruce; closing class song, "When Your Hair Has Turned to Silver," Katie Beamon and the school. The above names are their maiden names while in school.

Before the entertainment, a supper was served, with Miss Florence A. Harvey, Miss Daisy Nurney and this writer as guests. At the supper, Mrs. J. C. West (nee Katie Beamon) welcomed Miss Harvey in sweet words, and Miss Harvey responded with grateful appreciation of the memories the occasion celebrated. This writer invoked the divine blessing, and a good supper did the rest. It was an occasion that brought to the individual performers fruits, flowers and other presents that told of loving hearts.

ELON LETTER.

The discovery of the individual is the outstanding achievement of the Christian religion. There are eleven so-called living religions today, rating Christianity and Judaism as separate religions. Not one of these religions, except Christianity, has properly evaluated the individual soul. Some of these religions deny the existence of the soul and others of them teach that individuality is a curse. They avowedly encourage their adherents to expect the absorption of the individual spirit-substance, whatever that may be, into the all-soul substance. The chief evil, they teach, is personality. But it is entirely different with the Christian religion. Jesus taught the infinite worth and value of the individual life. So infinitely valuable did He regard the individual life that He, in a bold figure, placed it on one side of the balance and the wealth of the world on the other side, and then declared that the individual life outweighed all the wealth of the world.

We need not, therefore, be surprised to find the germinating principle of the individual's worth constantly tending to express itself with increasing force and clarity through the Christian centuries. It was nearly eighteen hundred years after the coming of Jesus before such a government as the United States could appear in human history. We do not claim that the United States is perfect as a democracy. What we are trying to say is that there would have been no democracy such as we have here in the United States or elsewhere in the world if it had not been for the teaching of Jesus. The liberation which has come to childhood and to womanhood as a direct consequence of the teaching of Jesus, as to the individual's worth, is equally noteworthy during the Christian centuries with the development of democracy which we have cited. Just at this particular time the spirit of democracy, which is but another expression for the recognition of individual worth, is mightily influencing educational theory. We find that modifications of the curriculum in terms of individual need go steadily forward. This tendency has made educational costs mount, but educators have been willing to accept the mounting cost because they believe in individual worth. The crown and the glory of the Christian religion is a perfected personality. Toward this achievement every institution and every influence that touches our life should concentrate its attention.

But there is another side to the picture. Jesus recognized the individual's infinite worth, but He also recognized that the individual owes allegiance to God. There is freedom and full liberty for the exercise of one's powers Jesus taught, but these powers and this freedom are to be exercised in terms of our relationship to God as Father and to our fellow-man as brother. There are patterns for life, and the individual man pays a heavy penalty when he departs from these patterns. This does not reduce life to dull uniformity. It is rather an encouragement for the individual to express himself in accordance with standards that have been tested through experience and have the Divine approval. The creation of these patterns does not thwart individual expression, but encourages man by giving him assurance that God is interested in the aspirations and the achievements of his individual life.

Some years ago a great preacher said that the individual soul is a masterpiece of the Divine Architect. This great seer in the spiritual realm also declared that God had a plan for each individual life and that no life can be said eventually to have succeeded unless it has constructed itself according to the Divine plan adopted for it. We have become so modest in these latter days that some of us have concluded that the great preacher was wrong and that human pride had suggested to the mind of this man that God is personally interested in the individual's welfare. Let us not forget in this connection that Jesus said no sparrow falls without the knowledge of our Father, and that even the hairs of our head are all numbered. Evidently Jesus believed that God is interested in the individual's welfare. And it does add a dignity to life and vest every experience with eternal significance when we are convinced that the great Architect of the universe has a pattern for our individual life.

We find that patterns are necessary in the construction of a building. We know them as blueprints and are willing to pay liberally for them. We have learned by experience that plans are necessary for the construction of worthy buildings. The same principles of architecture may be employed in a thousand different Churches, and no two of them will look alike. Yet, in essence, each one of them will be constructed according to the pattern for a building. The architect who should undertake to depart from the accepted principles of building construction too far will not only bring loss to the owner of such a building, but will produce an abnormality offensive to the best taste.

In the profession which a man chooses he certainly feels that he has liberty of self-expression, and yet there are certain professional ethics or patterns of conduct from which he must not depart unless he expects to lose the confidence and approval of his associates in the same calling. A physician, for example, is forbidden to advertise, and the whole profession frowns upon any member of the group who undertakes to patent a remedy or discovery which he has found of especial value in the relief of human suffering. The other professions have equally rigid ethical codes, and yet, despite the presence of these patterns of conduct, there is wide room for individuality and for personal and distinctive achievement.

W. A. HARPER.

THE CHURCH ALONE IS RESPONSIBLE.

God's great agent for the spread of His kingdom is His Church. In every land He operates through the Church, and missions operate distinctly for the Church. Every Church should work out into a mission and every mission into a Church. The primary aim of missions is to preach the gospel in all lands; the ultimate aim is to plant the Church in all lands. When they have done that, their task is accomplished. Then the Church of each land, thus planted, must win its own people to Christ. The converts must convert, the new Church must evangelize and Christianize. India, China, Japan are each to be turned to Christ, not by missions but by the Indians, the Chinese, the Japanese Churches, when these Churches have been securely planted by missions.—A New Era in Missions, by Wark.

PRIDE AND HUMILITY.

I never yet found pride in a noble nature, nor humility in an unworthy mind. Of all trees, I observe that God has chosen the vine, a low plant that creeps upon the helpful wall; of all beasts, the soft and patient lamb; of all fowls, the mild and guileless dove. When God appeared to Moses, it was not in the lofty cedar, nor the spreading palm; but a bush—a humble, slender, abject bush—as if He would, by these selections, check the conceited arrogance of man. Nothing produceth love like humility; nothing hate, like pride.—Selected.

THE VICTORY OF PROHIBITION.

By DR. R. C. HELFENSTEIN.

The supreme victory of prohibition is not what it has accomplished for individuals and for society at large, as great and important as that victory is. The supreme victory of prohibition is found in what it has done for our government. The supreme victory of prohibition lies in the fact that it has freed the United States government of the guilt of longer being a participant in the crime of making drunkards. That was the main objective of prohibition, namely: to prohibit the government from sanctioning and protecting the liquor business.

Before prohibition, the United States government legalized the liquor business. The government hung the Stars and Stripes over every saloon, guaranteeing, in consideration of certain reverence, to protect the saloon in all its perpetrations against the social, economic and moral welfare of the people. Before prohibition, the government the same as said to the saloon-keeper: "You are in a bad business, selling intoxicating liquor to my citizens. Your business ruins their health, paralyzes their minds, corrupts their morals, blasts their hopes, wrecks their homes, and damns their souls. But, Mr. Saloon-keeper, if you will permit me a certain percentage of your profits, I will permit you to continue to run your inhuman business, regardless of the consequences to the lives of my citizens, the homes of the people and the welfare of the nation."

Before prohibition, the saloons occupied the best corner buildings on the principal streets of every city. And through the open door, day and night, could be seen the rows of men and boys standing at the bar squandering their hard-earned money. Certainly, there were laws restricting the sale of liquor to minors, but most of the saloon-keepers could not guess within five years the age of any boy that entered. Certainly, the law declared that the saloon should close at 10 o'clock, but patrons had access to the back-door any time of the night. And when it was too late for business to come to the saloon, the extra bartenders were sent out on the streets and in the alleys to bootleg, wherever they could find the unfortunate victims of the drink habit.

Before prohibition, the laboring men in many cities were compelled to get their Saturday-night pay-checks cashed in the corner saloon, because the banks were closed. Then the accursed treating custom claimed the larger portion of their pay-checks, while wife and children at home were deprived of many of the necessities of life.

It is a burning shame that society does not have motion-pictures of conditions that obtained before prohibition. Just one sight of a saloon on Saturday night—just one look at the stream of immorality and shame that flowed from the doors of the saloon—would quiet the specious arguments of those today who have the audacity to contend that conditions are worse today than before prohibition. Such contention is an insult to the truth, a reflection on the memories and good judgment of every person who lived in pre-prohibition times and was old enough to know what conditions were.

The victory of prohibition is evidenced in the fact that you can travel today from the Atlantic Ocean to the Pacific, from the Gulf to the Canadian border, and you will not find a single legalized saloon. Before prohibition there were more saloons in some towns and cities than there were grocery stores.

Prohibition has said that America would no longer license the infernal business to operate for any sum of money. Prohibition has put the government's honor where it can no longer be bribed by the liquor business. Prohibition has made the liquor business an outlaw. Before prohibition, the liquor business was as legal a business as was the clothing store, the grocery store, the furniture store, or any other legitimate business. But the liquor business has always been an outlaw in nature. Before prohibition, this outlaw business was given protection by the government. Prohibition not only outlawed the liquor business, but also made the government an avowed enemy of the nefarious enterprise.

Before prohibition, huge sums of money were spent by the breweries and distilleries in glaring road-side advertisements, encouraging the people to drink. Newspapers carried full-page liquor advertisements. What a relief it is for temperance people not to have those insulting advertisements staring at them from billboards along the highways and from the pages of the newspapers and magazines in their homes. Prohibition is responsible for freeing the roadsides and the press from such advertisements that were an offense to the Church and the school.

The wets oppose the prohibition law, not because of what it fails to do, but because of what it is succeeding in doing. It is keeping the liquor business an outlaw. It is making every violator of the law a criminal. It is placing the stigma of an anarchist upon every person who sells or buys alcoholic liquors for beverage purposes. Prohibition is making it both hard and dangerous and also expensive for drinking people to secure their liquors. It is keeping the wets from securing their dividends on brewery and distillery stock. When we realize that the stock in the liquor business before prohibition paid the highest rate of dividends of any business in the country—brewery and distillery stock often paying from 15 to 25 per cent annual dividends; and when we realize that, for the past ten years, the fifteen billion dollars' worth of brewery, distillery, and other liquor stocks in the United States have not paid a dollar in dividends, we can understand why the wets are fighting so hard against prohibition.

Every business man should support prohibition, for the liquor business is the deadliest competitor of every legitimate business. Every business man should talk prohibition, support prohibition and work for prohibition, because prohibition seeks to divert money that would be spent for booze to the merchants who sell the commodities of life. Money spent by working-men for liquor cannot be spent for food, clothing, homes, radios, automobiles, etc. Even as a matter of good business, every business man should get back of prohibition and help to attain even greater victories.

The next great victory of prohibition will be an efficient enforcement of the law as it applies to individuals. And let us never cease to declare that "the law can be enforced." The sinister propaganda of the wets is shown in the false dilemma which they submit, namely: that "we had better have saloons than the present bootlegging." Such a declaration sounds as if we had to have one or the other, either the licensed saloon or the outlaw bootlegger. But, thank God, we are not in that dilemma. We do not have to have either the saloon or the bootlegger. The law can be enforced! America is not such an imbecile that she has to give in to either the saloon or the bootlegger. It is not a question of accepting the lesser of the two evils. It is a question of accepting neither. Our government does not have to surrender to the liquor business in any form. The prohibition laws can be enforced!

MISSIONS

REV. J. O. ATKINSON, D. D., Secretary.

A PRAYER.

Forever, O Lord, Thy word is sure. We know it will not return unto Thee void. Depending upon Thy word, the nations shall not fail, but find therein the way of peace and security. Give to Thy servants understanding. Teach us good judgment and knowledge. It is time, O God, for the organized Church to let Thy Spirit rule. Dear Father, keep Thine own true, sensitive to discern evil, diligent to fortify Thy Church against the insidious tendency to absorb and assimilate the ways of the world. Cleanse Thy temple and make it a place where communion shall be real and fellowship unrestrained. In Jesus' name and for His sake. Amen.

EASTERN VIRGINIA MISSIONARY RALLIES.

(Editorial.)

April 7, 8, 9, 10 were great days with the good women of Eastern Virginia. It was the season of their spring rallies and the name indicated the spirit in which they met and the character of their meetings. It was certainly spring-time, a real beginning again with the good women, and they certainly rallied to the call of their leaders and their societies. On Tuesday, the 7th, Mrs. H. C. Caviness, of Portsmouth, presided over the Norfolk-Portsmouth meeting in the beautiful new Church at Rosemont. The day was quite disagreeable without, but the program was a live and going one from 10:30 A. M. till 4:15 P. M. within. The theme here, as in all the rallies, was "Missions and Changing Conditions." The general program was the same for each of the rallies, but each rally had its distinctive and outstanding features. At Rosemont the visitors were not many because of the weather, but the delegation was good and we believe represented every society in the district. The superintendent in each district in opening the meeting gave a real message on the subject, "Opportunity and Responsibility of the Local Society." The effort was made to impress the delegates with the thought that the key to the success of the rally and of the conference was in the hands of the local society, and that the results achieved by all depended upon the efforts put forth by each society. There were papers or addresses, ten minutes in length each, on these topics:

- (a) "Meeting Changing Conditions."
- (b) "The Rapidly Changing Orient."
- (c) "Our New Fields."

One of the outstanding and most interesting items of the rally at Rosemont was the round-table discussions, the subject, "Let Us Solve Our Problems," in which twenty-five questions were asked and answered more or less to the satisfaction or dissatisfaction of all present. Dr. Smith is past-master at conducting a round-table, for he gets everybody on ear by and through division and diversity of opinion. Each day a very simple but a beautiful and an abundant luncheon was served in the dining-room of the entertaining Church, and the social hour was greatly enjoyed. The topic assigned the Mission Secretary, and which he endeavored to discuss at each rally, was "The Challenge of Changing Conditions." It is safe to say that if the men of the Church would accept the challenge of changing conditions as the women are doing, we would meet the challenge in a masterly and marvelous manner.

The meeting at Liberty Spring, Nansemond District, deplored the absence of Mrs. B. D. Jones, superintendent, who, because of the illness of her husband, could not be present, and the session was presided over and directed by Mrs. R. T. Bradford, president of the Woman's Conference, at the request of Mrs. Jones. The day was beautiful, and this was the most largely attended of any of the meetings, there being present about 200. The service of song at this rally was quite inspiring, and the addresses and papers measured up to the demands and the expectancy of the large and interested number present.

Rev. H. S. Hardcastle, than whom we have no pastor more thoroughly interested in and conversant with missions, conducted the round-table to the delight and satisfaction of all, the group spending one hour and a half in discussing happily and intelligently the vital problems confronting the societies and the conference. The Liberty Springs Society entertained the large body quite happily, and the day was one of good fellowship and great enlightenment in missionary problems and prospects. The presiding officer announced that she had been very much discouraged because, even if all the societies raised their apportionment this year, they would still lack $1,000 reaching their goal, but that she felt somewhat encouraged now as she had in hand for the conference treasurer a check of $500, a gift from their friend, the Assistant Secretary of Missions, Bro. J. M. Darden, Suffolk, Va. The women were much encouraged, and the hope was expressed that all the societies would raise their full apportionment and enough over to make up at least $500 more, so that the goal for the year shall be reached.

Mrs. W. D. Harward, superintendent of the Isle of Wight District, presided over the meeting at Windsor, and her society entertained the rally to the joy and delight of all. The Church, recently repaired and much improved, was made further attractive and beautified with flowers and potted plants, and with the glory of a spring day the group entered into the joy of the program and the inspiration of the good meeting. Papers were presented and addresses made on the topics as at the other rallies, and Mrs. J. A. Williams, president of the Southern Convention Board, conducted the round-table, and did so to the great profit and delight of all present. This was the only rally at which a woman conducted the round-table and led the discussion on solving our problems, but the manner of approach to each and the satisfactory discussion that followed proved that we have women who can do these weighty things in our meetings as well as our pastors can. It was a lovely day at Windsor, and in concluding the program soon after 4 P. M. all were made to feel that it had been a worth-while day.

The rally at Waverly on the 10th was presided over and directed by Miss Louise Pittman, whose opening address, "The Opportunity and Responsibility of the Local Society," set a high standard for the other addresses and features of the day.

The outstanding and most delightful feature of the Waverly District was the musical numbers. The Waverly male quartet gave three numbers to the perfect joy and delight of the meeting, and the Dendron female quartet and a solo by Mrs. O. M. Cockes, of New Lebanon, added likewise to the joy and delight of the occasion. Rev. F. C. Lester, pastor of the Church, conducted the round-table and led the discussions on the practical problems, and for nearly one hour and a half kept the undivided attention and the deep interest of all present.

Some of the papers, both at this and the other rallies, will be printed in THE CHRISTIAN SUN. They are worth while, carrying both information and inspiration. The rallies are held at an opportune time in the spring to signify to the women that the time for new life and activity for their societies has come; and the information given at the rallies is just the type that the local societies need to carry forward and complete the work of the year. There are no meetings of greater and more practical worth and benefit than the spring rallies of our women in our missionary activities.

The above indicates that the Easter offering has begun to come in. It is to be hoped that every member and friend will be urged to make an offering. Not all of any congregation are present at one service, and the Church should certainly give a chance to every one to contribute something. This is the only offering for missions during the year at which the men of the Church have an opportunity. The women, through their missionary societies, are going far ahead of the men, and the only hope for the men to redeem themselves in the matter of giving to missions is through the annual offering. Funds are needed as never before, and we cannot afford to fall down this year without very seriously crippling and harming the one work for which the Church was established, that of making Christ known to the world. We appreciate the co-operation of every pastor and of every person who will at this time make an offering and help.

PASTOR'S PART IN MISSIONARY SOCIETY.

(Prepared by Miss Irene Cotton and read by Miss Ruth Bishop at the Waverly, Va., Missionary Rally, April 10th.)

In telling what part the pastor should take in the local missionary society, we must first determine what his relation is to the local society. The Church is a unit with various activities. The local missionary society is one of those activities. It is a part of the Church. The pastor is commander-in-chief. He has a great responsibility for the society. This responsibility is not optional—it is obligatory. Every department of work and worship has been committed to the minister—this amongst the rest. The missionary society of the pastor's Church is his society in the same sense that the pulpit of his Church is his pulpit. Just in the same sense that the pastor is the shepherd of the sheep of his Church, so is he the same shepherd of the missionary society.

In order to be the right kind of shepherd of the missionary society, he must have a real missionary vision. The local society hardly ever goes beyond the vision of its pastor. When God wanted to plant a new nation and desired a leader for that nation, He gave to Abraham a new vision. God, through His angel, called Abraham out from under his tent on a bright, starry night and said, "Look now toward heaven." What was God doing? He was changing Abraham's tent vision to a sky vision. He was telling Abraham that his children would outnumber all the stars of heaven, which could not be counted. If the pastor's interests were bounded by the walls of his own Church, or his city, he would still have a tent vision, but he must have the sky vision: "That God so loved the world that He gave His Son." If the pastor has this vision, his local society will catch it also.

Again, in order to be the right kind of shepherd of the missionary society, he must keep posted in the work of missions. He must study, read and think. He must know what his denomination is doing at home and abroad, and also what other denominations are doing. Studying other people's methods is a good way of improving our own.

Now, what will the shepherd do for the sheep? He will lead them. He will lead them in the study of missions. The best thing the pastor can do is not to instruct the members of the society, but to encourage them to study for themselves. He can be of great help by conducting the mission-study courses. He should also suggest other missionary books, magazines and articles to be read, telling them where these can be found.

Next, he leads the sheep to depend upon prayer in their missionary work. Every opportunity should be taken to stress the importance of prayer in the local society.

He will lead them into right giving. This involves the whole principle of stewardship, and there is nothing more greatly needed than the cultivation of this grace. The pastor's advice on the methods of raising money is also of great help to the society.

And the pastor leads the society to do their best in this missionary work. He will know the qualifications of each member and the society as a whole, and will endeavor to lead them along lines of their greatest opportunity and usefulness.

IN MEMORIAM.

At this Easter-tide it seems singularly fitting to mention several of our friends, both young and old, who have recently stepped through the door into the larger life: Mary Tucker Neyes, at Madura, India, January 14th, "a life dedicated to supreme love and service in the cause of the womanhood of South India in general and this district in particular," from the memorial of the North

Union Church of Madura, India, to the American Board. Edward Bosworth Cassel, at Tunghsien, China, January 14th, "an apostle of friendship, . . . an enthusiastic, beautiful spirit that was infectious," say his comrades. A lad, not yet twenty-one, who in the few brief months of his service won the love and respect of his associates, both American and Chinese and of his students in Jefferson Academy.

Edward Field Parsons, M. D., Peiping, N. China, stationed at Tunghsien, March 8th, a talented young physician, after five years of service, was to return this June for his first furlough. (See tribute by Dr. Mark H. Ward appearing in May Missionary Herald.) Mrs. (Mother) Seraphina S. Dewey, Springfield, Mo., March 22nd, after eleven years of retirement following forty-three years given to Turkey. William Webster Mills, at Marietta, Ohio, March 16th, corporate member of the American Board and one of its auditors. "More than a man of business, a banker honored and trusted, he was a man with sympathies as broad as the human race and interested in every worthy enterprise that had for its objective the betterment of mankind," says Dr. James L. Burton, whose memorial to Mr. Mills will appear in the May issue of the Missionary Herald. A message of sorrow was cabled from London by Ambassador Charles G. Dawes, nephew of Mr. Mills.

"On cloudy wings, let glad words fly
Through the soft blue of echoing sky;
Ring out, oh trumpets, sweet and clear,
'Through death immortal, life is here!'"

NATIONAL DIFFERENCES.

Bitter and long-standing as have been the differences between Japan and China, an interdenominational conference held in Shantung, China, had for its principal speakers Dr. Ch'eng Ching Yui, general secretary of the National Christian Council of China, and Dr. Toyohiko Kagawa, Japan's great Christian socialist. "It was an evidence of the power of Christian experience to triumph over national differences that the Chinese delegates could give such a cordial welcome to a Japanese leader," declares Grace M. Breck, of Lintsing. Dr. Kagawa knew his delicate position. He began by apologizing for the political wrongs of Japan against China. His sweet spirit soon won all hearts. The Chinese delegates prayed in Chinese; Kagawa in Japanese; the foreigners sometimes in English—but they all understood the spirit. As all rose to sing at closing, "God Be With You Till We Meet Again," all felt as Miss Breck expresses it, "the reality of Christian unity and fellowship, regardless of national or lingual differences."

A MISSIONARY RELIGION.

The religion of Jesus Christ is a missionary religion. The work and example of its Founder destined it to be such, its early spirit was missionary, and its history is a missionary history. Whenever it has lost its missionary quality, it has lost its character and ceased to be itself. Its characteristic temper has always been missionary, its revivals of life and power have been attended with quickening of missionary energy, and missionary activity is one of the truest signs of loyalty to its character and Lord. With this conclusion, we must all agree. Christianity is fundamentally a missionary religion. For weal or for woe, it is that, and nothing can change the fact. In nothing is its true character more certainly revealed than in its missionary passion. This passion is at its heart, and to eliminate this would be to destroy the system—A New Era in Missions, by Wark.

ADVENTURES IN YOUTH FELLOWSHIP

"Youth at Work in the Church."

JEWEL TRUITT, Editor, Waverly, Virginia.

A CANDLE-LIGHT SERVICE FOR MOTHER-AND-DAUGHTER WEEK.

Rev. H. S. Hardcastle, Suffolk, Va., used the following service with inspiring effect in the Christian Church of Suffolk. It is fitting for a May Sunday evening or week-night service and as a concluding feature of a "Mother and Daughter Banquet."

Five girls are chosen to represent "Comradeship," "Confidence," "Trust," "Patience" and "Sympathy," and a sixth woman, preferably a mother, to represent "Love." Large placards present the name of each of these "spirits" in order that all might follow the theme of the service. The spirits enter the room one by one, each bearing a tall, pink, unlighted candle. (Small pieces of cardboard fitted around each candle used prevents hot wax from falling on hands or dresses). Each spirit says clearly her message, and then stands on the platform while the rest give their messages. The spirit of "Love" come last, carrying a large lighted candle. After speaking her message, she lights the candles of the five spirits on the platform, and then they go out into the congregation and light the candles of all mothers present. The candles which the mothers have been given are smaller white candles, each with the pasteboard protection. The mothers stand and, with their lighted candles held high, repeat the pledge given below, copies of which are distributed in advance to each mother.

The spirits return to the platform, and the mothers turn and light the small pink candles which are in the hands of every daughter. The daughters then repeat their pledge, as given below, in unison. All lights are then turned out and mothers and daughters stand in silent prayer while a violinist plays softly, "Home, Sweet Home." Then the chord for "Blest Be the Tie That Binds" is sounded, and all join in singing one verse, after which the benediction closes the service.

The messages of the "spirits" and the pledges given are as follows:

MESSAGES OF "SPIRITS."

1. Spirit of Comradeship.—I am the Spirit of Comradeship. When a mother and a daughter have me with them, they have good times together. The mother interests herself in the things the daughter enjoys and the daughter gives attention to the things her mother likes. They take long walks together in God's great out-of-doors; they sit together and while one works with flying fingers, the other reads from some favorite author. They sing together; they pray together; their interests are together!

2. Spirit of Confidence.—I am the Spirit of Confidence, and without me no mother and daughter can be perfectly happy. I am very sensitive and easily driven away, and after I am neglected it is difficult for me to find my rightful place again. Fortunate are the mother and daughter who understand how necessary I am to their happiness.

3. Spirit of Trust.—I am the Spirit of Trust. Sometimes a daughter cannot understand why her mother does not comply with her wishes, but when I am present I help her to see that the wider experience of a more mature mind guides judgment and mother knows best. On the other hand, I help the mother to believe in her daughter even when sometimes she is hard to understand.

4. Spirit of Patience.—I am the Spirit of Patience. Without me the road that mother and daughter travel would be a rough one indeed. I keep the mother from being intolerant when the daughter wants to try her wings and when modern fads and fancies woo her; and I help the daughter to close her eyes to that which seems odd and old-fashioned in the mother's ideas and see only the interested, unselfish mother there.

5. Spirit of Sympathy.—I am the Spirit of Sympathy. I keep the mother young by helping her to live her daughter's life with her. I interest her in her daughter's friends and occupations and I interest her daughter in everything that concerns her mother—the joys, the sorrows, the problems, all that go to make up her life.

5. Spirit of Love.—I am the Spirit of Love. Without me none of these other spirits, beautiful as they are, can live. I make Comradeship glad. I encourage Confidence and Trust, while Patience and Sympathy are entirely dependent upon me. We all work together to make the relationship between mother and daughter beautiful.

And now I shall light your candles, Comradeship, Confidence, Trust, Patience, and Sympathy (lights candles), and you may furnish the lights from which the mothers may light their candles. (Spirits light candles of all mothers in room.)

Spirit of Love.—And now, mothers, after your candles are all aglow, will you stand, and we shall make our pledge together:

MOTHERS' PLEDGE.

We promise to cultivate these spirits who have spoken to us tonight and let them rule our lives. We want to be mothers in the truest sense to our daughters.

Spirit of Love.—And now the daughters will light their candles from their mother's candles, and offer their pledge together:

DAUGHTERS' PLEDGE.

We, too, promise to cultivate these spirits and thus be better daughters to our mothers. We will honor them by trying to live up to the ideal womanhood of which we have heard tonight.

Silent prayer.

Violinist plays "Home, Sweet Home."

"Blest Be the Tie That Binds," sung by all.

Benediction.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR NOTES.

Sunday, April 26, 1931.

TOPIC: "The Unmet Needs of the World."

SCRIPTURE: Acts 16:6-10.

Some of the needs of people are suggested below. All of the needs are not unmet in every life, but there are many in whose lives every need is not met. Perhaps the needs suggested here will bring to mind still others.

The Needs of Childhood.

Parental love and care in a home which affords necessary comforts.

Parents as companions in healthful play.

Trust in parents, friends and God. Children can be very unhappy when they lose faith in others.

The Needs of Youth.

Faith in God.

Faith in mankind.

Faith in themselves.

Belief in things worth while enough to challenge to a life of unselfish service.

Provision for physical needs.

It seems that it would be easy to fill these needs for youth. Those who read these notes will probably have most of these needs filled. There will be some who will feel that some of these things are lacking. There are countless thousands of young people who are in dire need of some of these things mentioned. Thousands of young people struggle with problems about God and about the meaning of life, of which the adult world knows nothing. Many fight grim battles alone, seeking for food, clothing and a place to live. Some of them, it is true, are far away from us, but many of them are so close to us that they can touch us.

The Needs of Maturity.

A growing faith in God.—Untold millions try to make their way in life without an abiding trust in God. Some have never had faith in Him because they have never known Him; some have ceased to trust because they have neglected and finally forgotten God.

Faith in fellowman.—Adequate food for proper nourishment and clothing that enables one to maintain one's self-respect. Professor Paul Nyström, of Columbia University, gives statistics to show that 40,000,000 people in America do not have the needed food, clothing and homes. An additional 50,000,000 are not able to face long illness or old age without coming to want. Only 27,000,000 can take care of their physical needs unaided. All of this is found in our so-called prosperous America, where foodstuff has been burned to raise the price and where the acreage of cotton is reduced because of oversupply. The difficulty is not that there are shortages of the things we need; it is that we have failed to do our part in meeting the needs of the world.

God Supplies Our Needs.

God can supply all our needs. He has made provision for us, and He cares for us. He may need our help. He may want us to give knowledge to those who do not know. He may have some service He wants us to render. It may be that we can encourage some one, or build up faith and love where there is suspicion and hatred. Let us dedicate our lives to helping God meet the needs of the world.

UNITED CHURCHES MEET.

The Congregational and Christian Churches of Georgia and Southeast Alabama met together in the Lanett Christian Church at Lanett, Ala., March 27th, 28th and 29th for their annual Christian Life Conference. It is the second time that these groups have held their conference together, and we praise the spirit of Christian unity which was manifested.

Rev. W. C. Carpenter presided, and Miss Rosie Gill recorded the minutes of the meeting. Mrs. J. O. Mabry, of Lanett, very ably arranged places for the delegates to stay during the conference. There was a large attendance, especially considering the "hard times" and the distances from which some had to come. Fifteen Churches were represented.

The conference was fortunate in having as its leaders Rev. Lucy T. Ayres, Rev. Milo J. Sweet, Mr. Roy Breg, Rev. W. C. Carpenter, Rev. C. C. Hamilton, Rev. G. D. Hunt, Rev. C. L. Percy, Rev. H. M. Gray, Rev. C. W. Hanson, Miss Dora Brackin, Miss Annie Campbell and Rev. J. D. Dollar, pastor of the entertaining Church. An interesting feature of the conference was the study classes on "Youth and the Advancing Church," "Church School Organization and Methods and Problems," "Leadership Training," and "Personal Religion." Various talks about the youth of today were given in the afternoon session.

Several young people's groups participated in the stunts Friday night. The Piedmont College

HOW TO PRAY.

LESSON IV—APRIL 26, 1931.

GOLDEN TEXT: "Lord, teach us how to pray." —Luke 11:1.

LESSON: Luke 18.

Jesus' praying evidently made a profound impression on His disciples, for on one occasion when He had ceased praying they asked Him to teach them how to pray. They frankly recognized that such praying as the Master did was different from saying prayers in the commonly accepted sense of the term. They felt that there were principles of praying that they did not know. In this eighteenth chapter of Luke there are several principles of prayer set forth in story and in incident.

PERSISTENCE AND EARNESTNESS.

In the parable of the unjust judge and the widow, the judge and God stand in sharp contrast. The point of the story is in the persistence of the widow. Jesus is not suggesting that if we keep on calling on God we can get "Him to change His mind" and give us something that He did not intend to give us, or to do something that He did not intend to do. The truth that Jesus was trying to impress upon His disciples and on us is the fact that persistence is often a prerequisite in prayer, because it is a test of our sincerity and a means of developing earnestness. God cannot always give His blessings for the mere formal asking. Prayer is often a means of preparing us to receive the blessings which God all along has wanted to give us, but for which we were not ready. Earnestness—that is, harmony between what we ask for and what we really inwardly desire—is a vital factor in prayer. It is what Fosdick, in that remarkable book, "The Meaning of Prayer," calls prayer a "dominant desire." Prayer would be a cheap and meaningless thing indeed if we got everything we asked for, simply for the asking.

A SENSE OF DEPENDENCE AND A SPIRIT OF HUMILITY.

The Pharisee "trusted in himself, that he was righteous." He did not pray because he felt any sense of need. In fact, his prayer would indicate that he wanted to remind the Lord that he was a pretty good fellow, a great deal better than so many of his fellow-men. There is a world of meaning in the words of Jesus, "he stood and prayed thus with himself"—his prayer never got any higher than his own head. There was no sense of dependence on God, no spirit of humility, no sincerity, no warmth of spirit. He was not praying; he was simply saying prayers.

The publican, on the other hand, had a deep sense of unworthiness, a spirit of reverence, a hunger for cleansing and peace of mind. He sought mercy, and yet it is quite likely that at heart he was just as good a man as the proud Pharisee. And because he had the spirit of humility, because he hungered after righteousness, he went down to his house justified and in peace.

SIMPLICITY AND SINCERITY.

The reference of Jesus to becoming as little children as a condition of entering the kingdom was simply another way of emphasizing simplicity and sincerity in matters of religion, including prayer. If one has the gift and can phrase his prayers in fine language, well and good. But eloquence is not an essential to prayer at all. One feels sometimes, after listening to people pray in public, that they are offering the prayer to the GROUP DISCUSSION IN RELIGIOUS EDUCATION.

By Harrison S. Elliott. The Associated Press; 50 cents; pp. 100.

Prof. Elliott is skilled in the procedure known as group discussion. He prefers, however, to call it group thinking. In this pamphlet he adapts to religious themes in several human interest areas the principles formerly set forth in his "The Process of Group Thinking." Nothing new is added in this brochure, except that the ground covered in the larger work is more succinctly stated and the price is within the reach of even Sunday School teachers. Here is a real gain. There is no doubt that group thinking is highly desirable in our religious education procedure. This booklet will promote it, and so will fill a good place.

WORLD REVOLUTION AND RELIGION. By Paul Hutchison. The Abingdon Press; $2; pp. 201.

The Church is too sympathetic with the status quo to lead us into the new day of freedom now impending because of the world revolution. Organized religion the world around is effete, is dead. But religion will continue and will organize itself in groups when kindred souls sense the fellowship of other spirits like-animated. To discuss tactual ordination or baptism in the midst of our spiritual unrest and revolution is to be a fool. That is what Paul Hutchison says the Church is doing, particularly the denominational Church. The message of this book is disquieting, pessimistic, diagnostic, not designed to be prescriptive. The reader is grateful, however, for the concluding chapter, "The Outlook for Religion," as tending to dispel the gloom of despair induced as the preceding pages have been read: Is the author right? Only the future can tell. Read his book and then decide your attitude for yourself. At least you will think.

audience instead of offering the petitions of the audience to God. A prayer that breaks all the rules of grammar and pronunciation is acceptable unto God if it is the expression of the humble and sincere and simple heart. Prayer is not a matter of words, but of attitude and spirit.

PRAYER AS DOMINANT DESIRE.

The young ruler evidently thought he wanted eternal life. In a sense, he did. And he might have prayed for it. But when we got to the heart of the thing we find that the dominant desire of his life was not for eternal life, but for riches. In his particular case, Jesus saw that he could never find the true meaning of life unless he gave up his riches which had come between him and God. Faced directly with this alternative, he chose his riches. Our prayers are often futile and unanswered because they do not express the real and dominant desires of our hearts. We ought to examine our lives in the light of this disturbing truth.

FAITH.

The poor blind man had faith, but it was faith that was reasonable. His knowledge of Jesus made him believe that Jesus could restore his sight. He was earnest, and he asked for the thing that he actually needed most. If he had asked for anything else than his sight, it is quite unlikely that Jesus would not have granted his request. We not only have not because we ask not; we have not because we ask amiss.

FAMILY ALTAR

CONDUCTED BY H. E. ROUNTREE
One of our Chaplains in the U. S. Navy.

"If thou wilt make the Almighty thy treasure . . . then shalt thou delight thyself in the Almighty . . . and thou shalt make thy prayer unto Him and He will hear thee."—Job 22:25-27.

BY DR. AMOS R. WELLS.

MONDAY.

ROBBER POVERTY.

"A little sleep, a little slumber . . . so shall thy poverty come as a robber."—Prov. 6:1-11.

Poverty does not come upon our lives—any kind of poverty—like an army with banners, marching openly to attack the city of our soul and lay it waste. Poverty comes always as a robber, stealthily, craftily, silently, in the night. Poverty lays a quiet siege.

Thus unwittingly men's souls are taken captive by worldliness, all their youthful ideals slowly undermined, all their lofty purposes rotted away. Thus men's souls become slowly sodden with sin. Only by looking back over many years do we realize what has come over us. For the devil knows his own hideousness. He makes no sudden rush upon us. He knows that we should flee in horror from him if we should see him as he is. He lays a patient siege. He withdraws our wealth from us as a robber. He works while we sleep, and only while we sleep.

Prayer.—Awake us, O our God! By any blast of Thy fierce anger, arouse us from our doom. By any convincing penalty, prove to us our folly. Shout to us in the night. Startle us from our slumber. Drag us from the couch and show us our peril. For Jesus' sake. Amen.

TUESDAY.

THE INNER WITNESS.

"They show the work of the law written in their hearts, their consciences bearing witness therewith, and their thoughts one with another accusing or else excusing them."—Rom. 2:1-16.

There is much confusion in regard to conscience, men considering it to be an infallible guide in matters of conduct, whereas it is nothing of the kind. As Dr. Henry Clay Trumbull once wrote, "Conscience tells us that we ought to do right, but it does not tell us what right is—that we are taught by God's Word." An uninstructed conscience, an ignorant conscience, a superstitious conscience, may send us off on an entirely wrong road.

The world has many conscientious persons whom we admire for their strict following of what they think to be right, but pity for their false judgment regarding the right. They are usually persons of extremely narrow views, seeing one little truth or fact exclusively, and shutting their eyes to the wide horizon of facts and truths. What they need is the broad view, a better education.

So let us study the whole Bible, and let us take for our teachers the men of reverent scholarship every where. God has ever more illumination to break out of His Book.

Prayer.—We bless Thee, our Father, for the inner witness to truth, the monitor that bids us be loyal to it at all costs. Grant us constantly enlarging truth to which we may be loyal, that our growth may be constant. May we approach ever nearer to the measure of the stature of the fullness of Christ. Amen.

WEDNESDAY.

IT LASTS.

"The world passeth away, and the lust thereof: but he that doeth the will of God abideth forever."—1 John 2:12-17.

Nothing is more discouraging in the use of an automobile than the steady and rapid way in which its value decreases as measured by the amount of insurance which its owner can place on it. According to the cost of the car, its estimated value diminishes one hundred, two hundred, four hundred dollars a year, or more; and if one wants to sell it or exchange it, he finds after a few years that he might as well throw it on the junk-heap. So it is with a house, with clothes, with furniture, with nearly everything we own: their "replacement value" is one thing, their selling value a very different thing. Depreciation and decay are stamped on all things worldly.

But not on all things. The soul that does God's will has a steadily rising insurance value. While all things around him are diminishing in value, it is rising. While all other things are aging and weakening, it is becoming with each year stronger and more youthful. As Robert E. Speer once wrote: "Other things will pass away, but he that is doing the will of God is a part now of a life that shall last forever, of that great, sweeping, flowing life that alone holds this world steady with all that is passing and changing in it." What a joy to feel that we shall last!

Prayer.—Eternal, Infinite, Enduring, Thou that abidest forever, we bind our lives in Thine. As Thou dost live, we shall live also. Through riches of grace in Christ Jesus, our Lord. Amen.

THURSDAY.

BURNING IDOLS.

"He (Josiah) began to purge Judah and Jerusalem from the high places, and the Asherim, and the graven images, and the molten images."—2 Chron. 34:1-7.

F. B. Meyer, when a young minister, was much moved by a scene in a Salvation Army meeting. An "exhibition of idols" had been promised, and he expected to see some collection of heathen gods; but instead, a procession of eight young men came to the platform, each of them bearing a square sheet of cardboard. The first was covered with pipes, cigarette-holders, tobacco pouches, and the like. The others were heaped with sham jewelry and other adornments.

Whatever stands between us and God, stands there as an idol, receiving the honor and service that belong to God. When that godly young king, Josiah, came into his full authority, he used it at once for the burning of the idols that were befouling his nation and ruining his people. In the time of Savonarola, they had in Florence an immense bonfire of vanities. Let us, each one of us, get up a bonfire of vanities in the city square of Mansoul.

Prayer.—Nothing in Thy stead, dear Lord! Nothing shall be more precious than Thou art, nothing and no one. For Thou also dost allow not even the joys of heaven to come between Thee and me.

FRIDAY.

TOO SATISFIED.

"Godliness with contentment is great gain."—1 Tim. 6:1-10.

Once a dairyman from the Middle West removed to North Carolina and there he made a great success of his creamery, a success unapproached in the entire region. Some one asked him once why the farmers around him fell so far behind him. His answer was simple but complete: "They are too satisfied."

What says the text? That "godliness with contentment is great gain"; but it does not say that there is any gain in contentment by itself, without godliness. For God Himself is never so satisfied that He makes no progress in the world of nature and of man. Human history, so far as God is allowed to govern it, has advanced steadily to an even higher civilization. And in the religious life the Holy Spirit is continually saying to us, "Excelsior!"

Prayer.—Having Thee, O God, we shall be content, for with Thee we have all things. Having Thee, O God, we shall never be too satisfied, for Thou wilt be in us a perpetual principle of progress. So may it be with us and Thee, ages on ages. Amen.

SATURDAY.

MOLDED MARBLE.

"Be ye transformed by the renewing of your mind."—Rom. 12:1-8.

Machines have been invented which are so powerful that they will take pieces of marble and squeeze them into different shapes just as if they were clay. In the process, too, the marble loses none of its firmness, its tensile strength. It can be pressed into a statue or into the most delicate tracery, and will come out in permanent beauty as if cut into shape from a quarried block.

That is what God does to the soul that is wholly yielded to the molding influences of the Holy Spirit. We are transformed into His likeness, "from glory to glory." Some may believe that such a surrender to God takes away our independence and weakens our soul, but it does nothing of the kind; rather, it confirms all that is good in us, quickens all our powers, and perpetuates all our strength.

Prayer.—What care we for the pressure, our Father, however fierce it may be? It is the pressure of Thy love, we know. It is the prophetic pressure that looks superably ahead. Mold us to Thy will, in Thy way, in Thy time, and we shall be content. Amen.

SUNDAY.

LAY DOWN INDIAN.

"Ye have put off the old man with his doings, and have put on the new man."—Col. 3:1-11.

Once an Indian lived alone, hunting and trapping in the Selkirk Mountains. His family had all been killed by a band of white hunters, and he grew up a wild man. At length another trapper, a white man, came to the mountains to live. He was kind and patient and gradually the wild boy came to trust him and love him, and slowly he entered into the love of Jesus Christ, as the white man taught him. After many months of thought, one moonlit night on top of a noble peak, the young Indian dressed himself in all his heathen finery, took his friend's hand, knelt and prayed silently. Then he rose and made his confession of his new purpose, suiting the action to the word:

"Indian lay down blanket.

Indian lay down pipe.

Indian lay down tomahawk.

Indian lay down Indian."

Well may all of us learn a lesson from that child of the forest. What Christ requires of us is not some modifications, more or less complete, of our old life of sin and selfishness and doubt, but that we walk with Him in entire newness of life. Indian must lay down Indian. As Paul so graphically declared, we must take off our old nature like a coat and lay it forever aside.

Prayer.—Saviour, blessed Saviour, we come to Thee in the simplicity of our being, wearing no rag or tatter of worldliness. Take us and clothe us with Thyself. Amen.

TAMING THE TONGUE.

By REV. J. W. FIX.

Text; James 3:1-12.

"Gray's Anatomy" is the authority for saying that more than 400 different movements of the tongue take place during a moment's conversation. Indeed, the tongue is a most wonderful part of the human anatomy. It is the first organ to display activity at birth, and among the last at death. It never tires and never grows old. The more it is used, the freer becomes its usage.

St. James, the brother of our Lord, was the most practical writer in the New Testament. Without reference to established doctrines and theories, James sets about to direct people to go forth and live. He has much to say concerning the mastery of temptation, the power of faith plus works, and the meaning of pure and undefiled religion. But that which he devotes about one-fourth of his limited space to is a discussion of the tongue. Especially do we find much said concerning this very vital member of the body in the third chapter of his general epistle to Churches and individuals of his day.

Men and women today rejoice in that this practical advice on taming the tongue is canonized and is at our disposal. These verses have been the means of helping multitudes of people consider the importance of bridling the tongue, lest it speak words that may hurt another. We also notice that James sets forth some of the great difficulties involved in bridling the tongue. To some of these teachings let us turn.

1. The importance of bridling the tongue. A man's wisdom determines what he shall say; his tongue determines how he shall say it. Any idea of man's mind can be expressed, for our language is rich indeed in shades of expression and meaning, but man must take the time and pains to properly use his tongue. Man's tongue may serve as a sword or as a shield. To speak rightly is a work of art, directed by the tongue of man.

So important is it, that if a man "stumbleth not in word, the same is a perfect man and is able to bridle the whole body. He who bridles the tongue, rules the whole body rightly. Just as bits are put into the horse's mouth, in order that he may be properly guided, so the tongue, a small part of the human anatomy, is responsible for guiding man safely through the world, ever enabling him to convey his thoughts and sell his wares. As an unruly or ungovernable horse throws his rider and runs away with him, even so the tongue, when not governed, will cause many a disaster in life.

"Behold also the ships, which, though they are so great and are driven of fierce winds, yet they are turned about with a very small helm, whithersoever the governor listeth. Even so, the tongue is a small member and boasteth great things." Just as the helm of the ship is very small, yet capable of directing the course of a great liner through the deep waters of the ocean, so the tongue may be the means of guiding man's course rightly, provided it is properly bridled, and that is a most difficult task. Taming the tongue calls for the best of man's wisdom and strongest of his will-power. When the tongue is not properly under control, it is capable of doing much harm.

2. The danger of an unbridled tongue. In the second place, the writer tells us to dread a dangerous tongue, for an unbridled tongue is among the most pernicious of all evils. He compares it to a little fire placed among a great amount of combustible matter which soon rises in a hot flame and consumes all that fall in its pathway.

"Behold, how great a matter a little fire kindleth! And the tongue is a fire, a world of iniquity." There is such an abundance of sin in the tongue that it is called a world of iniquity. He refers to it as defiling the whole body of man. By it, defiling passions are kindled, vented and cherished. By it the whole body is caused to become the victim of sin. Indeed, the snares which the tongue leads men into are most often insufferable to one's own self and deadly destructive to others. For the tongue, "setting on fire the whole course of nature."

The wise man of Proverbs says: "Suffer not thy mouth to cause thy flesh to sin" (Eccl. 5:6). The affairs of man and the whole of society are sometimes ensnared because of the danger caused by an unbridled tongue.

David the psalmist says: "I will keep my mouth with a bridle while the wicked is before me." All of us need to bridle our tongues. For the tongue is an index into man's life. When he is ill, the doctor first asks to see his tongue, for by it he often discovers the secret of a case of prolonged illness.

James says the tongue is set on fire by the fire of hell. Indeed, in every age hell has had more to do with setting men's tongues afire with evil pollution than anything else. Hell's angels set before man various temptations of diabolic nature, and his tongue becomes aflame with the wickedness thereof.

3. The difficulty in bridling an unruly tongue. Every kind of beast of the field is tamed; birds, serpents and things of the sea have been tamed of mankind, but the tongue can no man tame. Yes, the apostle is true, because man can control the great and ferocious lions of the forests and the camels of the deserts. Behold, he brings under his sway and command even the most cunning creatures. Notwithstanding the wildness of the birds of the air, he has brought them in subjection. He has taken the giant things of the sea and brought them into his service; but the tongue can no man tame—it cannot be tamed by him. Now the apostle James does not mean to convey the idea that controlling the tongue is impossible with man, but he does mean that it is difficult. He means that he needs supernatural grace, much prayer and the exercise of will-power.

The tongue, he says, is full of deadly poison. Brute creatures may be managed by certain rules, and even serpents may be so harnessed that they may do no hurt to man. But the tongue is apt to break through its boundary lines at any time and spit its poison upon one in such a way as to cause great pain and suffering. I am thinking of the danger that lies hidden in the tongue that gossips, slanders, curses and lies.

Indeed, it is difficult to get hold of such a part of the human flesh and control it. No rules can successfully tame the tongue. Only the spirit and love of Jesus Christ in the human heart can direct the tongue to speak words of righteousness and appropriateness.

HOW TO BECOME A CHRISTIAN.

1. Recognize that you are not a Christian because you are good. God's Word declares there is none that doeth good—no, not one (Rom. 3:12).

2. Recognize that you are not a Christian because you are doing the best you can. God's Word declares that all have sinned and come short of the glory of God (Rom. 3:23).

3. Recognize that you are not necessarily a Christian because you are a member of some Church. Again God's Word declares that many have a form of godliness, but deny the power thereof. From such turn away (3 Tim. 3:5).

4. Confess that you cannot save yourself. "By grace are ye saved through faith, and that not of yourselves; it is the gift of God" (Eph. 2:8).

5. Believe the good news that Christ died for the ungodly (Rom. 5:8). He, therefore, died for you and settled your sin debt on Calvary's cross.

6. Believe the glorious news that Christ was raised from the dead, and by the power of God is now able to save all who call upon Him (Heb. 7:25).

7. Rely on God's sure promises, not upon your feeling; and by faith declare you are saved by the blood of Jesus Christ shed for the forgiveness of sins and openly confess Him as your Saviour and Lord (Rom. 10:9, 10).

Christian Orphanage

Dear Friends:

Our children had a real thrill on April 8th. The Burlington Daily Times gave them a special invitation to come to Burlington and be their guests for the afternoon, and fifty had an opportunity to go. Our good friend, Mr. Jim Pettigrew, of Gibsonville, offered to take them in his big truck, and it was one happy bunch of children when they started off in the big truck. When our Burlington people have something on that they think our children will enjoy they invite them down to share with them. The following was clipped from the Burlington Daily Times:

"The more than fifty motherless and fatherless children whose home is at the Elon Christian Orphanage were transported to this city today through the courtesy of friends of the orphanage and were the guests of the Daily Times for the afternoon. The kiddies, who arrived on a huge truck at 1:30 o'clock, were immediately escorted to the Paramount Theater, where, through the courtesy of the Publix-Saengers Theater Corporation, they were entertained until 3 o'clock, seeing D. W. Griffith's new production, 'Abraham Lincoln.'

"After seeing the movies for two hours, they visited the railroad car of the Pacific Whaling Company to see the big whale and other interesting specimens of marine life which that company is now exhibiting in this city. During the last hour of their stay in Burlington before boarding the truck which carried them back to Elon, the children were entertained at the Times office, where they saw the linotypes, the press and other machines in operation which are necessary for publishing a daily paper. While here, the Acme Drug Company set the crowd up to ice cream."

group led vesper services at sunset Saturday and a short candle-lighting service that night. The Lanett group of young people presented a beautiful pageant, "I am the Resurrection," and delighted the conference with musical vespers Sunday afternoon. The Christian Life Conference closed with an impressive Communion service Sunday afternoon, led by Rev. Milo J. Sweet.

A special feature of the business session was the adoption of a constitution for the united body. A committee was appointed to make efficiency standards for Church schools and young people's societies, so that the committee on recognition might have some standard upon which to base their decisions. This is something which will be worked out during the year.

Ambrose Christian Church was given a framed picture of Hoffman's "Head of Christ" for contributing the most to the spirit of the conference.

The Demorest Church won the Sunday School banner for having the most efficient Sunday School.

The Christian Endeavor Society of the LaGrange Congregational Church won the efficiency banner for the best young people's society.

The officers and superintendents elected for the coming year are: president, Rev. W. C. Carpenter; vice-president, Rev. L. C. Stanley; secretary, Miss Ruth Lott; treasurer, Miss Susie Elder. Superintendents—adult education, Rev. H. E. Coleman; young people, Mrs. Mary Mabry; children (elementary department), Miss Dee Bush.

The people who came to the conference enjoyed the hospitality of the entertaining Church and appreciate the trouble to which they went in serving meals to the entire body. The LaGrange Christian Church has extended the invitation for the conference to be held there next year.

METHODS CORNER

BY REV. ELISHA A. KING, D. D.
Miami Beach, Fla.

One of the problems of the modern pastor is that of pastoral calling. It is not now anything like what it used to be. The "call" of the minister used to be an event in the household and there was time enough to sit down and talk over the affairs of the Church and the family. The minister used to be consulted by his people on all sorts of matters; but now pastoral calls are mostly social affairs of brief duration. It cannot be helped very well, because life is so full of "things" and there is no time for extended conversation about religious matters. There are exceptions, of course, but we have to face the facts as they are. The question that confronts the minister is this: Is it worth while?

The modern minister, like all good ministers of all ages, desires to be helpful, especially to his own parish. But more and more he is trying to use his time to the best advantage. He tries to confine his calling to homes where there is sickness, to the hospital, to people who are in distress and need advice and help. Then he endeavors to call on the new-comers, hoping to interest them in the Church. Perhaps he feels it his duty to call on the parents of Sunday School pupils who may not be attendants upon the services of his Church. When serious illness comes to a home he is there ready to serve, and if death comes he presides at the funeral. There are always numerous calls that come in connection with this experience. Then there are weddings and usual callings connected therewith. There are many other places where he should call. Then there are committee meetings and various organizations that he is interested in that require some calling! If any one would figure up all these calls he would soon discover that the average minister calls as much as the medical doctor of the community. Thus it is that the average minister seeks to arrange his calling so that it does the most good.

Now, a minister's congregation can help him to the best possible use of his time. Instead of expecting the pastor to call once in so often, whether there is need or not, suppose the Church member says, "Now, pastor, so long as I am well and things go well with me, you do not need to call. Use your time to call on those who really need you. I will go right on with my work in the Church and help you all I can." In addition to this, there might be organized in every parish a calling committee that would take over some of the responsibilities along this line and relieve the pastor. Let there be a reception committee of men and women at the Church door on Sundays. Make the pastor understand that he can call on any member of the calling committee to go and see this or that person that he may indicate. The pastor might have some cards ready at hand to mail to members of this committee, indicating the name, address, or anything in the way of information he may have. There should be a place on the card for a written report of the visitor to be returned to the pastor. If pastor and people recognize the need of co-operation in calling, and arrange for some plan of helpfulness, the calling problem will soon be solved.

IN OUR MISSION FIELDS.

The news of a missionary captured by bandits in China is cabled around the world, says Leonard M. Outerbridge, of the American Board in Tehsien, North China. "The Chinese Christian pastor made prisoner by bandits endures sufferings about which the world never hears." Such a one is Mr. Jen, whose salary is $9.00 a month, barely sufficient to cover the most meager expenses. Jen owned some farm land upon which of necessity he was semi-dependent. He was captured by bandits, with other prisoners, some of whom were beaten, mutilated and killed. Before he was free, his family had to sell his farm and give more than $400 to his captors. Twenty-five miles from Tehchow lived the widow of a Christian pastor, herself a former Bible woman. Her husband had carried a thousand-dollar insurance policy with a foreign company. Upon his death, the money went to his widow. She was abducted and held until her family had turned over $1,200—the insurance money, plus other savings. Yet, in the face of such tales, Outerbridge declares that "this has been the most encouraging year in evangelistic work that I have seen in China." Outerbridge is coming to America on furlough this June.

ELON COLLEGE

AN ACCREDITED COLLEGE
of the

CONGREGATIONAL CHRISTIAN CHURCHES OF THE SOUTHEAST

ELON was founded to train Christian leaders for the New South.

ELON has done its task well—one graduate in seven being in the Christian ministry. The other six express Christian leadership in the various professions and vocations. Experience teaches that spiritual leadership must be indigenous.

The South is now a New South ready for an inclusive Church, the type of Church for which Elon has stood for forty years and for which she is prepared to produce capable leadership.

With no Church in the community, save the College Auditorium, ELON has practiced Christian Union for faculty, students, and community for four decades.

Its contribution to Christian Education is nationally known and approved.

Its Christian Education Building, providing laboratory facilities for religious leadership training, is unique and is the first college building of its type in the world.

ELON confines itself to undergraduate liberal arts work with that religious emphasis which befits the Christian College.

In ELON the Congregational-Christian Church has an asset of marvelous hopefulness.

The South needs her Yale, her Oberlin, her Carleton, her Pomona for the intellectual leadership of the United Church. Many regard ELON as strategically located and spiritually endowed to become such a center of illumination and leadership training.

MARRIAGES

DOFFLEMYRE—BLOSE.

On February 21, 1931, Mr. Owen Dofflemyre and Miss Pearl Blose came to my home and were united in the holy bonds of matrimony. The ceremony was witnessed only by a few intimate friends and relatives. The happy couple are residents of the Bethel community and are members of the Church there. May the Lord bless their young lives and make them useful in His service through many years of happy wedded life.

TO HONOR McCONNELL.—

The return of Bishop McConnell, president of the Federal Council, is to be given a reception and dinner, signaling his return from India. It is planned to have 500 or more persons assembled to welcome him on this occasion. The primary purpose of his visit to India was his invitation to deliver the Barrow lectures in the leading universities there. He has been missed in America during his absence, especially in the metropolitan city of America, for his counsel in regard to unemployment and civic corruption has been sorely needed.

BARBOUR ON CHURCH UNION.—

In an address delivered before the Greater Boston Federation of the Churches last month, Dr. Clarence A. Barbour, president of Brown University, said he did not believe the Churches would come into organic union in our time, but that we are achieving co-operative unity. "There is a great difference between a denomination and a sect," he said. "A denomination is a body denominated by a certain name. A sect is a body cut off by its own sectarianism. In these days, to be cut off is to die. What do we need in the fellowship of the Churches? Most of all, people of vision. The world suffers as much from the littleness of people as from their wickedness."

GANDHI'S DEPENDENCE ON GOD.—

Though Mr. Gandhi has been engaged in recent weeks in negotiations of extreme delicacy affecting the political destiny of the millions of his countrymen, imposing a severe and continued strain on his none-too-robust constitution, involving as it did constant visits to the viceroy's palace and prolonged conferences with him and consultations with congress leaders, it is remarkable how he has been strictly maintaining his days of silence and hours of prayer. In the public utterances he made after the conclusion of the agreement with the viceroy, he made it clear that without God's help what has been achieved would not have been possible. Prayer has a place in the world of human affairs yet, and this Indian mystic has shown faith in His power.

DR. BECKWITH PASSES.—

Dr. Clarence A. Beckwith, professor-emeritus of Christian theology at Chicago Theological Seminary since 1926, a minister of the Congregational-Christian Church, died April 2nd, at his home, in Bangor, Me., at the ripe age of 81. He had been ill for several weeks. Early in his career he had served as pastor of Congregational Churches in Maine and Massachusetts, but from 1892 to 1905 he taught theology in Bangor Seminary, and from there went to Chicago Seminary, where he was professor of Christian theology until his retirement five years ago. He wrote, among other books, "Realities and Christian Theology" and "The Idea of God." He also contributed to several encyclopedias and dictionaries. He lived a long and useful life, and his going is mourned by many who knew him.

WESTMINSTER SPEAKS.—

Westminster, in England, has been the scene of many famous elections from the days of Charles James Fox; but seldom can the eyes of the nation have been so fixed upon this constituency as they were recently. Nevertheless, the total poll was only about 50 per cent of the electors. The result was greeted with a sigh of relief by all who care for the settlement of India. For days the press, which was attacking Mr. Baldwin, did all in its power to raise prejudice by pictures of Mahatma Gandhi, and by the slogan, "Gandhi is watching Westminster." The majority of about 5,000 was decisive, but the anti-Baldwin press declares that this was due to the votes of labor and liberal electors. None the less, the press lords must understand that they have had a bad reverse, and it is not the custom of the press to die in the last ditch.

DRIVE FOR "Y" MEMBERS.—

Detroit Y. M. C. A. made a drive for new members, with a goal at 2,000, March 24th, announcing the slogan, "Join One, Enjoy All." They closed the drive after ten days with 2,945 new members added to roll, amid great enthusiasm. That indicates that Detroit, the melting-pot, is alive to this kind of Christian work. Perhaps no other auxiliary of the kingdom is accomplishing more than the Christian Association to create Christian brotherhood among the men and women of this generation. The influence of this organization and the Christian Endeavor, together with the Sunday School, has greatly increased a better understanding among peoples of different faiths in the Protestant Church. This spirit of union is spiritual rather than mechanical or ecclesiastical, and expresses the vital life of an organism in which all parts are working for the common good.

A MELTING-POT.—

A recent survey of Detroit, Mich., reveals that there was a general mixture in the population of the citizens with reference to nationalities represented in the East Commerce High School. The survey shows that the parents and ancestry of the pupils are as follows: German, 282; Polish, 131; Italian, 62; English, 55; Scotch, 29; Irish, 24; French, 24; Slavic, 20; Belgian, 19; Canadian, 13; Syrian, 8; Swedish, 8; Dutch, 7; Hungarian, 5; Jews, 4; Danish, 3; Austrian, 3; Ukrainian, 3; Welsh, 2; Roumanian, 2; Negro, 2; Finnish, 1; Norwegian, 1; Croatian, 1, and Bohemian, 1. With such a mixture of ancestry, what will the probable type of population be? With so many tributaries to the stream, it seems that the waters would somewhat muddy. The problem for Christianity is to mold all these people into a brotherhood. Mission work here will be a great problem for the Church in the future.

UNEMPLOYMENT CONTINUES.—

Among the Churches of New York City, few are doing as much in this unemployment crisis as Grace Episcopal Church, of which Dr. Bowie is pastor. While co-operating effectively with various charitable agencies, this Church has done much in its individual capacity to find work for the unemployed and to relieve their immediate distress. A study was made of 215 men applying for help of the Church, and it was found that the average age was thirty-nine, and that two-thirds of them were single. The staff of the Church has tried particularly to avoid treating these men as "cases." Even with those of the panhandling type, the theory has been that they, too, are victims of an unscientific social order. Churches too frequently do not make an intelligent study of the problems which confront them, and therefore fail to handle them intelligently. A systematic study of Church problems would give the same results as those given in business problems.

ASK FRED SMITH.—

A men's forum class has asked Mr. Fred B. Smith, a prominent layman and member of the Congregational-Christian Church, of Newton, Mass., to answer the question: "Are the masses alienated from the Church? Is it from agnosticism or materialism?" He has looked up the statistics and estimates that there are 40,000,000 Protestants, 22,000,000 below twenty-one, in the United States outside the Church. "But why? Neither from agnosticism nor materialism, but from indifference." Who is to blame? Consider yourselves a cross-section of our Church membership. How many have family prayers or even grace at the table? How many read the Bible once a month? Such questions as these will explain the present religious condition in America, and they prophesy the religious bankruptcy of America. If you ask how many Church members play bridge, attend theaters, picture shows, and the modern dance-halls, you will get a cross section of the present Church membership of the Church. People cannot be religious without being religious. This is the greatest need of the present religious world.

NOTES-PERSONALS

"And they overcame him by the blood of the Lamb and by the word of their testimony; and they loved not their lives unto the death" (Rev. 12:11).

Rev. C. H. Rowland, D. D., Greensboro, N. C., is preaching this week and for ten days in a series of meetings with Rev. H. S. Hardcastle, in the Suffolk Christian Church.

How we wish our pastors did have enough interest in and love for their Church paper and their Church to give items of interest from their Church to THE CHRISTIAN SUN, that the whole Church might see and know what the pastors and people are doing!

In 1930, 32,500 persons were killed in automobile accidents, and nearly one million more were injured in the United States. We were in the World War eighteen months, and during that time 50,500 Americans were killed. During the last eighteen months 50,900 Americans have been killed in automobile accidents.

It is not the nature or the will of man to be missionary; it is the nature and will of God to be missionary. Every missionary movement in the Bible—and it is full of them from Genesis to Revelations—is by and through the will of God, and grows out of the will of God, and is carried on over and against the will and the indifference of man.

One pastor says, and truly: "If I send envelopes and let my members know about the missionary offering, then the responsibility is theirs; if I do not do so, then the responsibility is mine." We wonder if there are pastors who are willing to assume the responsibility of not taking in their Churches the one offering a year asked for missions?

The First Christian Church, Greensboro, N. C., Dr. C. H. Rowland, pastor, is to entertain the Congregational Conference of the Carolinas, May 5, 6, 7. North Carolina Christian Conferences have been requested to send delegates to this conference, and we are advised that the delegates have been elected. It is to be a conference of counsel and of fellowship.

Mrs. V. E. Kitchens, president of the Alabama Woman's Missionary Conference, Roanoke, Ala., writes: "Our missionary rallies will be held: Wadley District, Mrs. G. L. Stephens, superintendent, at Christian Church, Sunday, May 10th, and at Corinth Church at night, May 10th; Roanoke District, Mrs. G. H. Veazey, superintendent, at Roanoke, May 12th; New Hope District, Mrs. O. L. Royston, superintendent, at Lowell, May 13th."

The people of the States may be, and are, experiencing "hard times," but we are still on the go, or were at least in 1930. Our forty-eight States and the District of Columbia collected a tax on the sale of gasoline in 1930, a sum in excess of $230,000,000. The average tax on gasoline for all the States is 3.39 cents the gallon (some States taxed as high as 6 cents the gallon, some as low as 2 cents). This means that we paid taxes on more than six billion, seven hundred and eighty-five million gallons of gas in 1930. Whether employed or unemployed, we are still spending millions on gas and going. According to statistics just issued by the American Automobile Association, we of the United States spent $4,915,000,000 on travel in 1930.

Rev. G. H. Veazey, Roanoke, Ala., writes, April 14th: "We took our missionary offering last Sunday morning at Rock Springs. It was small, but it was encouraging to see so many taking a part. We will take the offering at Corinth next Sunday. I thank God for the faithful few who are holding on." And then Bro. Veazey adds a line which conveys the experiences of every faithful pastor: "The short missionary program rendered last Sunday morning by our young people was of far more importance than the sermon I tried to preach. I felt the presence of God in the entire service. My great burden is, what can I give my young people to do? They are anxious to do something." The pastor that is not burdened for his young people now is not likely to have much of a Church, if any at all, to help him carry his burdens, or to share with him his blessings, in the years to come. The hope for the Church of the future is in the young people of the present. Give the young people a chance by enlisting their activity in the sacrificial service of the Church.

COMPLETING THE UNION.

The consummation of the union of the Congregational and Christian denominations is scheduled to take place in Seattle, Wash., on the afternoon of Thursday, June 25, 1931, it is announced by the Rev. Dr. Charles Emerson Burton, general secretary of the National Council of the Congregational Churches, and the Rev. Dr. Warren H. Denison, executive secretary of the General Convention of the Christian Church.

A united convention of the two denominational bodies will be held in Plymouth Church, Seattle, June 25th to July 3rd, and the proposed constitution for the General Council of the Congregational and Christian Churches will be presented for adoption the opening afternoon. Following the ratification of the constitution, officers will be elected.

The union was approved by both denominations at separate conventions in 1929, and a provisional executive committee was authorized to function in the name of the new General Council until a constitution was adopted. The union of the foreign mission and the home mission work and of the Church periodicals has been completed and the merger of state and district conferences has been largely accomplished.

The united communicant membership of the two denominations is 1,052,924, and the number of Churches is 6,670. The Churches are located in every state of the union. It is said to be the largest union of denominations distinct in origin and history ever to have taken place, the largest hitherto being that of the United Church of Canada, which was formed by Congregationalists, Methodists and Presbyterians in 1925, with 3,500 Churches and 610,000 communicant members.

Three thousand delegates and visitors are expected to attend the Seattle convention. Special trains will be run from all sections of the country—from New-England, from New York, from the Middle West, from the Southeast and Central South, and from California—while hundreds are planning to tour by auto.

The Rev. Dr. S. Parkes Cadman, pastor of the Central Congregational Church, Brooklyn, N. Y., and radio minister and former president of the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America, will speak at a public meeting to be held in the civic auditorium of Seattle under the auspices of the convention Friday night. This will be Dr. Cadman's first appearance on the coast since he went "on the air" in 1923 as a regular Sunday-afternoon radio preacher.

Dr. Cadman will also speak at a banquet for men to be held in the civic auditorium Saturday night. A banquet for women, to be held at the same time in the auditorium, will be addressed by President Aurelia Henry Reinhardt, LL.D., of Mills College, Calif. A third banquet will be held for young people.

President Albert W. Palmer, D. D., of Chicago Theological Seminary, has been appointed the first holder of the "council lectureship" which will be inaugurated at this convention. Five addresses will be given by Dr. Palmer on the subject, "Paths to the Presence of God," with separate topics, "Through Nature," "Through Science," "Through Humanity," "Through Worship," and "Through Jesus."

The problems of religion in six great realms of life are to be discussed in six seminars which will meet simultaneously for two hours daily. The entire membership of the council will be divided among these seminars. The realms with which the discussions will deal are, "The Gospel and the Individual," "The Family and Youth," "The Community," "National Life," "International Relations." The conclusions reached in each seminar are to be discussed the last two days by the council as a whole, and the final conclusions as adopted by the council are to be embodied in a comprehensive message to the Churches.

Monday is assigned in the convention program for an auto outing to Paradise Valley, in Mount Ranier National Park.—News Bulletin.

TRAITOROUS JUDAS.

The evil of the world is in the hands of human beings. Judas, Pilate, Calaphas, Herod, the high priest—these men caught up the feelings and opinions of the day when Jesus was tried and crucified. They all had their part in the guilt of Calvary—but Judas most of all. This man's name has become the synonym of all that is base in personal disloyalty. When Dante's Pilgrim reached the last depths of hell he found the body of Judas half devoured in the presence of Lucifer, the arch-spirit of evil.

Throughout all spiritual realms Judas is mentioned with scorn. He apparently carried through his life the elements of sordidness. When he saw Mary break the box of ointment over the feet of Jesus, the odor of the ointment being sweet in the room and silence resting on the lips of the other disciples, he broke out with the sneering quibble, "Could not this ointment have been sold?" He seemed incapable of discerning the mystery of reverence. When Jesus broke the bread and poured the wine, giving a portion to each one at the table, Judas experienced no change of nature; he was cold and doubtless calculating. That act of the Master was enough to have magnetized him with heavenly impulses, but he was not drawn under the influence of its refinement. He had so much evil in him that he could purposely rise from that holy influence and go forth to betray the hand which gave him the tokens of an immortal and unmeasured friendship.

In a few days we shall begin to celebrate Passion Week, and then we shall think of the part Judas played in that tremendous drama. But while this despised character is covered with our disdain shall we not examine ourselves, whether we are in any measure allowing the evil in the world to use us in new betrayals of the Lord, our Master? Are we ever confederate with disloyal attitudes? Jesus is always in the garden of sorrow, there praying for a wicked and wretched world. Grant, O God, that never shall we agree with evil-doers, at any price, to enter the silence and awe of that holy place to betray the Man of Love.—Nashville Christian Advocate.

ST. PETERSBURG, FLA.: Thirty new members were received into this Church at the beautiful Easter service. Rev. Kerrison Juniper, D. D., is pastor.

A LARGE OFFERING was received at the Easter service at the Miami Beach Church. It amounted to $1,000. This Church has a large budget and is doing a large service.

REV. R. A. MCKAY, who is now living at Tallassee, is giving most of his time to the pastorate of Mount Olive Church, preaching for it two Sundays each month and every Sunday night.

MISS DORA BRACKIN, Sunday School extension worker, has devoted much time to the Churches of the South Alabama Association. Good results are reported. She also took part in the Christian Life Conferences at Lanett and Thorsby, Ala.

REV. O. T. ANDERSON, pastor of the Church at Fort Myers, is doing a great deal of book reviewing. Most of his reviews are printed in the Fort Myers Press, and also in some other papers. By this process, many new and fine books are secured. Mr. Anderson spoke before the State Rotary convention on "International Service Literature."

REV. LUCY T. AYRES has rendered valuable and sacrificial service in Tennessee and Alabama. She has held special services and been in conferences with many young people at Union Church, Chattanooga, Memphis First Church, Pleasant Hill Community Church, Piedmont Junior College and Thorsby Institute, and took part in the Christian Life Conferences at Lanett and Thorsby, Ala. Miss Ayres is much loved by the young people of the Southeast, whom she helps to personal faith.

THE PROGRAM of the Conference of the Carolinas is well on its way. The board of directors meet at 3 P. M., May 5th, in the Church, at Greensboro. At the evening service the Christian Church choir will give a musical prelude. There will be a welcome word from the mayor and the pastor. Dr. Ernest M. Halliday, of New York, will preach the sermon. The full details of the entire program will be given in a later edition. Suffice it here to say such men as Dr. John Lebingier, Boston; Dr. L. E. Smith, Norfolk; Rev. Mr. Ernest Riggs, Boston; Elon College Glee Club; Rev. Wm. T. Scott, Rev. Mr. Elmer Willis Serl, Rev. W. Knighton K. Bloom, Washington, D. C.; Rev. Mr. Stanley C. Harrell, Rev. George N. Edwards, Rev. J. Edward Kirbye, and others will be on the program. And one very significant feature is that already certain Christian Churches have elected sixty fraternal delegates to share in this conference. It is expected plans will be made to form a "Congregational-Christian Conference of the Carolinas" at this meeting. The dates are May 5-7th, at the Christian Church, Greensboro, N. C., Dr. C. H. Rowland, pastor. Entertainment on the Harvard plan will be furnished.

THE RADIO CHURCH.

As the printed folder says: "The name of this Church shall be 'The Radio Church,' broadcasting over this station, WGST, Atlanta, Ga., at 10 o'clock Sunday morning." The pastor of the Church is Dr. D. Witherspoon Dodge. The folder calls it "America's first radio Church." It states the purpose and conditions of membership, methods of support and activities. The Church is open to all persons, whether members of other Churches or not, who are in sympathy with the purpose indicated, which is stated as follows: "In the organization of this Church, the purpose in view is to provide a medium for the widest possible broadcast of the principles of an open-minded and vital religion which shall be helpful in the creation of intelligent character and of a wise and serviceable social order."

One of the radio addresses given by Dr. Dodge was on the subject, "Why Mr. Darrow is an Agnostic." It was a very fair and searching analysis and criticism both of Mr. Darrow's narrow point of view and also of those phases of religious thought which offer the best targets to Mr. Darrow as they did to Robert Ingersoll before him.

REV. E. W. RIGGS VISITING CHURCHES.

The Churches of the Southeast are enjoying a visit from Rev. Ernest W. Riggs, secretary of the American Board. His visit began with a visit to St. John's Church, Newport, Ky., on April 12th. The Churches, schools and meetings visited since have been Plymouth Church, Nashville, the meeting of the Regional Committee and Advisory Board of the Southeast, the Birmingham Church, Thorsby Institute, Tuskegee Institute and Tal-ledega College, Atlanta First Church and a visit to the American Missionary Association headquarters in Atlanta.

As this paper goes to press, Dr. Riggs will be attending the Florida Conference at Orange City. After this meeting he will visit these Florida Churches: Melbourne, Lake Worth, Miami, Miami Beach, Coral Gables and Coconut Grove, Avon Park, St. Petersburg, Ormond and Jacksonville. From Florida, Dr. Riggs will go to Southern Pines for Sunday, May 2nd, and for the evening service at Albemarle, N. C. He will visit Elon College on May 4th, and Alice Freeman Palmer Institute on May 5th, and from May 5th to 7th will be at the Conference of the Carolinas, meeting at the First Christian Church, Greensboro, N. C. In this visit, Dr. Riggs has brought fresh missionary interest, and all are grateful to him and to the American Board for making his visit possible.

A VITAL SERVICE.

Rev. Abram Nightingale, pastor of the Church at Grossville, Tenn., is leading his Church in a vital service to the community. The following extract from a recent report will not only give some hint as to the scope of the work, but will also reveal its Christ-like character:

"The Church is being used during this quarter as the headquarters of the American Red Cross disaster and relief work throughout Cumberland County. This work calls for a number of volunteer workers who work on the average of two days apiece each week. One branch of this, clerical, necessitates over one hundred hours each week. So you can realize the amount of work that it involves. Various individuals in the community supply the volunteer service. Over two hundred families have been receiving this aid. The Red Cross allotment does not permit of riotous living, and seldom allows for shoes or clothes. Many families are in dire need of shoes, clothes and bedding. Letters of appeal are forthcoming in every mail. A few of these cases are being helped from Church boxes.

"A new and interesting phase of the work is caring for stranded tourists and hitch-hikers. Four main highways cross our town. Every day boys go through who are without money for food or lodging. There is no place in town provided for them. On January 4th, the first boy came, asking for food and lodging, and since then thirty-four boys have been accommodated. By far the most interesting of the thirty-four was a Jewish boy going from Los Angeles to New York City. He was a C. C. N. Y. graduate. Because of not being generally received as an American citizen, he was much embittered in spirit. He claimed that no matter how much he tried doing the square thing that every where he met deep prejudice. One annoyance was of being called a Christ killer. He rebelled at being held accountable for a crime committed over two thousand years ago. He talked until 1 o'clock in the morning, seriously trying to see if there was a way in which he could face life, overcoming prejudice and having a fair chance at life. He said that he felt his spirit had been dragged so deeply in the dirt that nothing could revive it.

"This work brings out more or less mildly the value of foot-washing in Palestine. Some of the boys walk as far as twenty-five or thirty miles a day, their feet are tired and dirty, and their socks gone. The foot bath rests them and seems to be appreciated as much as a meal. Eleven of the boys have been delightful to entertain and very appreciative. Many have had clean shirts as well as socks and often a clean suit of underwear. The underwear and shirts have been furnished from the boxes of clothing that come in. Five layettes were furnished for needy cases, each including a kimono and some bed linen. Some school children were furnished with shoes. This work is so rich in personal contact that one must be going through with it to get the idea. The boxes of clothing that come in make the work possible."

THE CHURCH.

The Church gave you much of your early religious training.
The Church was a sacred place to your parents. It either is or should be so to you.
The Church is the connecting link between the time of Christ and the present day. It has preserved Christianity for you and your children.
The Church has inspired the best in art, music, literature, architecture.
The Church has sponsored and is sponsoring the highest and best in education, medical care and healing, institutional aid and protection.
The Church has carried the teachings of Jesus to the most remote parts of the earth.
The Church has been the inspiration of the world's greatest leaders.
The Church has made possible the highest standards of morals and ethics.
The Church has given civilization its upward urge.
The Church satisfies your deepest needs.
The Church wants to help your children in the way of right living.
The Church wants you. Do not resist its call. You owe too much to the Church to refuse to be a member thereof.—Bulletin of the Miami Beach Church.

The Church that Jesus founded is still here. If we obey the commands, the Lord will save us. As He saves us, He adds us to the Church. "The Lord added to the Church daily such as should be saved." The Church existed during the first century, while some of the apostles still lived, and the Church continued even after the death of the apostles. The Church of Christ is still in existence.—E. M. Borden.

PRINCIPLES OF THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

(1) The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.

(2) Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.

(3) The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.

(4) Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship and of Church membership.

(5) The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by, all.

THE PURPOSE OF THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

The purpose of this Church is to cultivate a spirit of union among the followers of our Lord Jesus Christ of every persuasion, and to secure, if possible, the associate efforts of all true religious teachers in pointing the wicked to "the Lamb of God who taketh away the sin of the world."

The peculiar doctrines and tenets which have confused and distracted the Christian world are remanded to private judgment, and hence cease to be matters for debate, only in so far as may be necessary to prevent a sectarian influence from entering the Church.

This Church requires no compromise of faith on the part of any child of God in order to communion or fellowship; here, denominational distinctions cease to exist, and Christian love binds the brotherhood together.

The purpose of this Church will be consummated in the conversion of the world and the union of all Christians.

THE REMNANT.

One unmistakable truth running, like a scarlet thread, through the Bible, is that God, by grace, has always reserved for Himself a remnant. In 2 Kings 19:4, we find the words: "Wherefore lift up thy prayer for the remnant that are left." Isaiah 37:4 repeats these words identically. Previous to Isaiah's plea, however, he had declared in chapter 1, verse 9 of his prophecy: "Except the Lord of Hosts had left unto us a very small remnant, we should have been as Sodom, and we should have been like unto Gomorrah." Then Isaiah, in chapter 11, prophesies about a day to come when "a root of Jesse, which shall stand for an ensign of the people; to it shall the Gentiles seek: and his rest shall be glorious." Following this prophecy, Isaiah, in verse 11, says very significantly, "The Lord shall set His hand again the second time to recover the remnant of His people which shall be left." This "remnant" the prophet speaks of is coming up from the nations of the earth and the islands of the sea.

Then coming to a much later date, Paul, in Romans, 11th chapter, verse 5, says: "Even so, then at this present time also there is a remnant according to the election of grace." Then John, in Revelation, 11th chapter, 13th verse, says: "And the remnant gave glory to the God of heaven." In all ages, God has reserved this "remnant," and John, viewing that which is to come, as if it had already happened, saw in the city of the redeemed, among those who had washed their robes and made them pure in the blood of the Lamb, "the remnant" giving glory to God in heaven. God has ordained it so, and His name is glorified in the earth and made secure among the children of men for all generations to come by and through "the remnant" that is left.

One wonders if this remnant is not that part of the household of faith in the Church of our day who are known as "the faithful few." Often one hears the expression, "There are a very few in our Church upon whose shoulders rests the burden of the work. Only a few of us have to do the work of the Church and do all the giving of the Church. So very few of us go to the mid-week prayer-meeting or attend Church on any and every occasion," etc.

In all spiritual activities and appointments of grace and mercy, there are times of discouragement and even of doubt. Elijah, the prophet, told the Lord that he only was left of those who had not bowed the knee to Baal. God astounded and encouraged Elijah by saying, "Seven thousand are left of my people who have not bowed the knee to Baal." The evils of any day—the fads, freaks, sins, crime, idolatry—are obvious and cry aloud and advertise themselves from the housetops and on the front pages, and, with their babel of voices, seem to be taking the world. However, God's workers go marching on, for the faithful few, the remnant preserved according to grace, carry forward the banner of God and of righteousness. Whatever the bloom, or however gray the dawn, righteousness prevails and "the remnant," though faint and with faltering step, carry forward the banner of our crucified, our arisen and our finally triumphant Lord. The remnant shall not fail, by the grace of God, "till Shiloh come."

WHOSE IS THE RESPONSIBILITY?

Rev. H. S. Hardcastle, pastor Suffolk Christian Church, declares that if he gives to his people the envelopes for the missionary offering and to each an opportunity to make a contribution, then the responsibility is on them, and not on himself. If, on the other hand, as a pastor, he fails to give his members the envelopes and fails to give an opportunity for the offering, the responsibility falls upon him. In a time like this, we wonder if any pastor is willing to assume such a grave responsibility. Our mission work, which is fundamental to Church life and growth, hangs in the balance. We have assumed obligations on Church debts, for pastor's salaries, and for missionaries at home and abroad which cannot be met except out of our offering through self-denial at this time. A long time ago our Lord, and not a mission board, began the missionary work. He carries that work on and, through His divine wisdom and sovereignty, makes the success of it depend upon those who are willing to deny themselves for His sake and share with Him the fellowship of the suffering of His Son in giving the true light to those who are in darkness.

Has any pastor, under any circumstances, done his duty as pastor, duty to his Church, duty to his brethren of the ministry, duty to his God, duty to the divinely appointed work of his God, when he fails to give his people an opportunity and an invitation to make an offering at least once a year to missions? The pastor is the key-man, and by his indifference, or rebellious will, can block the whole process and prevent his Church from sharing with others the glory of missionary achievement and kingdom enlargement. It is a tremendous responsibility, this that the pastor faces, this that the Church faces. To fail of that responsibility or to neglect this plain duty is, indeed, a hazard and a risk that we do not believe any conscientious pastor can afford to take. All can at least give their people the opportunity and challenge them to the privilege and the joy of sharing the gospel, and the love of our Lord, with those who have not that joy. Our joy in Christ is only increased as we share it with others. No pastor, however depressed the times, however needy his people, can afford to stand between them and the joy that is theirs as they share through their self-denial His life and His love with others.

Since some of the pastors are doing all they can, even through their own need, to get as liberal an offering as possible, it is not fair to them nor to the work that is near their heart and dear to the heart of our Lord, for some pastors in the Conference or Convention to withhold their efforts and stand by with idle hands and indifferent hearts and see their brethren of the ministry carry the burden, and receiving the blessings, that they themselves should carry and that they and their people should enjoy. We repeat, the responsibility of refusing to give the people a chance is too weighty and tremendous for any pastor to take upon his own shoulders and to assume before his fellowman, his Church, and his God. CHURCH MEMBERSHIP GAINS IN 1930.

Dr. G. L. Kieffer, taking up the work laid down by the late lamented Dr. H. K. Carroll, presents in the May number of the Christian Herald Church statistics for 1930. The total net gain for all the Churches in 1930 was 88,350. This is indeed a poor showing in comparison with the gain of 1929, which was 242,784; and a poorer showing in comparison with 1928, when the gain was more than a million. The Methodists (sixteen different bodies) had a decrease in membership in 1930 of 43,211; nine bodies of the Presbyterians showed a decrease of 22,763; the Disciples of Christ (two bodies), a decrease of 18,567. The fifteen different varieties of Baptists gained 74,706; seventeen varieties of Lutherans gained 56,180. The Protestant Episcopalians gained 16,532, and the Catholics 17,256.

One significant thing is pointed out by Dr. Kieffer. In 1830 there were ten Church members for each seventy-five of our population in the United States; in 1930 there were ten Church members for every twenty-five of our population. The report shows mergers of Congregationalists and Christians, and also of three different synods of the various Lutheran bodies.

With all our great Churches and splendid equipment, our Church membership is not increasing, scarcely by a tenth, with the increase of our population. The Church statistics for 1930 give grounds for serious study and consideration by all who are interested in the growth and enlargement of the kingdom. J. O. A.

THE PERSEVERANCE OF THE SAINTS.

Quite a few are interested in "the final" perseverance of the saints. Some of us are interested in "the present" perseverance of the saints. This writer knows a few saints who are persevering in spite of unspeakable difficulties, hardships, deprivations and sacrifices. Many of our pastors have told us recently that their Churches were far behind in paying their salaries; that they were working on and doing what they could in hope, having to deny themselves of all luxuries and of many comforts and of some necessities of life. These pastors have in their heart the grace of God and get satisfaction out of the sacrifices they make in the name and for the sake of their Lord. God bless them as they persevere and push forward, faint but still pursuing.

We doubt, however, if any of our Christian pastors have a record that surpasses this one of the Methodist Church that the editor of the Nashville Christian Advocate tells of in last week's issue of his paper:

"A pastor in our Church told of his perseverance in spite of privations, saying that so far this conference year he has received less than twenty-five dollars from his circuit, made up of five preaching points, some of which are at school-houses, where he has undertaken to begin services, the first the people have had for years. He says he frequently walks ten miles on Sunday to reach his appointments, and on week days he walks six to eight miles in doing work for a living. Whenever our drooping spirits find a few servants of Jesus Christ who for His sake face all kinds of hardship and privation, we take courage. By such zeal the world is won."

The editor of the Advocate is correct in his conclusions. The God of heaven, who is the Maker and Owner of all the gold and the silver and the cattle upon a thousand hills, has seen fit to carry on His work of winning this world to Him through the unrelenting perseverance of His saints.

PRAYER AND REVIVAL.

Preaching and Sunday School are preparatory stages of Christian life. Formal service has its value in training for worship and experience, but experience is not only the best teacher but it is essential to religious growth. The beginning of religion is, no doubt, mental. The sinner must know that he is a sinner; but, added to that intellectual knowledge, the Holy Spirit convicts the sinner of his sin and he feels that he is lost and wants to know what he must do to be saved. The Bible answers that question when it says, "Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ, and thou shalt be saved" (Acts 16:31). The process of salvation brings into exercise the mind and the heart. "For with the heart, man believeth unto righteousness; and with the mouth confession is made unto salvation" (Rom. 10:10). Faith goes before confession, and the result is an experience of the heart. This age is in danger of depending too much upon intellectual decision, without soul experience. We need emotion as well as thought.

God did not make provision for human salvation by intellectual processes, but by love. "For God so loved the world that He gave His only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth on Him should not perish, but have everlasting life" (John 3:16). It was emotion that gave Jesus Christ to save, and it is emotion that believes and experiences salvation. In fact, the best in us is emotion, stirred by the Holy Spirit. The steps that lead to marriage at its best is by the harmony of emotion and intellect. Too many modern marriages are the result of mental processes, and much of Church membership is the same way. Man is never at his best until his feeling and his judgment, which is a mental process, agree. Feeling by itself is foolishness, and mind by itself is the same. "The fool hath said in his heart, There is no God" (Psa. 14:1 & 53:1). The biggest fool in the world is the emotional fool, the one who is a fool in his heart; and the next biggest fool is the intellectual fool who is wrong in his mind. The sane man is the one whose mind and heart agree when taught by the word of God.

"He that winneth souls is wise" (Prov. 11:30). That is the privilege of all believers to win others to Jesus Christ. This can be done best by prayer. Pentecost was preceded by ten days of prayer; then one day of preaching, and three thousand were saved. At the end of that long prayer season, they "all were filled with the Holy Ghost, and began to speak with other tongues, as the Spirit gave them utterance" (Acts 2:4). They were all so full of the Holy Ghost that they all spoke and three thousand were added unto them. What the Church needs is a long and earnest prayer-meeting in faith, waiting for the outpouring of the Holy Ghost.

THE GOSPEL AND FOOTBALL.

Last autumn some students of Wheaton College, Ill., formed a prayer group that met each morning from six to seven for Bible study and prayer. One of the older students had a vision of the lost multitudes outside of Church influence swarming the fields of great football games and "he was moved with compassion." As a result of this vision and of the prayer group, a number of students started out to give the gospel to the football crowds. At one high school game in Chicago, they distributed nearly two thousand gospels of John. During the ensuing five weeks over thirty-five thousand gospels were distributed, covering the more important high school games and several college games within a radius of thirty miles of Wheaton. Each Saturday fifty students and several faculty members set out in cars heavily laden with gospels which were given to the crowds either as they entered or as they left the fields.

Each gospel has been enclosed in a blue envelope resembling a bank book, on which the great football coach of the University of Chicago, Alonzo Stagg, has written, "This little book will help us all to win in the game of life."

A detachable flyleaf pasted in the gospels invited the reader to send for another Scripture portion. Many slips were returned, and the follow-up committee improved every contact.

This is said by President Buswell to be the most significant spiritual movement ever started on the Wheaton campus. It is something new to find from twenty-five to seventy-five students putting gospels into circulation at football games, after earnest prayer. As the result of an appeal in chapel, cash and pledges totaling more than $600 were received from the students and faculty.

These students now plan to carry on the work in shops, prisons, homes, and schools, especially among thousands of fellow-students attending colleges and universities where the Bible is not honored. Other Christian schools, too, may share the responsibility of helping the great mass of less fortunate college students.—Missionary Review.

OUT OF PATIENCE.

Whoever allows himself to get out of patience, comes to the falling-off place before he is aware of it. By indulging in temper and saying cruel words, a man loses control of himself, and his tongue grows keener and more bitter and he effects nothing and hurts forever the man he attacks. Do not turn friendship into hatred by hasty speech. "By conquering yourself, you have conquered me," were the words accompanying the capitulation of a great Indian chief to one of our colonial governors. Think it over.—John Wanamaker.

Fifty Thousand Dollars for Missions! A CALL TO SELF-DENIAL

Through self-denial, the Kingdom of Heaven is built on earth. The cattle upon a thousand hills are His; likewise, the gold and the silver, and the world's wealth. Yet, in financing His Kingdom on earth, Jesus, the Son of God, saw fit to adopt and use the method of self-denial. He gave the great example and denied Himself of even a place on which to lay His head. He gave all for our sake. He calls upon us to give something for His sake, not out of our abundance, but out of our need.

The greatest task conceived by the mind of man, or the wisdom of God, is that of giving the whole Gospel to the whole world, and this task has been, and is being, borne and achieved solely through self-denial.

It is a spiritual challenge, and must be accepted, if at all, through self-denial. If CHRISTIAN SUN readers shall reap the benefits and enjoy the blessings of spiritual enrichment, they will do so by following their Lord in denying themselves of some real value in His name and for His sake.

To this end, the Mission Board, in trying to carry forward the work assigned to it by the Church for which $50,000 is called for this year, is inviting all SUN readers and Church members to deny themselves of some valuable thing, or indulgence, and give the price of it to Missions. Only through self-denial will our own lives be enriched and will our goal for our Lord be achieved. Jesus proved Himself our Friend by the supreme sacrifice. Now He wants us, and needs us, to be His friends, and we can only prove that friendship by making a sacrifice for His sake. This we can do through self-denial.

SUFFOLK LETTER.

An educational meeting of great interest was held in Suffolk High School auditorium, and separate meetings in other places, on Friday, April 17, 1931. The Suffolk meeting was one section of District "B," of the Eastern Virginia Education Association. There were 800 Eastern Virginia school teachers and State officials present, including Dr. Sidney B. Hall, superintendent of public instruction for Virginia. Other speakers were Dr. Jesse H. Newton, director of the Lincoln School of Teachers' College, Columbia University; Hugh L. Sulfridge, president of the Virginia Education Association; Dr. W. R. Smithey, University of Virginia; Dr. W. E. F. Wallin, Atlantic University; Dr. J. Olla Helseth, College of William and Mary; L. E. Pettyjohn, of Whaleyville High School; W. N. Rippy, Chuckatuck High School; H. W. Garrett, Cobbs Creek High School. Others who took part in public exercises were Miss Yancie Brooking, supervisor of music, of Suffolk; Mrs. J. W. Cox, supervisor of writing, Newport News; Dr. B. B. Bagby, director of child health, State Board, Richmond; Mr. Alfred Forrest, Miss Clarice Ryan, Miss Laura Hurt, Suffolk; Mrs. Eleanor B. Hopkins, Accomac County; Miss Mary B. Pusey, Accomac, and Miss Ila Massey, Newport News.

Departmental conferences were held in the afternoon in rooms of the high school building and rooms of the Suffolk Christian Church. Many subjects relating to all the lines of study and the management of classes and the direction of studies occupied the group meetings, and the result of such conferences is the raising of standards of work, a unity in the purpose and conduct of schools, and a larger interest in the public school. Economy, discipline, more thorough work on the part of teachers, as well as of students, seemed to be the outstanding objectives of this great conference.

At the opening session, Rev. H. S. Hardcastle, pastor of the Suffolk Christian Church, offered the invocation. J. C. West, Jr., chairman of the Suffolk School Board, gave the welcome address; President Joseph H. Saunders introduced Col. J. E. West, former lieutenant governor of Virginia, as "one of the greatest friends of education that Virginia has ever had."

John E. Martin, superintendent of Suffolk schools, was unanimously elected president of District "B," Virginia Education Association.

Altogether, the meeting was full of instruction, education and inspiration to teachers who are willing to do their best in this great field of progress. The Churches of Suffolk provided lunches for those who had come from other places at 50 cents per plate, and more than a hundred were served in the Fellowship Hall of the Christian Church.

Another section of this association held a meeting in South Norfolk, and the State speakers spoke at both meetings. Trains, automobiles and good roads make it easy for such great meetings, and the Church needs to increase her spiritual life to meet this age of progress.

ELON LETTER.

Colleges have individuality. This is as it should be. No two colleges should aim to be exactly alike. The conventions and standards of conduct, the social codes, as well as the requirements for degrees, may properly vary from one institution to another. Certain traditional patterns or types of conduct have been historically developed in certain institutions of learning. These standards appear out of date, sometimes even ridiculous, to visitors from other institutions where different standards or patterns are maintained. No doubt there are certain traditions and patterns in the organization of any college or university which appear antiquated and unnecessary to those acquainted with other traditions and practices, but should there be dull uniformity in such matters? We would not wish every man to dress like every other man. We would not wish every woman to talk exactly like every other woman. Neither should we expect every college to be like every other college. We wish individuality and personality and distinctive habits and characteristics, a unique pattern, if you please, for every institution. And if the college is really entitled to be a college, there will be associated with it certain traditions, customs and practices, patterns of conduct, which will differentiate it from every other institution in the land.

And yet, in spite of the fact that institutions of higher learning should show this individual aptitude and vitality of corporate life, there are certain standards or patterns which may be called universal in the organization and administration of a college. The buildings are of a certain standard, the professors must have had certain academic preparation for their specific work as teachers, the library must not only be appropriately housed in a building designed for library purposes, but it must have trained librarians and books in a certain number related to the departments of instruction. There must be a certain amount of endowment to furnish income for the maintenance of the college. Its athletics and social life must be organized in accordance with certain approved ideas of the accrediting or standardizing agencies. At least one hundred and twenty semester hours of college work, based upon high school graduation, must be satisfactorily pursued by each student before he can be graduated. Some educational bolsheviks have looked upon these standards and have said that they take away all the liberty of expression and individuality of action from colleges, but this is far from true. It is possible for a college to measure up fully to these patterns and at the same time exercise full liberty in the development of its individual program. An institution may have its own ideas and its own methods of achieving them. The pattern in the form of standards then becomes but the framework into which the individual architects fit their building materials for the fashioning of a work of educational art.

PIEDMONT JUNIOR COLLEGE LETTER.

EDUCATION THE FOUNDATION OF DEMOCRACY.

Probably the best definition ever given of a democracy was by Abraham Lincoln when he said it was a "Government of the people, for the people, and by the people." That being the case, the government cannot, on an average, be better than the people who control it. From this, it will be seen how important it is to have the common people—that is, the great mass of voters—possess a good education.

If we look at the pages of the world's history, we will find that there have been many republics established, but for some reason their lives have been short and the monarchies were again established. Ancient Greece presents to us the first real samples of democracy in the world. There lived some of the greatest philosophers and thinkers of any age, and yet in comparatively a short time those republics passed away. The trouble was that only a very few had even the rudiments of an education, while the great mass of the people were densely ignorant, so when the crisis came the people did not stand back of their governments as they would have done if they had been able to appreciate a government of their own.

In Rome there was no school system, and they never seemed to think of supplying any educational facilities for the men and women who did the common, hard work, so all the latent talents they possessed never did the state any good. It is from this class today that we get our greatest statesmen and men of learning. Naturally, the Roman republic fell.

The weakest of animals is the human infant—knowing nothing, able to do nothing, absolutely dependent for his existence on another's care. At the other extreme of life, developed by the processes of a life education, stands Gladstone, shaping the nation's destiny; or Browning, singing songs the ages will listen to; or Edison, gathering the lightning and making it light our houses and run our trolley cars. The difference between this little, helpless creature in the cradle and this great statesman, poet or inventor is education.

Today we look across to Europe and we see a large number of newly formed republics as a result of the World War. Great monarchies which had lasted for centuries were suddenly broken up, and the people have started out blindly to govern themselves. Education in most of those countries has been sadly neglected, so a very large per cent of the working-people cannot read or write. The monarch felt safer by keeping his people in ignorance, but now that the hand of the monarch no longer guides them, the world is wondering what the future historian will record for them.

On this side of the Atlantic we find about two dozen republics which have had a very questionable existence for a hundred years. In many of them, education is as much neglected as in central Europe, and as a result they are unsteady and their governments are always shaky. Mexico has had fifty-six well-organized rebellions in one hundred years. Roving bands of robbers are always present, and, despite the best efforts of the central government, they keep the country in terror. They are called to our attention when some depredation is committed on or near our soil.

The same condition prevails in nearly all the Central and South American countries. There is no use to blame the governments of those countries. Probably no better governments will be established until the very nature of the people is changed by education. As long as the young children are taught that it is just as honorable to rob as to work, and very much easier, so long shall we have roving crowds of bandits that no government can control.

The place to commence building a safe democracy is in the school-room, at a very early age. Train the twig aright and the tree will stand by itself. The foundation of democracy, if it is to last, must be upon a solid rock—an educated people. We may change rulers and constitutions as often as we desire, but if the people have the wrong idea of the functions of government it can never have sufficient stability to assure permanent prosperity.

When our forefathers broke away from the government that controlled them they established the best government the world ever knew, because on the very advanced edge of civilization they had always built the school-house, so that the children of the pioneers had the same advantages for securing an education as the children of the city.

When the Russian people broke away from the power that had held them little better than slaves, they established the worst government the world has ever known, because the great mass of the people were ignorant and would follow any adventurer who promised them fortune and ease. Their sufferings have been great, and will probably continue until they learn what are the proper functions of government; but that will not be until the children are educated in the proper way, grow up and take the reins of state. Ignorance in the controlling body can never form a reliable state.

Do the American people come up to all the requirements of a well-educated people? Far from it. When we adopted the Constitution, our people were almost all former subjects of Great Britain or their descendants, while now the majority are related to the people of continental Europe. The ignorance so common there has been brought to this country, and much illiteracy prevails in some sections.

There are certain movements on foot now that are exceedingly dangerous, and if carried out would result in ruin. One of these is the doctrine of "divide up." It means that every few years the wealth of the country would be evenly divided, so that there would be no very rich nor very poor. There would be about $3,000 for each, and, to its short-sighted advocates, this would bring about perfect conditions. They fail to see the subsequent steps in this process. It would destroy all incentive to work or accumulate. All would want to wait for the next division, when the lazy man would get the same as the industrious one. All would cease to produce, and soon there would be nothing to divide. The people would simply starve instead of having abundance, as we have today.

So, we see that education is the foundation of democracy. The spirit of the times demands a better education for the working-people. They should be taught the science of government and political economy, so that the labor unions will have men who know more about the way to advance the interests of the laborer. Then, and not until then, will democracy rest upon a solid foundation.

MEETING CHANGED CONDITIONS.

BY MRS. J. F. MORGAN.

I am sure we will all agree that many changes have taken place during the years that we have lived. God permits many of them for our growth and development. As we look back over our experiences, memories that we treasure almost as much as life stir and inspire us. Memories of the home that no longer is, and of ties that have been broken, will always influence our lives. Civilization has thrust upon us many changes in our manner of living. We women have benefited by them. They have brought to us a greater freedom, more leisure and time for enjoyment. There are changes, too, in the plans and methods of carrying on our Church work. We are facing changed conditions at Rosemont today. We are facing changing conditions in our mission fields; they have become broader. There seems to be a feeling of unrest and even resentment toward Christianity on the part of the under-privileged races.

Let us meet these conditions with a greater sense of responsibility to others. It is the feeling of responsibility that makes good housewives, good Church-workers, and efficient business women. I am responsible for my children. If I do not teach them the things they should know and minister to their needs, nobody else will. I feel this responsibility so keenly. I would suffer and sacrifice for them if necessary. You have heard the story about the angel who asked Christ on his return to heaven, "Master, suppose your disciples fail you—what then?" He replied, "I have no other plan." We need to feel a greater responsibility as a co-worker with God. We need to be better informed. We have accomplished much in our missionary work along this line, through our study classes, our rallies and conferences, our literature; but we still have much to do. The more we know, the greater becomes our interest. But we need also to know in our hearts and in our own experiences the value of Christ and His message. It is this knowledge that will increase our zeal and our willingness to sacrifice in order that others might have it.

A greater liberality will help us meet changing conditions. It costs more to live now than it used to, and it also costs more to support God's work. We do not hesitate to spend more than we formerly did for things that we want. Then, why not give in the same proportion to our Church and missionary enterprises. This work suffers greatly because of our selfishness and unwillingness to give. Why not meet the changing conditions with a greater liberality?

We need to forget there is any such thing as superior and inferior races. Changing conditions have made the world one great neighborhood. As we become more intimate in our associations with other races, this attitude of superiority crops out. It hurts me when I read that people in the Philippines and other island possessions dislike Americans. I believe a Christ-like toleration and friendliness toward all nations is a great need for our missionary cause today. I believe God hath made of one blood all nations for to dwell on the face of the earth, and as they come to know Him they all have a contribution to make to mankind.

Let us meet these conditions with a new consecration. The kingdom of Christ needs a more complete giving of ourselves, our minds and bodies, as well as our hearts. How great is the need for a deeper prayer life and greater spiritual power among Christians! But we need to consecrate also our minds, that they might study and plan in the interest of the kingdom. We have many things to be proud of at Rosemont, but our business meetings are poorly attended. We have many fine, bright minds that are not being used in the interest of the Church. If all of us used our minds as little on our business as on our Church we would have a worse depression than we have been experiencing. Our hands, our feet, our time, our money—Christ needs them all. And as we present our bodies a living sacrifice, holy, acceptable unto God, which is our reasonable service, the kingdom of Christ will advance in a wonderful way.

However, even in the midst of a changing world some things remain fixed and steadfast. I wonder if we could meet these changes by revitalizing and re-emphasizing some of the fundamental things that have withstood the test of ages. God's love and concern for mankind, His plan of redemption, His word—these things shall stand forever. Man's recognition of God and obedience to Him have always brought blessings. The great work of the Church and of missions is to bring all the world to the feet of the Christ. In the midst of a changing world, He stands the same yesterday, today and forever. His message is to all mankind and for all ages. As we face the future, may we be led by Him in paths of service that shall hasten the establishment of His kingdom here on earth.

MISSIONS

REV. J. O. ATKINSON, D. D., Secretary.

A PRAYER.

Forever, O Lord, Thy word is sure. We know it will not return unto Thee void. Depending upon Thy word, the nations shall not fail, but find therein the way of peace and security. Give to Thy servants understanding. Teach us good judgment and knowledge. It is time, O God, for the organized Church to let Thy Spirit rule. Dear Father, keep Thine own true, sensitive to discern evil, diligent to fortify Thy Church against the insidious tendency to absorb and assimilate the ways of the world. Cleanse Thy temple and make it a place where communion shall be real and fellowship unrestrained. In Jesus' name and for His sake. Amen.

CHANGING CONDITIONS IN THE ORIENT.

BY MRS. H. B. WHITE.

(Read at the Woman's Missionary Rally, Liberty Springs, Nansemond County, Va., April 8, 1931.)

The Orient has always exercised a charm over the imagination peculiarly its own. The brilliantly dressed Indians, the long-robed Chinese, the picturesquely costumed Japanese, with their lack of education, their distrust of new ideas, new methods and new friends, their keen minds and their seriousness of purpose—long ago aroused in us a desire to help. We longed to see their intellects trained and their characters developed until they should want more and intelligently demand more. The missionaries have done much to accomplish these things—they have been sincere friends and able advisers. Working on, overcoming persecution, opposition, indifference, they have made themselves indispensable. The period in which we live is one of change, and the missionary conditions have not escaped this. I want to comment briefly on three changes which seem to me to be most conspicuous and significant. (1) That denominationalism is giving away to union in the Churches; (2) that all countries of the Orient are now willing to at least listen to the gospel; and (3) that the native Oriental has developed an opinion of his own in regard to Christianity and is rapidly supplying native leaders for his field.

There is a feeling in America today that "some day some all-involving creed will adopt the best in all faiths," and that the barriers of denominationalism will be swept away. Already some progress has been made and the way has been paved for more. In the mission fields we find that the effort is far ahead of unity at home. One of the first aims listed by the "Kingdom of God Movement" is that this great campaign should be a real inter-Church one.

As to the willingness of the people to listen to the gospel. Years ago the work of the Church in the Orient was not of sufficient strength to inspire interest or opposition. Then there came a period when the educational and political leaders realized that the work of the missionary was beginning to be a real force in the national life, and every effort was blocked as effectively as possible. Yet we see that the anti-Christian movement in China is receding, that there are today in China 500,000 Christians. We know that the gospel can be preached anywhere in Japan with freedom; that there are now 259,000 Christians in Japan. It is true that while India is in a period when doubt often assails her, she listens in multitudes to the gospel and boasts of 4,000,000 Christians.

Perhaps it is hard for us to realize to what an extent the native has developed an opinion of his own and is beginning to supply native leaders for his field. Twenty-five or thirty years ago, a kind of glamour surrounded the appearance of a missionary among the natives, but today it is different. The people of the Orient have learned of the West, through the moving pictures, slightly through reading-matter, but mainly through their returning students, of whom there are 7,500 in our colleges. These Indians, Japanese and Chinese are watching us keenly and are judging us accordingly. Often when they return home the report which they give to their people is not in our favor. Often the missionary fears this or an American moving picture more than he fears the unbelief of the native. There is a growing feeling in India as to a difference between Jesus Christ, on the one hand, and our Western Churches, creeds and civilization on the other. There is no opposition to Christ, but opposition to Western Christianity. They know now that Jesus was not an Occidental, but an Oriental, of a despised race, and therefore able to understand them. They are beginning to think for themselves. This is a most encouraging situation. Stephen J. Corey says, "We can't expect from those across the seas rigid conformity to what we have accepted as doctrines and practices of the Church. Give them the best that we have and allow them to decide for themselves to find the faith and the patterns from the New Testament." That is just what is taking place. In India we find more skepticism concerning religion in the last few months than in the previous twenty years. The natives are thinking for themselves, groping for the truth, formulating their own creed. They are watching us in America, listening to their missionary, and judging the sincerity of our religion. There is this to remember, if we prove ourselves strong and satisfactorily meet this crisis, missionary work will be on a firmer foundation than ever before and greater progress will be made. Their first-hand knowledge of the life and customs of our Western civilization and the insistent encouragement of the missionary in this direction, have served to develop a hitherto unrealized initiative in the native Oriental, and with this change comes the participation of the native in the work. The missionary encourages this, urges it, and realizes that in this fact alone the most gratifying success is evident. It will give him the opportunity to press on to new fields. He realizes, as we do, that the truly converted native is the ideal teacher of his people. He knows their languages, habits, customs, fears and superstitions, and he can inspire their faith more easily than a foreigner.

The American Board, which is operating 97 stations, with 1,641 substations, in 13 countries on 5 continents, has 6,000 native associates in the department of social service. In China there are six Christian universities, headed by Chinese Christians. In Japan, Kagawa is leading the Christians in a movement called "Kingdom of God Movement," which has for one of its aims a million members in the Church and has for its watch-words "Labor, Study, Prayer." There are 750 Churches actually engaged in the movement, 1,300 meetings have been held, and 265,000 people have made up the audience. This, after one year's time of the "Kingdom of God Movement" in Japan, with a native leader, is a marvelous accomplishment indeed. In India, notwithstanding her skepticism and groping, we find that recently when, after speaking to a vast audience, E. Stanley Jones asked for those who wanted to find Christ to remain, not less than 1,000 stayed. And Gandhi, receiving alike praise and abuse, is nevertheless leading his countrymen in a fight for freedom, which, in a broad sense, is not merely political but economic and religious as well. And with this evidence of native leadership has come gratifying progress as to the education of the children and young people. Moral and religious teaching is put in the schools whenever possible, and Sunday School enrollment is increasing rapidly. They realize that it is the younger generation—those who are now students—who will be able to bring the greatest light to their problems. So China, with its six native Christian university presidents, Japan with her Kagawa, and India with her Gandhi, serve to remind us that the people of the Orient are really beginning to furnish leaders from their natives, and Christianity is becoming more personal and vital to them.

So, in this period of change, when ideals are likely to be confused and standards liable to be lowered, when only by keen insight and great strength of character can we decide for the really good things, we must, more than ever before, live the things which we are teaching in the Orient. We must remember that willingly and cheerfully doing a thing doubles the deed. That every man may not be the architect of his own fortune or misfortune, but he is the sole contractor of his own character, that temporary success is a permanent loss when it is gained by the sacrifice of character; that the strongest bond between nations is the spirit of friendship and good will; that the truest form of charity is to try to correct the cause for the need of charity; that love for his fellow-man makes one truly noble; that we must read our Bibles, wherein we shall find religious doctrines, practical philosophy, and pre-eminent poetry; and, above all, that the Spirit of Jesus Christ influences and permeates all phases of life. Remembering these things, living these things, we shall be ready to meet the changing conditions in the Orient and to make of the difficulties real opportunities.

NORTH CAROLINA MISSIONARY RALLIES.

The women of three districts of the North Carolina Woman's Missionary Conference met in their annual rallies last week. Mrs. D. E. Mitchell, of the Reidsville society, presided over the district meeting at Palm Street Church, Greensboro, May 14th. On Wednesday, the 15th, Mrs. J. W. Patton, of the Elon College society, presided over the meeting at Mebane. On Friday, the 17th, Mrs. W. H. Boone, of the Durham society, presided over the meeting at Durham. The theme of these meetings, as is that of the other rallies to be held in the State, is "Jesus, the Light of the World." Some of the topics presented and papers read were: "The American Board, a Light-bearer," "Reflections of the Light in Our Own Society," "Carrying Light Into the Dark Places," "Driving the Shadows from India," "Hastening the Dawn of China," "Rays of Light in Darkest Africa."

Then there were three papers presented at each meeting on "Keeping Our Own Lights Bright" by (1) "Study of the Word," (2) "Prayer," (3) "Mission Study." The women of the Palm Street society, on the day of this rally, deeply interested all present by presenting a twenty-minute missionary pageant in the afternoon. One of the outstanding features of the Mebane and Durham meetings was a questionnaire, in which the list of twenty questions, bearing on practical problems of the missionary society and the missionary work was presented. Rev. A. W. Hurst, of Elon, conducted the questionnaire at Mebane; Rev. Stanley C. Harrell, at Durham. Dr. C. H. Rowland and Rev. J. L. Neese were the pastors attending the Palm Street meeting; Revs. A. W. Hurst, J. W. Patton and R. A. Whitten, the Mebane meeting;

Revs. Stanley C. Harrell, R. L. House and J. S. Carden were the pastors attending the Durham meeting.

Mrs. Patton reported that in her district every Church now had a Woman's Missionary Society. The women of the Christian Church have set themselves to the task of making the Christian Church missionary. The God of heaven and earth set Himself to that same task a long time ago, and one is persuaded that neither the God of heaven nor the good women of the Church will ever quit or give up until this divine task is accomplished. A tragedy of the Christian Church, which hangs like a leaden pall over our history, is the indifference of our Church to Missions. When, by the grace of God and under the leadership of the good women, or of some good and divine agencies, the people of this Christian Church shall awake from their long sleep and shake off this poisonous and deadly vampire, our Church will arise and shine as the brightness of the sun, to the glory of God and the salvation of souls. God has never yet prospered and gave glory and gladness, prestige and power to a Church until it has become missionary. J. O. A.

WOMEN PAY THE BILLS.

The editor of the Biblical Recorder says, in a recent editorial, that the Baptist women in North Carolina, through their Woman's Missionary Union, raised and contributed to the various enterprises of the Church, mostly missionary, in 1930, $250,985.53, which, says the Recorder, is "a considerable sum for a year like 1930." The women raise their money by constant and never-ceasing small gifts. Dr. W. W. Staley says the reason women give so much to missions and the Church is because they are not ashamed to carry their small gifts; and the reason the men give so little is because they are ashamed to go constantly with small gifts, and it is the unending small gifts that make up the total. And then the editor of the Recorder proceeds to show from the Bible the place women have had from of old in financing the kingdom:

"When Jesus and His disciples went about their task of establishing a new kingdom, somebody had to pay the bills. Luke says, 8:3, 'The women ministered unto him of their substance.' So the women, such as the mother of James and John, Mary Magdalene, and others who had substantial means, paid the bills as Jesus went about His work.

"When Paul had set his heart on going into Bithynia, and thus start the gospel across Asia, the Spirit of God suffered him not. He certainly made two distinct attempts, but his plans failed. Then in the night a man of Macedonia stood on the European side of the Hellespont calling and saying, 'Come over into Macedonia and help us.' Paul immediately decided that the man represented God and he had a distinct call to go to Europe with the gospel. When he arrived in Philippi, the man of his vision was not present, but a group of women were holding prayer-meeting down by the river-side (Acts 16:13). To this place of prayer Paul resorted. Immediately a merchant woman, by the name of Lydia, believed, opened her house to Paul and his group of missionaries, and at an early date a Church was organized. Lydia paid the bills. This was the beginning of what has grown into European and American Christianity. Possibly we will never know how much we owe to Lydia, the merchant woman of Philippi. Later, in writing to the pastor of the Church, Paul, thinking of how Lydia and her group had laid the foundation for the work, writes, 'Help those women which labored with me in the gospel' (Phil. 4:3). From that day until now women have had no small part in financing the kingdom of Christ in the world."

Many Churches have taken the initial offering, but are trying to increase the same by giving others, and all, an opportunity of contributing before sending the offering in. Every Church should give every member an opportunity of contributing something. J. O. ATKINSON, Sec'y.

A PASTOR TO HIS PEOPLE.

(Rev. W. D. Harward, D. D., wrote and sent the following letter to the members of the Mt. Carmel Church just before Easter.)

I am handing you herewith an envelope to be used in making our Easter missionary offering April 5th.

You notice that it says on the envelope that this offering is to be made "For the sake of the Risen Lord," to help give His message of redeeming love in the homeland and unto the uttermost parts where they do not know Him, "whom to know is life eternal."

What more fitting time to make this offering than at Easter, when we are observing a day that points back to His resurrection?

The amount our Churches are asked to raise is one-third as much as they pay pastors. For us at Mt. Carmel, it is $167. Let parents provide for the young people to make their own individual offering.

If for any cause you cannot be at Church on Easter Sunday, bring your offering the first time you come or send to the treasurer, E. W. Beale, R. F. D., Zuni, Va.

Whether we see our way to contribute much or little, let us do so in the spirit of prayer and worship and as unto the risen Christ.

ADVENTURES IN YOUTH FELLOWSHIP

"Youth at Work in the Church."

JEWEL TRUITT, Editor, Waverly, Virginia.

THE CHURCH'S CHALLENGE TO YOUTH.

By JOHN BUNYAN SMITH.

(This article appeared in the International Journal of Religious Education for March, 1927, and is reprinted here by permission.)

The call of the hour is not for lower, but for higher, standards of Christianity. Youth will be gripped only as the call for Christian service becomes more drastic, more all-embracing and more sacrificial in its requirements. Not the promise of an easy-going religion, but the challenge of a hard life in self-denial, self-sacrifice and self-obliteration is the attractive lure which will catch the devotion and enthusiasm of youth. The harder we make the appeal, the easier to win our youth to it. Lowering the standard spells defeat. The bill of exaction cannot be satisfied by writing in fifty or eighty where the requirement calls for one hundred.

This old world can never be evangelized by Christians who compromise. The cross of Christ was not entwined with flowers. Those who carry that cross will feel its sharp angles and corners. Hooks baited with a soft gospel adapted to the natural senses and tastes will never catch that type of souls of which martyrs are made. Christ is not offering pillows of ease, but calling for pillars of power. Long and loudly we have been singing, "Onward, Christian Soldiers." Is it not now high time that, for the "marching as to war," we substitute the "real" battle against the enemies which destroy our youth? Is our holy faith degenerating into a mere gentle, bloodless pretense, a camouflage, or do we esteem it a treasure still worth fighting for? If it is, then we must go to battle against the pagan principles and propaganda of our duty in business relationships, social contacts, intellectual unfairness and spiritual spinelessness.

To you, O youth, Christ is bequeathing the dearest thing in His great heart—the Church, His body, His bride, which He purchased with His precious blood.

To you, O youth, Christ is throwing this challenge for a great Christian crusade for plainer living, higher thinking, and sacrificial service.

To you, O youth, your Church longs for that day when you shall place the supremacy of human values above all other values of life and make Christ the dominating motive, although that may involve you in social ostracism, financial hardship, personal sacrifice and suffering.

"If any man would come after me, let him deny himself and take up his cross and follow me."

ROSEMONT'S NEW CHURCH.

A little over three years ago Rosemont Christian Endeavorers began to dream about a new Church building, convenient and well equipped Sunday School rooms, and a nice place to hold their Endeavor meetings and socials. At this time a building fund was started with the understanding that if at the end of three years we had $15,000 in cash we would begin to build; if not, we would refund the money to the donors.

At the end of the three years we had reached our goal, and our new Church was started in the early fall. Sunday, February 15th, our dreams were realized when we held our opening and dedicatory services. The Church is of the old-English type, brick structure, costing $24,000. One thing that we are so proud of is the fact that every cent of this amount has been paid.

While planning our dedicatory service for the Church, dedicating the Church to God and His service, the thought came to some of us that it would be real nice to dedicate our Christian Endeavor Society to the Church, to the specific Rosemont Christian Church. A number of visiting Endeavorers were with us on this occasion. William G. Morris brought greetings from the Tidewater District Union, Robert Shark from Portsmouth, and Aubrey Todd from South Norfolk.

Rev. O. D. Poythress brought a splendid address. The dedicatory feature was conducted by Lowriner Halstead. The Endeavorers lighted their candles from one large candle, representing the light of Christ, and thus symbolized their desire to let their light shine brighter for Christ and the Church.

9. Poem: "The Secret," by S. E. Kiser.

It isn't in doing your work, my boy;
It isn't in doing the thing you must
That you win the honor and gain and joy,
Or claim the profit or earn the trust;
It isn't in laboring long and late,
And it isn't the hurry and noise that tell—
The smallest thing that you do is great
If you do it well.

It isn't in getting it done, my boy;
It isn't in getting it out of the way;
It is not in the methods you may employ,
And not in the price your masters pay.
It isn't in squandering precious time,
And it isn't in rushing ahead pell-mell.
If the thing that you do is to be sublime,
You must do it well.
10. Benediction.

Thoughts on the Topic.

One of the most helpful things that the young people's summer conference and summer school movements of the last ten years has done has been to correct some wrong ideas about work. Delegates to the various conferences which meet at Blue Ridge, N. C., each summer and at other conferences are impressed with the emphasis that is placed upon the fact that no work should be considered drudgery or unpleasant menial labor. "Work is sacred," summer school leaders say. All work is sacred, whether it be the digging of ditches or the painting of a beautiful picture. Any task that requires the output of energy is work, and if it is worth the doing for the good it does to the worker and for others, it is a sacred work. It should be considered as such.

Even in America, where we have had no kings and lords, or any political arrangement whereby one man may command others to work for him, it is easily seen that some people work and others do not. Some derive their greatest pleasure from work. Others work to earn a living, and still others seem to hate the very thought of work.

There are many reasons why those who work may not be happy, though work is a source of happiness. Some who work have made work for the sake of material gain their master. They cannot hope to be happy. They are not obeying the command of Jesus, "Seek ye first the kingdom of God." They have forgotten "Man does not live by bread (material things) alone." Some who work are working at the wrong tasks. They are doing things which they do not enjoy, or in which they do not believe. Some are trying to be Marys who ought to be Marthas, and some are doing the work of the Marthas who ought to be filling the places of the Marys. Still others who work do not work hard enough or have no motive for their work. They are likely to be those who seem not to want to work, or seem to work because they feel they must. It may be that they are not working in the right place.

Jesus was a worker. For years He worked as a carpenter. He must have shaped the yoke for the oxen so well and made them so smooth that it lightened the work of the oxen! Jesus must have done His work well. Later, Jesus devoted His life to teaching and preaching, or what many would call "mental work." This, too, He did patiently and carefully. He always cared more for the small things that He did to be well done than to have the glory and honor that comes from the doing of "big" things.

Work has values in it for the worker. It develops character. It comforts in sorrow and failures. It helps one to appreciate one's friends. Work has value for others beside the worker. It is service to them.

In His choice of a life-work, Christ gave all youth an example of how to fit their lives to the needs of the world. He cast aside power and popularity and chose the way of serving others and the way of sacrifice because He believed that was the greatest service He could render with His talents. He made His choice, and He never turned back nor to one side for an instant. He went right ahead with His and His Father's work.

JESUS IN THE HOME OF ZACCHAEUS.

LESSON V—MAY 3, 1931.

GOLDEN TEXT: "The Son of man came to seek and to save that which was lost."—Luke 19: 1-10.

LESSON: Luke 19:1-10.

ZACCHAEUS' CALLING.

"There was a man named Zacchaeus, which was chief among the publicans, and he was rich." He was in a bad business, a business that undoubtedly prospered by graft. That was probably how he became rich. Because he was in that business, he had a bad name among the Jews. To be branded with a bad name, often serves to give impulse to live up to that bad name. Zacchaeus was probably both unscrupulous and unpopular, rather unlikely material out of which to make discipleship. But one can never tell.

ZACCHAEUS' CURIOSITY.

"And he sought to see Jesus, who He was." It might have been sheer curiosity, a mere desire to see what this Fellow about whom he had heard so much, looked like. It might have been a finer type of curiosity, a desire to know more about this Man who had shown Himself such a friend to publicans and sinners, and who, as a matter of fact, had a publican as one of His chief disciples. It might have been curiosity, stirred by a heart hunger, a restlessness, a dissatisfaction, a longing for better things. It is always a good thing when folks want to know more about Jesus. There is a legitimate place for an appeal to curiosity in presenting religion.

ZACCHAEUS' COURAGE.

"Because he was little of stature, he ran before and climbed up into a sycamore tree to see Him." It took courage to do that. Here was a rich man—a man who was supposed to have some dignity, a man whose stature probably made him ridiculous—climbing up a tree and sitting there, very much in evidence because of his position above the others. It was probably that spirit and that resourcefulness that made Zacchaeus a go-getter in the business world. It usually takes a great deal of courage for a man to come to Jesus, especially if he is influential and if he has been a bad man. It always takes courage for anybody to come to Jesus, for that matter.

ZACCHAEUS' CALL.

"Zacchaeus, make haste and come down; for today I must abide at thy house." Think of it! Jesus called him by name, and told him that he must spend the day at his home. Those of us who read these notes who are Christians can share in some measure Zacchaeus' joy, for we know what a "thrill" it gave us when we realized that the Lord Jesus Christ cared for us, was willing to come in and make His abode in our hearts, had need of what we had and were. Happy is that man or woman, that boy or girl who hears the call of Christ and answers in loving trust and obedience.

ZACCHAEUS' CONVERSION.

"And he made haste and came down, and received Him Joyfully." We need not take the words literally as what we know as conversation. But any one who reads this story knows that something took place in Zacchaeus' life. It is quite likely that when he received Jesus into his home he also received Him into his heart. Whatever else conversion is, it is that. When a man, through repentance toward God and faith in Jesus Christ, receives Jesus, he is converted. And there are many who will read these notes who know that

RELIGIOUS BOOKS

Reviewed by

W. A. HARPER, BOOK EDITOR.

(Any book reviewed in this Department may be had of The Christian Sun at the publisher's price.)

LOOKING AT LIFE THROUGH DRAMA. By Lydia Glover Deseo and Hulda Mossberg Phipps. Abingdon; $2.00; pp. 203.

One of the most effective methods of presenting a moral message is through the drama. This book demonstrates the impressive value of this method of moral teaching by presenting four dramas, treating four of the great socio-religious problems of our time—the problems of race, of industry, of international good will, and of citizenship. An extensive bibliography of plays suitable for Church production is also given. The theater began as a method of teaching religious truth. It should be reclaimed. Books like this one will go a long way in that direction.

WHAT CAN STUDENTS BELIEVE? By E. M. McKee. Richard R. Smith, Inc.; $1.60; pp. 138.

The former chaplain of Yale gathers together here ten great sermons given during the past three years at the Yale convocations. The preachers are Fosdick, Tittle, Dean Brown, Niebuhr, Coffin, President Angell, Buttrick, Sperry, Wicks, and the author of the book. Here are messages, not of apology, but of constructive challenge. If you would understand the student mind of our age, you will do well to examine these ten masterly discourses with great care.

TEACHING THE BRIGHT PUPIL. By Fay Adams and Walker Brown. Henry Holt & Co.; $2.00; pp. 289.

Based on actual experience with junior and senior high school pupils, the authors make concrete suggestions for enriching the curriculum for the bright or intelligent pupil, whether in a large system where segregation into separate classes is possible or in schools where brilliant and dull pupils must work side by side. Teachers will find it a very helpful book.

The only reward of virtue is virtue, and the only way to have friends is to be one.

Faith kills worry, or worry kills faith. They won't mix.

th's is no idle dream or illusion—it is one of the most definite experiences in their lives. We know that we have been changed, that we have been converted. Thank God for what we know at first-hand experience.

ZACCHAEUS' CONSECRATION.

"Behold, Lord, the half of my goods I give to the poor; and if I have taken any thing from any man by false accusation, I restore him four-fold." Here was a man after John the Baptist's heart, for Zacchaeus certainly showed works meet for repentance. Because his heart had been changed, his life had been changed. By their fruits ye shall know them. Whether we can say just when Zacchaeus was converted, this action of his shows that he was thoroughly converted. An unregenerate publican would not have done what he did. Come to think about it, Jesus does make a difference in the actions of men. When the spirit of Christ is in a man's heart, it will find expression in his conduct. And that is what being a Christian means—living Jesus' way of life. And that is what being sacred means, too. For Jesus came to seek and to save that which was lost.

FAMILY ALTAR

CONDUCTED BY H. E. ROUNTREE
One of our Chaplains in the U. S. Navy.

"If thou wilt make the Almighty thy treasure . . . then shalt thou delight thyself in the Almighty . . . and thou shalt make thy prayer unto Him and He will hear thee."—Job 22: 25-27.

MONDAY.

THE ROD OF CORRECTION.

"Children obey your parents in the Lord, for this is right."—Eph. 6:1.

"He that spareth his rod, hateth his son; but he that loveth him, chasteneth him betimes."—Prov. 13:24.

It is doubted that modern children will agree with the idea of corporal punishment. Whipping is thought to be brutal and belongs to the dark ages. But here it is in God's Word and wisdom.

Christ's law of love should supercede, it is true. It is also true that all children are heathen, and the children of today are just as big scamps as we were when we grew up, and they need government, guidance and training. It takes a little corporal persuasion sometimes. Even God says: "Whom He loveth, He chasteneth."

It is God's wise and loving arrangement that the inexperience of childhood and youth should be governed and guided by the wisdom and unselfish affection of parents. If it be true that children are losing respect for their parents, and that parents are today relaxing their authority over their children, it is ominous. To abandon parental discipline is not kind, but cruel. "He that loveth him, chasteneth him betimes." It does not even make for present happiness of children. And for the future, it consigns to mistakes and miseries incalculable. A spoiled child results usually in a spoiled life.

Prayer.—Our Father in heaven, we pray for all children. Give them, we pray, dutiful and willing spirits. Make them ever thoughtful of others, and so guide their lives that they bring no sorrow nor dishonor to their parents. May they add comforts and not cares, peace and not anxiety and fears upon them. We pray for all parents. May they all have so much of the love of God in their hearts that they may have these things in mind as the goal of character for their children to achieve and so govern and discipline their young souls for such an achievement. Amen.

TUESDAY.

DO NOT EXPECT TOO MUCH.

"Fathers, provoke not your children to anger, lest they be discouraged."—Col. 3: 21.

In consideration of "training up a child in the way he should go," patience is the first virtue. It is so easy (and it so often happens) to alienate a child's affections and his respect for home and authority by austere and severe exactions. Out of their love for their children they expect too much and demand it too soon. They forget how once they thought as a child and spoke as a child. Therefore, let them run with patience this race that is set before them and use more patience and less anger; let them use stern but wise ministries, whether in moral suasion or the corrections of the rod.

Prayer.—Our Father, we pray for a deepened sense of responsibilities in the Christian nurture of our children. Help us to realize that a child's first thoughts of everything come through their parents, and that thought of good character also comes through them; their thoughts of God come through them. O God, help us and all parents to symbolize as far as possible the Fatherhood of God, and may they so live the Christian life that their children may be drawn to the Father in heaven. Amen.

WEDNESDAY.

A GOOD MARRIAGE.

"And the two shall become one flesh; so that they are no more two, but one flesh."—Mark 10:8.

A good marriage is the most perfect unity on earth. And we thank God that there are still good marriages on the earth, in spite of the enormous number of divorces, and in spite of the encouragement of the laws of Arkansas and Reno.

The greatest blessing that can come to a man is to have a good wife; and the greatest blessing that can be bestowed upon a woman is to have a good husband. Marriage, sanctified by mutual love, is the foundation of society, as it creates the home, imparts life, and predestines the future of the world. The sweetness and the piety of the home, the joy of little children, and the strength and beauty of life are all bound up in the wedded union. That is the reason the marriage contract calls upon us "to love and to cherish until death us do part."

Prayer.—Holy Father, may we never forget and never neglect. Thou who hast instituted, ordained and sanctified marriage and the home, give unto all who enter this contract the sacred bond of mutual love and fidelity until death, and so preserve the home and the future destiny of the world. This we ask for Jesus' sake. Amen.

THURSDAY.

GETTING DOWN TO BUSINESS.

"And shalt talk of them when thou sittest in thy house."—Deut. 6:6-12.

It is said that here is the secret of the Jewish people in their remarkable history. Their religion is founded on the home and their fidelity to the faith lies in the teachings the children get in the home. Their primary observances are in the home and not in public. This they can never forget.

How reticent we are on the subject of religion in our homes! How silent we are! And silence is easily interpreted as indifference, or at least, though necessary, as not interesting.

Prayer.—Dear God and Father, who canst do all things to them that believe, make us see that this thing which is of greatest concern to us shall enter more into our talk at our tables and by our firesides. May Thy presence not be hid in seclusion. Before our children and before the world, make us faithful witnesses to the hope that is in us. Amen.

FRIDAY.

HEAVENLY MINISTRIES.

"Bear ye one another's burdens, and so fulfill the law of Christ."—Gal. 6:1-10.

Paul teaches us that which we have come to know so well, that all are not gifted alike, and the task of training those for whom we are responsible is not so easy to some as to others, even though they may have the vision and the same consecration of heart. To some He gave apostles, some prophets, some evangelists, some pastors, some teachers, and various other gifts for the perfecting of character (see Eph. 4); but to all, even every one, He has given grace, and He will bestow upon all a stable character that is not "carried about by every wind of doctrine." All may "speak the truth in love." All may have their understanding enlightened in Jesus Christ. All may be free from lasciviousness, and may possess a true soul through the teachings of Christ. All may wear the new man, "which after God is created in righteousness and true holiness." All may refuse to "give peace to the devil." All may "let no corrupt communication" come from his lips. All may be kind.

After all, the final testimony is the life. Let us say that for the sake of those we love and in obedience to the Master whom we serve, we must be all this in unfailing kindness.

Prayer.—Dear Father, sanctify the ties that bind us to friends and kindred, and so fill us with love, gentleness and forbearance that we may love Thee supremely and abide in Thy love, and that our lives may speak out louder than any testimony. Amen.

SATURDAY.

HEAR THIS.

"Every one that loveth is born of God, and knoweth God."—1 John 4:7.

As love is the only law of the home that will work, so it is also the only law for society. It always reveals the quality and intentions which are at the heart of things. Where love is not, there is darkness.

*"Love only comprehendeth love,
And knoweth whence it come."*

The least we may do for ourselves is to study to know the meaning of life and let love interpret it all to us, whether of joys or sorrows.

Prayer.—Dear Lord and Father, who doth reveal love to us, make our hearts pure, that we may see Thee. Lead our wayward and prodigal thoughts ever back to Thee, and in every uncertain moment may we take refuge in Thee. Amen.

SUNDAY.

MY CHURCH.

"But if we walk in the light, as He is in the light, we have fellowship one with another."—1 John 1:7.

I shall go to Church today, and I want to go to my own Church. Is it then any better than other Churches? Yes, for me it is, as my own home is better than any other home on earth. My own Church is for me the true Church. The familiarity of its service helps me in my approach to God. And then, I know the folks about me, and they know me. We know something of each other's faults, something of each other's joys and sorrows. We are neighbors and friends. We have fellowship, one with another. This communion of sympathy bears me on and up in praise and prayer. Unconsciously we are helping each other by being together at the mercy seat. This fellowship is precious to me. I cannot afford to sacrifice its comfort and strength in an effort to seek what may be a more ornate service or a more brilliant sermon elsewhere. As always, my privilege is where my duty is.

Prayer.—Most Holy and most Gracious God, who turnest the shadow of night into morning, satisfy us early with Thy mercy, that we may rejoice and be glad all the day. Lift the light of Thy countenance upon us; Calm every troubled thought, and guide our feet into the way of peace. Perfect Thy strength in our weakness, and help us to worship Thee; through Jesus Christ our Lord. Amen.—Hunter's Devotional Services.

Our God, our help in ages past,
Our hope for years to come,
Our shelter from the stormy blast,
And our eternal home.

Time, like an ever-rolling stream,
Bears all its sons away;
They fly forgotten, as a dream
Dies at the opening day.

Our God, our help in ages past,
Our hope for years to come,
Be Thou our guard while troubles last,
And our eternal home.

SEASONS OF THE SOUL.

By JOHN BRUCE DALTON.

"Thou hast made summer and winter."—

Psa. 74:17.

The temperate zone in which we live is blessed with four seasons. In the tropics there is no spring or winter, but all is summertime, and days and nights are practically of equal length the whole year through. There is no variation of heat and cold. No ice locks the rivers and the lakes, no snowstorms ever drive people indoors to seek the warmth of fires.

Then there are regions to the far North, where the robin never ventures and where the snows for the past 10,000 years lie unmelted. In the bleak polar regions, darkness hovers for half a year. But our lot is cast in regions where there are four distinct seasons. We experience the changes of the seasons, the "equinoctial storms," the rigor of winter, the beauty of the spring, which ripens into summer and fades into the loveliness of fall.

God's Spelling-Book.

Our text says that God makes the summer. If we believe in God at all, we find this part of our text the very easiest thing in our creed. As a florist will sometimes in his garden spell out with flowers a name of a place or a person, so God in summertime spells out the names by which He is known—Truth, Beauty and Goodness, Creator, Sustainer, and all the rest of His hundred names, spelled out in a riot of color in earth, in sky, on sea. When, if not in summer, do men lift up their eyes upon the beauty and the wonder of the world, and declare with confidence that God is good? There are some things that are hard to believe, but surely no one finds it difficult to believe with all his soul and heart and mind that God is the Maker of the summer.

But the psalmist goes a step farther. "Thou hast made summer and winter." He includes what we would omit, winter. He believed that the hand that patiently formed the flower and decked the meadow with a million plants, and cast the mantle of greenness all over the habitable world, also unfrocked the world of nature and gives us naked winter instead.

But we know full well that winter is no curse. It often comes as a blessing. Cold weather checks diseases that cripple little children for life. It is when the fields are under a sheet of ice that the army of insects that would destroy the grain is conquered. The hand that shapes the summer, gives us winter. He that maketh the rare July day, causeth the March winds to blow.

Experiences that Tingle with God.

There are experiences that come to every one that seem so lovely and so beautiful that they seem to tingle with God as does the summer. There are times when the divine forces seem to be operating everywhere in our lives. The sun is shining, God is gracious, and there is the touch of heaven on our lives. Then there comes a swift change in spiritual atmosphere, the winds seem keen, God seems to have withdrawn from His world, and we wonder whether He has forgotten to be gracious. The great winds sigh and rage in our lives. We no longer bask in the sunshine of prosperity. March winds blow across our affairs. We feel the sting of them in our business.

Bleak days are upon us. Hope seems blighted. But there is more method in all this than you can ever see. If you had your way, if you could control the seasons of your soul, you would have only one long monotonous summer. These changes of the soul are best.

What May be Heard and Seen in the Ill Wind.

When the ill winds come and you say, "I will make the most of it," then there are flowers bursting out of your heart that brighten life as nothing else can brighten it. When a storm of cold doubt sweeps through your life and you say with firm resolve, "I will follow my best impulses," then there is the song of a bird in your heart. When the winds are fierce against you, and seem to come down upon you like a pack of wolves, and you say, "I will do right, though the heavens fall," then, I tell you, it is summer in the soul, the ice goes out of the river, the grass is green again, and the birds of paradise are tuning up on a song of life, the strains of which will never die away. When sickness mounts our stairs and writes death on a cheek of roses, and afterward you say, "I will trust God where I cannot trace Him," then there are Easter lilies blooming at the edge of the glacier.

Our lives unfold themselves as the four seasons do. Every child and youth is dwelling in the springtime of his existence. Now springtime is the time for sowing seeds. Strange as it may seem, this beautiful season is often counted as poor indeed by those who are in it, and they seek to pass it rapidly by. Youth longs to plunge into the summer of existence. Youth desires to shorten the springtime and to rush into maturity. And so there is the dropping out of school. But you cannot hurry the season of your soul any more than you can hurry summertime. And if you sow sparingly in the springtime of your life, you are not going to reap abundantly at the end of the summer. Every harvest must be prepared for, except a harvest of barren regrets.

In the June time of our lives we have the great blaze called by Shakespeare "flaming youth," but by the end of life's summer there is the lessening of the fire, the fall rains put out more of the flame, and in December, the cold sees the last spark go out.

When the Birds Fly South.

Fall is marked by decline, summer has faded away. The birds fly South. At last the trumpeting of the Canadian geese and the cry of the black ducks is heard no more on lake or landscape. They have followed the divine impulse to go South. They are saved from the ravages of winter by following their higher instincts.

The seasons of the soul develop in us higher impulses. Are birds so fortunate and men and women so poor that they do not have the higher instincts to guide them? Who has not felt the higher impulses? Who has not sensed the promptings of his heart or heard the voice so still and small called conscience, which turns state's evidence on us when we do wrong?

You have an impulse, when the sharp storms come, to play. Then give your thoughts words that they may have wings to find their way through the trackless air to the heart of God.

You have an impulse to go to Church. Your conscience whispers, "You ought." Others go, but you tarry. The urge to go may die in time. The good impulse, unacted upon, falls dead in your heart. The higher instincts, when starved, die.

Follow Your Better Longing.

When you have an impulse to do good, to serve, to forgive, and to give, do it. Follow the better promptings of your soul. They were put into your heart by God. If you do otherwise, or nothing, then by and by the soul will be as cold and frozen as the bird which falls dead in the snow, while its companions are happy under kindlier skies. Follow your higher impulses and those better longings which mysteriously guide humanity through all the flight of years, and you need ne'er fear the winter when it sets in. Remember the immortal words of our great poet, Bryant, addressed "To a Waterfowl":

"There is a Power whose care

Teaches thy way along the pathless coast,
The dessert and illimitable air.

He who from zone to zone,
Guides through the boundless sky thy certain flight

In the long way that I must tread alone

Will lead my steps aright."

Christian Orphanage

Dear Friends:

Our graded school will close within the next two weeks. Our children will be happy to be turned to freedom again. The Orphanage children have done excellent work during the school year; of course we always have a small number who fall behind and do not make the grade, but we have a number who stand at the head of their classes and do fine work. The following have been on the honor roll several times each this school term: First grade—George Sloan (seven times); second grade—Conway White (two times), George Brady (four times), Curtis Curran (two times), Catherine Sloan (two times); third grade—Kathleen Miller (3 times); fourth grade—Alma Owen; fifth grade—Geneva Cox; eighth grade—Mary Bessie Davenport (two times), Ruth Duke (three times), Calvin Clayton; ninth grade—Ethel Boone (four times), Nannie Roberts (two times); tenth grade—Louise Duke.

They will have one more grade card for the last month, and we will let you know who are the lucky ones for the final month. If we could just instill into the mind of a child the importance of doing its best in these beginning years in school and see the importance now as they will see it when they reach maturity, I believe all of them would be on the honor roll each month.

THE BRAIN THAT COUNTS.

You can get along with a wooden leg, but you can't get along with a wooden head. The physical value of man is not so much. Man, as analyzed in our laboratories, is worth about ninety-eight cents. Seven bars of soap, lime enough to whitewash a chicken coop, phosphorus enough to cover the heads of a thousand matches, is not so much, you see. It is the brain that counts, but in order that your brain may be kept clear you must keep your body fit and well. That cannot be done if one drinks liquor. A man who has to drag around a habit that is a danger and a menace to society ought to go off to the woods and live alone.

We do not tolerate the obvious use of morphine or cocaine or opium, and we should not tolerate intoxicating liquor, because I tell you these things are what break down the command of the individual over his own life and his own destiny. Through alcoholic stimulation, a man loses his co-ordination. That is why liquor is no advantage to the brain. You hear people tell how they had their wits quickened for the first half-hour by liquor, but they don't tell you how later their body could not act in co-ordination with their brain. You will hear on every side men bewail the loss of their drink, of their personal rights, but the rights of the few who cannot see ahead or have the future of their nation at heart must be regulated to safeguard the great body of future citizens who are now ready to step into the ranks.

You boys have something ahead of you in the problem of preventing the return of liquor. We have not lived up to our laws, but I repeat, education is what we need to combat this condition. When we have our younger generation completely educated, we will not have types who say: "Why should I not have my rights as a citizen?" It is through the boys of today that we hope to see a sound and everlasting prohibition worked out in this country. If there ever was any great man who accomplished anything through the use of alcohol I would like to have the fact pointed out. We in the United States of America have tried to give you a field of action free from the barricades which used to be set up by the legalized liquor traffic. Keep yourselves free from all entangling habits. Remember, it's the brain that counts.—Dr. Charles Mayo, in Journal of National Education Association.

METHODS CORNER

BY REV. ELISHA A. KING, D. D.
Miami Beach, Fla.

Most Churches conduct a weekly prayer-meeting throughout the year. In many Churches, however, the prayer-meetings are not well attended and sometimes not very interesting. How to make them worth while should be the subject of constant thought of the minister and people. In some Churches the deacons are responsible for the conduct of the service. In others there is a prayer-meeting committee.

Originally the prayer-meeting was designed to give the layman a chance to develop his spiritual life by self-expression through prayer, confession of his faith and through the reading of Scripture and singing. The danger is that those who habitually attend the meeting sing the same hymns and say the same things until the meeting becomes monotonous. It is a matter that concerns the pastor very much.

Perhaps it may help some if I suggest some ways that have been of real help to other Churches. One is to make a study of the hymns. Each hymn has a history, and when one knows who wrote the hymns, the circumstances under which they were written, and other similar things, they become more interesting and helpful. It is possible to buy books on the history of hymns at almost any good book-store. In one of the Churches where I was pastor, a young woman who had studied music and could sing, arranged several programs for the prayer-meeting. We called the service, "An evening with hymns and hymn-writers," and many people came out. This sort of thing can be promoted by the people perhaps better than by the pastor.

It is also interesting to maintain a "question box," and let folks ask questions in writing. This is very interesting and informing. Questions may be handed to the pastor on Sunday. These questions should be kept within the circle of religious and moral themes, or the practical application of Christian principles to daily living.

Another change in program would be the study of the Bible for a period of a month or so. Take a Bible book or some special subject and develop it week by week. Let the minister give a talk, and then have the people express opinions, ask questions or give further exposition. It takes a little more work, but it helps if the minister will prepare questions and Bible readings on slips of paper and distribute them to the members present. Such methods tend to keep everybody awake and interested, and they look forward with anticipation to the next meeting. If the meeting begins on time and ends on time, that helps. A social time after the meeting is of value. Light refreshments during the summer months would give a touch of home hospitality. Why not make the Church a pleasant, happy home?

THEIR PASSIONS.

Count Zinzendorf said: "I have one passion, and that is Christ. He only."

James Calvert, missionary to the Fiji Islands, declared: "Where Christ commands and directs, I cheerfully go. I only desire what He approves, and to do what He requires for the remainder of my life."

David Brainerd, the apostle to the American Indians, said: "When a soul loves God with a supreme love, God's interests and his are become one. It is no matter when or where or how Christ should send me, nor what trials He should exercise me with, if I may be prepared for His work and will."

Henry Martyn, ere he died in Persia: "I am born for God only. Christ is nearer to me than father or mother or sister—a nearer relation, a more affectionate friend; and I rejoice to follow Him and to love Him. Blessed Jesus. Thou art all I want; a forerunner to me in all I ever shall go through as a Christian, a minister or a missionary."

The immortal Livingstone, in a dark hour in darkest Africa, exclaimed: "Nothing earthly will make me give up my work in despair; I encourage myself in the Lord my God, and go forward." His African followers found his dead body upon its knees, in the gray dawn of that memorable 4th of May, 1873. The great missionary had died, as he had lived, in prayer. This touching entry was found in his journal, written on the next to the last birthday of his life, "My Jesus, my King, my Life, my All, I again dedicate my whole self to Thee."—Missionary Review.

"Ye shall receive power after that the Holy Ghost is come upon you: and ye shall be witnesses unto me . . . unto the uttermost parts of the earth" (Acts 1:8).

ELON COLLEGE

AN ACCREDITED COLLEGE

of the

CONGREGATIONAL CHRISTIAN CHURCHES OF THE SOUTHEAST

ELON was founded to train Christian leaders for the New South.

ELON has done its task well—one graduate in seven being in the Christian ministry. The other six express Christian leadership in the various professions and vocations. Experience teaches that spiritual leadership must be indigenous.

The South is now a New South ready for an inclusive Church, the type of Church for which Elon has stood for forty years and for which she is prepared to produce capable leadership.

With no Church in the community, save the College Auditorium, ELON has practiced Christian Union for faculty, students, and community for four decades.

Its contribution to Christian Education is nationally known and approved.

Its Christian Education Building, providing laboratory facilities for religious leadership training, is unique and is the first college building of its type in the world.

ELON confines itself to undergraduate liberal arts work with that religious emphasis which befits the Christian College.

In ELON the Congregational-Christian Church has an asset of marvelous hopefulness.

The South needs her Yale, her Oberlin, her Carleton, her Pomona for the intellectual leadership of the United Church. Many regard ELON as strategically located and spiritually endowed to become such a center of illumination and leadership training.

OBITUARIES.

STEPHENSON.

Charles H. Stephenson was born September 9, 1845, near West Point, Ga., and professed faith in Christ and joined the Baptist Church in early manhood. He married Miss Mary Jane Manning February 28, 1872, moving to Chambers County, Ala., in 1879, where he united with the New Hope Christian Church the same year and remained a loyal member the rest of his long life. There were nine children to this union, seven of them, with their aged mother, survive to mourn their loss. The children are Mrs. W. H. Floyd, Abanda, Ala.; Miss Bettie Stephenson, Atlanta, Ga.; Mrs. W. J. Mann, Roanoke, Ala.; Mr. J. S. Stephenson, Vidalia, Ga.; Mrs. G. O. Lankford, Burlington, N. C.; Miss Zane Stephenson and Mrs. F. M. Dunaphant, Atlanta, Ga. Besides these, he leaves thirty grandchildren and eight great-grandchildren, and a host of other relatives. His friends were numbered by his acquaintances. He reared his family in New Hope community, and all his children joined the Church there.

When age had prayed upon his physical body so that he was no longer able to continue the work on the farm that he loved so well, he moved to Atlanta, Ga., and made his home with his daughters. After all human efforts made by loving hands had failed, the death angel came for him on the morning of April 4th and wafted his soul away from this world to the Father, there to bask in the eternal sunlight of God's love and to await the coming of those who are left behind.

Funeral services were held in the New Hope Church April 6th, where he had worshiped God so many years. Rev. H. H. Ellis, of the Methodist Church, and this writer had charge of services. Interment was made in the cemetery on the hill nearby. May God comfort the bereaved.

DR. MOTT DELIVERS COLE LECTURES.—

Dr. John R. Mott delivered the Cole lectures at Vanderbilt University, Nashville, Tenn., April 12-16, his general theme being, "Present-Day Challenge to the World Mission of Christianity." The lectures were heard not only by local students, but also by those in attendance at the annual rural Church school at Vanderbilt, and at the general pastors' convention which is now in session.

RICHARDS COMING TO AMERICA.—

Rev. Leyton Richards, minister of Carrs Lane Congregational Church, Birmingham, England, in succession to Dr. J. H. Jowett, will arrive in New York May 12th for a visit of several months. He will preach in Dr. Cadman's pulpit in Brooklyn, May 18th, and will then spend two weeks in Boston. On June 8th he will begin a course of lectures on international relations at Haverford College. About July 5th he will leave for a summer in the West.

NEW MOTHERS' DAY.—

The second Sunday in May is the national Mothers' Day, but it is given a new meaning this year in a national campaign to emphasize throughout the country the fact that America's maternity death rate is the highest in the civilized world. It is expected that both civic organizations and Churches will participate in this effort being planned by the Maternity Center Association of New York City. The scientists of this age should see to it that this rate is changed in America.

GOVERNOR EMMERSON'S VETO.—

In commenting upon the veto, by Governor Emmerson, of Illinois, of the prohibition repeal bill, the Christian-Evangelist says: "Of course, the wets were infuriated, and it is no exaggeration to say that some of their leading papers raged about it. The Tribune accused him of 'trickery and bad faith,' and said that he had given a 'black eye' to the Republican party of Illinois." However, it goes on to say that this opinion is not unanimous, as even some of the wet papers commended the veto. It is certain that by this action he has become a great favorite with the dry forces of that State.

BISHOP GARLAND'S WILL.—

According to the terms of the will of Rev. Thomas J. Garland, late bishop of Pennsylvania, the divinity school of the Protestant Episcopal Church in Philadelphia is to receive a bequest of $15,000. The will specifies that this sum is to be used for memorial stalls of $5,000 each, the income from which allows a student $250 annually. The library of Bishop Garland is also to be given to the school. It would be a great assistance to ministerial education if many of our Church schools could provide, by such bequests, for ministerial education. Who will provide such a scholarship for the Christian Church?

GOOD WILL PRACTICED.—

An example of truly Christian interracial and interdenominational spirit is to be found among the Churches of Huntingdon, Pa. There, on Good Friday afternoon each year is held an interdenominational Communion service; also a series of union midweek services during the Lenten season. At the last election of officers, Rev. Harold Charles, of Zion Methodist Church (colored), was elected president for the year 1931. This is not unusual in spirit, for many of the schools in the northern part of the United States are mixed and the religious spirit would emphasize good will among those who are educated together.

JOHN R. PEPPER DEAD.—

John R. Pepper, president of the Methodist General Sunday School Board and at one time president of the Laymen's Missionary Movement, died at his home in Memphis, Tenn., March 31st, at the age of eighty-one. Mr. Pepper had also made substantial contributions through his activities in connection with the International Lesson Committee and the World's Sunday School Association, and had served on the joint commission on Methodist unification. He wrote several books relating to Sunday School work. It was my pleasure to know him on the International Lesson Committee and realized his great service to the Sunday School work in the World's Association.

LIBERAL BIBLE TALKS BROADCAST.—

First Unitarian Church of Memphis, Tenn., is broadcasting regularly on Sunday evenings a series of liberal talks by Rev. J. C. Petrie, its pastor, setting forth the elements of biblical criticism and the new attitude in theology. It is reported that letters are coming from all parts of the Midsouth, expressing gratitude at being able to hear this type of teaching for the first time over the radio. It is being taught in some of our Christian colleges in the South and it will soon be preached from many of the pulpits throughout the country. Churches should look well to the type of theology taught, for it will soon find its way to the masses from our theological schools. If it is true, it should be hastened; if false, it should be hindered. But who shall decide?

SOCIAL WORK CONFERENCE.—

The Church Conference of Social Work is to hold its second annual meeting in Minneapolis, June 14-20. Organized under the Commission on the Church and Social Service of the Federal Council of Churches, Dr. Worth M. Tippy, chairman, the Church conference has the status of an associate group of the National Conference of Social Work, and held its first meeting in connection with the national conference at Boston last year. It would be well for these conferences to be organized in many parts of the United States to study social problems. The Church should cultivate comradeship, fellowship, and friendship among its membership for mutual well-being. The gospel is a social gospel, whether we will or not, for Christ came to establish the kingdom of God—a social element enters into the kingdom to satisfy our gregarious nature, and most of our Church work would fall to pieces but for the unity of Spirit in working out common purposes.

BASIL MATTHEWS AT BOSTON.—

The Christian Advocate publishes a page article from the pen of Hubert Peat, editor of Far and Near Press, London, concerning Basil Matthews, who has accepted the position of professor of Christian missions at Boston University. No man has done more in the English-speaking world, says Dr. Peat, to make missionary matters and world problems live for the ordinary man. Brought up a Methodist in a home at Oxford, where he received his M. A. degree at the university, Mr. Matthews went to London to join the staff of the Christian World, where he received excellent journalistic training. Then he passed to London Missionary Society, and inaugurated a new standard of missionary literature. His books, "Livingstone the Pathfinder" and "Paul the Dauntless," attracted wide notice. He will be a great accession to the Boston University faculty. This spring, Mr. Matthews goes to Japan, thence to China and India, and to Palestine, and then will return to London. In the autumn he expects to take up his work at Boston.

CROSS-SECTION OF STUDENT RELIGION.—

A questionnaire of 1,500 students at Syracuse University, sent out by two professors of psychology, reveals the following: Two-thirds of the 1,321 students replying hold unorthodox beliefs concerning the Deity; one-fourth are inclined to be liberal or agnostic; one twelfth tend toward atheism; only twenty-four students are thoroughgoing atheists. In these findings, the psychologists say there is no evidence "that the effect of continued study in colleges is to destroy religious beliefs by supplanting them with materialistic or mechanistic views. The effect seems to be merely one of liberalizing the individual while he remains upon the side of positive belief." It is interesting to note that nearly a fourth of 1,502 students rejected the miracles, one-half taking no definite stand, and one-fourth giving unqualified acceptance. Fifty-four per cent believe that some religious belief is necessary in order to lead a good life, while twenty-eight per cent say only a code of ethics is needed. There is nothing, the professors say, to indicate that the religious trend has changed since the survey in 1926.

NOTES-PERSONALS

On Sunday, May 3rd, at Acca Temple Mosque, the Richmond Shrine organization will present the vocal classes of Mrs. Grace Cosby Hudgins in a sacred concert. They will be assisted by the orchestra of the First Christian Sunday School. Our Richmond Sunday School, while only a small school, has possibly the largest Sunday School orchestra in the State, if not in the entire South.

In the accounts of ministers' sons who have become famous, the wording will have to be slightly changed in the case of President Hoover. He is the son of a minister, but in his case it was the mother and not the father who was the minister. Our President's mother was a minister in the Friends Church, and it is at the Quaker Church in Washington where the President is found in his pew almost every Sunday when in the Capital.

There is an article carried on page seven of this issue of THE SUN, "Elon's President Resigns," that will bring great sorrow to the vast host of Dr. Harper's admirers. Dr. Harper has been a faithful servant of Elon and the cause of education in the Southern Convention for over a quarter of a century, and his accomplishments during this time speak for themselves. Wherever he may elect to go, may it be to a field of service for his fellow-man, for we believe that in this service he finds his greatest happiness.

Rev. O. D. Poythress, pastor of South Norfolk Church, writes, April 22nd: "We closed our revival last Sunday evening; had fine attendance throughout. Bro. Morgan, of Rosemont, and myself alternated in doing the preaching and singing. The visible results show the Church much revived, with twenty-seven new members added and several others will join next Sunday." It is good, indeed, to have such words from the Churches. The Church life and vigor depend upon evangelism and the winning of others to Christ.

The women of the North Carolina Methodist Conference assembled in their annual missionary conference in Burlington, N. C. They pledged themselves to raise $50,000 for foreign missions the coming year. That is $4,000 more than the whole Southern Christian Convention pledged itself—men, women, children and Churches—to raise for home and foreign missions this year, and unless our pastors do their best and give all an opportunity, we will fall short even of that sum. We Christians need to catch the missionary vision.

One pastor, sending in the mission offering from his Church, says very truly: "Our people realize as never before that their growth as a Church, and spiritually, depends upon their mission vision, for 'where there is no vision, the people perish' (Prov. 29:18), and the marginal reading, 'Where there is no vision, the people are naked.' The reason so many of our Churches are naked, destitute, struggling to pay current expenses, away behind in pastor's salary, is simply because God's word is true. No vision, and the natural result is nakedness, and this nakedness will grow worse until we see the white fields, until we get the vision, and, like Paul, are not disobedient to that heavenly vision."

Missionary rallies were held last week at Shallow Well, in Lee County, Mrs. R. S. Ross, superintendent, and at Henderson, Friday, 24th, Miss Margaret Alston, superintendent. The Randolph rally at Parks Cross Roads was rained out on Wednesday. Revs. G. R. Underwood, J. A. Denton and A. W. Hurst were the ministers attending at Shallow Well, and a good meeting was reported. Mrs. C. H. Rowland, president of the State Conference, was present and assisted in the program of the day. Revs. H. E. Crutchfield, Stanley C. Harrell, R. Lee House, E. M. Carter and the Mission Secretary attended the Henderson rally and a good program was enjoyed. Mrs. Stanley Harrell, of the Woman's Board, attended and aided greatly in the exercises of the day. If the men of the Church would become as much interested in missions as the women are, ours would become a missionary Church and a spiritual power in the world.

BEREA CHURCH.

Our work at Berea seems to be moving along in a fairly smooth and commendable way. Our pastor, Rev. J. F. Morgan, is still preaching in his good, old-fashioned way which at first, when he came in our midst, just won the confidence, esteem and love of the brotherhood, and because of its fascinating expression and delivery, has constantly kept the membership enchanted. I guess that's why we are doing so well.

The Ladies' Aid Society and the Sunday School is still working to raise funds for our Sunday School rooms. I think they are progressing fairly well. While our Church is doing as well, or better than ever before, in good works, yet it is not measuring up to that standard in the service of the Lord as many of us would like to see; yet we still hope to make better progress.

Bro. C. F. Stewart, one of our oldest members, died Saturday morning, April 25th. He was seventy-three years of age. He leaves a widow and five children—two girls and three boys. He was one of our most faithful members, always seeking to do his duty as he thought best. When it was possible, he would be one of the faithful few at all of our Church conferences, hoping to do his Master's will and helping the work of his Church. He has been a member of our Church fifty-two years; he and his widow, and the writer of these notes, found Jesus precious to our souls in April, 1879, under the preaching of Dr. J. W. Wellons, who was holding a series of meetings at Berea for Rev. H. H. Butler, who was then our pastor. We sadly miss Bro. Charlie, but we know our loss is his gain, and we extend to his loved ones our deepest sympathy.

STEWARDSHIP AND THE CHURCH.

VI.

MAKING THE CHURCH GLORIOUS.

Throughout this series of stewardship messages, emphasis has been upon the physical and external Church. Let us now speak of the Church spiritual. Once I prayed, Father, for Jesus' sake, make His Church glorious, even now. And every day since that prayer was first uttered it has been repeated. "The kingdom (the inner, spiritual Church) is within you," said Christ, a part or all of earthly existence according to one's own volition. As, in a sense, an atom is a distinctive whole, as complete in the particle as in the aggregate, so, if but we will have it, the whole kingdom of God is within each soul, yours, mine; else salvation could not be perfect nor revelation impartial. Revelation is as dependent upon human susceptibility as it is upon divine transmission. Humanity was no less in the flesh because it prepared and made room for Pentecost, the most marvelous revelation of history or of time. "The glory that shall be revealed in us" (to usward) may mean now. What Pentecost did for the disciples of old, it will do for us. It will save us from the waste of worthless seeking; that is, too much dabbling in, and vainly trying to find a worth while set-up for, every angle and jutting of modern Church and manipulation.

Before Pentecost the disciples were bound by self-interest. Not so afterward. To make Christ's Church glorious in the earth, then and now, they went out not knowing whither the Spirit should take them, but imbued for and sealed to His leading. Whither bound are we? There are blessed souls who have moved up to the Pentecostal plane of service. They are here and there only, one now and then. Why not every disciple of our loving Lord? The Son of God loves His Church. He loves us so that He made the glory of His Church existent in all who will walk the Emmaus path of fellowship and comradeship. To the "Abide with us" of those whose attitudes invited Jesus' company, He not only "went in" with them, but He "opened" both their eyes and their understanding.

METHODS CORNER

BY REV. ELISHA A. KING, D. D.

Miami Beach, Fla.

This week I am going to mention something that many people do not consider worth thinking about; or at least that is the natural conclusion to come to from some of the things we see about the country. I refer to the care of the physical Church property. It goes without saying that there are many thousands of beautiful Church buildings and grounds in this country, but it is very easy to allow the Church property to get out of repair.

I was once pastor of a Church in a very fine town, where most things looked ship-shape and prosperous, but for some reason our Church grounds did look as if they had never had any care. When the matter was brought to the attention of the Men's Club, a group of them said they would be willing to give a whole day's labor if the women of the Church would serve a dinner for them. Many of these men were farmers. On the appointed day they came with wagons, shovels, rakes, etc., and they went to work. They took all the ashes from the cellar, cleaned up the yard, cut down a few trees and bushes, trimmed up others, and in that day beautified the whole Church property. They had a good time, and were very much pleased with the results of their labor. That became an annual event.

Some Churches have a grounds and beautification committee that functions all the year. One can hardly realize the effect of such a cleaning up on the whole community. It gives evidence of life and interest, shows a commendable pride in the community. It gives evidence of life and interest, shows a commendable pride in the community appearance and sets an example to others.

Perhaps something might be said about keeping the inside of Churches clean and ship-shape. A few years ago I visited quite a number of country Churches and found the doors open, hymn-books scattered about and great quantities of dust every where. In other similar Churches the doors were carefully closed, though not locked, and closets were provided for hymn-books and Bibles, and the place looked neat and clean. Sometimes the choir-lofts or seats are left in a terrible cluttered condition, and often old flowers remain in the Church building all the week. Some how or other, the Church building should be kept in good conditions through the week. It is our Church home, our sacred place of worship, and, in a sense, it represents us and our interests. When I was in France I found that broken-down chapels, shrines and places of worship went with communities that had lost hope and civic pride. Wherever the Church was well kept, there I found a high-grade community.

DR. FRED R. MARSH, pastor of the Church at Taveres, Fla., has been ill with flu and complications. We trust he is improving as this paper goes to press.

CONGREGATIONAL REGIONAL COMMITTEE.

Findings of the Congregational Regional Committee of the Southeast, in session at Nashville, Tenn., April 14-15, 1931, were submitted as follows:

The Committee on Findings submits the following paragraphs on Christian giving, evangelism, missionary preaching, young people's work, fellowship, entertainment, economy of administration, specific missionary objects, remittances of missionary moneys, and on Christian living as the sense of this meeting.

The deepening of the spiritual life of Christian people until it becomes a burning passion for the furtherance of the Christian enterprise, is requisite to success in every department of Christian activity. The constantly increasing needs of the missionary fields must be matched by the intensifying of Christian experience and the enlargement of Christian sympathy, if the support of missionary enterprises is to be adequate. Christian giving comes from a sense of personal contact with God, a vital experience of the loving-kindness of the Heavenly Father.

We commend the primary emphasis of this Regional Committee on the necessity of a personal and vital religious experience as the requisite of all success in home and mission activities, and recognize with gratitude the contribution of spiritual reality which Miss Lucy T. Ayres has made to this meeting and is making constantly in the missions she conducts in the Southeast.

We recommend to our pastors in the Southeast that they supplement the every-member canvass every year with a number of sermons on the missionary enterprise, which sermons should be informational and sufficiently emotional to arouse in our people a desire to share in the support and development of the world-wide Christian movement.

We commend the emphasis on young people's work and the message of its increasing significance as brought to the meeting by Rev. Harry T. Stock, Rev. Ernest W. Riggs, and Dr. Malcolm Dana. We recommend that our own young people be encouraged to develop their own forms of Christian activity without too much regard for historic organizations of young people and without too much adult supervision.

We are increasingly conscious of the worth of these meetings of the Southeast Regional Committee of the Commission on Missions. The experience of fellowship secured by these gatherings brings an enrichment of personal life, a hope for the solution of vexing problems and a faith and a power of Christ to win the world which none of us would willingly forego. We therefore express to the various organizations which make these meetings possible, through their financial support, our deep sense of gratitude.

We also express to the Rev. Jason Noble Pierce and the Collegiate Church our appreciation of the hospitality of the minister and the Church; and to Dr. W. D. Weatherford, president of the Y. M. C. A. Graduate School, our gratitude for his splendid co-operation in furnishing us a convenient and most satisfactory meeting-place in the graduate school. We also record with repeated appreciation the share which Fisk University has had in the entertainment of delegates to this meeting through the hospitable offices of President Jones of Fisk University.

We commend with only one reservation the combination of the extension and promotion work under one staff of workers in the Southeast, which unification results in an expense of only 3 per cent overhead in the securing of the apportionment and increased giving in our twenty Southeastern States. Our one reservation relates to the possibility of over-working a small staff in a very large territory, and thus saving money at the cost of life.

While some may deprecate the use of the word, "project," as a word descriptive of particular fields of interest in missionary study and giving, we do commend the assignment or selection of such definite enterprises for special study. We also commend to all of our Churches the use of the Guest Book as an incentive to general missionary study.

We urge our Churches to send in to Dr. Bloom's office in Washington, and Mr. Barnwell's office in Atlanta, and to Dr. Gillette's office in Jacksonville, their monthly share of their apportionment at the end of each month.

We are convinced that, while the financial needs of our work were never more critical, and the necessity for effective methods in organization and education was never more evident, the essential and underlying requirement for the success of our work is a spiritual dynamic that will lift our whole Christian enterprise to the plane of a passionate devotion to our Lord. We commend to our ministers, our students in colleges and seminaries, our young people at home, our secretaries and field workers, our Church members as a whole, an earnest search for God in the vital daily experiences of life. "Ask and it shall be given you; seek, and ye shall find; knock, and it shall be opened unto you."

EASTER AT THORSBY.

Young people from Andalusia, Birmingham, Piedmont College, Clanton, Deatsville, and from Verbena joined the Thorsby young people in a Christian Life Conference, held in Thorsby, April 3 to 5. It was very fitting that these young people should come together at the joyous Easter season to dedicate their lives anew to the service of the risen Saviour. This year, more than any other, the planning and conducting of the conference was in the hands of the young people themselves. Under a very capable committee, headed by Gerald Smith, with Eunice Williamson as secretary, assisted by Odelle Rowe, Catherine Foss as vice-chairman, and John Adams, treasurer, the program moved along very smoothly. The different classes of the institute took charge of special services and provided very varied and helpful programs. The law of learning is "Learn by Doing," and these young people gained a great deal in experience while they gave pleasure to others.

The sophomore class conducted the opening worship service Friday night, and gave the right touch of dignity and inspiration to our first meeting. The vesper service, Saturday afternoon, was planned and led by the senior class and was most impressive. Saturday night was a joyous social occasion, and the freshmen, one after another, taught new games. Every one seemed happy and eager for more. Easter Sunday morning, "as it began to dawn," the young people met for a prayer service and saw enacted the scene of that first Easter morning when the good news of the risen Christ was spread abroad to His followers. The junior class conducted this prayer service and presented the Easter dramatization. Special committees of the school and town young people took charge of stunts, decorations, hospitality, picnic plans and the banquet. The banquet was a gala affair, with all the "fixins," even to three-minute toasts at the close.

The adult leaders conducted special classes, led discussions, and gave messages. Rev. Lucy T. Ayres, Miss Dora Brackin, Mr. Luther Rowe, Dr. F. P. Ensminger, and Miss Margaret Davison furnished this leadership whenever the program of the young people called for it. The last session of the conference was most impressive; a Communion and consecration service, conducted by Rev. Lucy T. Ayres, assisted by the young people from Piedmont College.

In the findings, the young people expressed their purpose for the year to come. They resolved to spend time and energy to make Christ more real in their lives and in the lives of others.

SAFETY FIRST?

Miss Grace Breck, American Board missionary at Lintsing, North China, has been for years supported by the women of the Florida Churches. The last issue of Overseas News, a mimeographed sheet, published by the American Board, quotes the following from her:

"Relatively peaceful" is the way Grace M. Breck, of Lintsing, North China, describes the political and military situation in that part of the country, but adds that there is plenty of banditry in Shantung. "Please don't worry about us," she says. "We have no guarantee of freedom from danger, but that is true of life anywhere. 'Safety first' would scarcely be an appropriate motto for Christians, you know. There is much to encourage us in our work in spite of the many unsolved problems and difficulties."

NOTICE.

The ministers and Churches of the Alabama Christian Conference will doubtless recall that at our last annual Conference, held at Noon Day Church, there was no provision made for our next annual meeting, and this matter had to be arranged for by the executive committee of the Conference. So far, only one Church has called for the meeting of the Conference. Therefore, the executive committee has decided to meet with the Church at Pisgah, Ala. The Conference will meet on Tuesday after the second Sunday in October, 1931, at 2:30 P. M., instead of 10 A. M. The Church at Pisgah will afford us splendid entertainment and they are very anxious to have us meet with them. Let every Church begin now to arrange for a delegation to go. We can pool our expenses and the cost will be but a small item. It will be a fine trip and an inspiring meeting.

J. D. HUNT,
Chairman of Board.

Why not stage a debate on the disarmament question for the evening of "World Good-Will Sunday?" Maybe the pastor of your Church would be willing to turn over his evening service for such a debate. Or better still, organize a study class for two or three weeks' discussion of the disarmament question.

PRINCIPLES OF THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

(1) The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.

(2) Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.

(3) The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.

(4) Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship and of Church membership.

(5) The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by, all.

THE PURPOSE OF THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

The purpose of this Church is to cultivate a spirit of union among the followers of our Lord Jesus Christ of every persuasion, and to secure, if possible, the associate efforts of all true religious teachers in pointing the wicked to "the Lamb of God who taketh away the sin of the world."

The peculiar doctrines and tenets which have confused and distracted the Christian world are remanded to private judgment, and hence cease to be matters for debate, only in so far as may be necessary to prevent a sectarian influence from entering the Church.

This Church requires no compromise of faith on the part of any child of God in order to communion or fellowship; here, denominational distinctions cease to exist, and Christian love binds the brotherhood together.

The purpose of this Church will be consummated in the conversion of the world and the union of all Christians.

CREATING DESIRE.

That which drives, or leads, us is our desires. David said: "One thing have I desired of the Lord, that will I seek after." Surely he would. It is a thing fundamental in human nature to seek after that which we desire. Potential athletes, in a thousand gymnasiums or ball fields, now desire proficiency, if not profit and preferment in the world of sports. Having this desire, they submit themselves to discipline, to unnumbered hours and days of practice and of training. One thing they desire, and this they are seeking after. Their desire leads them to the place of practice and discipline, and drives them through the drill, compels them to submit to the ordeals even of hardship or discipline.

The same is true of the scientist in his laboratory. He desires to explore, to invent, to discover. His desire holds him to his "test tubes," and experiments, through long hours and even through forgetfulness of comfort and necessary rest and refreshment. His desire to achieve the one thing on which his heart is set compels him to forego and to forget. These are obvious truths that need no arguments or examples. They are apparent—applicable to every phase and calling and condition of life.

This, however, does need argument and emphasis: What creates the desire? How are the desires that drive or entice us onward created? How does it come about that I, as an individual, create for myself desires that entice and enchant me? How is there developed in me a desire to dare and to do in a certain direction? This is the deeper question which is at the very foundation of our character and our conduct. Whence came the desire and our conduct. Whence came the desire on the part of David, that desire which he sought after, often faltering, even failing, but never, never turning back nor giving up, viz: That desire that he might dwell in the house of the Lord all the days of his life and to behold the beauty of the Lord and to inquire in His temple? How was such a desire created in the mind and heart and soul of David? The answer to this question will carry us to foundations and fundamentals.

Let the soul, by accident, by chance, or by divine appointment and decree, find that for which it cares, that which, in a measure, appeals to it; that which stimulates and attracts the imagination of the heart—and immediately creative desire begins within. From that moment forward, that moment in which incipient desire was born, desires which create and compel, lead or drive, begin their work. It is all born of that for which "we care" or "do not care." By training, attitude, or activity, there are things, persons, places, books, pictures, flowers, fancies for which we care, or do not care. As we begin to lend ourselves to these, there are created within us, or we create for ourselves, desires that the objects, persons, pictures or whatnot for which we care may be achieved, pursued and possessed.

We are acquainted with a certain Roman proconsul who lived in the days of Paul and before whom Paul appeared. Because of one brief sentence about this Gallio, the world knows him and takes warning. Confronted on one occasion by a frenzied religious situation, he solved the problem, so far as he was concerned, by the attitude described in Acts 18:17: "And Gallio cared for none of these things." He did not care. In his failure to care, the destiny and the doom of that man is revealed to us. If he had "cared," he would have put himself in situations under which there would have been created in him, or he would have created for himself, a desire to see justice meted out, mercy and righteousness handed out with an even hand.

"I do not care" is one of the worst features of this age of doubt. I do not care for the sanctity of the Sabbath; I do not care for the worship of the sanctuary; I do not care for the Church of the living God! I do not care for the ills and evils of the industrial world; I do not care for missions, for reaching the unreached, for giving an opportunity to the less favored; I do not care to have a hand in religious education, training of youth, the burdens that bend and break the back of my less fortunate brothers. And in those fateful words, "I do not care," creative desire is strangled, destroyed before it is born.

For what sort of company do I care? In what sort of service do I find interest? What sort of persons, places, pictures, possessions do I care for?

True, we cannot make ourselves care, but we can put ourselves in the presence of persons, in the pursuits of truths, courses and causes, which will call out our care. To quote Dean Sperry, of Harvard University Theological School: "Less than this we may not do and keep a good conscience." The great truth, the noble cause and the lovable person have the power of calling out our noble care. With our care, there begins to be created that desire which leads or drives us on to achieve, to attain, to be worthy or to possess. This was what Paul had in mind when speaking of being changed into the image or likeness of his Lord. To quote Dean Sperry further: "Your nature and character, to a large degree, mirror your world of attention and concern. You cannot help that; it is a law of your being. But you can determine toward what facts in the world this mirror shall be turned, that you may be changed into their image. Being human is developing the power of caring, the deliberate choice of some object of interest and effort which merits the care of a man."

Desire springs out of our care. Following the desires of our hearts, desires which have been created by our cares, we come into that which is noble, pure, high and holy. "More to be desired are they than gold, yea, than much fine gold; sweeter also than honey and the honeycomb." What are these things so exceedingly precious and so deeply desired, so savory and so sweet to the mind and heart of David? They are the things for which somehow, somewhere, one day he "had a care" and he cultivated this care; he cultivated this interest, he cultivated a longing, and with this cultivation of that for which he cared, desires were created, new passions were born, strange, strong powers, irresistible powers, laid themselves on David's heart and drove him forward and led him on to that which, in spite of his sins and follies and human weaknesses, "made him a man after God's own heart."

J. O. A.

A SPIRITUAL BODY.

The Church is a spiritual body. Paul, in writing to the Ephesians (Eph. 1:23), says: "The Church, which is His body, the fullness of Him that filleth all in all." This is why we so readily misunderstand the Church, or fail to comprehend its worth and weight and meaning. We judge it by human standards. We think of it as a human institution, one with other institutions of man's creation. We forget that the Church, as the Body of Christ and of which Christ is the Head, is doing that which was so frequently on the lips of our Lord and uppermost in His mind, viz: building the kingdom of heaven on earth. This is not an earthly; it is a heavenly kingdom. The Church is not an earthly, it is a heavenly institution. All other institutions about us are of the earth, earthly; the Church is of heaven, heavenly.

Why then are there divisions, strifes, envy, distractions in the Church? The answer is easy. We apply human methods in the management of divine movements; we consult our own mind, our own methods, our own convenience in the management of a divine institution. The Church is God's, it belongs to God, He purchased it through the death of His Son, a very precious possession in His sight because He paid such a price for it. And yet we do violence to it by placing it on a level with other institutions of our own making.

Wherein then does the Church differ from all other institutions? The answer is twofold:

1. It differs in content. It is spiritual, a spiritual body, the Body of our Lord Jesus Christ. All other institutions are temporal, are created for convenience, carved out of custom, made after the manner of man for the convenience of corporate enjoyment, and expression of man. The Church was made for the corporate expression of God and the revelation of Himself to the world.

2. The Church differs from all other institutions in purpose and program. It is the only institution on earth whose sole purpose is that of revealing Christ to the world, and whose sole program is that of proclaiming Him to the world as the world's only Saviour and Redeemer. There are quite 30,000 missionaries, for example, out in fields afar, sent out there for the sole purpose of making known the will and the way of our Lord. Who sent them out there? Who supports them now that they are there? Who sustains them in their activities? The Church of the living God. There are in non-Christian countries more than 36,000 Churches with nearly 10,000,000 adherents on the threshold of the kingdom of our Lord. How came one Church out there? The Church of the living God sponsored and built it and sustains it. There are over 50,000 missionary schools with nearly 2,550,000 pupils. There are 858 hospitals. There are 104 leper asylums; 32 schools for the blind and the deaf, 361 orphanages. How came one of all these out there where a few brief years ago the name of our Christ was not known, and where His love and mercy had not been proclaimed? The Church of the living God sponsored and sent them all out there and sustains them there today. Out of the gospel have come these things. It is not a human task, it is a divine task. The Church is not a human institution. If it were, it would be in the foreign fields, like business concerns and corporations, to get gain, to make money, to achieve worldly aims and ambitions. The Church is out there giving itself, revealing its Lord, making known His heart's desire and His power to save.

No Church, therefore, fulfills the functions of a Church or achieves the glory and shares the full measure of joy of a Church unless and until it is a missionary Church, a sending Church, a sharing Church. It must share its love with other lives if it is to maintain its own life, keep and preserve its own soul.

This Christian Church of ours has done little to build up its own life, to save its own soul, because it has not been a missionary Church. We have not remembered that the Church is a spiritual body, the body of Christ, and that the Church is impotent and incomplete, if it does not give itself to revealing Him to a world that perishes without Him.

THE WEAPONS OF OUR WARFARE.

It was proposed in a Church meeting the other night that "our Church will have to let up on offerings, on donations, on financial efforts." And then one arose and said, "I am in favor of retrenching and letting up in the Lord's work last, not first. There seems to be little or no retrenchment or letting up in attendance at the movies, in the sale of cigarettes (a great increase, in fact), or of soft drinks and the use of automobiles for pleasure and enjoyment. Why not retrench and curtail our outlay on luxuries and material indulgences before we adopt the fatal policy of retrenching and curtailing in the work of the Church, which is the work of the Lord?" That speaker was a business layman who works hard to earn his daily bread; but in our thinking he spoke a parable and preached a sermon.

Because of "business depression," many are content to curtail in all that pertains to the Church, but are not willing to "deny themselves for the sake of their Lord." We shall not give up. The stout of heart and the strong of faith will not. We are fighting a real battle for the Lord. The Church is of His making, not ours. His Son said, "I will build my Church." A time of economic depression may try men's tone and temper, but it gives the opportunity and affords the privilege of growing in grace and in the spirit and knowledge of the Lord, for we follow Him, learn of Him, know Him through self-denial.

Paul was writing of "hard times" and of impending dangers when he said: "The weapons of our warfare are not carnal, but mighty through God to the pulling down of strongholds." Economic depression should not depress our souls, but strengthen them for a real conquest of the world, the flesh and the devil. Ours is a spiritual battle.

The Methodist Recorder wisely points out: "As Jonathan reminded his men, the battle is not ours, but God's; and the strength in which it is fought, and the perseverance wherewith the strain of the long day is endured, is spiritual and derived from God. 'Not by might, nor by power, but by my Spirit, saith the Lord of Hosts.' It is in Christ, and in Christ alone, that Christians have their sufficiency, whether as individuals or communities. It sounds fanatical, but is the word of truth and soberness, that the Christian has all sufficiency in all things. It is a secret, but Paul learned it and revealed it to the Philippians. 'I can do all things through the Christ who strengtheneth me.'"

RELIGION.

Religion is any system of faith and worship, and it takes so many forms that all through the ages religion has taken many forms from idolatry to Jesus Christ. The Christian religion is the worship of Jesus Christ; but that has been divided into so many different forms that the Christian world is divided in its beliefs, its forms, its statement of facts, and its modes of worship. It is this divided state of Christianity that retards the progress of the gospel and the success of missions. It is not to be expected that the whole Christian world will think alike, but they should love and co-operate in the proclamation of the gospel and the extension of the kingdom. Jesus did not pray for union in the sense of organic thinking and uniform creeds; but He did pray for unity.

"Neither pray I for these alone, but for them also which shall believe on me through their word: that they all may be one; as Thou, Father, art in me, and I in Thee, that they also may be one in us; that the world may believe that Thou hast sent me" (John 17:20, 21). The unity for which Jesus prayed was a spiritual unity, not an intellectual union. The Father and Jesus had the same spirit, but they differed in their manifestation. Jesus was in the form of a man, but He had the spirit of the Father. Love is the same always, for love is of God; but thought is of man.

"What think ye of Christ?" (Matt. 22:42.) "Think on these things" (Phil. 4:8). Man thinks; God loves. Man, to be like God, must love mankind. In that spirit, unity can exist; in fact, as far as different denominations love, they are "in unity of the Spirit in the bond of peace" (Eph. 4:3). It is easier to love in unity than to think in unity. Thinkers differ; lovers agree. Separation takes place as love fades.

The Father and Christ are one because they both love. God is Love, and Jesus is God, and so Jesus is Love. The great command to believers was, "that ye love one another, as I have loved you" (John 15:12). "Love your enemies, bless them that curse you, do good to all them that hate you, and pray for them that despitefully use you and persecute you" (Matt. 5:44). Thinking together and loving are two different things. The Christian can love those that differ from him in thought, but he cannot think with them. When the whole Church comes to the experience of unity in love, purpose, and work, they will have helped to answer the prayer of Jesus "that they all may be one."

Fifty Thousand Dollars for Missions!

A CALL TO SELF-DENIAL

Through self-denial, the Kingdom of Heaven is built on earth. The cattle upon a thousand hills are His; likewise, the gold and the silver, and the world's wealth. Yet, in financing His Kingdom on earth, Jesus, the Son of God, saw fit to adopt and use the method of self-denial. He gave the great example and denied Himself of even a place on which to lay His head. He gave all for our sake. He calls upon us to give something for His sake, not out of our abundance, but out of our need.

The greatest task conceived by the mind of man, or the wisdom of God, is that of giving the whole Gospel to the whole world, and this task has been, and is being, borne and achieved solely through self-denial.

It is a spiritual challenge, and must be accepted, if at all, through self-denial. If CHRISTIAN SUN readers shall reap the benefits and enjoy the blessings of spiritual enrichment, they will do so by following their Lord in denying themselves of some real value in His name and for His sake.

To this end, the Mission Board, in trying to carry forward the work assigned to it by the Church for which $50,000 is called for this year, is inviting all SUN readers and Church members to deny themselves of some valuable thing, or indulgence, and give the price of it to Missions. Only through self-denial will our own lives be enriched and will our goal for our Lord be achieved. Jesus proved Himself our Friend by the supreme sacrifice. Now He wants us, and needs us, to be His friends, and we can only prove that friendship by making a sacrifice for His sake. This we can do through self-denial.

SUFFOLK LETTER.

The Suffolk Christian Church began a revival meeting on Sunday, April 19th, and it will continue a second week. Dr. C. H. Rowland, pastor of First Christian Church, Greensboro, N. C., is preaching each night, and Rev. J. F. Morgan, pastor of Rosemont Christian Church, is leading the singing. They are both consecrated ministers, spiritually minded, well qualified by nature, education and experience for evangelistic service, and they work in harmony with each other and the congregation. The congregations have been large from the beginning, and increasingly so from night to night. The sermons and the singing have been appealing, and the interest has been on the increase from the start. The prospect is for fine results, and several have already made profession of faith in Christ.

A devoted member of the Church, and a capable man, said to me: "I like this meeting better than a noted evangelist who stirs up the people by means other than the gospel." He was stating what so many feel—that pastors can help one another in revival meetings that will last in the Church after the series of meetings close. When an attractive speaker comes from the outside of the Church, crowds will flock to the Church, while the excitement lasts, and then lose interest and not return after the close of the meeting. In addition to this, a brother-pastor is more interested in the permanent upbuilding of the Church, in its spiritual service, than one who comes and goes and has no vital interest in the local congregation. Moreover, the pastor who conducts a revival for a brother-pastor will return to his own congregation with increased spiritual influence. His Church will not lose, but gain, by his work for another congregation. If a pastor never preaches in revival services for any congregation other than his own, he is liable to fall into a staid and formal manner of proclaiming the gospel. If pastors would cultivate assisting one another in revival work it would improve the real service of both pastor and people.

The work that tells is the prayerful co-operation of pastor and congregation in real spiritual effort to win souls through the influence and personal effort of members of the Church. This does not mean that real evangelists should not be engaged in special meetings; but, as a rule, such evangelists can do better work in union services. And such services will enlist the interest and co-operation of all the Churches in the community and attract people who have no relation to the Church or the Sunday School. Both kinds of revival meetings have their place in religious society, but those who are on the field throughout the year carry the burden of the work and the responsibility of winning sinners to the Saviour. Churches drift into the habit of spending their energies on current expenses, benevolent contributions, and local work, and neglect the cultivation of spiritual life and winning of souls. Revival meetings are necessary to awaken dormant and latent spiritual forces in the pulpit and the pew.

The meeting now in progress has already stirred the hearts of this congregation to do more to save souls.

ELON LETTER.

What we have been saying the past two weeks about patterns for houses and ethical codes for professions and standards for colleges, applies with equal force to individual life. Nothing must be done from any source to cripple individual development and personal self-expression. Every pattern that is offered to the individual for the fashioning of his life must be like a yoke which is not a burden to the ox, but a means of lightening his load. Every standard that is erected and in terms of which the individual is expected to conform, must be cement, as it were, to hold together the individual blocks of masonry that go to make up the edifice of life.

It was difficult for even so great a poet as Lord Tennyson to understand the interest that God has in the individual life, and we find this zealous spiritual seer in his "In Memoriam" asking:

"Are God and Nature then at strife,
That Nature lends such evil dreams,
So careful of the type she seems,
So careless of the individual life?"

Yet he was wrong even as those are wrong who think that what is known in science as the evolutionary process disregards absolutely the individual and is concerned only for the type. Biologists know now that nature, even in the blind evolutionary sense of that word, is tremendously interested in sporadic types and tends to preserve them. Otherwise there would be no progressive evolution in the evolutionary process; but what the biologist means by sporadic types is what the man of ordinary speech means by individual difference.

Yet we can observe even in the sporadic individuals a conformity to type or pattern. The individual has freedom to live his own life, and yet if he is to live a full life, he must live in terms of his past and in terms of his environment, his total environment, and there is no conflict between ordering our life according to certain patterns and living with perfect freedom. The man who undertakes to live in defiance of the pattern that experience has shown to be best adapted to human living, comes to speedy grief, if not to ultimate disaster.

THE PORTSMOUTH MEETING.

The series of meetings which have been in progress at the First Christian Church, corner of Washington and County Streets, Portsmouth, Va., came to a close a few days ago, as directed by the Rev. M. R. Long, of Statesville, N. C. This meeting, in the opinion of the pastor and those long identified with the Church, proved to be the greatest in the history of a Church which has known great spiritual victories in the past.

Mr. Long proved himself to be a veritable firebrand plucked from the burning, which, through the transforming grace of God's word and the shed blood of the Lord Jesus Christ, has become a torch of truth, pointing men to the Lamb of God who taketh away the sins of the world. With thundering invective, with tenderness and love, with the power of the blessed Holy Ghost, this man sent from God preached and exhorted. Giving himself untiringly to the work both day and night, he was busy about the business of his Father. In home, in shop meetings, on the streets, he was constantly leading men and women and children to the Lord Christ. A plain preacher, depending only upon the Word of God and the Holy Spirit, this man preached a gospel for which the hearts of men are hungry today. He pointed men to one who could cleanse from all sin, who was able to save and to keep saved from sin all those who would put their trust in Him, declaring that a full gospel demanded a full surrender, and that the normal life of a follower of Christ was a Spirit-filled one. With no uncertain language, he decried sin, exposed it in all its hideous horror, then pointed those who were convicted thereof by the Spirit to the only Source of cleansing and salvation.

To sum up the results, while the additions were relatively small, yet no meeting can be judged thereby, there were between thirty-five and forty people who joined the Church, and among this number there were those from every walk of life. One of the outstanding things, perhaps, was the salvation of a Roman Catholic, his wife and several of his children, who embraced the Christian faith and identified themselves with our Church. A man who was rapidly drinking himself to death and had not been in Church for over twenty-five years, was won to Christ in his home, later publicly confessed Christ and joined the Church. Then the great result was the spiritual victories which came. The Church has been awakened and aroused as never before. Enlistments have been made on the part of many of its members in personal soul-winning efforts, and there has come that unified co-ordination which means everything for Christ.

The membership of the Church, too, gave itself to the campaign, and God blessed its efforts in marvelous way. The cottage prayer services which have been in progress for months, two each evening, held in some homes of the city, have been productive of much good. Then, too, another great thing has been the gifts our people make each month to the cause of Jewish missions, as represented by the American Board of Missions to the Jews, 27 Throop Street, Brooklyn, N. Y., which is, in our opinion, the greatest Jewish mission work in the world, and God hath confirmed (Gen. 12:1-3).

This week we held our quarterly conference, remaining in session until nearly 11 o'clock—the greatest conference we ever had, people praising God for the victories He hath given. The financial status of the Church is in the best condition it has ever been. Despite the period of depression, every bill has been paid, money in treasury, and the assurance that we would meet every obligation for God. Please pray for us, that we go on to greater heights.

Bro. Long is to return for another engagement in September. Pray that God shall use him wonderfully then. (Rom. 15:30.)

A MINISTER'S EXPERIENCE.

He was just an insignificant minister of the Christian Church, who arose a bit early on Easter morning and prepared himself for the Sabbath Day's journey. The day's activity began at 9:30 A. M., when two fine young people of the community were married in the minister's home and sent on their happy journey with that minister's blessing. At 10 A. M. this minister taught a fine Men's Bible Class. At 11 A. M. the minister preached and received five new members into his Church and conducted Communion service.

At 2:30 P. M. this minister was again before his congregation at another Church. Here he preached, ordained a fine young man to the great office of deacon in his Church, and again conducted Communion service.

At 7:15, the minister was in the young people's meeting, where he got much inspiration and help, and at 8 P. M. this minister was again before a fine audience and preached. At the close of the message, the minister went into the pool and baptized two of his very fine young boys and, standing in the water, he pronounced the benediction—and the Sabbath Day's journey was over.

Yes, this preacher was tired, but happy, for he was conscious he had made the Sabbath Day's journey in the interest of the kingdom of God. X.

ELON'S PRESIDENT RESIGNS.

An announcement of far-reaching interest was made at Elon College on April 27th. Dr. William Allen Harper, president of the college for twenty years and preceding that time professor for six years, making a total of twenty-six years of continuous service, has tendered his resignation to the board of trustees, effective with the close of the present academic year.

For some time, those most intimate with President Harper have known that he contemplated such a step. Even to his most intimate friends, however, the announcement came as a distinct surprise. The trustees will assemble on May 26th, at which time it is expected that his successor will be named. "Whoever my successor may be," commented President Harper, "he will have my heartiest support. In my judgment, a bright future awaits the new administration, now that Elon's constituency has been so greatly enlarged by the merger of the Congregational and Christian Churches in the United States."

In 1911, when William Allen Harper came fresh from his professorship to the presidency of Elon College, the college plant consisted of an administration building (burned in 1923), two dormitories, and a power plant, the whole being valued at $300,000. The endowment was about $40,000. Today the plant consists of thirteen buildings and is valued at nearly $1,200,000, and the endowment is $542,000, including the interest-bearing obligations given the college by the Southern Christian Convention for endowment purposes. The student body has grown from 175 to 400. The preparatory or sub-freshman department has been eliminated, and the teaching and administrative staff has increased from a dozen to thirty-one.

The fire of January 18, 1923, would have struck consternation to almost any heart. President Harper, in this crucial hour, took on new energy and determination as his response to a situation that seemed desperate. Not only was the building in which centered the educational activities of the college gone, but there was a debt of more than $100,000 on the plant. So heroically did the president rally Elon's friends that five buildings arose in the place of one, and the campus and grounds were so improved that the college became what has not inappropriately been styled one of the most beautiful small college plants in America.

In addition to erecting such a modern and commodious plant, Elon has, during President Harper's administration, been admitted to membership in the Southern Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools. But President Harper has not, during these twenty years of administrative work, given up his intellectual interests. For all but two years—the years immediately following the fire—he has taught one or more courses in the college regularly. He is recognized as an authority in religious education, in which field he has written no less than ten books which have been extensively used as college texts in religious education.

President Harper has served as president of the North Carolina College Conference, as vice-president of the Council of Church Boards of Education, and is now chairman of the committee on religious education of this council. He has served as secretary for Christian education of the General Convention of the Christian Church, and is now president of the College Conference of the Congregational and Christian Church. He is a frequent contributor to the religious press, and rarely does a week pass that he does not deliver an address on some public occasion. At the commencement season of high schools and colleges he is in special demand. For eight years he edited the Journal of Christian Education, and is now associate editor of THE CHRISTIAN SUN and the Christian Union Quarterly.

President Harper expects to spend the summer on the Pacific coast and in Chicago. In June he will go to the General Council meeting of the Congregational and Christian Churches in Seattle, Wash., where he will daily conduct a two-hour seminar for a week on the theme, "The Gospel and the Family and Youth." During July and August, President Harper will teach religious education in the University of Chicago. As to his plans beyond these dates, President Harper said he was not prepared to give out any statement.

President Harper has had a rare ability to know persons individually. Every one of Elon's 852 graduates is personally known to him. He can always address any student of the college by his or her name. He has been a tireless worker and has, during the twenty years of his incumbency, produced results that testify not only to his ability and educational statesmanship, but his application to duty as well.

He has been especially able to interest persons of means in Elon. The Duke science building, the Mooney Christian education building, the Carlton library building, and the Whitley auditorium bear witness to this fact. No less has he been successful in interesting the support and contributions of an army of small givers, persons who give themselves with their money, as is evidenced by the $50,000 or more he has annually raised for several years for current expenses from this class of contributors.

He has also succeeded in tying the citizens of Alamance County to the college, so that Elon has become to be recognized as the "College of Alamance County" and to be regarded as a vital force in the county's community, educational and spiritual life. The Alamance building, the present administration building of the college, is eloquent witness to the pride and devotion of Alamance County citizens in Elon College.

EURE'S CHURCH.

Eure's Christian Church had its regular Easter service on April 12, 1931, at 3:30 P. M. The pastor's subject was "The Living Redeemer." Special music was rendered. This being our Communion Sunday, the Lord's table was prepared and served to a very large audience.

Up until now we have been having our services each second Sunday evening, but beginning in May we are using every fourth Sunday evening at the same hour, so that our pastor might be in our midst longer and without a great rush.

Eure's Church members are trying to be known from now on as a friendly, co-operative and congenial people to every one who visits them. Rev. White is well liked by our denomination, and by our sister denominations as well.

Every one is cordially invited to attend our services each fourth Sunday at 3 P. M., and our Bible School each Sunday at 10 A. M. Mr. T. A. Eure is superintendent of our Sunday School.

This Church will hold its annual Memorial Day services on the fifth Sunday in May. This will also be known as "Home-Coming Day." Basket dinner will be served by all members. All old members, friends and sister Churches are especially invited.

REV. J. O. ATKINSON, D. D., Secretary.

A PRAYER.

Forever, O Lord, Thy word is sure. We know it will not return unto Thee void. Depending upon Thy word, the nations shall not fail, but find therein the way of peace and security. Give to Thy servants understanding. Teach us good judgment and knowledge. It is time, O God, for the organized Church to let Thy Spirit rule. Dear Father, keep Thine own true, sensitive to discern evil, diligent to fortify Thy Church against the insidious tendency to absorb and assimilate the ways of the world. Cleanse Thy temple and make it a place where communion shall be real and fellowship unrestrained. In Jesus' name and for His sake. Amen.

MEDICAL MISSION WORK.

Dr. M. J. W. White, medical missionary and hospital director in the Mission Hospital at Cagayan, Philippine Islands, has sent us in booklet form his annual report, the tenth year of medical missions in the Philippines by the American Board. The report opens with these encouraging paragraphs:

"The year 1930 has been an eventful and progressive one for the Mission Hospital. More patients have come and gone and the hospital has many grateful friends in every walk of life, not only in Misamis province, but in others nearby.

"Again we take the stand of having our doors wide open to all people of all creeds and all nationalities. While the physical needs of the patient are given first consideration, their spiritual needs are not neglected. Testaments and Bibles, both in the dialect and English, are given all those who express a desire to read them. A group of girls from the Bible school come on Sundays and sing and pray in the patients' rooms. We feel that most of the patients enjoy these little services, although the greater per cent are not Protestants. The nurses and hospital workers hold devotional services every morning before beginning their daily duties. We know that prejudice is being broken down by the ministrations of our doctors and nurses at the Mission Hospital, and we are hoping to gain greater co-operation from those of other beliefs, so that our well-equipped and roomy hospital may be of more benefit to the community."

The report shows that the total treatment of patients the past year was 9,245, which is a daily average of 25.5 treatments. There were 39 major operations, and there were received during the year 1,284 new patients. The hospital receipts for the year were $8,421.58, and there were gifts from the Mission Board and miscellaneous sources carrying the total receipts to $11,502.56. The total expenditure during the year was $11,321.05, with outstanding obligations carrying the total expenditure to $12,501.37. Dr. and Mrs. White seem to be doing excellent work for human relief, and in that way are permitted to reach the hearts and lives of many in the name and for the sake of their Lord.

IN THE LIFE OF THE CEMETERY.

A missionary reports that a native pastor preaching in India used this illustration: "In going through the graveyard I have noticed the same sentence on many of the tombstones, 'Thy will be done.' 'Thy will be done,' but how can God's will be done in a graveyard? This is not the place to write 'Thy will be done.' It must be written in our lives and not over our graves if it is to have any meaning."

In life, many of us are so self-willed that we are not ready to make our will God's will, but seek to make God bend His will to our plans and specifications. The strong life realizes that there is power above which is mightier than the power within. It is too late to use these words when the body is decaying in mother earth and the soul has returned to the God who gave it. Not in the cemetery, but in the daily life do we need the most essential of all words, "Not my will, but Thy will be done."

MISSIONARY PROGRAM FOR MAY.

BY MRS. W. M. JAY.

Women's Societies.

(May, June, July, August.)

The programs for these four months are taken from the booklet, "Yesterday and Today in Porto Rico." Using a chapter for each month, the programs are complete and are under the headings: (1) "A Visitor Returns from Porto Rico"; (2) "Education in Porto Rico"; (3) "Health and Happiness in Porto Rico"; (4) "Religious Conditions in Porto Rico." The price of the booklet is 10 cents, and may be obtained from American Missionary Association, 287 Fourth Avenue, New York City, N. Y.

PROGRAM.

Worship helps.

A visitor returns from Porto Rico.

Suggested hymns: "Rise Up, O Men of God," "Where Cross the Crowded Ways of Life."

Scripture: Luke 10:25-37.

Prayer: For our government, that it may bring real benefits to Porto Rico; for the Governor of Porto Rico, that he may remedy conditions; for the Legislature of Porto Rico, that it may realize the needs, and act wisely; for the people—the many people who need "abundant life."

Poem: "Porto Rico Sunrise Across Condado Bay."

Sometimes I wake as though I had been called

By some commanding voice from out of heaven,
And still with dreams and calm sleep half enthrall'd,

I rise and throw the casement wide, and then
I know why men seek God: The whole great world
Speaks there before my eyes afresh with morn;
Across the palm-fringed bay I see unfurled

A radiant tapestry which, to adorn

The sky in matchless folds by angel hands

Is hung. Rich colored, its bright hues dismay
The earthly artist, who, all speechless, stands

And wishes he might dip his brush where they Die mirrored in the placid bay. The sun
Then suddenly rolls up, and day's begun.

—Van Deusen.

Hymn: "Porto Rico's Call" (page 582, Christian Hymnary).

It will help greatly to have a map displayed on the wall for use during the program.

Talk: "An Imaginary Visit." This talk may be given by three or four members using the following subjects: "The Island," "Its Beauty," "Tropical Fruits," "The People and Their Industries," "The Lack of Work and Poverty," and "The Problems of Porto Rico." It would be fine to close with a sort of round-table discussion and conversation on Porto Rico and the above subjects.

Young People's Societies.

PROGRAM OF CHAPTER VII.

"Behind the Curtain."

I. Business.

II. Study period.

1. Leader's review of our last lesson: The first four outstanding "Stars in the sparkling galaxy that has shone in India." The announcement of today's subject and the next item on the program.

2. "The Story of Ramabai" (pages 96-102 & 106); 1st member.

3. "A Visit to Mukti" (pages 103-104); 2nd member.

4. Prof. Karve's "Contribution to Indian Womanhood" (pages 105 to paragraph 1, page 106); 3rd member.

5. "The Baby Show" (pages 100-109 top); 4th member.

6. Conclusion (final paragraph, p. 109); 1st member.

Leader's introduction to worship service: We have just seen woman's degrading and shameful place among the Hindus, even though it is improving. When we compare it with our own American equality of woman with man, we wonder how women of any nation or religion could have been so subjected to man and custom. Let us consider a few outstanding women from various parts of the Bible just to show that our Heavenly Father has always loved, honored and dealt justly with the women who do Him reverence. How they stand out in brilliant array! "Eve, the Woman of Curiosity"; Hagar, the discarded wife; Miriam, the ambitious; Ruth, the woman of constancy; Hannah, the ideal mother; Esther, the self-sacrificing woman; Mary Magdalene, the transformed woman; Mary, the woman chosen of God! Mary of Bethany, the woman immortalized by Christ; Martha, the worried housekeeper; Dorcas, the benevolent seamstress; and Lydia, the business woman. As we realize the blessings which Christianity brings to womanhood, let us not forget our obligation to share the blessings of the gospel of Christ.

III. Worship program: Theme, "Women in the Christian Program."

1. Instrumental prelude: "Ave Maria."

2. Call to worship: "And many women were there . . . which followed Jesus from Galilee, ministering unto Him" (Matt. 27:55).

3. Hymn.

4. Scripture: Mark 12:41-44, Acts 16:13-18.

5. Prayer: That we Christian women may be worthy of the rich heritage we enjoy in Christ; that we may strive more diligently to carry our blessings to those girls and women in benighted lands whose blessing is Christ also.

6. Offertory: Instrumental music, "Ye Christian Heralds."

7. Hymn: "Christ for the World, We Sing."

8. Benediction.

Willing Workers or Juniors.

Theme: "The Work Missionaries are Doing in Porto Rico."

1. Call to worship (Matt. 28:19-20).

2. Prayer: Our Father, we thank Thee that so many people have heard Thy command to take the gospel to all the world. We pray Thee that many more boys, girls, men and women in Porto Rico may give their hearts to Jesus. Amen.

3. Song: "In Christ There is no East or West."

4. "Our Work in Porto Rico." (Clipping, to be given by members, which have been given out before time of meeting. It is suggested that the leader read over with the child the clipping before the meeting. Material may be gotten by writing Literature Department, 1104 U. B. Building, Dayton, Ohio.)

5. Song: "We've a Story to Tell to the Nations."

6. Benediction: Dear God, our Father, we thank Thee for what the missionaries are doing in Porto Rico. We pray that all the boys and girls of Porto Rico may know of Thy love. Help us to love Thee more. Amen.

MISSIONARY MEETING.

The Monticello Woman's Missionary Society held its regular monthly meeting at the Church April 10th. After the devotionals, roll was called and business session followed. A very interesting program was enjoyed, under the leadership of the president, Mrs. W. F. Burton. The subject was "Christianity at Its Best." Some very inspiring papers and discussions on stewardship and self-denial were rendered by the members of the society.

At the conclusion of the program Mrs. W. R. McKinney and Miss Maud McKinney served delicious ice cream and cake and hot coffee.

NEWS ITEMS

The Young People's Missionary Society of Burton's Grove has held regular meetings this year, with increased interest and enthusiasm. They have twenty-two on roll, and have given one pageant and some dresses to the Orphanage for Easter and have met all their requirements financially for the first half of the year. This is a very good report, and shows that these young people are doing a splendid work. Mrs. Payton N. Gay gives us this information, and may the good work go on at Burton's Grove.

ADVENTURES IN YOUTH FELLOWSHIP

"Youth at Work in the Church."

JEWEL TRUITT, Editor, Waverly, Virginia.

WORLD GOOD-WILL SUNDAY, MAY 17, 1931.

(A day set apart by the young people of our Churches for the development of the spirit of good will among and between the nations of the earth.)

"Till the war-drum throbb'd no longer,
And the battle-flags were furl'd
In the parliament of man,
The federation of the world."

—Tennyson.

YOUTH AND GOOD WILL.

"World Good-Will Sunday" is youth's day. Youth endeavors on this day—

To encourage men, women and children to live together in a neighborly spirit;
To develop a sense of unity and common humanity among all peoples;
To prepare the way for the coming of permanent world justice and peace.

To bear testimony to the eternal truth that God "hath made of one all nations of men for to dwell on all the face of the earth" (Acts 17:26).

What the world needs, obviously, is more good will. J. A. MacDonald, for many years the fearless editor of the Toronto Globe, once said: "The glory of the twentieth century is that all the world has been made a neighborhood; the tragedy of the twentieth century is that all the world has been made a neighborhood before the peoples have learned to be neighborly."

WHAT IS WORLD GOOD-WILL DAY?

Some one invariably asks, "Who started the observance of 'World Good-Will Day'?" Here is the answer:

In San Francisco, July, 1923, the educational leaders of forty-two nations established the World Federation of Education Associations, and called for a world-wide annual observance of "World Good-Will Day." Before the war, May 18th had been more or less observed as "Hague Day," in commemoration of the opening of the first Hague Conference (1899).

The resolution adopted at San Francisco reads as follows: "On the 18th of May, instruction should be given concerning the results of The Hague Conference, also the later efforts to bring the world together into a co-operative body; and this instruction should be accompanied by songs, both national and international, and plays and pageants which carry out the spirit of the day."

Since 1923, in public and private schools the world over, the children and youth of all lands have increasingly observed the day as a means for cultivating attitudes of international friendliness and good will.

WHAT IS WORLD GOOD-WILL SUNDAY?

Education for peace is not enough. A spiritual will to peace must be developed. This is primarily the task of religion. The Christian Church has a tremendous responsibility in the promotion of world justice and peace.

That is why our Churches, and more particularly our young people's societies and Church schools, observe the Sunday nearest May 18th as "World Good-Will Sunday." This year the date is Sunday, May 17th.

On this Sunday, thousands of young people in all parts of the world will be giving expression to their thoughts of friendship and regard for the people of other races and nations. Various Christian youth organizations, such as the Committee on World Friendship Among Young People, the Christian Youth Council of North America, the International Society of Christian Endeavor, the Epworth League, the Baptist Young People's Union, the Luther League, the youth sections of city and State councils of Churches and councils of religious education, and the young people's departments of the several denominations, will be laying special emphasis on "World Good-Will Sunday" as a part of the peace program of the Churches.

PROGRAM SUGGESTIONS.

"Fellowship" is the keynote of the observance of "World Good-Will Sunday." The following program of activities is suggested:

1. Community Mass-Meetings of Young People.—If possible, these mass-meetings should be organized on an interdenominational basis. Where such a youth meeting is impossible, the young people of the local Church, in their own way, should arrange for the observance of this day.

To this "good-will service," various racial groups might well be invited. The flags of the nations represented might be draped in some symbolic fashion on the platform. The speaker, or speakers, might discuss such themes as "Youth's Responsibility in the Making of a Better World," "What is America's Part in the New World?" and "Can War Be Abolished?"

2. Studying the Problems of the Churches and World Peace.—The young people of America are invited to collaborate with the Federal Council's Commission on International Justice and Good Will in the preparation of a statement of Christian ideals, principles and methods for the achievement of permanent world peace.

The Commission has prepared a brief discussion outline on the general theme, "The Churches and World Peace." This outline may be secured from the Federal Council offices without charge.

3. Studying the Problem of Disarmament.—A world disarmament conference is to be held in February, 1932, probably at Geneva. This will be a momentous event—the first conference of its kind in history.

There are 30,000,000 men under arms today, including active reserves. Between four and five billion dollars was spent by the nations on armaments in 1929, and probably more in 1930.

The Churches are primarily concerned in the moral and spiritual aspects of the disarmament problem. Youth, above all others, should know something of the questions to be discussed at the forthcoming conference.

4. Help Feed Porto Rico's Starving Children.—Here is a concrete proposal for both practicing and creating good will. Colonel Theodore Roosevelt reports 200,000 children undernourished and many of them starving. The Friendship Interlude Project for 1931 enables America's young people and children to send friendship treasure chests, with food and symbols of good will.

5. Reading Suggestions.—The following material in pamphlet form may be secured from the Federal Council's Commission on International Justice and Good Will, 105 East Twenty-second Street, New York, N. Y.: "Words of Christ Commonly Quoted For and Against War," 15 cents; "Message to the Churches," no charge; "The New Prospect for Lasting Peace," 3 cents; "The Disarmament Problem," 3 cents; "Twenty American Republics Plan New Institutions for Peace," 3 cents; "Working for World Peace," 3 cents; "Shall the United States Join the World Court?" and "Why the United States Should Join the World Court," 3 cents; "The London Naval Conference," 3 cents.—From mimeograph issued by Committee on World Friendship.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR NOTES.

Mothers' Day—May 10, 1931.

THE TWO GENERATIONS--UNDERSTANDING EACH OTHER.

Prelude: The pianist may play two or three old favorite hymns.

Call to worship:

"Holy Spirit, Truth divine,
Dawn upon this soul of mine;
Word of God, and inward light,
Wake my spirit, clear my sight."

Hymn: "Faith of Our Fathers."

Prayer:

Scripture: Matt. 7:24-27; Eph. 6:1-4.

A creed (to be read in unison or by an individual):

I believe in the beauty of the love and sacrifice of my parents.

I believe that their greatest desire is for me to have the best.

I believe in the interest of my teachers, they who are aiding in the development of my body, mind and talent.

I believe in the interest of my friends—their plan, their laughter, their sympathy and understanding.

I believe in the worth of a life lived as Jesus lived; that it is the way to true joy and happiness.

Thus believing, I will seek for my life only that which is beautiful. I will recognize evil as evil, but see beyond that which is finer. I will ever be eager to grow mentally, physically, socially, and spiritually. I will be the kind of friend in which I myself believe. I will remember that all that I think and say and do reflects on my appreciation of my parents, my teachers, my friends, and my God.—International Journal.

Hymn hour: During these few minutes, sing the favorite hymns of mothers and friends who may be present upon invitation of the society.

Discussion of the topic: (Assign the following topics for three-minute talks well in advance of the program.)

1. "The Youth-Age Problem."
2. "Contributions of Age."
3. "Contributions of Youth."
4. "Criticisms of Youth by Maturity."
5. "Criticisms of Maturity by Youth."
6. "Co-operation vs. Criticism."

Additional thoughts on the topic:

1. "Education is possible because there is an overlapping of the adult and the rising generation. If the older generation disappeared from the picture, all education as we know it would be impossible, and each generation would have to begin all over again. Thus there could be no progress."—John Dewey.

2. Poem: "The Two Prayers."

Last night my little boy confessed to me
Some childish wrong;
And, kneeling at my knee,
He prayed with tears:
"Dear God, make me a man
Like Daddy—wise and strong;
I know you can."
Then while he slept
I knelt beside his bed,
Confessed my sins,
And prayed with low-bowed head,
"O God, make me a child
Like my child here—
Pure, guileless,
Trusting Thee with faith sincere."

—Andres Gillies.

Closing hymn: "I Would Be True."

Sunday School Lesson

THE PARABLE OF THE POUNDS.

LESSON VI—MAY 10, 1931.

GOLDEN TEXT: "It is required in stewards that a man be found faithful."—1 Cor. 4:2.

The Jews could not get away from the idea that the Messiah was going to set up an earthly kingdom, and as a constantly larger group came to believe in Jesus as the Messiah, it became necessary for Him repeatedly to emphasize the spiritual character of His Messiahship, and also to correct the impression that this kingdom was to come immediately. This parable was spoken, therefore, "because he was nigh to Jerusalem, and because they supposed that the kingdom of God was immediately to appear."—Luke 11:11.

The parable had a historical background, based on the acts of Archelaus, son of Herod the Great, to whom Herod left his kingdom; but Archelaus first went prudently to Rome, that the Emperor Augustus might confirm his inheritance. On account of a cruel massacre made by Archelaus, a deputation of Jews went to Rome, where they were joined by eight thousand Jews there, all uniting in begging Augustus not to set Archelaus over them. Archelaus was given the kingdom, however, and when he returned to Judea he took vengeance on his enemies.

The parable, of course, emphasizes in a very plain and practical way the principles of stewardship as it is applied to all of life. The talent belonged to the nobleman; it was simply entrusted to the servant, and he was to be held responsible for it. In like manner, the earth is the Lord's, and the fullness thereof: the world and they that dwell therein, the cattle upon a thousand hills are God's, the silver and the gold belongs to Him. We are not our own, we are bought with a price. In other words, man possesses; he does not really own what he has or what he is.

The parable deals also with the average man. Unlike the parable of the talents as recorded in Matthew, in this parable every man is given one talent. But even in the average man there is a vast difference as this parable shows.

In due season, the nobleman returned and demanded an accounting of the funds he had entrusted to his servants. In due season, sooner or later, God will demand a reckoning of us for all that He has entrusted into our care, our material things, our gifts and capacities. Every one of us must give an account of himself to God. One of the most impressive truths in all of life is this principle of personal responsibility.

The first servant was evidently a man of ability, for he had traded in such a way that the original pound had multiplied itself ten times. And because the man had been faithful in that which had been least, the nobleman made him ruler over larger and more important interests. The reward for work well done was the capacity to do more and better work, and enlarged opportunity. Alas! that one should always think of rewards in terms of dollars and cents. Enlarged capacity, enlarged opportunity, enlarged achievement—these are some of the rewards of work well done, of faithfulness in what we have had committed unto our care.

The second servant either was not as able as the first servant or he was not as energetic for his pound, gained only five pounds. But he was rewarded by being set in authority over five cities—the reward is in keeping with the ability. One usually gets what he earns and is paid for. He who puts but little into life, or into his work, can expect but little out of it.

RELIGIOUS BOOKS

Reviewed by

W. A. HARPER, BOOK EDITOR.

NURTURING YOUNG CHURCHMEN. By Clinton H. Brewer. Morehouse Publishing Co.; $1.50; pp. 153.

This book gives a succinct history of Christian nurture in the Episcopal Church, and gives it in very readable form. A lot more of such histories for the several denominations need to be written, and then the whole will need codification in a history of religious education in America. Dr. Brewer has done his work well.

EDUCATION FOR WORLD-MINDEDNESS. By Albert John Murphy. Abingdon Press; $2.50; pp. 366.

If you believe ideals can be taught in the abstract with effectiveness, here is the book you will want. The influence of Dewey and Charters is felt on every page of this pedagogical approach to the missionary enterprise. After all, the situation-approach may be wrong. Read this book and judge for yourself.

GIRDLED WITH GLADNESS. By Bruce S. Wright. Cokesbury; $1.00; pp. 152.

Thirty girdles of gladness are provided within the covers of this devotional book. Dr. Wright is an adept in this field. This book will add to his reputation and prestige and to the reader's gladness.

The third servant brought back the original pound, which he had carefully kept in a napkin. He had not lost it—he had at least kept the pound—but he had not done anything with it, and that was in itself wrong. And the point of the story is that he knew better. "Thou knewest, therefore, thou oughtest"—there is a very vital relationship between these words. To him that knowest to do good and doest it not, to him it is sin. Goodness is not simply not doing things; there is positive goodness. It is not enough simply to give back to God, as they were, our talents and our capacities. We are to develop them and use them in His service.

"Take away from him the pound, and give it unto him that hath ten pounds." It seems terribly unjust. But it is the inexorable law of life. He that does not develop what he has, will eventually lose what he has. Those who do not make profitable use of God's gifts will in time lose them.

Let this parable teach us the important lesson that we are not to be held responsible for what we do not have. But we are to be held responsible for what we do have. And whether we have much or little, whether we have ten pounds or only one pound, let us be found faithful in that which we have. He that is faithful even in that which is least shall have joy both here and hereafter.

A correspondent, deeply interested in stewardship, writes: "It is said that stewardship lies at the very foundation of the Christian life." This is fine, but would it not be better to say the Christian's life, since one cannot be God's steward until one has become God's child? In my judgment, the Christian life is devoted to many branches of service which antedate and prepare for the highest state in Christian service—stewardship.

FAMILY ALTAR

CONDUCTED BY H. E. ROUNTREE
One of our Chaplains in the U. S. Navy.

*"If thou wilt make the Almighty thy treasure
. . . then shalt thou delight thyself in the Almighty . . . and thou shalt make thy prayer unto Him and He will hear thee."*—Job 22: 25-27.

MOTHERS' WEEK.

"A mother's love—how sweet the name!
What is a mother's love?
A noble, pure and tender flame,
Enkindled from above
To bless a heart of earthly mold,
The warmest love that cannot grow cold—
This is mother's love."
—James Montgomery.

MONDAY.

Mothers' Day! What a chord it strikes in our hearts! Fathers may be great. They can be everything, except they cannot be mother. From her we get our first glimpses of heaven. In her voice and smile, and from her heart of overflowing love we find the voice of God. Her arms have been our defense, her knees our altar, her training determined our future. Earth would be a lonely place without her.

Next Sunday we will be planning for and honoring mothers and babies as never before. Let every one rise up and call the motherhood of our country blessed. Let every one consider, then, that the highest honor to mother is living true to the inner light in passing on the true ideals our mothers have given us. There is no limit to our field of living thus.

Prepare, dear friend, to do some deed of love or some token of remembrance for our own or somebody's mother.

Prayer.—Dear Father, we pray for the motherhood of the country to be a richer and greater blessing than ever before. We pray for ourselves to be true to the inner light and noblest ideals. Amen.

TUESDAY.

"MOTHERS IN ISRAEL."

Lesson: Judges 5:7.

Mother's ministry in life is one of love, tenderness, compassion, sympathy and courage. It is that love that makes the name so sweet. Her spirit is the soul of the family, the tenderness of education, the refinement of society, and the saint of the Church.

Mother knows how to whisper in sorrow, how to touch weakness without burdening it, and how to refresh the weary. In the home, she is the watchman of the living fountains to make the streams sweet, placid and useful, bringing their children to well-rounded manhood and womanhood. Without a doubt, all God-fearing mothers will, sooner or later, know that their children will thus bless them.

Prayer.—Dear Lord God, guard Thou our faith unto salvation. We pray that all the mothers in this age may have faith to bestow upon their children and enshroud the world with an atmosphere of prayer and trust in God. Amen.

WEDNESDAY.

TWO KINDS OF MOTHERS.

Lesson: 1 Sam. 1 & 2.

"Hannah Prayer."—1 Sam. 2:21.

Hannah illuminates the sacred story of life. Her son was elevated to eminence. She was a good mother, whose constant ambition was to make her son a noble and beneficent man. He came to eminence and blessed her and the world. (Read 2 Kings 8, 11:1-20.)

Another woman was Othaliah. It is said of her that she destroyed the seed royal, that she was a wicked woman, and they slew her with a sword. Othaliah's life darkens the Scriptures. Her sons sank to contempt, and her posterity brought shame to the world.

A recent writer has brought a severe indictment upon a part of the motherhood of our country—that they are responsible for a great part of the lawlessness of our country. This reflects the failure of motherhood in making their hearts and knees an altar for their children, and thus children have come to maturity with distorted conceptions of life.

Prayer.—Dear Lord God, we pray to Thee to give to the world more mothers, God-fearing, loving, sacrificing, kind and wise. Amen.

THURSDAY.

THE SUPREME EXAMPLE.

"Then were there brought to Him little children."—Matt. 19:13.

The mothers of Galilee made a shrewd choice for their model. They brought their children not to the apostles, but to Jesus. Will any of our mothers be less shrewd? Mothers of America, beware of the torch to which you bring your children. Do not say, "They are too small and cannot understand." Do not say, "I will humor them, and when they are old enough they may act to suit themselves." Small lives need the greatest instruction and training. Seek for them none less than the best, and that is Jesus. They will learn all things from Him. They will not learn from any other source.

Caesar does not impart courage. Socrates does not show them calmness. David does not inspire chivalry. Moses does not impress meekness. Elijah will not imbue them with earnestness. Daniel does not touch them with manliness. Job does not nerve them with patience. Paul does not fire them with such love. They will learn quicker and climb faster in all these things by the way of Jesus. Bring them to His mountain and point Him out.

Prayer.—Dear Father of all noble achievement, we mothers pray for the heavenly gift to point out Jesus to our own and to show them the Father's force. Amen.

FRIDAY.

UNTIL SHE DIED.

Until she died we never knew
The beauty of our faith in God.
We'd seen the summer roses nod
And wither as the tempests blew,
Through many a spring we'd lived to see
The buds returning to the tree.

We had not felt the touch of woe,
What cares had come, had lightly flown,
Our burdens we had borne alone—
The need of God we did not know.
It seemed sufficient through the days
To think and act in worldly ways.

And then she closed her eyes in sleep.
She left us for a little while,
No more our lives would know her smile,
And oh, the hurt of it went deep!
It seemed to us that we must fall
Before the anguish of it all.

Our faith, which had not known the test,
Then blossomed with its comfort sweet,
Promised that some day we should meet
And whispered to us: "He knows best,"
And when our bitter tears were dried,
We found our faith was glorified.

—Edgar A. Guest.

Prayer.—Dear Lord, increase our knowledge of faith and beauty in Thee. Bring to us more and more the dawning that we need Thee every hour. Amen.

SATURDAY.

THOUGHTS FOR MOTHERS' DAY.

As she sits in her easy chair,
Holding in one hand a letter,
In her lap lay sweet flowers, so rare.

As she picks out a white carnation,
Her face lights up with joy,
For around it, so tenderly folded,
Reads this message from her boy:

"Oh! the breath of this flower, dear Mother,
With you I would love to share;
But, Mother, will you remember
My name in your evening prayer?"

"Dear Mother, may God protect you,
In my absence I will pray,
Health and pleasure ever grant you,
And prolong this happy day."
Grace Forest.

SUNDAY.

THE MOTHERS OF THE EARTH.

The woman who has borne a child,
We pause to honor her today;
The woman who has led a child
With patience down life's broad highway;
The woman who has God's own heart,
His tenderness and gentle grace,
Who comes to Him for needed strength,
Who meets Him daily face to face.

The woman who, a thousand times,
Would bear her agony of pain
To save her child from needless hurt,
To keep him clean and free from stain,
To know that he would walk at last
A man across the world's bright sod,
An honor to his land, his flag,
A glory to his home, his God.

The woman who has borne a child—
No one may choose a better part;
The woman who is kind and wise,
Who moves with quiet mind and heart,
Whose love surrounds a little child
To meet his daily, constant need,
Who spends her life that he may live—
We honor her today indeed.
—Grace Noll Crowell.

Prayer.—God of our Fathers and mothers, be with us today. Increase our perceptions of mother-values. In our bringing up, she was the most important person to us. All that we are we owe to our mother. May her love be a type to us of Thy eternal love and bliss. Amen.

A MEN'S MEETING.

We asked the men of our society to take full charge of an evening meeting; not a woman's voice was to be heard. The husband of the president was in the chair, and the husband of every other officer took her duties. They chose "Missions and Peace" for their subject. A professor led the devotionals; a lawyer, popular as a speaker, gave the main address; a man was at the piano; a bass sang a solo. A large offering was demanded and new members were insisted upon. The men entered into the spirit of the thing, and many considered the meeting one of the finest ever offered.—Missionary Review.

THE CHRISTIAN SUN'S PULPIT

REV. JOSEPH W. FIX, Preacher.

AFTER DEATH—WHAT AND WHERE?

By REV. B. F. VAUGHAN, D. D.

This has been the puzzling question of man through the ages. Where are those loved ones who once sat by our side or walked with us by the way? Is that unseen realm in some far-away clime; some distant heavenly body where the light and life of its inhabitants are radiant with "the light that never was on sea or land"? Nay, methinks the vision of the Revelator was more nearly correct, when he described the celestial city as having "no need of the light of the sun, neither of the moon, to shine in it, for the glory of God did lighten it, and the Lamb was the light thereof."

The celebrated Christian philosopher and astronomer, Dr. Thomas Dick, advanced the theory many years ago that the center of the universe, around which suns, worlds, and systems of worlds revolve, was the "abode of the blessed," the home of God's people.

The Nazarene Teacher, in His last discourse with His disciples, said, "In my Father's house are many mansions," or "dwelling-places," or "abodes." The more we try to locate the heavenly home, and think about it as being bounded and defined as a place, the greater does our bewilderment become. Especially is this true when we think in terms of modern science as relates to this wonderful universe in which we live. Our own world, wonderful as it is, with vast continents and great rolling, waving seas, is only a mere speck as compared with the immense heavenly bodies which are found throughout all space.

And when we think of God as Spirit, filling all the great cosmos with His presence, and dwelling in every part of it as the light and life and energizing power of each atom and form of life, as well as the Spirit that uplifts, evolves, purifies, glorifies, and saves, it is a continual revelation to us of the spiritual character of His kingdom. It is spirit that survives after all the agencies which injure, kill, and destroy this mortal life. It rises above and out of all this wreckage of material things and dwells serene and secure in the Father's house. He will gather His own unto Himself. They are His, and "none will ever be able to pluck them out of His hands." Unto the Master who trod earth's stony paths with His disciples, and who can be "touched with a feeling of our infirmities," unto Him is given the power to overcome all things, and He becomes the "Alpha and Omega, the beginning and the end, the first and the last." And so, "Blessed are they that do His commandments, who are given a right to the tree of life, and an entrance into the city of life."

When death shall set free the spirit that dwelt within this tenement of clay, it rises into the spirit life, time and space can no longer hold it, or place a limit upon it. The laws governing spirit growth and development are then the forces which give it power and freedom, and neither "things present nor things to come" can hinder its upward progress. It is as free as mind to travel to the uttermost star or the most distant parts of the universe, quick as thought; or minister sweetly to some needy and weaker spirit the life-giving power of love, tender sympathy, and helpfulness. It may take to itself an ether body as well, or even far better, adapted to its growth and the fulfillment of its power, as this body has been to accomplish more wonderful work and attainment in this life. Such are the possibilities of the soul's attainments in its unlimited growth throughout the ages that no limit can be placed upon its outreaches toward the infinite One.

The whole universe becomes the home of the spirit set free. It may take its flight into the darkness and cold of space, and yet without fear. With courage it mounts upward, and behold, light shines out of the darkness and all is made radiant with the light of his face as the soul is welcomed into the "house not made with hands," and it enters into "that rest which remaineth to the people of God."

If the great Life Builder can draw the "spark out of the clod," and start it on an upward course that brings it at last into the companionship of saints and sages, the tried and true, the great and good of all the ages, then may we not safely trust that One who is "able to subdue all things unto Himself," and say:

"I know not where His islands lift
Their fronded palms in air;
I only know I cannot drift
Beyond His love and care."

Centerville, Ohio.

"YOU HAVE A LOT TO LEARN, MISTER."

Two boys about ten years old, members of a Sunday School class of fifteen, were making the rounds of a Nebraska County courthouse, selling angel-food cakes. One of a group of men approached by the boys said he did not care to buy. The boys said they were raising money for missions and that he ought to help others. He replied that he was not interested in missions. Then one of the boys spoke up: "Well, Mister, all I can say is, you have a lot to learn." Two other men immediately bought, and the work, into which the boys put their hearts, went merrily on.

Back of the boy's remark was a definite interest. Back of the interest is the story of the class, which has regular training in missions. Every class in this Sunday School has a responsibility toward the missionary quota accepted by the school, ranging from $2.00 for beginners to $20.00 for older classes. Back of this financing is, of course, a plan of education in world-wide Christianity. Missionary stories are told once a month in every class, and gifts are brought to be forwarded to Ellis Island, New Mexico, etc. No teacher is allowed to teach who does not believe in missions. This Sunday School won the silver loving cup six years out of seven for most gain and best methods in the second division of Congregational State schools. Interest in missions seems to be no handicap. All seem happy in this program of teaching, doing and giving. From the Church comes the word: "Woe unto the soul who dares rise up and suggest cutting off or cutting down missions!"—H. D. D., in Congregationalist.

DISTRIBUTING BIBLES.

Approximately 876,983 volumes of the Bible were distributed during the past year by the New York Bible Society, according to the annual report of this organization. The New York Bible Society this year is celebrating its 122nd year of existence. This number includes complete Bibles, copies of the Testaments, and separately printed books of the Bible, which were given away free of charge by agents of the New York Bible Society to immigrants, seamen, to the blind and ill, and to the many other "strangers within the gates" of New York City.

The Bibles distributed by the New York Bible Society are printed in seventy-one languages, including Albanian, Cherokee, Gaelic, Welsh, Esperanto, Hawaiian, Slovenian, Korean, Scotch Broad, Syriac, Latin, Hindustani. Some of the more unusual tongues in which the society's Bibles are printed include Zulu and Bulu (African), Icelandic, Navaho, Ruk, Judaeo Spanish, Ilocano, Dakota and Maltese.

Of the 876,983 Bibles given away last year, 26,992 went to immigrants, who were met at either Ellis Island or at the various piers by the society agents. The number of volumes of the Bible given to sailors totaled 154,741, and those distributed in New York through the various civic departments totaled 695,983.

During the past year the Bible Society placed as a gift 13,707 Bibles in transient hotel rooms in the city. Churches and missions, scattered in all parts of Greater New York, serve as another large medium for Bible distribution, with pastors, missionaries and Church workers serving as agents ex-officio.

It has been estimated that during its 121 years of existence, the New York Bible Society has distributed 1,089,354 Bibles in New York City, and a total of 16,461,387 individual volumes. The New York Bible Society was organized in 1809 and was incorporated in 1866. It is supported almost entirely by contributions.

Christian Orphanage

Dear Friends:

The Orphanage superintendent has had a real treat during this week. The Trystate Orphanage Association, including North Carolina, South Carolina and Georgia, has sponsored an institute for the benefit of orphanage workers. The territory is divided into groups, and the institute is held at a convenient place for the orphanages in each group. The institute we are attending is held in Greensboro. It convenes at 10:30 o'clock in the morning. We can work till 10 o'clock and drive to Greensboro in thirty minutes and take in the session and get home in the afternoon in time to get our work off by working at night.

The teachers are furnished by the Child Welfare League of America, and it is a real treat to get the splendid ideas they give, which will be helpful to us in our work. They are all specialists in their line, and the information they give is the best to be had. It gives one a new inspiration to have an opportunity to sit at the feet of such teachers and take in the wonderful instruction they give in all lines of orphanage work.

RESPONSIBILITY OF CHRISTIAN WOMEN.

It has been aptly said that law observance and law enforcement devolves wholly, or nearly so, on Christian women. Is there any other class of women on whom we may depend to battle for righteousness and truth? Strange that any woman should be indifferent to the cause of prohibition! More incomprehensible still that a woman should be opposed to prohibition! Responsibility is of double meaning—duty to be performed and penalty for neglect. There are so many reasons that should compel and impel women to action. The kingdom of God never had a greater enemy, nor is there any agency that has done as much to block the progress of the kingdom as the liquor traffic, and today it is doing more than any other force to neutralize the missionary work of the Christian Church in lands beyond the sea.

Therefore, since the liquor traffic is the greatest enemy of Christ, Christian women should be its most relentless enemies. Are they? Yes, women of Christ are—those who are really followers of the Master. They feel their personal responsibility for organized temperance work. Some one has said the five elements of success in any worthwhile undertaking are "vision, prayer, organization, work, co-operation." This is most certainly true. Common sense teaches it, experience confirms it, and the Bible commends it. Organized temperance came into being because some women caught the vision of a liquorless world from some mountain-top of faith, and through all the subsequent years they have never been "disobedient to the heavenly vision." Realizing their helplessness and that the foe was so mighty as to be, from a human standpoint, unconquerable, they went to their knees. Yes, "more things are wrought by prayer than this world dreams of." If it be true that "Satan trembles when he sees the weakest saint upon her knees," now is the time for united prayer. Vision and prayer come first and are indispensable, but they are not sufficient.

God never does for us what we can do for ourselves. There must be work. True prayer will produce honest work. Neither can be substituted for the other, but to accomplish great results there must be organization and co-operation. Ever since human history has been recorded, alcohol has always and everywhere degraded womanhood, wrecked childhood, turned husbands and parents into beasts, and converted happy homes into dens of misery. Christian women should take up the fight against the foe for the sake of the next generation. Woman has always had power, but she has more today than ever. Power brings responsibility to use it for God.

THE CHRISTIAN'S HOPE OF IMMORTALITY.

Before me lies a very large old volume containing a compilation from "historians, philosophers, sages, scientists, poets, preachers, orators and statesmen of all ages on every phase of the future life." After reading these very interesting selections, with their arguments for the credibility of belief in a future existence, this question suggests itself: "What are the arguments of the Bible for belief in the immortality of the soul?" Perhaps the best answer is that there are none; the Bible does not "argue." That is not the way of the Book in such matters—it has a better way. Men argue for or against belief in the existence of a Supreme Being, but the Bible nowhere undertakes to prove the existence of God. That is taken for granted in the first sentence of the Book—"In the beginning, God." Men argue about the origin of evil, the problem of prayer, the mystery of providence. But see how Jesus dealt with such matters. He does not give us any fine-spun definitions of sin or its origin. He simply points it out. "See that prodigal; sin brought him to that. See that demoniac; that is the work of sin."

And in this wise and practical way, the Master dealt with all the problems of life. He entered into no argument about the soul's being immaterial, and therefore immortal. Briefly, the Master taught that He is the Source of all life; and to be in fellowship with Him, by trustful obedience and consecrated service, is to possess a life that is deathless. "In Him was life; and the life was the light of men" (John 1:4). "Because I live, ye shall live also" (John 14:19). "If a man keep my word, he shall never taste of death" (John 8:52). "He that believeth on the Son hath eternal life" (John 3:36). To believe on Him is to have the true life, the life of God within the soul, bringing a "richness and fullness of being" which death cannot disturb. This is the Christian's hope of life beyond the grave.

Phillips Brooks was not given to speaking of his religious experience, but one day he "lifted the veil of the most secret orisons of his soul" in conversation with a young preacher and spoke of the peace and joy which an indwelling Christ brought to his life. "I cannot tell you how personal this grows to me," he said. "He is here. He knows me and I know Him. It is no figure of speech. It is the realest thing in the world. And every day makes it realer. And one wonders with delight what it will grow to as the years go on." To have that experience is to have eternal life in this world and all worlds.

"Christ in you, the hope of glory," was Paul's word to the Colossians. "I am the resurrection and the life. He that believeth in me, though he were dead, yet shall he live: and whosoever liveth and believeth in me shall never die" were the Master's words to the weeping sisters of Bethany. Jesus said: "He that eateth my flesh and drinketh my blood hath eternal life; and I will raise him up at the last day" (John 6:54). This highly figurative language means that if we live in fellowship with Him here, we shall live forever with Him in glory. This is the Christian's hope of immortality.

SPECIAL NOTICE.

The Wyche Elder Memorial Association is planning to erect a monument to the memory of this great pioneer preacher of the Christian Church in the far South. This monument will be unveiled at the next annual meeting of the association, which will occur at New Hope Christian Church, three miles north of Milltown, in Chambers County, Ala., on Wednesday after the fourth Sunday in July, 1931. This is to notify all people who desire to have a part in placing this monument at his grave to send their contribution to Mrs. H. D. Pearson, Wadley, Ala. It is desired that every lover of the Christian Church, as well as his relatives, especially in Georgia and Alabama, shall have a part in this great work. Remember that the unveiling will take place as above mentioned.

PRAYER.

To my thinking, the person who prays for just the things he needs for his own use gets little of what he prays for, and certainly misses much of the joy in the exultation of Christian service. Too, there are emergency prayers, which impress me as not being very effectual, for the most instinctive feature about them is fear of some approaching danger or misfortune. Certainly, asking God for what we need and to protect us from harm can come from pure motives. Jesus taught us to pray for our daily bread and that we might be delivered from evil. This is a Christian privilege and a Christian duty, but, to me, real prayer and the prayer which enlarges our life is a Holy Communion with God, and arises instinctively out of a Christ-like disposition. It is both joyous and experimental.

ELON COLLEGE

of the

CONGREGATIONAL CHRISTIAN CHURCHES OF THE SOUTHEAST

ELON was founded to train Christian leaders for the New South.

ELON has done its task well—one graduate in seven being in the Christian ministry. The other six express Christian leadership in the various professions and vocations. Experience teaches that spiritual leadership must be indigenous.

The South is now a New South ready for an inclusive Church, the type of Church for which Elon has stood for forty years and for which she is prepared to produce capable leadership.

With no Church in the community, save the College Auditorium, ELON has practiced Christian Union for faculty, students, and community for four decades.

Its contribution to Christian Education is nationally known and approved.

Its Christian Education Building, providing laboratory facilities for religious leadership training, is unique and is the first college building of its type in the world.

ELON confines itself to undergraduate liberal arts work with that religious emphasis which befits the Christian College.

In ELON the Congregational-Christian Church has an asset of marvelous hopefulness.

The South needs her Yale, her Oberlin, her Carleton, her Pomona for the intellectual leadership of the United Church. Many regard ELON as strategically located and spiritually endowed to become such a center of illumination and leadership training.

OBITUARIES.

POOLE.

George Edward Poole was born May 4, 1862, and quietly fell asleep January 23, 1931. He is survived by his wife, one daughter and stepdaughter. He was chairman of the board of deacons at the North Highland Christian Church, and was always faithful to his Church. He was a great believer in prayer and was punctual at midweek prayer services when his health would permit. He had a stroke of apoplexy that rendered him speechless for several months before the end came.

He was satisfied for the will of God to be accomplished in him. In his last hours he looked toward the skies, pointing with his hand, as if to say, "I know I have another building of God, an house not made with hands, eternal and in the heavens." The services were conducted by the writer, assisted by Rev. T. J. Dean and W. C. Carter. Interment was in River Dale Cemetery. May the Father of all grace and comfort heal the sorrowing hearts.

TRIGG.

We, the members of the Woman's Missionary Society of Elon College Community Church, offer the following resolutions of respect as a tribute to the memory of our co-worker and sister-member, Mrs. Mary S. Trigg, who departed this life February 27, 1931, at the Christian Orphanage, Elon College, N. C.

1. That we bow in humble submission to Him, who doeth all things well.
2. That we will always cherish the memory of her personality, her willingness to serve, and the love she had for the missionary work. While she had only been with us for a period of six months, she had endeared herself to the people of the community, and her work and conduct had shown a love and loyalty to that which is noblest and best in the human heart.

"LITTLE CHURCH AROUND THE CORNER."

The well-known Little Church Around the Corner, of which the Rev. Randolph Ray is rector, is seeking to raise the sum of $2,000,000 in order that it may strengthen and extend its work. This Church has a host of friends scattered all over the world, and the raising of this needed fund ought not to prove difficult.

PROGRESS IN TOLERATION.—

On Good Friday night, Unitarians and Congregationalists met for a union passion service at the Congregational Church at Memphis, Tenn. The preacher was Dr. William J. Campbell, president of Atlanta Theological Seminary, now located at Vanderbilt. Such gatherings, up till recently, were almost unknown in the South and marked a rapid growth in tolerance. The spirit of toleration, discussion, and deliberation on religious questions by union meetings between denominations tends to better understanding between the denominations and the development of comradeship among God's people.

GOOD-WILL CONGRESS.—

Dr. Fred B. Smith, Mr. Harry N. Holmes, and Rev. Charles Stelzle were the speakers at a conference of ministers and officers of social agencies held recently at the Palmer House, under the auspices of the World Alliance for the International Friendship Through the Churches. The object of the conference was the consideration of plans and program for the Good-Will Congress, to be held in Chicago in next November. The spirit of Christianity is to promote good will, and every movement in this direction is to further the kingdom of God on earth and should be encouraged.

REST DAY ESSENTIAL.—

The Lord's Day Observance Society has gathered the opinions of many doctors upon the value of a weekly rest day. "As medical men, we are of the opinion that one day's rest in seven from work is essential to man's health and physical well-being." This is the declaration signed by seven thousand, six hundred and seventy-eight English doctors. It is in harmony with the teachings of the Old Testament and the teachings of the Christian religion as well as scientific conclusions. The modern world seems to be in a mad rush on Sunday in the pursuit of pleasure, and many of our Churches are almost depleted in attendance. Whither are we bound. "Man was not made for the Sabbath, but the Sabbath was made for man," and man needs it for rest.

EASTER AND CHURCH GAINS.—

In the city of St. Louis, practically every city congregation received new members on Easter. With few exceptions, every Church was crowded and not a few had overflowing congregations. The number of additions for the Church period ending Easter Sunday is estimated at 5,000. That would seem evidence of spiritual vitality and evangelistic passion. Generally speaking, following periods of unemployment and distress, the Churches seem to have drawn multitudes for succor. Many had predicted a revival of Church-going and in number of additions to the Church. Such has been the case, as Church statistics in times past show. Perhaps we are too near the suffering to know how deeply, if at all, hearts are being stirred, but we shall see the results will likely follow this prediction.

UNFAVORAL ATTITUDE.—

Some ministers have said that many persons approached, being conscientious regarding Church support, have felt that their circumstances would not permit them giving as they thought they should for Church support, and for that reason felt they should not now place their membership in the Church. Still another reason has been the lack of personal ministration directly by the Churches in humanitarian relief. Even the Churches in industrial and slum communities, with few exceptions, give little direct relief. Many rural pastors are merely preaching to the Churches, often eight or ten in the country, and doing little pastoral visiting and personal service and allowing the Churches to die under their ministry. A new method of service must be rendered by the city and rural Churches or many will refuse to give them support, even though they claim to be Christians.

REPEAL OF "MONKEY LAW."—

There is now a bill pending before the Legislature of Tennessee to repeal the notorious "monkey law" which forbids the teaching of evolution in State-supported schools in Tennessee. The matter was brought up for discussion at the April meeting of the Protestant Pastors' Association of Memphis. A paper, read by Rev. R. G. Lee, leader of Baptist fundamentalists in Memphis, described all evolutionists as atheists and stated that one had to choose between heathen evolution and God's word, the Bible. Rev. O. A. Marrs, of the Methodist Church, and Dean Noe, of the Episcopal Cathedral, scored Dr. Lee's paper as a caricature of scientific teachings and denied that atheism and evolution are identical. The association failed to go on record as against the repeal of the law.

CHURCH GAINS.—

The report of the membership of the Churches during 1930 is published in the May issue of the Christian Herald. The figures are presented by Dr. G. L. Kiefer, new Church statistician, who succeeded the late Dr. H. K. Carrol. According to his report, Churches in the United States made a net gain in 1930 of only 88,350. While this is not the smallest gain on record, it must stand comparison with the gain in 1929 of 242,748, and in 1928 of more than a million. Dr. Kieffer raises the question, "whether the Churches are actually losing ground and losing vigor of growth." The Methodists, who, for the first time in a hundred years, showed a decline in membership in 1929, suffered a decline of a further net loss of 43,211 in 1930. The Presbyterians and the Disciples sustained a loss. The former of 22,763, and the latter of 18,567. The whole Church should stress evangelistic work this year and regain the loss.

CHURCH FIGURES.—

An encouraging fact, according to Dr. Kieffer, is that the ratio of Church members to total population of the country has shown a steady gain for a century. In 1830 there were 10 Church members for each 75 of population; in 1930 there were 10 Church members for every 25 of total population. The pre-millennium pessimists declare that the world is growing worse, but their declaration cannot be sustained by the record: The Baptists (15 bodies), in 1930, had 9,216,562 communicants, a gain of 74,706 over the 1929 figures; Congregational-Christian, 1,048,281, a gain of 753; Disciples of Christ (2 bodies) 1,988,392, a loss of 18,567; Lutherns (17 bodies) 2,806,797, a gain of 56,180; Methodists (16 bodies), 9,119,069, a loss of 43,211; Presbyterians (9 bodies), 2,677,369, a loss of 22,763; Protestant Episcopal, 1,234,227, a gain of 16,532; Western Catholics (3 bodies), 17,316,673, a gain of 17,526. Fifty-five denominations are included in the 1930 report.

A FORTY-MILLION-DOLLAR SURVEY.—

A number of leading laymen in Protestant Churches in the United States are planning a survey of the mission fields of the world to discover wastes. The executive committee appointed, when the announcement was made, was headed by Albert L. Scott, a leading Baptist layman. This survey will cost about forty millions annually. The following have been named on the commission: Dr. W. E. Hoking, professor of philosophy at Harvard; Mr. and Mrs. Harper Sibley, of Rochester, N. Y.; Miss Mary E. Woolley, president of Mt. Holyoke College; Dr. H. S. Houghton, dean of the University of Iowa College of Medicine; Dr. Charles P. Emerson, dean of the University of Indiana School of Medicine; Dr. Arlo A. Brown, president of Drew University; Dr. W. P. Merrill, of the Brick Presbyterian Church, New York City; Dr. Albert R. Mann, dean of Cornell University Agricultural College, and Dr. Rufus M. Jones, professor of philosophy at Haverford College. The commission will leave next October for a nine months' study of missions in India, China, Japan and Burma.

NOTES-PERSONALS

"Study to show thyself approved unto God, a workman that needeth not to be ashamed" (Tim. 2:15.)

The S. S. & C. E. Convention of the Eastern Virginia Conference, according to the announcement of Rev. J. E. McCauley, is to meet in annual session at Oakland Christian Church, July 21-22.

The editor addressed our Ramseur Sunday School at 10 A. M., Sunday, April 26th. This is a wide-awake Sunday School, with unlimited possibilities in its host of young people. The editor never faces a Sunday School without thinking of the prospects and possibilities of young life. Somebody in our Ramseur school is building mightily for the future.

The Woman's Missionary Rally at Liberty, Halifax County, Va., Tuesday, April 28th, was the most largely attended of any in the North Carolina and Virginia Conference. Mrs. Alfred Hayes, superintendent, had worked faithfully to make the day and program a success, and her labors were not in vain. Rev. C. E. Newman, pastor; Revs. G. C. and H. E. Crutchfield, and M. T. Sorrell were of the ministers attending and taking part.

It was a genuine joy to preach last Sunday for a great audience in Pleasant Ridge Church, Randolph County, N. C. A large and listening congregation had gathered for an all-day service and to have the opportunity at the 11 o'clock hour of trying to break the bread of life to such a multitude was a privilege. Rev. J. M. Allred is the beloved pastor, with whom it is always a pleasure to associate. His people love him, and no wonder, for he is a man of God.

The Woman's Missionary Rallies in the Alabama Conference, as announced by Mrs. V. E. Kitchens, president, Roanoke, Ala., are as follows: Christiana Church, Sunday, May 10th, Mrs. G. L. Stephens, Wadley, Ala., superintendent; Wadley Church, Monday, May 11th, Mrs. E. C. Devaughn, Lineville, Ala., superintendent; Roanoke Church, Tuesday, May 12th, Mrs. G. H. Veazey, Roanoke, Ala., superintendent. The women are planning a good program for each of the three rallies, and they are hoping for largely attended meetings.

In the home and foreign missions of the Congregational and Christian Churches are employed over 9,000 missionaries. The work abroad is conducted by the American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions, organized 1810, and the first foreign mission society on this continent. The organization of the home mission work began with the Connecticut Missionary Society, in 1798, soon followed by societies in other States. With the American Education Society, 1816, and the American Home Missionary Society, 1826, home missionary work was placed on a national basis.

Rev. J. H. Lee, pastor of Caroleigh Christian Church, Raleigh, writes: "We have just begun the work, and have it going very nicely at Six Forks, both Sunday School and preaching. I feel encouraged at the prospect, since the people needed a Sunday School, and it is a privilege to preach to them at their regular services. I am getting funds together to put a roof on the building, which is badly needed. It will protect the building very much. The work at Caroleigh, though young and small, goes well, and the prospect is good for growth, as we have here a loyal and faithful few whose heart and soul are in the work. We are trying to hold up the banner of our Lord and in His name to go forward."

The announcement by Mr. C. M. Cannon in last week's SUN carried a statement of growth and advancement of Elon College since Dr. Harper became president, and laid before our readers the regrettable information that Dr. Harper had resigned. In this issue, President Harper, in his "Elon Letter," speaks his mind and reveals his heart in his relation to the institution for which he has wrought so brilliantly and labored so zealously. The college and his great work speak far more eloquently of his achievements than any words that may be spoken or written here. For, as Dr. Harper so well says in his "Official Announcement," "it is the institution that counts; institutions go on, but individuals pass out."

In his Church bulletin for Sunday, April 26th, Dr. L. E. Smith, of Christian Temple, carries this announcement to his people: "What do you mean by self-denial? If a person is a Christian, how much of his earnings is he justified in spending for the so-called luxuries of life and leave his debt to God unpaid? Is a member of the Church justified in his own heart in supporting soda fountains, moving pictures, lodges, golf, etc., and not supporting his Church? Beginning today, you are asked to make an honest effort to keep your Church in your mind and on your heart, to leave out of your habits and programs all unnecessary things that you possibly can, take the price of these things that you deny yourself of, put it in your self-denial envelope and bring it with you for the Church service Sunday, May the 10th, and put it in as your self-denial offering."

Rev. J. E. McCauley, pastor of First Christian Church, Berkley, Norfolk, writing under recent date, gives this glad news: "We closed our revival meeting April 12th. The meeting was conducted by the pastor of the Church. Bros. J. F. Morgan, O. D. Poythress, and L. E. Vining led the song service one night each. The rest of the time the song service was in charge of the Men's United Bible Class, young people's department, and the choir. The meeting was a real inspiration to the pastor and many of the members. The members co-operated beautifully with the pastor in this endeavor. There was a fine spirit prevailing, and is continuing since the meeting closed. We had a splendid reconsecration service at which time most of the members repudged their loyalty to Christ and the Church. So far, there have been thirteen additions to the Church. There are several others that we are expecting soon. It is a sweet experience of a pastor to see the people of his Church working together for a real spiritual uplift and the winning of lost souls."

We lament the death of our dear friend and brother in the Church, J. U. Gunter, Sanford, N. C. A deacon and leader in his Church, he served his day and generation well and left behind a legacy rich in all Christian graces and developments. The following from the Sanford correspondent to the Greensboro Daily News tells of the esteem in which Bro. Gunter was held: "With one of the largest crowds ever seen at a funeral in Sanford, final rites were said at the Gunter home, on Gulf Street, for the late Junius U. Gunter, who passed away Monday after an illness of ten days. In the number, which filled the house and lawn, were people from all walks of life. Many of them were friends from other places who had been associated with Mr. Gunter in Church, business and civic affairs. Rev. T. Fred Wright, pastor of Sanford Christian Church, and Rev. Frank C. Hawkins, pastor of the First Baptist Church, officiated at the services. A quartet composed of Mrs. J. C. Buchanan, Mrs. H. F. Makepeace, F. Y. Hanner and W. L. Jewell, sang the hymns, 'How Firm a Foundation' and 'Abide With Me.' Interment followed in Buffalo cemetery. Flowers in such beauty and profusion as seldom seen here were impressive evidence of the esteem in which Mr. Gunter was held. During the hour of the funeral, the business houses of the city were closed as a mark of respect."

CHURCH MEETING.

All the members and friends of Union Christian Church, Union Ridge, N. C., are urged to be present at the regular quarterly meeting, which will be held at the Church at 2 o'clock P. M. on Saturday before the second Sunday in May. The business of the meeting will be the election of new deacons for the Church. Thus it is imperative that a fair representation of the Church be present to help in this election.

On the second Sunday in May (May 10th), there will be three services held at the Church, with lunch served on the grounds. The Sunday School will devote thirty minutes of its time to a Mothers' Day program. There will be two sermons, one in the morning at 11 o'clock and another in the afternoon at 2 o'clock. The pastor, Dr. P. H. Fleming, will be assisted in these services by Rev. Simon A. Bennett, professor of Christian literature and methods at Elon College. Every one is cordially invited to come and spend the day at the Church with its members and friends.

CHURCH CORRESPONDENT.

MISSIONARY MEETING.

The Woman's Missionary Society of Mt. Bethel Christian Church held its regular monthly meeting at the home of Mrs. L. P. Rippy. The program was in charge of the vice-president, Miss Ethel Freddle, who called the society to order. The secretary, Mrs. Clara Moricle, called the roll, which was responded to with Bible quotations. Scripture read by Miss Essie Mae Truitt; prayer, Mrs. L. P. Rippy; song, "The Kingdom Coming"; "A Sketch of Greece," by Miss Violet McCollum; discussion of Greece open to all; poem, "Will You Open to the Master?" by Irma Mae Moricle; "The Holy Spirit and Mission," Mrs. J. W. McCollum; song, "The Son of God Goes Forth to War"; business reports.

The hostess, assisted by Miss Essie Mae Truitt, served refreshments and a social hour was enjoyed by all. The next monthly meeting will be at the home of Mrs. J. W. McCollum.

NEW YORK AS SYMBOL.

Let's take New York as the standard symbol of the failure of prohibition. I go to New York very frequently. I stop at a good hotel, travel in the subways, walk through the most crowded streets, and, being a newspaperman, I try to keep my eyes open. I don't know whether there are 30,000 or 300,000 liquor shops in New York's backyard, but I do know there's an enormous amount less of liquor's human products on New York's front streets. I almost never see evidence of intoxication or of the liquor traffic. I don't know what has happened to the memories of the folks who talk so much about the horrible results of prohibition. Believe me, it's something if we've driven the liquor business out of sight. That's quite a lot to expect for the first ten years. —Frank E. Gannett.

CONGREGATIONAL NEWS

REV. E. C. GILLETTE, Editor; REV. F. P. ENSMINGER, and REV. M. J. SWEET, Associates.

FINDINGS OF THE ADVISORY BOARD OF THE SOUTHEAST.

Following is the findings of the Advisory Board of the Southeast, meeting at Nashville, Tenn., April 15-16, 1931:

1. The members of the Congregational Advisory Board of the Southeast, meeting in Nashville, have surveyed with deep interest the work of our Churches and educational institutions and are gratified with all the indications of progress and sound development along all lines. We are facing serious problems, as are all areas and institutions, but we face these problems with courage and confidence born of the consciousness of growing strength in leadership, clarity of purpose, and breadth of spirit.

We wish to express our deepest appreciation of the wise and devoted leadership of Dr. W. Knighton Bloom in all of our work. He has entered sympathetically and with great faith into our problems and into the challenge of our work. He has shown a fine insight in the discovery of our needs and the needs which we are here to meet, and he has shown a clear vision in seeing a goal and working toward it with wisdom and patience. We believe most profoundly in the program as it has been developed under his leadership. There are certain elements that we would mention.

First, we feel that the extension work, as it has been developed by the employment and the service of the young women extension workers, now seven in number, has been of great value to our Churches. Through them the educational standards of our Church schools have been raised, the work among our young people has been vitalized, and by their Christian example and spirit they have brought inspiration and happiness into the Christian life of many. This program has added a distinct element of inestimable value to the extension service of our Churches.

The same also can be said relative to the students working among us in the summer-time. This large program of student summer service is a result of the vision and the efforts of Dr. Bloom, who personally raises a large portion of the money needed and who inspires and guides the youth in their service.

We also commend the program which Dr. Bloom has developed for our Congregational-Christian group in connection with the Missionary Education Movement Conference at Blue Ridge. We believe that this is of large value to our fellowship. In this connection we would heartily commend this Blue Ridge Conference to all our constituency.

We also appreciate the great development of our program of conferences for young people—summer conferences at Immokalee, Elon College, Wadley, and Black Mountain—and also the various Christian life conferences. We believe that these conferences are a fine and vital factor in the developing of Christian character and leadership among the young people of our Churches. In this development we are also greatly indebted to the education society for the counsel and help of such men as Drs. Stock and Fisk.

2. We are sensible of the excellent work that is being done by our educational institutions, and we desire to express our hearty approval of their programs and their leaders.

In view of the fact of the increasing spread of general education in the South, we recommend to our denominational institutions of learning a closer relation with the foundation for education.

This organization exists to be of practical assistance to our schools and colleges, and as it has facilities for understanding educational problems in the South, we express the hope that our boards of trustees and other school officials seek advice and counsel from this body.

Every one of our educational institutions is doing good work, and we heartily commend them to our constituent Churches as suitable enterprises to support with generous giving. We urge upon our Churches a further study of the schools and a more generous financial support.

3. We wish to commend the beautiful work of Rev. Lucy T. Ayres as she has brought to our Churches and students the riches of her life in Christ and has helped multitudes to the comfort and power of a vital Christian experience.

4. We heartily approve the progress being made in the union of the Congregational and Christian Churches as outlined so effectively by Dr. W. H. Denison, Dayton, Ohio, Secretary of the General Convention of the Christian Church, and we reaffirm our faith in the plan of union as it is being carried out in the great Southeast. That we commend the Churches which have united, as at Raleigh and Salisbury, N. C., and others. We commend the consolidation of conferences and associations and the uniting of the field staffs throughout this area. Gradually we are becoming one in reality of organization as well as in spirit and purpose, and this is gratifying. We have here in this great territory a chance to demonstrate to the world our faith in Christian union. We commend THE CHRISTIAN SUN, and recommend to our pastors, Churches, Sunday Schools and young people's organizations the support of our united papers—the Congregationalist and Herald of Gospel Liberty and THE CHRISTIAN SUN. These are invaluable aids in carrying forth the kingdom's work.

RURAL CHURCH SCHOOL.

April 6-16th was a great time for the Congregational-Christian forces, as representatives rallied at Nashville, Tenn., and held meetings in buildings of Vanderbilt University and the Y. M. C. A. Graduate School of the South, and at Collegese Church. The occasion was the annual Rural Church School of Vanderbilt University, which is sponsored by the School of Religion of Vanderbilt and interdenominationally taught and supported. Prof. C. C. Haun, a Congregationalist, was the recruiter of students for the Rural Church School, which again demonstrated its value as a great influence toward Church understanding, co-operation, and union. It was cheering to see vigorous ministers of diverse faiths worshiping, studying and fraternizing together. The denominations which held daily denominational rallies were the Church of the Brethren, Congregational-Christian, Disciples, Episcopalian, Methodist Episcopal, M. E., South, Presbyterian, U. S., and Presbyterian, U. S. A. There were a few scattered Baptists and some from other groups.

Welcomers of the Congregational-Christian group were the Atlanta Theological Seminary Foundation, Dr. Wm. J. Campbell, president, students and faculty, and the pastor, Dr. Jason Noble Pierce, and people of Collegese Church, the congregation of which contains a number of faculty members of the great Nashville institutions. Fifty were registered at the Congregational-Christian assembly period from 2 to 3 o'clock each afternoon. Special speakers for these meetings were

Dr. Malcolm Dana, Dr. Jason Noble Pierce, Dr. Wm. J. Campbell, Rev. A. L. DeJarnette, Rev. Lucy T. Ayres, Dr. C. Rexford Raymond, Rev. Harry Thomas Stock, Rev. Ernest W. Riggs, and Dr. Elisha A. King. Dr. W. Knighton Bloom presided at these meetings, and from 3 to 4 had a second meeting of the staff of workers for the Southeast District, which consisted of a dozen workers. The majority of these were the young women extension workers, and it was interesting to note that among the other colleges, Elon College had an alumna in Miss Pattie Coghill; Piedmont College in Miss Dora Brackin, and Hollins College in Miss Annie Campbell.

On Sunday morning, at Collegese Church, Rev. Harry Thomas Stock, secretary of young people's and student life work for the Congregational Education Society, conducted a discussion class and spoke briefly at the 11 o'clock service of worship. Dr. Jason Noble Pierce preached the sermon. Though John R. Mott had the first of his lectures in the great Vanderbilt chapel, some forty of our group marched into Collegese Church in a body and enjoyed the worship. At 5 P. M. a discussion meeting was held at Collegese house, at which Dr. Pierce presided, and Secretary Stock again led a discussion. The ladies of the Church there served a buffet lunch.

The regional committee of the Commission on Missions met on Tuesday, Dr. C. Rexford Raymond presiding. As regional secretary for the Southeast district, Dr. Bloom has the responsibility for keying all the conference leaders up to the promotion of missionary education and giving. This meeting was held in the Y. M. C. A. Graduate School, of which Dr. W. D. Weatherford is president. It was attended by a fine lot of negro Church leaders, as well as by white representatives. Their large interest in foreign missions is the support of Rev. and Mrs. Henry C. McDowell in a strong industrial work at Galangue, Africa. Incidentally, it is of interest that their summer camp is called Camp Knighton, in honor of Dr. Bloom. Dr. Bloom reported a general advance and high rating in missionary giving in the Southeast, in spite of the depression. After the adjournment of this meeting came the annual meeting of the Congregational Advisory Board of the Southeast, which is merged on alternate years with the Southeast Convention of Congregational and Christian Churches. This was well attended also, but was not inter-racial. Dr. Marston S. Freeman was the chaplain. One of the features of this meeting was the report showing the value of the work of the young women extension workers. In Alabama, for instance, where Miss Marguerite Davison and Miss Dora Brackin have been at work, there are twenty-six Churches reporting Christian Endeavor Societies as against thirteen a year ago. The membership of these societies has grown from 342 to 844. The figures show also that the Sunday Schools have increased from a total membership of 1,610 to 2,503.

Groups at Nashville were interesting. A dozen were of especial interest to the Christian Church: Rev. M. T. Sorrell, of Virginia; Rev. J. H. Harper, of Illinois; Rev. G. D. Hunt, of Alabama; Rev. Cecil Leek, of Indiana; Rev. D. M. Spence, of North Carolina; Rev. Joe French, of Alabama; Rev. E. H. Rainey, of Illinois; Rev. J. H. Dollar, of North Carolina; Miss Pattie Lee Coghill, of Florida; Rev. C. C. Hamilton, of Rose Hill Christian Church, Columbus, Ga., and Secretaries Warren H. Denison and A. W. Sparks, Dayton, Ohio.

Congregational pastors and workers included Rev. Walter H. Curl, Rev. James W. Davenport, Mrs. George L. Day, Rev. A. L. DeJarnette, Rev. Marion Dopson, Rev. J. E. Each, Rev. C. C. Hamilton, Rev. J. H. Henry, Rev. N. A. Long, Rev. A. Calvin Nelson, Mr. Gerald Smith, Rev. W. J. Tillman, Mr. and Mrs. C. C. Osborne, and

PRINCIPLES OF THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

(1) The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.

(2) Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.

(3) The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.

(4) Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship and of Church membership.

(5) The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by, all.

THE PURPOSE OF THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

The purpose of this Church is to cultivate a spirit of union among the followers of our Lord Jesus Christ of every persuasion, and to secure, if possible, the associate efforts of all true religious teachers in pointing the wicked to "the Lamb of God who taketh away the sin of the world."

The peculiar doctrines and tenets which have confused and distracted the Christian world are remanded to private judgment, and hence cease to be matters for debate, only in so far as may be necessary to prevent a sectarian influence from entering the Church.

This Church requires no compromise of faith on the part of any child of God in order to communion or fellowship; here, denominational distinctions cease to exist, and Christian love binds the brotherhood together.

The purpose of this Church will be consummated in the conversion of the world and the union of all Christians.

THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

The Church of the Living God is not limited in power by the number of names on its roll, nor by the glory and glamour it manifests in the world. The writer of these lines has just read, with increasing interest and delight, the Books of Kings and Chronicles of the Old Testament. That which stood out for him most prominently as he read was the very few in number with whom God fought the hardest battles and won the greatest victories for Himself and His kingdom. Man-kind has always longed for numbers; God has desired and wrought most with consecrated hearts and souls that were yielded to Him, hands that were guided by His will. The hosts of wickedness and of hell, almost numberless for multitude, again and again went up against the few in Judah who were true to God and had faith in Him. And as long as Judah, small in numbers compared with Israel, to say nothing of the hosts of Syria and Babylon and Egypt, remained faithful and true to God, consecrated to His service, proclaiming His love to the world, Judah was invincible. The few banded together in God's name, directed and controlled only by the love of Jehovah and loyalty to Him, accomplished wonders for God and for humanity, and were rich in spirit, in prospect and in possessions. Gideon thought he must have 10,000, and they would be all too few; God saw that 300 faithful were more than enough, and that 300 souls, loyal, faithful and true, were mightier to the tearing down of strongholds and the building up of righteousness than 10,000 or 100,000 who were not loyal, not courageous and not true.

In this connection, the writer is thinking about our Christian Church. Small in numbers, coming down the path of time, often faltering, frequently failing, never mighty in numbers, God has seen to it that her achievement is not without its glory and her history not without its halo. It was no small thing to give to the world the first religious newspaper to herald the glad tidings of Christian liberty and freedom to all mankind. It is no small thing that she gave to the world the first higher institution of learning in which men and women were to receive equal advantages of culture and of scholarship. It is no small thing, in a world where there were so many clashes of opinion and man-made names and creeds, to adopt the name, "Christian" as sufficient—that name by which the disciples were called first at Antioch, when the Church there was made up of Jews and Gentiles and the mixed from many tongues and peoples. When they became united in Christ Jesus, they were called "Christians," regardless of color, class, kind, or previous condition of servitude, of service or of rearing. It is no small thing, even if a very small group did use it, to declare to the world that the Bible itself is the inspired Word of God and is a sufficient rule for faith and practice, and is the one creed surpassing all the creeds that man has ever written or may ever write. It is no small thing that even a group, few in number, declared to the world a long time ago that neither forms nor ceremonies nor sanctuaries could make a Christian, but that Christian character is the test of the man or woman who is in Christ Jesus and is a sufficient test for Church membership and fellowship.

Such a people may not accomplish before the world that which those very people themselves could wish, nor their earthly pride would lead them to expect and hope for; and yet they have made a contribution to the world that ages will not forget any more than time has erased the names and characters of Judah's kings in the days when Israel was divided and fell into apostasy. I mean those kings of Judah with the few around about them who did that which was right in the sight of God and regardless of numbers, of prestige and position, held as sacred and supreme the altars of Jehovah, and, in their devotion to Him, offered their sacrifices to Him. In their weakness, He was their sufficiency, their stay and their strength. This, too, is what Paul meant when, little and lonely and weak and weary, not comforted by numbers nor blessed with a great following, He could cry out to all the world and to all time, "I can do all things through Christ who strengtheneth me."

Judah's armies were often small and weak and impotent, but God used them to confound the mighty and put to flight the many, as long as they remained true to Him and trusted Him to lead.

"AND GOD PLANTED A GARDEN."

That was written a long time ago—ages ago—but God's garden (of flowers and fragrance and fruits) has not dried up nor become extinct. Any one who will lift up his eyes now can but see that God has planted a garden, is planting a garden, keeps on planting a garden, and there is no other garden comparable to God's garden.

It is quite significant that the writer of Genesis, who was the author of our topic, links up the soul of man with the garden that God planted. Read it. (Gen. 2:7-8) "Man became a living soul. And the Lord God planted a garden, and there He put the man whom He had formed." Surrounded by the beauty and the glory of Eden, man's living soul began to sing. It must have been a love-song that he sang in the garden that God had planted, a song of praise also, and of prospect, of dedication and of desire, for soon thereafter, when the man had sung his song of gladness to the full, and was weary of singing, he slept and dreamed. From this sleep and dream and singing of the heart in the garden that God had planted, came the woman of prospect and desire. And so glorious had been his prospect, so deep his desire, so sweet and lovely his dream, that when he awoke and beheld her, he said (Gen. 2:23): "This is now bone of my bones and flesh of my flesh." God's first man and God's first woman met and loved each other in the garden that God had planted. "Nature's old sweet song," singing in the soul of a man, found its response and its other and deeper self in the companionship of woman in the garden that God had planted.

Springtime is with us again, and its glory, its bounty and its beauty are singing themselves in a story of rapture and of love into the hearts and souls of men and women into whose nostrils God has breathed the breath of life, and through God's breath they have become living souls.

The cold and chill of winter have but held nature in check, so that with the bees and buds and blossoms of spring, man's soul, inspired by the fragrance and beauty of this great, good garden that God has planted, might sing a new song of praise to God and give Him the gratitude and the glory that belong to Him. One may "reflect" what is another's—one "radiates" only what one is. The beauty and bounty, the challenge and the charm of nature around about us now are not merely reflected from God's face; they radiate from His loving heart and speak in a melody that cannot be mistaken of one who is great and gracious and good beyond all words. None but "a fool" could say "there is no God," when one inhales the fragrance of sweet-scented flowers and looks with awe and amazement upon the miracle of charm and color that God has created in the garden He planted.

This spring-time invites us to live anew, and challenges us to a deeper love for life, for labor, for friendship with fellow-man and with God. Now, this garden that God planted, with its renewal of beauty and bounty every spring, is but a sign and a symbol of that spiritual garden, that kingdom of righteousness and of heaven which He is seeking to plant in the hearts and souls of men and women throughout His world. In this spiritual garden, life never grows old and flowers never wilt or fade.

God is just as anxious for a world of fragrant souls—souls that yield to His will, bend to His bidding, express His love and radiate His life—as He is to have this material garden in which He has planted the dogwood, whose whiteness in blossom radiates His purity, the iris and the wisteria that radiate His beauty, the rose and the lily of the valley that exhale His fragrance. And, as in the spring-time, there is created in us a new passion of love and life and glory and gladness, so there should be created in us, and to this God invites us, a new-born passion for the souls of men and women, to win them to a knowledge of our Lord and to bring them to know Him, "Whom to know aright is life eternal." Much of the world has crowded Him out—a major portion of it, in fact—with the worship of idols and of things made of men's hands, and of gods that are no gods. Our God who "planted a garden" wants us "to walk with Him and talk with Him" in His garden until we are so full of His praise, His goodness and His glory, that we will just want to go out and win others to Him, till the whole world shall know Him and glorify Him. As God has never quit in His task of giving the gospel of His Son to the world, and has never quit from beautifying the garden which He planted, so He never will quit until the Garden of Eden, the first paradise of man, shall come to be universal in domain, and into which "all nations and tongues and tribes of men and women have been invited, and have been made to see, that the God who planted a garden on earth has the power to create on earth that which was uppermost in the mind of our Lord—a kingdom of heaven among the children of men.

"God planted a garden," that all men everywhere might bow down and worship Him and that His glory might be manifest in the world He had made.

MOTHERS' DAY.

This happy and good day will be celebrated by millions on May 10th. "The name of mother strikes melodies in all hearts. Every person reveres and delights to honor mother."

It has not been long in coming since it began, but it has spread with the rapidity of a consuming flame and leaped like a hunted animal to lengths and limits unexpected. Miss Annie Jarvis, of Philadelphia, who gave the idea of Mothers' Day to the world, called for its first observance in Philadelphia in May, 1907, just twenty-four years ago. It was she who selected the carnation as the flower of the day—a red one in love of mother that is living, a white one in memory of mother who is gone. Seven years later, in 1914, the Congress of the United States designated the second Sunday in May for the observance of Mothers' Day. And so the Churches have told about it, the books and writers have spoken of its symbols and its significance. It is a day of tenderness and love, of fond memories, of happy and wholesome recollections. Sunday, May 10th, you will see a mingling of the red and the white, of carnation when convenient, of some other flower when not convenient, that the world about may see and remember that men honor and revere the name of "mother."

PICTURES.

Pictures are copies of real objects, as flowers, mountains, human faces, buildings, animals, lakes, or images in the mind of conditions, stations, associations, positions, fortunes or misfortunes, character, Moses, Paul, Jesus. Photography is the process of forming and fixing an image of an object by chemical action of light on a film containing certain salts, as silver nitrate, sensitive to light. This art, now so common, was first produced by Daguerre and Niepce in 1839, and W. H. Fox Talbot was the first to produce a photographic negative from which any number of positives might be printed, and he patented his process in 1841. It is seen, therefore, that what we know as photography is less than a hundred years old. Among all the modern mechanical inventions now in such common use, photography is not the least. Nothing is more common today than pictures, from the snapshot to the moving-picture show. Before the mechanical process flooded the world with pictures, painting was a fine art. Now Eastman kodaks and photographic galleries flood the country with pictures, and papers and magazines copy them, and mantles and desks are covered with photographs of pictures in the home, from baby to grandmother.

The last hundred years have done more in the field of copying than any century in history. The photographer has almost put the poet and the painter out of business. Mechanics has taken the place of personal effort; the machine has taken the place of the hand in the industrial world and the place of the mind in the intellectual world. The typewriter has pushed the pen almost off the desk, and the worked-out problem has almost pushed the question-mark out of the class-room. Religion itself, as an experience, has yielded largely to book statements and theologies written by brilliant thinkers and writers. Much of religion is now learned from books instead of experience at the altar. It is a ready-made age in almost all departments of life, home and Church. Books tell mothers how to rear children, though Moses, Luther, Wesley and Jesus were reared by hearts of love, hands of service, and lives that made copies worth following. Joseph and Mary carried Jesus up to the temple in accordance with the law of the Church after twelve years of religious training in a humble home. And after that memorable visit to Jerusalem He went down with His parents and was subject unto them. "And He increased in wisdom and stature, and in favor with God and man" (Luke 2:52).

The world needs today more heart in the home, the school, and the Church. The pictures of life are too imaginary, and not as real as life requires. Mental training, ideals and imaginary pictures are useful, but reality in religion is the need of this generation.

"GO YE."

Last words of loved ones and friends are treasured above others. We incline our ears to catch the precious words and hold them in sacred memory. We seek to comply, to perform every such expressed wish.

When Jesus led some five hundred believers out of Jerusalem as far as Bethany, the hospitable village to which He often resorted, and lifted His hands in blessing, they worshiped Him. He commanded, "Go ye," which command many of them obeyed. The result was a rapid spreading of the message of the resurrection of Jesus and hope of life eternal through His name. The multitudes turned unto the Lord. Since those days, each generation has heard that same commanding voice, "Go ye," and some have responded until the glad news has reached our ears. Woe unto us if we fail Him!

To win people to an understanding of His mission and glad surrender to His will is the concern of every regenerated soul. To teach believers to do His bidding is also of the utmost importance. It is not enough to know; we must do His will. We may begin where we are. This place where we now sit is a part of the world into which He sends us. Not every one can go far away to the benighted heathen. Not all can do distinguished service in the home mission field. But each one who knows Him is under orders to make Him known to some part of His world and to some of His creatures.

The message is with us, in our hands, we dare to hope in our hearts. His commands to us are "Go ye," "Win disciples," "Teach them" to do all His bidding. His promise is, "I'll be with you to the end." If we go, He'll go with us. If we stay, He'll go from us.—Biblical Recorder.

MAKE MAY TELL!

TELL WHAT? TELL FOR MISSIONS AND THE KINGDOM OF GOD

Many Churches have not yet taken the ANNUAL MISSIONARY OFFERING. Let the month of May tell the story of the effort and self-denial in every Christian Church of the Southern Convention, where the offering has not been taken, of a desire to help win this world to Christ through proclaiming His gospel, giving His message to those in the foreign field and the home field who have not heard and had the opportunity that we have had. Many Churches have not yet taken the offering. Can any Church afford to miss this opportunity of trying to let its light shine out to those who sit and wait in the dark places till that light comes?

Many pastors have not yet been heard from. Can any pastor take the responsibility, the awful responsibility, of not giving his people a chance to express, through their self-denial and their sacrificial offering, their love for their Lord by trying to give a message of that love to those who are dying without it?

Let every Church, every pastor MAKE MAY TELL for Christ and the kingdom of God through our Annual Missionary Offering. The spiritual task of the Church is that of winning the world to Christ—and this is Missions. Through self-denial we carry on the work of the kingdom of our Lord on earth. He gave all, denied all for us. What will we give for Him?

SUFFOLK LETTER.

Church finance is equally important with Church attendance. The Church could not exist without both. A Church requires money as well as a home, and it needs the presence of the members as well as the home needs the family. In fact, it is the home of religion, the home of the community. A vacant Church is a dead Church. When a family moves out of a house, the house goes to pieces, and faster than when it is occupied. A Church is at its best when regular services are attended regularly by the largest number of people. Some people excuse themselves from Church attendance because they are not members of the Church. It is just as important for non-Church members to attend as it is for the best members. The lame man carried and laid at the gate of the temple called beautiful was blessed as well as Peter and John who went up to the temple to pray. He went for alms, but was healed of his lameness which had continued from his birth. If he had remained at home, he would have remained lame till his death. Peter, John and the lame man all got a blessing that day.

The way sinners get saved is by going to Church, and their friends can help them to go to Church. There is no point in human society better than a country Church, where all the people in that neighborhood go to Sunday School and Church and where the Sunday School remains for the regular Church service and preaching. The more regular such attendance is, the more prosperous the community is and the better the people and the homes are. The same is true of a city community. If all business, all places of amusement, and all street corners were closed on Sunday and the whole population went regularly to Sunday School and Church, it would create a religious atmosphere that would begin a great revival of religion and make that city the most important city in the State.

What is true of attendance is also true of financial support. This also, to be at its best, must be regular. In fact, all financial obligations should be attended to regularly. A little every Sunday, or every month, as services require, is better than to wait till the end of the year. There is nothing more embarrassing than debt, and deferred payments often create debt. It is always embarrassing to get behind on the road, in the school, at the store, or in the Church. Regularity is what makes a clock or a watch valuable—a second at a time, a minute at a time, an hour at a time is what keeps the time. A timepiece that is not regular has no value. A Church member that does not pay his little or his much regularly has less value than one who does. If a member is too feeble to attend and too poor to pay, that member can remain at home and pray and still be a valuable member of the Church. And a family is not at its best unless they all go to Sunday School and all remain at Church, and all give something to support the cause that makes home and prosperity.

ELON LETTER.

OFFICIAL ANNOUNCEMENT.

"To everything there is a season, and a time to every purpose under the heaven. I have seen the travail, which God hath given to the sons of men to be exercised in it. He hath made everything beautiful in His time."—Ecl. 3:1, 10-11A.

In this chapel service* for today, I have set myself a very difficult task—to inform the faculty and students of Elon College officially of my decision to resign from the presidency at the approaching commencement. For twenty-six years it has been my happy privilege to serve this college in official capacity to the best of my ability—for six years as professor, and for twenty years as president. More than half my life I have been an officer of Elon College, and before I became an officer I was her son. In 1895 I came here as a student. I have known Elon history almost from the beginning. It is a history to be proud of. A spiritual ideal has become incarnate on this campus.

To bring such a long-continued period of service to a close is no easy task. Twenty years ago, when my eminent predecessor turned over the affairs of our alma mater to me, I knew that some day I would likewise turn them over to some one else. Institutions go on, but individuals pass out. It is the institution that counts. If I have been able, by the co-operation of others, to render any service to Elon, I am glad. The effort has been prompted by love and loyalty and devotion. My very soul loves this college.

Not only do I cherish a fond love and an affectionate devotion for my alma mater, but I have great faith and confidence in her future progress and development. I have seen Elon grow from the old administration building, familiarly known as the college, and reduced to ashes on January 18, 1923; and the old east dormitory, familiarly known as the dormitory, and happily still with us, to the modern beautiful college plant so well and so endearingly known to you as the "Greater Elon." I have seen the student body and faculty and endowment proportionately grow. I have seen the campus become a thing of beauty and loveliness, "beautiful in his time," to quote the Scripture just read in your hearing. I have seen Elon's friends from near and far increase in number, in appreciation, and in enthusiastic devotion to her. I have seen all this these twenty-six years, and my heart has rejoiced.

But my heart shall rejoice even more in the years that lie ahead, not only when the "Million-Dollar Campaign" ($400,000 for indebtedness and $600,000 for endowment), now in the offing, is completed, but particularly when the four-million-dollar progressive campaign, now in contemplation, shall have made Elon one of the best-equipped and most highly endowed small colleges in the world. When that day comes, as come it will, my heart will be the gladdest. I say this day will come, because Elon never had more friends nor more loyal and generous than she has today. Her recent relationship to what was formerly the Congregational Church has greatly strengthened her in potential assets for future growth and expansion. Congregational leaders have seen in Elon the Yale of the South for the now united Congregational-Christian Church. Her educational and character standards have met with their unqualified approval.

I have great faith in and love for the faculty and students of Elon College. I rejoice when I think of the scholarly attainments of our faculty and of the moral fiber of our students. Together, faculty and students are laboring here to make "Christian character first and always at Elon" not only a motto and slogan, but a winsome and entrancing reality. Truly the lines for me these twenty-six years have fallen in pleasant places. The memory of these years of labor and association will throughout life be for me a precious and inspiring heritage.

And now may I urge you, one and all, to stand loyally by Elon and my successor, as you have stood by me? I want you to accord the new administration not only your presence, but your active good will. Return this fall as students, or, as graduates, preach the Elon gospel wherever you may be. See that your friends come here to study and to grow in Christian character. Speak well always of your college and be generous in your gifts for her support as well as in your words of praise. If any one of this splendid company fails to render one hundred per cent of co-operation to the new administration, I shall be deeply grieved.

And what I urge you to do, I hereby publicly pledge myself to do. I am for the new president of Elon College one hundred per cent. In the letter to the board of trustees, announcing my retirement from office at the end of this academic year, I said: "Let me immediately pledge you and my successor my heartiest co-operation in the future of Elon College, which I feel confident is to be bright and consistently progressive." That is my program, and that is my confidence. I beg you to join me in both.

May God bless Elon and you, and may He prosper her and you in every good and worthy undertaking and aspiration.

W. A. HARPER.

PIEDMONT JUNIOR COLLEGE LETTER.

WHY I SHOULD GO TO COLLEGE.

In considering the matter of whether or not I should go to college, the main question at issue is whether it is better to spend four years of time in general education which has no bearing upon my special life-work before beginning a specialized training for that work, or whether it is better, in view of the fact that life is limited to a few years, to proceed at once to a specialized training upon finishing high school.

It should be obvious that I must have the specialized training in any event. There are not many occupations, outside of that of hod-carrier, where a specialized training is not compulsory. While it is still possible to enter many vocations by an apprenticeship of actual experience, the preparation which qualified one for any of the professions and for many of the trades and business pursuits are being given in the schools, both public and private, and these courses are rapidly being made a requisite to entrance upon the respective professions, trades and business pursuits. In farming, which formerly was considered a simple occupation, even those trained by experience, feel the need of specialized training, and a large majority of modern farmers avail themselves of the courses offered by the colleges.

It might seem at first glance that since the specialized training is compulsory, that it would be expedient to cut short the period of general training to accommodate the rapidly lengthening period of specialization. A close examination of the facts prove that quite the contrary is the case if we hope to attain a high degree of success in our chosen occupation and live a full, satisfactory life.

If we wish to build a tall shaft, we do not plan it without a suitable foundation, and the higher the shaft we build, the broader and stronger do we make the base. We do not reason that we should save brick and mortar at the bottom because we are going to use so much as we ascend. Equilibrium is as important to the human mind as it is to brick and mortar. The higher our specialization in one subject, the more need for a broad foundation of mental development upon which it shall rest. The height of the crest of the wave depends upon the size of the base. Our possibilities of achievement in any given line depends upon our general mental development and the college courses are designed to supply that development.

There was a time in the world's history when all activities were physical, and men used their hands to supply their needs, and the work of the hands depended upon the general bodily vigor. In modern times, our abilities to succeed in life depend upon the development of our minds. The word education is from the Latin, and means to "draw out"; hence it is not something added to our store of knowledge for which we have no use in our chosen vocation, but a drawing out of our latent possibilities, a bringing to life of dormant mental abilities to support and sustain our specialization.

As to lack of time for a college education, observers have proved that the college training is a saving of time ultimately. The young men and women who go to college find themselves upon the beginning of their career in the world apparently four years behind their companions who have entered the world upon finishing high school. In another four years, however, the college graduates, in the majority of cases, have overtaken the high school graduates and are ahead in the game, with much greater prospects. The positions at the top are open to "college graduates." Many firms and business concerns, in selecting employees for any job worth while, prefer and even require the college degree. There are many "self-made" men in the world, but a close study into the lives of most of them reveal the fact that they were students, and those who succeeded without a broad foundation of knowledge are conspicuously few.

Enough has been said to show that, as a general proposition, a college education is a distinct advantage materially, even though there are many college graduates who are and will always be poor, while there are some rich people who never went to college. There are other things which a college education brings into our lives besides material gains. We do not seek money in this life, but success and satisfaction. If these can be gained without money, it is merely a short cut to the goal. We want social standing, friends, respect, the admiration of our fellow-men, good homes, love and the opportunity to engage in the work which we most enjoy. In the attainment of these things, a college education can help us more than any money which we are liable to make.

There are many pleasures dependent upon the attainment of wealth or fame, but the greatest pleasures are those dependent upon a cultivated mind, trained and developed so that it can appreciate the best there is in art, literature, music, and what is more important, the best there is in humanity. It is a pleasure to understand and sympathize with our fellow-beings, and understanding and sympathy are a matter of individual development. For that reason, I should give myself every opportunity for development in order that I may enjoy the greatest satisfaction in life.

The difference between the race we found upon this continent, with its primitive tools and its primitive ideas of the world and the universe, and the present civilized American race, is largely a matter of education. The Indian race is not "inferior," but merely under-developed. The rapid development of these so-called inferior races under a system of education has been one of the marvels of our present era of civilization.

What education will do for races, it will do for individuals, for the individual is the type of the race. And therefore, in order to enlarge my sphere of usefulness and add to the enjoyment and satisfaction which I may get out of life, I should go to college, remembering that whatever may be said to deter me, it will likely be said by one who has not gone, and that while there are many who regret that they did not go to college, there are none who regret that they did.

S. L. BEOUGHIER.

WINDSOR, VA.

It seems to me that we are living, we are dwelling, in a complex, swift and critical age. More speed, more haste, more wealth, more pleasure, more power and fame seem to be the great objectives which men are seeking with feverish excitement to attain. This is an hour when men are thinking and living in the material realm while their souls grow lean and atrophied. In this "new age," the headship of our Lord Jesus Christ is denied by men in all directions. In these "new days," many of the fundamental doctrines of the Christian faith are being tabooed as being old-fogyism. No wonder spiritual barrenness is evident in all sections of the United States. My honest conviction is that the rapid and alarming increase of skepticism, Sunday desecration, unscriptural divorce, sensuality, rampant lawlessness and crime, intolerance, worldliness and decrease in Church attendance spell the doom of our great republic.

Every department of life and activity is calling for men with convictions, men who know the Blessed Redeemer and are willing to stand by the truth. In this fast, critical, materialistic age, we must stand again as our fathers and forefathers stood, for the great principles of the doctrine of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ, and the Christian ideal of life. An ideal which is not materialistic or commercial, but spiritual; an ideal in which the Lord God, glorious and eternal and mighty, is the Source of our life not only as individuals, but as a nation. Every life, to realize its highest spiritual value, must interpret itself in the terms of our blessed Lord. Therefore, we must idealize our conduct in Christian principles and illuminate our path with the light of the divine. The time has come for us to invest our business life, our home life, our social life with the spirituality of the God of truth, love, peace and justice. The spiritual mind need not be un-intellectual, but the intellectual mind needs to be more spiritual. We should seek to acquire that knowledge which is above all other—the knowledge of God the Creator, the Redeemer, and the Judge of the race and His salvation. Let us not forget that the most consummate wisdom of classic antiquity failed to teach men the personality, the character, the providence of God, the method of reconciliation, or the life beyond.

Our Lord was the Masterpiece of humanity, the Wonder of ages, the Ideal of heaven. He was the image and substance of His Father and the eternal splendor of His glory. Never have men seen so many perfections blended in any other character. Beloved, there was too much of heaven about Him to be all of earth. He showed His divine sympathy with all manner of human suffering, and in all instances demonstrated that He was truly "Emmanuel, God with us." He was the holiest, purest, most spotless and beneficent Being that ever took the form of man. I believe that He was God-Man. We must restore to the holy, only begotten Son of God the halo of His deity. By Him we know God, and in Him we reach God. To know the God of truth and justice, the Maker and Ruler of heaven; to feel His blessed presence filling the universe; to be conscious of His approval and guidance—that is rest of soul and riches which cannot corrupt or be stolen away. Let us make sure of these precious things.

The whole of our lives belong to God, and we ought to dedicate them to His blessed service. "Ye are not your own; ye are bought with a price." We should aspire to fellowship with our risen, glorified Lord, the Conqueror of death and hell,

The GEM TESTAMENT has been steadily growing in popular favor ever since its first appearance. In size, 3½x4½ inches, it is not much larger than the Vest Pocket. It is also the only Testament of its size with large bold type and pronouncing text.

The edition on India paper is ideal, and we know of no better gift at the price than one in the finer bindings.

The size, 2½x4½ inches, is so small that the book practically fits the palm of the hand.

MISSIONS

REV. J. O. ATKINSON, D. D., Secretary.

A PRAYER.

Eternal God, who didst provide a Saviour to live and work with and for men, we bless Thee that forever there is vouchsafed to prepared and willing hearts the power of becoming fishers of men; that, watching from the eternal shore, Jesus speaks and reassures, as obediently His helpers toil for the deliverance of struggling souls. Defend us, Thy workers, Father, from the thought of self-preservation. Help us to fear not even the sea, that the adrift and sinking miss not the proffered gospel rescue-net. In saving effort, keep us ready and unafraid. We ask it for Jesus' sake. Amen.

J.

ALL CHURCHES SHOULD TRY.

It is spring-time—the season of renewed life and of planting. Nature has adorned herself and is doing her best. There is beauty everywhere. God has brought it to pass.

And right now the Church needs to adorn herself with renewed life, and the beautiful deeds of the faithful ones who make up the Church. There can be no better thing for the Church now than to make a self-denial offering, through which the gospel of love may be carried to places far and near. Our annual missionary offering is an effort to awaken anew in the life of our people a desire to do the will of God, a passion for the souls of men, an interest in a world that has been sleeping in darkness and in the chill of paganism and idolatry. Many Churches have already adorned themselves by making a self-denial offering for their Lord. Many have not. Nature calls, and the bounty of God gives a challenge to the heart of men to do something to the glory of God and the building up of His kingdom in the hearts of men.

Surely no Church will neglect the opportunity of asking a missionary offering; surely no pastor will be so irresponsible to the cause of righteousness and the call of his Church as not to give his people a chance to express, through self-denial, their desire to carry the gospel of love to those who are perishing without it. This is the season when all our Churches are called upon and all our people in the Churches, to make their annual offering to missions. Let not the season pass; let not the call go unheeded. Out of self-denial, life comes and gives itself in love to God, the Author of life.

Here is hoping and believing that every Church in the Southern Christian Convention, however struggling and needy it may be, will take the missionary offering and send it in at the earliest possible date, that the work of God may not suffer and the cause of righteousness may go forward in the world.

MISSIONARY PROGRAM FOR MAY.

BY MRS. W. M. JAY.

Women's Societies.

(May, June, July, August.)

The programs for these four months are taken from the booklet, "Yesterday and Today in Porto Rico." Using a chapter for each month, the programs are complete and are under the headings: (1) "A Visitor Returns from Porto Rico"; (2) "Education in Porto Rico"; (3) "Health and Happiness in Porto Rico"; (4) "Religious Conditions in Porto Rico." The price of the booklet is 10 cents, and may be obtained from American Missionary Association, 287 Fourth Avenue, New York City, N. Y.

PROGRAM.

Worship helps.

A visitor returns from Porto Rico.

Suggested hymns: "Rise Up, O Men of God," "Where Cross the Crowded Ways of Life."

Scripture: Luke 10:25-37.

Prayer: For our government, that it may bring real benefits to Porto Rico; for the Governor of Porto Rico, that he may remedy conditions; for the Legislature of Porto Rico, that it may realize the needs, and act wisely; for the people—the many people who need "abundant life."

Poem: "Porto Rico Sunrise Across Condodo Bay."

Sometimes I wake as though I had been called

By some commanding voice from out of heaven,
And still with dreams and calm sleep half enthralled,

I rise and throw the casement wide, and then
I know why men seek God: The whole great world
Speaks there before my eyes afresh with morn;
Across the palm-fringed bay I see unfurled

A radiant tapestry which, to adorn
The sky in matchless folds by angel hands
Is hung. Rich colored, its bright hues dismay

The earthly artist, who, all speechless, stands
And wishes he might dip his brush where they Die mirrored in the placid bay. The sun

Then suddenly rolls up, and day's begun.
—Van Deusen.

Hymn: "Porto Rico's Call" (page 582, Christian Hymnary).

It will help greatly to have a map displayed on the wall for use during the program.

Talk: "An Imaginary Visit." This talk may be given by three or four members using the following subjects: "The Island," "Its Beauty," "Tropical Fruits," "The People and Their Industries," "The Lack of Work and Poverty," and "The Problems of Porto Rico." It would be fine to close with a sort of round-table discussion and conversation on Porto Rico and the above subjects.

Young People's Societies.

PROGRAM OF CHAPTER VII.

"Behind the Curtain."

I. Business.

II. Study period.

1. Leader's review of our last lesson: The first four outstanding "Stars in the sparkling galaxy that has shone in India." The announcement of today's subject and the next item on the program.

2. "The Story of Ramabai" (pages 96-102 & 106); 1st member.

3. "A Visit to Mukti" (pages 103-104); 2nd member.

4. Prof. Karve's "Contribution to Indian Womanhood" (pages 105 to paragraph 1, page 106); 3rd member.

5. "The Baby Show" (pages 100-109 top); 4th member.

6. Conclusion (final paragraph, p. 109); 1st member.

Leader's introduction to worship service: We have just seen woman's degrading and shameful place among the Hindus, even though it is improving. When we compare it with our own American equality of woman with man, we wonder how women of any nation or religion could have been so subjected to man and custom. Let us consider a few outstanding women from various parts of the Bible just to show that our Heavenly Father has always loved, honored and dealt justly with the women who do Him reverence. How they stand out in brilliant array! "Eve, the Woman of Curiosity"; Hagar, the discarded wife; Miriam, the ambitious; Ruth, the woman of constancy; Hannah, the ideal mother; Esther, the self-sacrificing woman; Mary Magdalene, the transformed woman; Mary, the woman chosen of God! Mary of Bethany, the woman immortalized by Christ; Martha, the worried housekeeper; Dorcas, the benevolent seamstress; and Lydia, the business woman. As we realize the blessings which Christianity brings to womanhood, let us not forget our obligation to share the blessings of the gospel of Christ.

III. Worship program: Theme, "Women in the Christian Program."

1. Instrumental prelude: "Ave Maria."
2. Call to worship: "And many women were there . . . which followed Jesus from Galilee, ministering unto Him" (Matt. 27:55).

3. Hymn.

4. Scripture: Mark 12:41-44, Acts 16:13-18.
5. Prayer: That we Christian women may be worthy of the rich heritage we enjoy in Christ; that we may strive more diligently to carry our blessings to those girls and women in benighted lands whose blessing is Christ also.

6. Offertory: Instrumental music, "Ye Christian Heralds."

7. Hymn: "Christ for the World, We Sing."

8. Benediction.

Willing Workers or Juniors.

Theme: "The Work Missionaries are Doing in Porto Rico."

1. Call to worship (Matt. 28:19-20).
2. Prayer: Our Father, we thank Thee that so many people have heard Thy command to take the gospel to all the world. We pray Thee that many more boys, girls, men and women in Porto Rico may give their hearts to Jesus. Amen.

3. Song: "In Christ There is no East or West."

4. "Our Work in Porto Rico." (Clipping, to be given by members, which have been given out before time of meeting. It is suggested that the leader read over with the child the clipping before the meeting. Material may be gotten by writing Literature Department, 1104 U. B. Building, Dayton, Ohio.)

5. Song: "We've a Story to Tell to the Nations."

6. Benediction: Dear God, our Father, we thank Thee for what the missionaries are doing in Porto Rico. We pray that all the boys and girls of Porto Rico may know of Thy love. Help us to love Thee more. Amen.

ADVENTURES IN YOUTH FELLOWSHIP

"Youth at Work in the Church."

JEWEL TRUITT, Editor, Waverly, Virginia.

WHAT OUR YOUNG PEOPLE ARE DOING IN LOCAL CHURCHES.

For the next several weeks, articles prepared by young people representing many of our Southern Churches will appear on this page. In these articles, these young people will tell of the things they are helping do in their Churches. These articles came in response to a request from the editor of this page. Perhaps some of the writers would have chosen some other topic, but each one wrote upon the topic suggested to him or her.

These articles are indicative of what is happening in a general way in all of our Churches. In many Churches, young people are the mainstay in carrying on the regular work and in accepting new responsibilities and tasks. Such earnestness and zeal as is back of the articles that appear here should be rewarded with encouragement and challenging leadership by the more experienced men and women of our Churches.

NEW YOUNG PEOPLE'S DEPARTMENT.

Our newly organized Young People's Department of the Mt. Olivet (G) Church gave its first program on Easter Sunday night. The program consisted of solos, quartets, recitations, dialogs, readings, and exercise, and short talks. In spite of the bad weather and other handicaps in preparing the program, the attendance was good for the meeting and we consider it a great success. We have been organized only a little more than a month, and we are hardly, as yet, in working order. At our next meeting we are hoping to make plans to raise funds, and for doing other things for the benefit of the Church.

NORMAN MORRIS, Pres.

BEING A CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR PRESIDENT.

I think that one of the highest honors a group of Christian young people can bestow upon one of their number is to ask him to be president of their Christian Endeavor Society. When they ask one to become their president, they signify that they think you are leading a Christian life and they are willing to have you lead them in their work "for Christ and the Church." They also signify by electing you president that they think you are outstanding in your Christian Endeavor work.

Therefore, the character of the president of the Christian Endeavor Society should be above reproach. Not at any time should he do anything in which it would not be right for the members of his society to follow him. He should set for them a high standard of Christian living. When the president of the society is a true Christian, the other members will want to fall right in line with him, and then they will see their opportunities for service and the different phases of the society work will be cared for.

WORSHIP FOR INTERMEDIATE BOYS.

If every Sunday School is like ours at Burlington, there is a group of intermediate boys who do not like to attend the opening exercises of the older people each Sunday morning before going to classes. In fact, they don't attend. Our group of intermediate boys used to go to their classrooms and wait for the teacher there or play in the Church-yard during the opening worship program of the Sunday School. This caused a great deal of annoyance for those who desired to worship in the assembly before the class period, and it also brought objection from the Sunday School superintendent. The superintendent put up with the condition for some time, but he made known his objections regularly and untiringly. At last a solution for the problem was found.

A new young people's worker came to our Church, and after listening to the objections of the Sunday School superintendent for a short time, she set to work. She invited the boys to meet her each Sunday morning in a room where they would be all by themselves. Each Sunday morning now they have a worship period of their own. Not even the intermediate girls meet with them. They have their very own program.

The boys seem to like this arrangement. Something interesting is done or said every Sunday, and the programs are carried on in a dramatic fashion which appeals to the boys. There are certain things which will appeal to boys of the intermediate age. These are selected for use in our worship program. Intermediate boys are hero worshipers and adventurers. If the stories planned for them have admirable heroes and adventure, they will sit with their mouths half open and drink in the stories. Stories for the intermediate boys should always make some point that teaches character and that inspires those who hear to mold their lives after the hero's way of living. The Bible offers itself as a book of adventure and inspiration for boys. The biblical language is not always understood by intermediate boys, but the Bible stories can be put into the language of boys so they can understand and like them.

In other Churches, probably the boys of this age-group are a problem. It doesn't seem right to make them go to the adult's program, which is planned for the benefit of adults, and where boys aren't even given a thought. This problem in our Churches is an opening for some young person in his or her Church. Give the boys a worship program every Sunday. They will take part, worship with you, and enjoy it, if they are given a good chance.

IT WAS LOVE.

"It was love that built the mountains,
It was love that made the sea,
It was love that put all beauty
In the world for you and me.
It was love that gave us flowers,
It was love that gave us tears,
It was love that gave us laughter
To make gay the lonely years.
It was love that gave us friendship,
It was love that offered peace;
Oh, love can bring to suffering,
A splendid, sweet release.
It was love that planted happiness
Wherever hearts are found;
Oh, it's love, love, love, love
That makes the world go 'round."

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR NOTES.

WAR, THE ENEMY OF CHRISTIAN CIVILIZATION.

Prelude: "Jesus Shall Reign Where'er the Sun."

Call to worship: "He maketh wars to cease unto the end of the earth; He breaketh the bow, and cutteth the spear in sunder; He burneth the chariot in the fire."

Unison response (tune, "America"):

"God, grant us now Thy peace,
Bid all dissensions cease—
God, send us peace.
Peace in true liberty,
Peace in equality,
Peace and fraternity—
God, send us peace."

Leader:

"Up to the sombre sky
Rolled one great thankful sigh,
Rolled one great gladsome cry—
The soul's deliverance of a mighty people:
Thank God for peace!
The long, low-hanging war-cloud rolled away,
The night glowed brighter than the brightest day."

Hymn: "Fling Out the Banner, Let it Float."
Scripture: Matt. 5:43-48.

Prayer.

Leader's talk: Jesus came to earth to bring salvation to the men of the earth. The salvation He brought was not just the salvation of souls for a heaven to come after this life had been lived. He brought salvation for the earthly life. He came that life might be fuller, richer. He came, a Prince of peace and a King of love. His teachings exhort His followers to love both friends and foes, to do good to those who hate and persecute them. In following Christ in His way of peace and good will, individuals and nations have found the power of His grace and the goodness of true fellowship with each other. The sad part of the story is that the world has been too slow to accept Christ's teachings as practical for living. And consequently the world has continued to suffer from strife and wranglings.

Discussion of the topic: The material suggested on this page last week for the observance of May 18th as "World Good-Will Day" will give helpful facts for the discussion of this topic.

War is a source of destruction. It tears down. There is little in it of any constructive value whatever. War costs tremendously, and in the most precious things. Human life is wasted in warfare, and its value is lowered by the wholesale slaughtering of wars. War costs in morals and character. War costs seriously in love and respect for others. Hate and suspicion grow up in the place of trust and faith during war-times. War is one thing the world could well be without.

Twelve and one-half years after the great "war to end wars," millions of men are under arms. The world is paying more than four million dollars to protect itself. Every nation is afraid to dare consider war with another. Such deadly gases have been prepared for use in warfare that whole nations can be wiped out within a few days.

The cost of the World War to the world was so great that it cannot be fully comprehended. Twenty-six million human lives were sacrificed in that struggle between nations. The war cost in dollars and cents $337,000,000,000, or almost $20,000 for every hour since Christ was born! Figure it out for yourself, and think it over. Can it be allowed to happen again?

Directed prayer: Pray that men and women and youth may realize the seriousness of warfare and the blessedness of peace; that they may search for and find the way of peace; that each individual may do his or her part by living "peaceably with all men" and by being peacemakers.

Sunday School Lesson

JESUS ENTERS JERUSALEM AS KING.

LESSON VII—May 17, 1931.

GOLDEN TEXT: "He is Lord of lords, and King of kings."—Rev. 17:14.

LESSON: Luke 19:28-20:47.

Jesus had announced His Messiahship before His entry into Jerusalem on what we now know as Palm Sunday—once to the woman at the well of Jacob near Sychar, and once to His disciples at Caesarea-Philippi—but this was His formal and public announcement to the nation at large. It was natural that He should do this at Jerusalem, the civic, social, political and religious center of the nation. In this incident, He offers Himself to the Jewish nation as the Messiah, God's Anointed, their Saviour. There are some practical lessons in this simple story.

There is the lesson of courage. "He went before, going up to Jerusalem." He knew what lay in store for Him at Jerusalem. He knew that every step of the way was fraught with danger. But the path of duty took Him to Jerusalem, and He walked in the path of duty, no matter what it might cost Him. Here is an example of moral and spiritual courage that ought to inspire us and gird us to do what we know is our duty, no matter what the cost. Jesus is our Leader—He goes before us. He does not ask us to do anything that He will not do and has not done.

There is the lesson of God's need of our things and our co-operation. "Ye shall find a colt tied, whereon yet never man sat; loose him and bring him hither. If any man ask you, Why loose ye the colt? thus shall ye say unto him, Because the Lord hath need of him." Let us get the point. Jesus was the Messiah. Yet He confessed frankly that He needed that colt in order to make His triumphal entry into Jerusalem. The Lord hath need of him is not simply a statement of a particular need in a particular case—it is the statement of an eternal principle. God has so ordained that in order to carry out His plans and purposes, He needs us, our material possessions, our thinking, our influence, our talents, our abilities, our lives, our all. There are some things which God cannot do unless He can get our co-operation in thinking and praying and working.

There is also the lesson that Jesus is able to make good His word. "And they that were sent went their way, and found even as He had said unto them." As He had said unto them—it is always thus. Christianity is a religion that rests its final claim upon the validity of experience. Come and see, said Jesus. Put me to the test. Try me for yourself. Make an experiment. Confirm my words by your own experience. He is able to do exceeding abundantly above all that we ask or think.

There is, of course, the lesson of humility. The ass was the beast of burden in those days, as now. It was the beast associated with peace-time pursuits. Jesus was King indeed, but He was humble and meek, and the controlling power in His kingdom was love, not force. The triumphal entry would not have meant the same thing if Jesus had entered Jerusalem on a horse, the symbol of war. Humility, it needs to be said again and again, is the mark of a truly great man.

There is again the truth that carping critics will always try to throw a monkey wrench into the wheels. The Pharisees wanted Jesus to rebuke His disciples because they were so happy on this glad occasion. There are those today who would suppress all emotion in the religious life. There is a danger that some will run to fanatic extremes

EDUCATION ADEQUATE FOR MODERN TIMES. The Association Press; $2.50; pp. 276.

In Detroit, during the Christmas holidays of 1930, a significant group of more than 800 educators and students met in a five-day conference to face the requirements of an adequate education for our age. However the reader may feel about the practical good of such gatherings, he will enjoy the addresses and reports that constitute this volume. The reviewer cannot escape the conviction, however, that the group lost its real opportunity to solve problems in education and religion, when it kept on with its program and did not turn aside therefrom to discuss the race problem and resolve it in Christian spirit, as it was precipitated upon the gathering by the refusal of the hotel to carry out its agreement.

However that may be, the utterances of the sessions of this gathering constitute a real challenge to thought and will undoubtedly provoke action on many college campuses. The most valuable part of the book is in the appendices, particularly in the section describing significant educational experiments, and it is regrettable that there are not more of them. If you would face the intricate problems of education and religion on the college and university level, you will find this volume especially helpful.

in the matter of emotion, but there is still a legitimate place and a real need for emotion in the religious life.

There is the lesson of the divine compassion of Christ. "And when He was come near, He beheld the city and wept over it." There were so many fine possibilities in Jerusalem and the religious life of which Jerusalem was the center. But alas! the Master's heart was broken as He looked upon it and saw with prophetic eye what the blindness and the indifference and the sinfulness of its religious leaders and its people had brought upon it. And one suspects that God weeps as He sees many of the things that go on in our modern cities.

And finally there is the lesson of the sanctity of the place of worship. It is a house of prayer, a place where men speak with God and have God speak with them. It is to be kept as a holy place, the spirit of reverence is to be kept alive, the atmosphere must be preserved so that men may sense the presence of God. The Lord is in His holy temple; let all the earth keep silence before Him.

FAMILY ALTAR

CONDUCTED BY H. E. ROUNTREE
One of our Chaplains in the U. S. Navy.

"If thou wilt make the Almighty thy treasure . . . then shalt thou delight thyself in the Almighty . . . and thou shalt make thy prayer unto Him and He will hear thee."—Job 22: 25-27.

MONDAY.

MYSELF.

"Take heed to thyself."—1 Tim. 4:16.

It is well known that many of the ills of life come from self-neglect. It is true that one may become ill through over-concern about himself. But much sickness is due to the carelessness or ignorance of the individual.

The text is a call to self-attention. We are to see to it that we have the best information possible about ourselves and how to keep our bodies well and live the life that induces health. Absorbed in our work, or diverting in pleasures, are we careless about these things? Most of all, are we careless about our inner life? Our spiritual health is of primary concern.

Prayer.—Almighty God, who hath called us from the death of sin to the life of righteousness, give us the courage to look into our own lives to see whether there be any wicked way in us. Make us sensible of how far we have strayed away. Desolate and needful as we may be when away from Thee, give us grace to arise and go to our Father. Amen.

TUESDAY.

JESUS LIKES US.

"But was in all points tempted like as we are, yet without sin."—Heb. 4:15.

It has been said that the temptations of Jesus were subjective. They occurred in His own mind. The words He heard were the echo of His own thoughts. And if He had not told about them, no one would have ever known. Whether this be true or no, we do know that our own greatest struggles are hid from the world. Many a tempting desire have we suppressed. Many the ambitions concealed. Many the struggles against some besetting passion. Many the questionable tendencies we have pondered. And we let them deceive us. Jesus did not.

Our remedy is: Be honest with ourselves and we will be on the road to victory. It is but self-deception to try to justify them to ourselves.

Prayer.—Holy Father, who knowest the every thought and intent of the heart, have compassion on our weaknesses. Wash us and we shall be whiter than snow. Renew a right spirit in us every day. Through Jesus, our Lord. Amen.

WEDNESDAY.

INHIBITING NOBLE AUTHORITY.

"I exhort, therefore, that, first of all, supplications, prayers, intercessions . . . be made for all that are in authority."—1 Tim. 2:1, 2.

Do we do this as earnestly as we should? Suppose every one did—what a different world it would be! Whether we voted for those in authority or not, they are our rulers. As such, they are entitled to our loyal respect and to our humble prayers for divine guidance and support to be given them. Suppose one may not be our ideal or far lacking in the best administration of his office, our loyal help and earnest prayers may inspire them to be most efficient service. Really this is a part of our Christian citizenship.

Prayer.—Almighty God, Ruler of all nations, Judge of all men, Maker of all righteous law, we beseech Thee for a blessing upon our souls that we may see Thy hand in all law and pray for it. Bless those in authority with wisdom and with fear of the Lord. May the Spirit of Christ reign in their hearts, that they may rule over us in righteousness and charity. In Christ's name, we ask it. Amen.

THURSDAY.

NOT HARD.

"Ye are my friends if ye do whatsoever I command you."—John 15:14.

We find that our friends are those in our own Church and those among our daily contacts who have things in common with us. This is the most gracious thing in life. It is friendship sanctified by a common faith and a common cause.

These people share my joys and sorrows. From them comes a faith that supports me. From them comes an inspiration to try to correct my faults and holds me to highest standards. When I am in need, these draw close to me.

Question: Am I giving to them that much?

Prayer.—Heavenly Father, who hast knit us together in Christ, teach us to love another with a pure heart, and ever to be careful for one another's welfare. Amen.

FRIDAY.

SOCIETY'S COMPLETE ADJUSTMENT.

"So we, being many, are one body in Christ, and every one members one of another."—Rom. 12:1-16.

Paul likens our relationship to others as to the relation of a member of our body to the whole body. Suppose one member is disabled, how the whole body is disabled! What a cripple the smallest bruise sometimes will make of us.

Suppose one is sensoriously critical of his neighbor. Such a criticism is only an attack on one's self. It is his own strength he is weakening.

If others are torn and weakened, I am the loser. If I am patient, forbearing, loving, helpful, I contribute to their good and the contribution reacts for good in me.

Prayer.—God, give us the beatitude of helpfulness, to bear others' burdens in good will, that we may realize Thy promise that Thy peace, which passeth understanding, may keep our hearts and minds on the upward path to glory. Amen.

SATURDAY.

SOCIETY'S CHALLENGE.

"Those members of the body which seem to be more feeble are necessary."—1 Cor. 12:22.

The weak member of the body challenges attention to make it strong. It honors the other members of the body with a task. It informs the other members of the body that they are strong and of consequence, important and necessary.

How like this is our relation to members of society! We find, then, when we do something for others that we love them more. More than that, we discover a new value in living, and the Christian way becomes real. Though our service may be ever so small and humble, yet it is needed, and therefore important and honorable.

Prayer.—Our Father, who hast appointed and divided unto all gifts and portions of labor, unto Thee we pray for a willing and humble heart, that we may accept our share with grace and thanksgiving. In Christ's name we ask it. Amen.

SUNDAY.

SO SHOULD WE.

"A friend of publicans and sinners."—Matt. 11:19.

Christ says, "If ye greet those who greet thee, what reward have ye? Do not even the same?" If Christ's example means anything, our helpfulness to others does not stop with friends. There are many outside that circle who need our friendship. If we are cold toward them, we may shut the gate of hope against them. An officious condescending effort to help them may repel them. Be friendly without the air of patronage. This is Jesus' way. It is the way He won the outcast. Nobody was beneath him. No one was outside the pail of his friendship.

Prayer.—Most merciful God, Father of us all, deliver us from all self-righteousness. In humility and kindness, lead us in the way of Him who is a Brother to all. Amen.

THE BATTLE CONTINUES.

The whole contest against Christ and His way of life is not only being carried on in foreign, non-Christian lands and in Russia. Today, in America, there are too many college and university professors, and many papers and magazines that are spreading atheism and unbelief. Universities that would not countenance false teachings and harmful speculations on science, do not hesitate to give free reign to professors who scout the idea of a God who has revealed Himself to man and of a code of morals that harmonizes with the character and laws of a wise and holy God. Some editors of periodicals and managers of publishing houses seem to think that their whole responsibility is to produce articles and stories and books that will sell, regardless of their truth, wholesome or degenerating influence. One well-known and formerly highly honored magazine recently advertised an article by an atheist to prove that Christ and His atonement for sin is an incredible myth and that the Christian God is non-existent. Another magazine of equal reputation published an article on "The Disappearance of God." Still other popular periodicals have printed pages on such subjects as "Stoicism, a Substitute for God," the "Failure of Christian Missions," and similar topics aiming to destroy faith in Christ and His teachings as set forth in the Bible.

Not content with this, publishers even print stories and essays against a high standard of ethics and morals. Many evils follow because leaders of public opinion, who provide reading for our young people and for all classes, undertake to undermine the basis of morality and belief in God. In non-Christian lands we deplore the ignorance and low or perverted standards of life. Are we not too complacent in our attitude toward false and harmful teaching in the schools and colleges to which we send our children, toward the theatricals and movies which we permit them to see, and toward the books and periodicals which they are reading? How can we expect to raise up a new generation of Christians who will purify and strengthen Church and State and business, and who will be living witnesses to Christ and His gospel, if we are not determined to fight against what is false and evil and fail to surround them with influences that will develop Christ-like faith, character and life?—Missionary Review.

According to the Association Against the Eighteenth Amendment, the law is not enforced, and then it complains of over-crowded jails, with 50,000 persons in jail because of violation of the prohibitory law. And 50,000 is a good many votes for the wets to lose.—Topeka Capital.

REV. JOSEPH W. FIX, Preacher.

MOTHER—THE WORLD'S CANDLE-LIGHT.

BY REV. J. W. FIX.

"Her candle goeth not out by night."—
Prov. 31:18.

Some years ago, in my native State, a notorious bootlegger was shot down in a drunken brawl. As the poor fellow lay dying in the blood-stream of his own body, he pleaded and begged some one to pray for him. But to his disappointment, the crowd stood by and no one said a word in response to a mother's son for prayer in such an hour. They all stood as dumb as stones, for not one of his notorious companions seemed to know how to pray, even in the hour of need. When they saw that he was dying, and realized that his request for prayer had not been granted by any member of his gang, they noticed that his lips were moving as life ebbed out. What was he saying? They all leaned forward and listened. He was praying the prayer of his babyhood days, the prayer his mother had taught him to say: "Now I lay me down to sleep, I pray Thee, Lord, my soul to keep."

As faintly he whispered these words, his life, ruined and wrecked, ebbed out. In the hour he needed most to pray, even though stained by sin and facing an unknown world, the drunkard could only pray the prayer his mother taught him when, as a baby on her knee, he learned to say: "Now I lay me down to sleep, I pray Thee, Lord, my soul to keep."

To all of us, this Mothers' Day, we think of this story, which is a true one, as being most pathetic indeed. Most assuredly it is tragic that no one should know how to pray for a fellow-man in time of death. But is it not well for us to think that a mother's prayer, taught him as a baby, lingered with him and, with his dying breath, ebbed out to the Father, who, as a child, he learned to trust, but from whom in later life had drifted afar. Stained by sin and facing death, this poor man prayed the only prayer he knew—the prayer his mother taught him at her knee. Not all the blasts of iniquity had put out the flickering candle of faith which his mother lighted in his baby heart; for hidden in the secret places of his soul he had carried through all the years of his life of prodigal sin, the prayer his mother taught him in the long ago. In the hour of defeat and death, his only words of comfort came from words that his mother taught him at her knee: "Now I lay me down to sleep, I pray Thee, Lord, my soul to keep."

Saying these words, he lay down to sleep in death, as in other years he had lain down to sleep in his mother's arms. In the dark hour of death and sin, the little candle which his mother had lighted in his life as a baby was found still burning. He had by no means outlived the influence of those early years when at eventide his mother tucked him in his little bed and, with a "God bless you," kissed him good-night.

The most wonderful calling in all the world is not that of being President of the nation, governor of the State, commander of the United States Army or Chief Justice of the Supreme Court; but in the simple, yet honorable, office of motherhood. Mothers' hands, lips and hearts light candles in the hearts and lives of men that do not go out. Indeed, her hands light the candles of faith which, on the high altars of the hearts of little children, that continue to burn forever. She passes from generation to generation the light that once shown in far-away Galilee many centuries ago. If she fails in this holiest of all privileges, then generations unborn will suffer. But mother's influence does not fail, and this is truly illustrated by the story of the man who remembered his mother's little prayer as he faced death. The mothers of each generation hold the future in their control. They are the candle-lighters of the world. Bonfires soon go out, but candles shine in the hearts of unborn generations. A mother's heart is the most potential influence upon the earth, for her candle goeth not out by night. Before considering some of the candles which our mothers have lighted within us and which goeth not out by night, let us read the proclamation issued each year by the President of our United States: "I proclaim the second Sunday in May as Mothers' Day, to be observed so that a tribute of love can be paid the mothers of the world by the wearing of a flower." Ministers throughout the country are reminded to observe the above decree by holding special services in their Churches. And so it becomes a pleasure for us this day of all days to pay tribute to the mothers of the world—or, as our text suggests, "the candle-lighters."

As we continue to think with the writer of Proverbs upon the closing chapter of his great contribution to our Bible, we find that several reasons are clearly stated which show why the candle which a mother lights shall not go out by night, but shall continue to burn in the hearts and lives of her children. Let us think of some of those ever-burning candles.

The Candle of Industry.

1. The hardest-working person in all the world is not the man who goes into the woods and cuts the tall timbers, nor the man who, with the spade, digs the ditches that contain the pipes which bring water to our homes, nor the man who crushes the stone in the quarries of the mountain-side. The world's greatest worker and most industrious person is a mother. Her work never ceases—"Man works from sun to sun, but mothers' work is never done." Her hands always find something to do, and, with a willing smile, she does her duty. Because of her insistent work set forth in example and service, her children rise up and call her blessed. They behold her wondrous works, and thus a candle is lighted in other lives that keeps burning.

Our national Department of Labor, numerous employment bureaus and societies for helping people get work are fine, but the instinctive desire to work comes from the busy mother. This candle which she lighteth, which goeth not out by night, makes possible all the industry of the world. The greatest tribute I can ever pay my mother, in whose honor I wear a white rose this morning, is that she taught me to work. This she did by precept and example. She often remarked that an idle brain was the devil's workshop. She often did the work of several people in a single day. I seldom remember seeing her idle for even a short period of time. She saw that nothing was left undone, and put forth every effort to see to it that all things were done well. Ofttimes she quoted:

"If a thing is once begun
Never leave it till it's done;
Be the task great or small,
Do it well or not at all."

As we read the 31st chapter of Proverbs, we find it to be a perfect Hebrew poem, and each of the twenty-two verses under consideration begin with a letter of the Hebrew alphabet. The writer describes most perfectly his mother in terms of a life devoted to industry. He refers to the fact that she is not only industrious herself, but that she keeps those above her busy. She seeketh wool and flax and worketh willingly with her hands. She is like a merchant ship—she bringeth her food from afar. She riseth also while it is yet night, and giveth meat to her household. She considereth a field and buyeth it; with the fruit of her hands, she planteth a vineyard. She layeth her hands to the spindle, and her hands hold the distaff. She maketh herself tapestry, she maketh fine linen and selleth it.

Thus we see that she maketh and selleth the products of her hands, such as spinning and weaving. She watches over the conduct of the entire household. She sees to it that provision is made for her family.

The Candle of Charity.

2. "She stretcheth out her hand to the poor; yea, she reacheth forth her hands to the needy." A good mother is as intent upon giving as upon getting. Solomon tells us that his mother gladly gave of her best to the needy, and always loved the poor. She was charitable, and charity is one of the three greatest virtues mentioned by Jesus of Nazareth and emphasized by St. Paul in his thirteenth chapter to the Corinthians.

Christian Orphanage

Dear Friends:

After eleven rainy Saturdays, it has cleared up and the sunshine makes us take on new life. We have had so much rain that we have been unable to do much farm work. But the weather has been so cool that we feel now if the sun shines for a few days that we will soon be able to get our farm work going in full blast. As we have had no late frosts or freezes, and having so much rain, the shrubbery is beautiful to behold. In all my life I hardly think I ever saw the dogwood so beautiful as it is in this section this season. Nature has arrayed them in their most beautiful dress, and one cannot help but admire them in all their splendor.

German measles has been the order of the day at the Orphanage for the last few weeks, but so mild that they have given us very little concern. One of our matrons had to play young again and have German measles. So far during the entire winter and spring we have had very little sickness. The Lord has been good to us and has dealt very gently with us.

POUNDED.

On April 10th, just after dark, Mrs. Dollar and I were sitting on the front porch at the parsonage when we noticed that cars began to drive up and stop in front of the Church; and they continued. Then the good people of the Lanett Christian Church began filing into our sitting-room. By the time they were through coming in, our pantry was well furnished with flour, meat, lard, sugar, coffee, syrup, meal, salt, soda, soap, potatoes, rice, canned goods, preserves, pickles; in fact, every thing good to eat in abundance, and just a few dollars to go with the very few we already had.

Then the pastor and his family were invited in, and Bro. J. T. Cox, the senior deacon, acted as spokesman and presented to us, in very touching words, this splendid pounding, assuring us that it was a token of their appreciation for our services and of their love and esteem for us. Then we tried to pray and ask God's blessing upon them and to ask God to help us to be a better and a more appreciative servant.

It is a real pleasure to serve such a kind and thoughtful people as the good people of the La-nett Christian Church, and we shall try to show our appreciation by rendering a more faithful service.

J. D. DOLLAR, Pastor.

NEWS ITEMS.

News comes from the Liberty Spring Woman's Missionary Society of a devotional meeting, in the interest of the spiritual life department, held in the home of Mrs. N. T. Bradshaw, an invalid with rheumatism, on Wednesday, April 22nd, with about twenty members and two visitors—Dr. W. W. Staley and Mr. Shepherd—present. A program consisting of Bible study, prayer readings and singing, was conducted by the spiritual life superintendent, Mrs. J. A. Ashley. A blooming plant was then presented to Mrs. Bradshaw.

After the program, a social hour was enjoyed, and during this time fruit and candies were served. This is the fourth of such meetings held in homes of the sick and shut-ins, sponsored by the spiritual life department of this society and prove to be very much worth while and helpful to its members in a spiritual way. This is a splendid idea and one that all societies could well adopt.

WINDSOR, VA.

the God and Redeemer of the world, in His program to lift this old world from sin, degradation and ruin, to righteousness, peace, prosperity and joy. The King Eternal has honored us by asking us to be partners with Him in the glorious work of saving a lost world. All disciples of Jesus—humanity's greatest Benefactor—should copy His life, spirit and love, and work for the gracious ends for which He lived and died. It is our solemn duty to individuals, classes, groups and nations. In its very nature, the gospel is a missionary Word and the true Church of Christ; in fact, a mission society. Remember, where there is selfishness—an interest only in ourselves—we cannot do the will of our loving, Heavenly Father. The best way to honor God is to place Him and His kingdom first.

When we Christian people think of the spiritual distress existing among those who know not God, should we not be willing to give to Him our time, our talent, social abilities, influence, material possessions, everything, to relieve such distress? Christianity is a world religion and demands a world view. Surely, nothing we can possibly do will strengthen the bonds of brotherhood around the world like the earnest pushing forward the greatest business in the world, the work of foreign missions.

My friends, kindness sweetens everything, and the more of self-forgetfulness, the more of blessedness. Therefore, let us serve in the spirit of the Blessed Redeemer, who "went about doing good." Religion is the art of living well for our glorified Lord, the King of glory, and like Him.

E. B. WHITE.

THE SUN'S PULPIT.

Most all that we know about giving and serving comes to us through the teachings of mother. As we look back upon her life we see that love is the one word that dominates her being. She passes it on to her children. The example of her goodness shall never, never pass away. In her mind is always the need and thought of her children and her neighbors. She is gravely concerned about the welfare of all who are in distress, and to them she stretches forth a hand of willingness.

One of the finest tributes that can be paid my own mother is that she always believed in the human touch, in personal approach and visitation. With her the words of Jesus were lived. "I was hungry, and ye gave me meat; I was thirsty, and ye gave me drink; I was a stranger, and she took me in; naked, and she clothed me; sick, and she ministered to me; in prison, and she came unto me."

"Why must you polish the lens with the palm of your hand?" asked a man who was visiting the lens factory and observing a workman polishing a fine telescope lens. "There comes a time in making high-grade lens," said the man, "when nothing can be substituted for the human touch." My mother, who lighted the candle of charity and love in the lives of those round about her, believed and lived by applying the kind, human touch of charity at all times and to all people. Just before her death, she copied a poem and, in her own handwriting, gave me the words which I now hold very dear. Listen to them:

"'Tis the human touch in this world that counts:
The touch of your hand and mine,
Which means far more to the fainting heart
Than shelter, and bread and wine.
For shelter is gone when the day is o'er,
And bread lasts only a day;
But the touch of hand and the sound of the voice
Sing on in the heart away."

The Candle of Speech.

3. "She openeth her mouth with wisdom, and in her tongue is the law of kindness." The first words one ever hears come from the lips of a mother. These words are from a tongue which, the writer tells us, has in it the law of kindness. We learn our first words from mother. The great schools and universities have their place in the world of learning and instruction, but the words learned from mother are the most essential and of greater value than all other instruction received in later years. Mother lays the foundation-stone upon which the school may build. The sweet voice filled with wisdom, gentleness and kindness is the language of angels which rightly instructs her children in clean speech. But, sad to say, yet true, her children often forget her wondrous teachings; but the little prayer which she first taught at her knee shall never die: "Now I lay me down to sleep, I pray Thee, Lord, my soul to keep."

ELON COLLEGE

of the

CONGREGATIONAL CHRISTIAN CHURCHES OF THE SOUTHEAST

ELON was founded to train Christian leaders for the New South.

ELON has done its task well—one graduate in seven being in the Christian ministry. The other six express Christian leadership in the various professions and vocations. Experience teaches that spiritual leadership must be indigenous.

The South is now a New South ready for an inclusive Church, the type of Church for which Elon has stood for forty years and for which she is prepared to produce capable leadership.

With no Church in the community, save the College Auditorium, ELON has practiced Christian Union for faculty, students, and community for four decades.

Its contribution to Christian Education is nationally known and approved.

Its Christian Education Building, providing laboratory facilities for religious leadership training, is unique and is the first college building of its type in the world.

ELON confines itself to undergraduate liberal arts work with that religious emphasis which befits the Christian College.

In ELON the Congregational-Christian Church has an asset of marvelous hopefulness.

The South needs her Yale, her Oberlin, her Carleton, her Pomona for the intellectual leadership of the United Church. Many regard ELON as strategically located and spiritually endowed to become such a center of illumination and leadership training.

OBITUARIES.

TROGDON.

(The editor, being away in February, failed to get the facts below until this week. Bro. Trogdon was a Christian gentleman of the highest type and lived a life whose influence will never pass from the earth. The facts below are from the Greensboro Daily News of February 19, 1931.—J. O. A., Ed.)

H. Kelly Trogdon, 86, pioneer merchant, of Liberty, and one of the best-known residents of this community, died at his home here at 4:30 o'clock this afternoon from pneumonia. He had been ill for the past two weeks, but developed pneumonia only Tuesday morning. He was the oldest resident of Liberty.

Mr. Trogdon was born in Randolph County in 1844 and came to Liberty in 1886, the same year in which the town was incorporated. He organized the mercantile firm of Griffin & Trogdon, which for many years was the leading firm of its kind in Liberty. He was active in the civil life of the town. He was a charter member of the Liberty Christian Church and a member of the board of deacons for many years.

Mr. Trogdon is survived by one son, T. W. Trogdon, of High Point; three daughters, Mrs. Estella Ray of Liberty, Mrs. H. M. Steed of Candor, and Mrs. B. S. Kennett of High Point College; one sister, Mrs. A. T. Guyer, of Lenoir; six grandchildren and three great-grandchildren. His wife died five years ago.

Funeral service will be held Thursday afternoon at 3 o'clock from the home. Dr. C. H. Rowland, pastor of the First Christian Church, Greensboro, will be in charge, assisted by Rev. J. D. Williams, of the Liberty Methodist Protestant Church. Interment will be made in Fairview Cemetery.

CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH SOLD.—

Rev. Willsie Martin, pastor of Wilshire Methodist Church, Los Angeles, has for many months been endeavoring to find a suitable site for a new building, has acquired the edifice built by the Congregational Church at Plymouth and Wilshire Boulevard. This building was erected at a cost of $529,000, but internal dissensions and financial difficulties forced the Congregational Church Extension Society to offer it for sale. This sale will be regretted by many of the constituency of the Congregationalists.

THREE-MILLION-DOLLAR BUILDING.—

The Christian Scientists, under the board of directors of the First Church of Christ, Scientists, Boston, announced the early erection of a great publishing house in Boston to cost $3,000,000. The building will occupy 58,000 feet of land and will serve the needs of all the Church publications. Such movements and expenditure of money for the propagation of this cult should provoke Christian people to greater sacrifices, liberality, loyalty and devotion to what the Church represents in the teachings of Christ.

BIBLE SEMINARY CELEBRATES.—

The thirtieth anniversary of the Biblical Seminary, in New York City, a training-school for religious workers, organized by Dr. Wilbert W. White, who is still president of the school, was celebrated in New York with a public banquet on April 10th. Representatives of many denominations assembled and gave testimony to the value of the work done by the seminary, and many more could have added their testimony if they had been present, for thousands have been trained for religious work here and gone out to bless the world.

CHRISTIAN EDUCATION.—

The Elon College School of Christian Education for Sunday School, Christian Endeavor and various lines of Christian work will be in session at Elon College, June 10-17, and will be attended by many young people of the Congregational and Christian Churches and other denominations for better preparation as leaders, teachers and directors of the educational work of the Church. Those who are so fortunate as to attend this school will find comradeship, fellowship and brotherhood emphasized along with fine preparations for further Christian work.

EPISCOPAL CONGRESS.—

The fifty-seventh annual Church congress of the Episcopal Church, held at historic Christ Church, Cincinnati, April 28th to May 1st, was expected to bring to its meeting about 500 bishops and priests of the Church. Rev. Howard Chandler Robbins was to preside, and it is evident that reports of the meeting will reveal many controversial matters. The religious world at this time is not static, inactive nor dead, but is dynamic, progressive and ventures into larger fields of activity, and pioneering into new realms of thought, creative intelligence, and more liberal fellowship with the Christian bodies of the world.

HARTFORD RAISES STANDARD.—

Hartford Theological Seminary is considering plans for a revision of its curriculum so as to provide a broader and more liberal field of theological education for a limited number of students of high qualifications. According to Dean Rockwell H. Potter, the educational aim of the seminary is primarily the preparation of scholarly ministers rather than ministerial scholars. The curriculum committee stresses the fact that student training should be fundamental rather than scattered and superficial. Recognizing the fact that there is now a surplus of ministers, an endeavor will be made to develop a rigid selectivity in seminary enrollments. Only those with high qualifications will be received.

WOMEN PREACHING IN SCOTLAND.—

The Presbytery of London North, on motion of Dr. Hubert Gray, has adopted by six votes an overture to the English Presbyterian General Assembly in favor of ordaining women to the ministry. (Women elders have already been authorized.) The Continuing Church in Scotland this winter licensed its first woman preacher, Mrs. Edith S. Martin, a B. S. graduate, with honors of Queen's University, Belfast and a widow of a Presbyterian minister, but she has not yet been called to any pulpit. Rev. Vers Findlay, who is doing excellent work and who wears well in spite of frequent public engagements, continues as the only ordained woman preacher in Scotland. There is neither Greek nor Roman, bond nor free, male nor female with our Father in His kingdom.

RESTRICTING SPEECH.—

On account of Communistic tendencies and the fear that they may develop into dangerous uprisings, strangely though it seems to those who have known the freedom accorded people generally in British territories, a serious effort has been made during the past year to establish complete police control over public discussion. Ruthless methods of dealing with a tiny handful of Communists suddenly gave that group an important place in national thought. As a reaction against this manner of dealing with this problem, there is a general consensus of opinion that the extremely matured judges who represented civil authority over the police and who lamentably failed to function as expected will be replaced by men equally able, somewhat younger and more in touch with the living realities of life.

WAKEFIELD RESTORATION.—

After a century and a half of neglect, the birthplace of George Washington is being rebuilt as nearly as possible to its original condition, and will be opened to the public as a national shrine on Washington's birthday in 1932. The farmhouse in which Washington was born was built about 1720 by Augustine Washington, the father of George, near Pope's Creek, Westmoreland County, Virginia, on the Washington plantation known today as Wakefield. The house was destroyed by fire in 1780. It is being reproduced by the Wakefield National Memorial Association, aided by the United States Government. Like its prototype of long ago, the house is being constructed of hand-made bricks of clay taken from the identical field from which the original material came.

TREND ON EDUCATION.—

In Great Britain, during the past winter, many educational practices have come under review, notably examinations. At the close of the conference held at Oxford on "New Ideals of Education," the president, Mr. Roger A. Raven, reviewed the discussion and the main ideals which had been expressed. Education, it had been brought out, should be less "bookish," but there is danger that might be too vocational. The question of training for leisure is of very great importance in the present hour. There is general agreement that the secret of teaching lay in the freedom of the individual, and anything like mass-teaching must go. There is great risk that the controlling of that part of human nature and let free will run riot. The teachers in the discussion believed in the development of the whole man.

RUSSIAN SITUATION.—

Nowhere is the new stirring of conscience so manifest as in the speeches heard and the books sought dealing with the Russian situation. Until recently the orthodox attitude was one of complete scorn mingled with hatred and an inflexible determination that there was nothing to learn from Russia under the present regime. The five-year plan was proclaimed a failure. Recently all this is changed. Vast numbers of people suspect that they have been tricked into a wrong attitude and many of them wonder whether there is not something which orthodox Christians must understand and perhaps imitate in the achievement of the Soviet republic. The board of evangelism and social service of the United Church of Canada has just closed its annual session by inviting the sympathetic study of its people on behalf of the Soviet experiment as it affects both Christian philosophy and practice.

NOTES-PERSONALS

Brother pastor, fellow-church member, your Church, the kingdom of God, the cause of righteousness and the plea of the gospel need your co-operation and your help now in making a contribution to missions, so that the work we are trying to do in the name of our Lord and for His sake shall not suffer, and so that our own moral and spiritual lives will be enriched.

Every Church and every pastor can at least give the people an opportunity of making a contribution to missions, whether large or small, and thus place the responsibility where it belongs, viz: upon the individual who can, if given a chance and an invitation, give at least something out of his living to help take this world for Christ and reveal His love and life to men and women who are perishing without that light.

Rev. F. C. Lester, president of the Board of Christian Education, and Miss Jewel Truitt, secretary, of Waverly, Va., were visitors at Elon and THE SUN office the past week. They attended the Congregational Council of the Carolinas, in Greensboro. They are exceedingly anxious that wide publicity be given to the approaching summer school for Christian workers at Elon College, the program being a most promising one.

Rev. W. T. Scott, United Church, Salisbury, was a visitor at the editorial office Friday, May 8th, coming over from the annual Conference of Congregational Churches of Greensboro. Bro. Scott is pastor of our United Church, Salisbury, N. C., and reports the work improving steadily and the outlook hopeful and quite promising. He feels, as many others do, that steps must be taken to organize a Christian Church or a United Church in Winston-Salem. More than fifty Christian Church members have been found in that city, and we have no doubt many Congregationalists are there also.

The following from the Nashville Christian Advocate shows that all the courage and the daring of womankind has not gone out of the world: "A mob was stopped at the door of the jail in Huntingdon, Tenn., a few weeks ago by the wife of the sheriff. She was Mrs. J. C. Butler, and she told the mob they could get the prisoner only over her dead body, saying, 'You can't run anything like that over me.' The courage and determination of this unarmed woman was too much for the would-be lynchers. They went away. The prisoner was safe. All hail to Mrs. Butler and a few cheers for men who still respect womanhood and yield to a manifestation of righteous bravery!"

Pleasant Cross Church, with its building burned and the congregation worshipping elsewhere while they are sacrificing nobly to put up a new and even better building, sets an example that should challenge many of our congregations who have substantial houses of worship, in that it has taken promptly and sent in the special offering for missions. The secret of this is that Pleasant Cross has a pastor who cares and who teaches in his Church the spirit of missions, which is the spirit of our Lord. If all our pastors had the same vision and the same love for our Lord and desire to share His love with the world as Rev. H. V. Cox, Ramseur, N. C., we would write missionary history and spiritual enrichment that would be an inspiration to the whole Church.

One of the outstanding addresses of the Congregational Conference of the Carolinas, meeting at First Church, Greensboro, last week, was that by Dr. Ernest W. Riggs, of Boston, on "The World and an Advancing Church." Dr. Riggs is one of the secretaries of the American Board and has a comprehensive view of the work the Church is trying to do overseas as well as in the homeland. He said that sometimes accusation is made that we are spending too much money abroad in carrying the gospel to others; whereas, the fact shows that about one dollar in twenty given to and through the Church goes into the foreign work. Another striking statement was that "the spiritual level of a Church goes up with its missionary activity, and recedes with its indifference to missions and inactivity in missionary work." The spiritual task of the Church is missions.

Rev. J. A. Denton, the happy and faithful pastor of Turner's Chapel, near Sanford, N. C., writing May 4th, says: "Turner's Chapel is building a brick Church under a plan that calls for nine Sunday School class-rooms, with other modern equipment. The members and friends have been very liberal, many of them making great sacrifices. The work goes along well. We have practically finished putting up the walls, the sub-flooring is in, and also the window-frames. We hope to get the roof on soon." We know Turner's Chapel congregation, how faithful they are, serving and sacrificing at this time that they may have an adequate house in which to worship God and gather the children of the community for religious training. Any SUN reader wishing to have a part in this most worthy work can do so by sending a check or assistance to Mrs. R. L. Ross, Route 5, Sanford, N. C. It will be money well and wisely invested.

St. Luke's Church, of which Rev. R. S. Stephens was pastor, Dover, Del., has merged with the People's Church of that city, Dr. Roy C. Helfenstein, pastor. The Church Bulletin of May 3rd carried the following announcement: "This is formally to announce that in the interest of larger service to the kingdom, the St. Luke's Christian Church, of Dover, Del., has merged with the People's Church, of Dover, said merger taking place with due process of law the past week. The trustees of St. Luke's Church have conveyed the property of said Church to the trustees of people's Church, and the members of St. Luke's Church automatically became members of People's Church, their pastor, R. S. Stephens already being an honored member of People's Church. A suitable tablet will be placed in the foyer of People's Church commemorating the merger. We cordially welcome St. Luke's Christian Church into the fellowship of People's Church."

The twenty-second annual meeting of the Conference of Congregational Churches of the Carolinas was held in First Christian Church, Greensboro, May 5-7th. By invitation, delegates were present from the three Christian Conferences of the State—Eastern, Western, and North Carolina and Virginia. Our Christian people seemed delighted to attend the Conference, and all seemed mutually interested. There was no distinction between the Congregationalists and Christians, so far as the privileges and the fellowship of the Conference were concerned. Dr. Rowland and his Church did all they could to make the Conference happy and successful. The theme of the Conference was "An Advancing Church." This theme was constantly kept before the Conference in reports and addresses. The moderator was Rev. John B. Clark, D. D., Tryon, N. C., and the sweet and gracious spirit of the man permeated the proceedings of the Conference and was a constant inspiration to the entire body. There were able addresses and reports, and the Conference seemed to go well. A vote was unanimous that the Congregational and Christian Churches merge and that the details of the merger be worked out according to the plans already adopted by the General Council and the General Convention.

ON THE "DRY" QUESTION.

(Lieutenant Governor J. Henry Hazel, an official in the People's Christian Church, Dover, Del., presides at State prohibition meeting and expresses his views on the temperance question.)

We are here today because we are interested in our State—interested in the financial, the social, the religious life of the people—and we believe that all of these can best be sustained and advanced by a sober citizenry. Alcohol has been the curse of the human race for centuries. Every nation that has gone down to destruction in the past two thousand years has been pushed on its way by the destroyer, alcohol. It has destroyed the judgment, wrecked the vision of the leaders, and so carried nations to destruction.

If this great country of ours ever falls, it will be by decay from within; not by forces from without. Washington, the father of this country, had to caution his officers against the use of liquor. Lincoln, the saviour of our nation, spoke of the glory of a nation that would be free of human slavery and would also be free of the curse of strong drink. In the late war, our army, raised hurriedly, practically untrained, proved to have the vitality needed to win the war. It was a sober army—no rum ration served to its men—yet they were the men that had the fire and dash to carry on the war against the Germans and drive them from the soil of France. Ladies and gentlemen, I am here to say to you, in the hour of need, give me the sober soldier, the soldier doctor, and the man for any need that has the clear vision, the cool head, the clean body free from the poison of alcohol.

"This great nation of ours is the first to outlaw the liquor traffic—a record that should make any American shout for joy and thrill with pride. The eighteenth amendment is a victory over a foe more deadly than poison gas or high explosive shell. It is a victory over an enemy that cannot only destroy the body, but has the power to destroy the soul. How many countless thousands have gone down before its deadly attack? We have outlawed it here in America, and with your prayers and work and the help of the power of righteousness, we will keep it outlawed.

To do this we must know the "facts" and publish them, and I am here to say the State of Delaware is under deep obligation to Harold D. Wilson, State prohibition enforcement officer, and his fact-finding commission, and I am proud to belong to one of them. Mr. Wilson's newspaper survey speech shows very clearly the improved condition under which we live today over what the newspaper reported the conditions twenty years ago. The findings of the different committees prove very conclusively to the intelligent mind the fact that far, far less liquor is consumed today than in the days of license sale. Since Mr. Wilson's advent in the State, enforcement has wonderfully improved. The morale of the dry forces is on the upward grade. The need is for more sincere, honest, capable officials like him, and the law will be enforced as well as any law on the statute books. If our State, county and city officials were all as sincere, our problem would be solved.

Let us continue the fight, never retreating, never compromising, ever forward, trusting in the right, till not only this nation, but the world, will be won to temperance, and there shall not be a drunken man, a ruined woman, a destroyed home in this wide world.

CONGREGATIONAL NEWS

REV. E. C. GILLETTE, Editor; REV. F. P. ENSMINGER, and REV. M. J. SWEET, Associates.

NEW PORT RICHEY, FLA.: Rev. Ralph Krout is pastor of this Church. The Church building has been reroofed, and there have been other minor repairs. During Lent, Thursday evening vesper services were held.

WEST PALM BEACH, FLA.: During the period that the Church is without a pastor, the midweek meetings are being resumed and conducted under the auspices of the Christian Endeavor Society. The society is also conducting a nursery during the hours of the Sunday services.

MIAMI, FLA.: The Congregational ministers of this city and vicinity gave a luncheon on April 27th, in honor of Dr. Ernest W. Riggs, secretary of the American Board, who had spoken in three of the Churches in that city on Sunday. Dr. Riggs and the ministers discussed informally problems of missionary promotion.

MIAMI SHORES, FLA.: The new hall which has been erected on the Church grounds for class purposes, with also a library, has been named "Crist Hall" in honor of Rev. Wm. L. Crist, a beloved pastor who was compelled to retire a few years ago because of ill health and who lives in a little cottage furnished by the Church.

CORAL GABLES, FLA., Rev. Don G. Henshaw, pastor. The young people's class of this Church has grown in the last five months from a membership of fourteen to sixty-five. It is composed of persons of high school and college age and is conducted by Miss Louise Cunningham. They recently served a Church supper in the Church lounge.

KEY WEST, FLA.: Rev. E. Richard Evans, pastor, reports that the average attendance at the evening service during the past quarter was one hundred and ninety-five, with an average of one hundred and fifty at the midweek meeting. He also reported that the Church completed its year without debt, and that they have started to work to refinish the walls of the auditorium, and "when this is finished, we will be in good shape for years to come."

AVON PARK, FLA.: The Men's Club of the Church held a supper on the evening of April 28th, at which Dr. Ernest W. Riggs and Dr. Edwin C. Gillette were the guests. The principal address was given by Dr. Riggs on "Changing Turkey." The next meeting of the club will be a "fish fry" at the Boy Scout camp, May 26th. The pastor of this Church, Dr. A. P. Vaughn, was elected chairman of the department of evangelism of the Florida Conference.

THORSBY: May is a very busy month for Thorsby Institute, with the last number of the lyceum course scheduled for the 8th, a junior-senior party, senior picnic, musical recital, field day, alumni night May 23rd, while baccalaureate Sunday will be May 24th, at which Rev. E. W. Butler, treasurer of Thorsby, will preach the sermon. May 28th will be class night, and May 29th commencement day. Rev. F. E. Jenkins, D. D., president of the board, will give the commencement address. There are nineteen seniors.

ROLLINS CHAPEL: President Hamilton Holt has announced the appointment of Dr. Charles Atwood Campbell as dean of the Knowles Memorial Chapel of Rollins College. Since 1926 Dr. Campbell has been professor of Biblical literature in the college. Dr. Holt says: "The sympathy, the human understanding and the kindness, much more than the recognized erudition of Dr. Campbell, have made him the happy choice as the one to carry this responsibility." Dr. Holt also reports that student committees are already at work to find and recommend ways of making the chapel of the greatest service in the enrichment of the student life. There is also being studied the problem of co-operation between the chapel and the service and activities of Churches of Winter Park. The chapel will seat about 800, and is in process of erection at the present time.

FLORIDA ASSOCIATION.

The forty-eighth annual meeting of the Florida Congregational Conference was held with the Orange City Church, of which Rev. Thomas H. Derrick is pastor. The Conference was of a high order. Dr. H. Stiles Bradley, formerly of Atlanta and now of Portland, Me., one of the guest speakers, said in his address that, after twenty years of attending New England Conferences, he had not heard a stronger conference program nor better speaking than at this conference. The contributions made by Dr. Bradley, Dr. Bloom, Secretary Ernest W. Riggs, Rev. Lucy T. Ayres, and President Hamilton Holt, of Rollins College, and the sermon by Dr. A. P. Vaughn, of Avon Park, were outstanding features of the meeting. The largely attended fellowship supper was also a feature. One hundred and sixty were fed, while many had to be turned away.

The Chamber of Commerce had decorated the town, probably the first time that such an honor had been bestowed on the conference. They also served free orange juice and gave away oranges. The delegates were all entertained at the Orange City Inn, which was kept open for the occasion. This hospitality was appreciated and added greatly to the fine fellowship of the gathering.

For the first time in several years, the conference elected a layman as moderator—Mr. Robert G. Williams, of Lake Worth, which city invited the conference for its next session. Rev. James E. Parker, of Palm City, was elected assistant moderator; Rev. David B. Spencer, of Mount Dora, was elected preacher, with Rev. Walter Metcalf as alternate. Rev. E. C. Gillette was elected delegate to the National Council at Seattle. Rev. Walter Metcalf was elected director-at-large, and other directors and officers were re-elected. One of the interesting actions taken was the vote to hold the next meeting over the weekend, so that more laymen and young people could attend.

The annual meeting of the Federation of Congregational Women of the Florida Conference was held with an interesting program. The officers who were re-elected were as follows: president, Mrs. Robert G. Williams, of Lake Worth; secretary, Mrs. H. C. James, of Orange City; and treasurer, Miss Nettie E. Gault, of St. Petersburg. Mrs. E. C. Grover, of Winter Park, was elected to represent the federation on the board of directors of the State conference.

The meetings this year were featured by less program addresses and more by round-table or forum discussions, which added greatly to the interest. Among resolutions adopted was one conference was a most successful and outstanding.

PLEASANT HILL ACADEMY.

April 24-26th, about forty young people from Pleasant Hill Academy and surrounding communities met for an intensive training school in methods for conducting vacation Church schools. These young people intend to carry on Bible schools in the widely scattered communities from which they come, and they worked with all their will and enthusiasm to get all the help possible for that end. Mrs. G. Floyd Zimmerman and Miss Brown, from Nashville, led classes in story-telling, dramatics, worship, program building.

Miss Marguerite Davison, extension worker for the district, assisted in the hand-work, games, and primary plans. Rev. E. E. White was in charge of the school and shared in all its plans and activities. He has a wonderful program for these young people, and is to keep in touch with their work throughout the summer. Through them, many sections of the area about Pleasant Hill will enjoy the benefits of some religious training through the summer months, and the young people in turn will grow under the guidance of Mr. White and his corps of trained workers into real leaders in their communities.

Besides the Bible school plans, there is to be continued the helpful work of the 4-H Clubs and other farm and gardening societies. This work is in full progress now, and has contributed wonderfully to the welfare of people who have been hard pressed by the drought and depression. There is indeed an extension program heading up at Pleasant Hill, and it extends its influence into all phases of life for its enrichment.

RESOLUTIONS.

Resolutions of the Congregational Advisory Board of the Southeast, at Nashville, Tenn., April 16, 1931:

The findings committee, at the close of these several days of our stay in Nashville, find that words poorly express our sense of gratitude for the way in which we have been received and cared for.

1. By the youthful but promising Collegese Church, through the cordiality of the pastor, Dr. Pierce, and the gracious hospitality of its members and friends.

2. By the use of the building of the Y. M. C. A. Graduate School, which has furnished an auditorium adequate and comfortable, and a cafeteria unexcelled for our refreshment. It is our pleasure to commend this institution and its work in physical education, and its president, Dr. W. D. Weatherford.

3. For the stimulus we have received in this neighborhood of colleges and for our hopeful impressions of the student body as represented by Vanderbilt, Peabody and Scarrett, and especially for the courtesies of President W. J. Campbell of the Atlanta Foundation, and our acquaintance with the students of our seminary.

4. For the courtesies extended to us throughout the city and its ministrations to us through attractive buildings and beautiful landscape.

5. The Advisory Board of the Southeast extend hearty thanks to those of our national leaders—Drs. Denison, Riggs, Stock, Merrill, Dana, Fiske, and Kedzie—who have lent us their wisdom and gracious spirit; also to our own Dr. Bloom for his devoted leadership and efficient service.

PRINCIPLES OF THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

(1) The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.

(2) Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.

(3) The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.

(4) Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship and of Church membership.

(5) The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by, all.

THE PURPOSE OF THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

The purpose of this Church is to cultivate a spirit of union among the followers of our Lord Jesus Christ of every persuasion, and to secure, if possible, the associate efforts of all true religious teachers in pointing the wicked to "the Lamb of God who taketh away the sin of the world."

The peculiar doctrines and tenets which have confused and distracted the Christian world are remanded to private judgment, and hence cease to be matters for debate, only in so far as may be necessary to prevent a sectarian influence from entering the Church.

This Church requires no compromise of faith on the part of any child of God in order to communion or fellowship; here, denominational distinctions cease to exist, and Christian love binds the brotherhood together.

The purpose of this Church will be consummated in the conversion of the world and the union of all Christians.

A PASSION FOR SOULS.

Has the Church lost its passion for winning souls to Christ and the kingdom? The history of the Church reveals the fact that at certain periods the Church had such a passion. Hast that passion been lost, obscured or spent itself? If so, what can be done to recover it?

At the beginning of every marked advance of the Church there has been, and must be, this passion for souls. We must bear in mind that the life and the labor of our Lord was that of love. This is the foundation principle that reveals His character, and also the character of His Church and of His work, and love is a passion.

Let the world, if it will, look on and declare that the Church is an emotional institution, and that it seeks to reach and stir the emotions of men and women. So be it, and God grant it. We accept the accusation, and hug the challenge to our hearts. Intellect is not enough. Reason is not enough. Knowledge is not enough. There is something deeper and more fundamental in man than any or all of these. A human philosopher, with divine insight, has pointed out that thought is deeper than all speech, and feelings are deeper than all thought. We try to get people to think like we think in order that their feelings may be stirred to do as we ourselves are willing to do. In 1830 a French philosopher received from his friends in Paris, who were overthrowing the Bourbons, this message: "A terrible game is being played here; our heads are in danger; come on and add yours." History says he came. That was the appeal of passion for a man to make a great adventure, to hazard something, for a cause that was threatening danger and death. The Church of the living God has ever been playing a terrible game. Its game is one of peril and passion and power.

This was the appeal of Jesus to His followers, a call which went home with added realism after Jesus had laid down His life on Calvary. This world has never been moved to righteousness to revolution, to upheaval, nor turned upside down by culture, scholarship or learning only. That to which our Lord Christ challenges mankind is the turning of the world upside down, changing the normal order of things with a consuming fire through the passionate service of winning souls. Greece was never nearer to moral decay and death than when she was at the height of her intellectual achievement. Rome was never more immoral and decadent than when her culture was at its highest. Through "kultur," Germany came near to wrecking a world. Some one has truly said that the followers of Jesus in every generation are a company of revolutionists who turn their world upside down, where they do not find it love-side up. It is the adventurers and the daring in the name of righteousness that conquer the world for Christ.

The most daring thing, and the most romantic thing on this earth is the adventure in righteousness. Every crime and every sin is hoary with age, and worn with repetition, and threadbare with time. But there are yet green and fertile fields of righteousness unexplored, and the men and women who have carried the Church forward and are carrying it forward are those who have a passion for souls, a feeling that there is something deeper and more abiding in the world than in things of time and sense. It takes fire to burn up the filth of this sin-cursed world.

We cannot think of a fundamental motive or movement in the Church that was not born in passion and carried out with the flame and zeal of passion. Our Lord Christ Himself moved to the cross, His and the world's supreme event, through a passion. He spent hours of agony as He moved toward that mighty event and the inevitable there. He sweat great drops of blood and spent a night in prayer, passionately pleading with God that the cup might pass, but, nevertheless, victoriously crying out, "Not my will, but Thine be done." If one does not wish to see and feel the flame of passion, one better not read of Pentecost and the beginning of the early Church when 3,000 souls were born in a day.

If one does not wish to be warmed by a flame of God's own kindling, one better not read of the conversion and activities of Paul. If one does not believe in flames that flare up and will not be quenched, even with blood and death, one better not read the history of the early Church, during a period of 200 years, in which the message of our Lord swept out from the center of civilization and girdled the globe.

If one does not wish to be warmed with a flame of fervor for the living God, one better not read of the early days of reformation, when Martin Luther hazarded his life and staked all he had on the issue of salvation through grace. If one does not want to catch the zeal through which the kingdom of God has been enlarged itself, one better not read the history of Knox and of Wesley, and of thousands who risked all for their Lord and counted not their lives dear unto the death. If one does not wish to see the flame that never can be quenched flaming up within our own generation, one better not read the life of D. L. Moody, of James J. Finney and hundreds of others who, like these, not only had their intellects moved, but their hearts set on fire with the flame of God.

The Church of the living God moves forward fundamentally and primarily on a passion, a passion that drives one to do all and risk all for the sake of saving human souls. The Church was born not in reason, but in revelation; and it hasn't been carried forward by the force of trained intellect, but by the fervor of souls on fire for God and truth and righteousness, sustained by intellects dedicated to God and the uplift of mankind.

Trained intellects, cultured minds, educated heads are not enough; the heart must be set on fire for God and truth and righteousness, if the Church is to advance on what Thomas Carlyle called "chaos and the dark." May God help His Church to recover this passion for souls, this power by which alone the Church advances.

THE SPIRITUAL AND THE SECULAR.

A speaker in a recent conference declared that he discerned the repeated sounding of the spiritual note and a warning against the secular. There is a difference.

The spiritual is that which emphasizes and brings to the fore that which is spiritual, divine, eternal, Christ-like. The secular is that which elevates and exalts things, puts emphasis upon and directs attention to the physical, the material, the temporal. Paul had this distinction in mind and made it clear when he wrote in Romans 8:5-7: "For they that are after the flesh, do mind the things of the flesh; but they that are after the Spirit, the things of the Spirit. For to be carnally minded is death; but to be spiritually minded is life and peace. Because the carnal mind is enmity against God; for it is not subject to the law of God, neither indeed can be."

In this distinction, Paul was not dividing up life into compartments. There is that which is spiritual; there is that which is carnal, secular, temporal. Since life is a whole and is not divided into segments and sections; since there is that which is secular and that which is spiritual, it stands to reason that either the Spirit must spiritualize the secular or the secular will materialize the spiritual. Pagan worship is that worship which exalts things and puts the visible above the invisible, and bows down to the creature rather than to the Creator. There is much in our modern speech and attitude to argue that we are pagan and not Christian. Many are giving up in despair, are worrying their lives away, wasting their energies and centering all their mental and moral activities on things, declaring that the world is all out of joint because of the present financial and business depression. It is possible that business depression, things temporal and visible, can rob us of our souls, deprive us of the high delights of intellectual pursuits and the holy aspirations and activities for spiritual things, God forbid.

If we exalt the spiritual above the secular, the soul above things, we should not despair nor give up in a time like this, nor feel that the world is out of joint and that all is hopeless and lost. Now is a time to rededicate the best that is in us to the pursuits and privileges of spiritual activity and development, to grasp the good and the great things of life, to cultivate a new and a larger love for that which is eternal and which is big beyond business and so divine that it cannot suffer from depression. If in a time like this we can exalt the things of the spirit and lift the level of the spiritual, and come out on higher ground where the light of love shines and sanctity of the sacred is manifest, we shall be conquering and not conquered by that over which we have no control. God's arm is not shortened that it cannot reach us, nor His strength depleted that He cannot help us. Let us in days like this cultivate a passion, a desire, for that which is eternal, divine and holy.

THE SABBATH AND LAW.

England and the United States observe the Sabbath better than any other countries, and, taken all together, they are the most prosperous nations. The prosperity herein implied includes business, government, society, religion and home. They lead all nations in provision for the education of all the children through public schools, colleges, universities and professional schools. Prosperity that is only financial and commercial is not prosperity in the true sense; it includes character and service for society.

There are two sources of law—God and human society. The moral law is of God, and one of these is the law of the Sabbath: "Remember the Sabbath Day, to keep it holy" (Ex. 20:8). The emphasis should be on "it"; to keep "it" (the Sabbath Day) holy. That is a big task in a world where people are more concerned in making money, and pleasure, than they are in obeying God. Violators of this law are sinners, no matter what they profess. This law of God is violated by millions of people every Sunday, and, in this country, one of the perils of this nation is a growing disregard for God's law of the Sabbath.

Deeds, contracts, and other legal documents executed on the Sabbath are of no value and cannot go to record on the Sabbath. The coins of this country have this engraved upon them: "In God we trust." The government recognizes God and His laws and then passes laws for the control of society. Those who violate God's laws are sinners, and those who violate the laws of the State are criminals. It is not only wrong to violate law by actual conduct, but it is a violation of law to speak against it while it is in existence. When this thought is followed to its last analysis, there are many violators of divine law and of human law. No person can be a good Christian and violate God's law; and no one can be a good citizen and violate the law of the State. Moreover, no one can be a good Christian and a good citizen unless he obeys both divine and human laws. Here is a great field for study, for decision and action.

This country faces a perilous future by the common disregard for the Sabbath. Good roads, automobiles, money, amusements, a lack of real spiritual and civic conceptions, all enter into the equation of working out the problem of good Christians and good citizenship. These are vital questions that must be solved in the light of law and obedience to law, both of God and man.

EVANGELISM.

When I received the "News Bulletin" of the American Board, I was attracted by the statement by Dean Luther Weigle, on "Evangelism." I quite agree with the dean in this statement. It appealed to me so much that I want each reader of THE SUN to have the privilege of reading it. The whole mission of the Church is embodied in the effort to make Christ known throughout the earth. Therefore, we are to win for Christ, build up in Christ, and send out for Christ. Every duty of the Church is of an evangelistic nature. The following article shows that all of our Christian work is evangelistic:

"Evangelism is not to be defined in terms of method, but in terms of attitude, spirit and faith. It is a great mistake to limit our thought of evangelism to itinerant revivalists, or even to preachers and preaching. Any method, any movement, any institution that brings the gospel of Jesus Christ to bear in vital, effective, saving power upon the lives of human beings—men, women, or children, old or young—is in the true sense of the term evangelistic.

In the power of the Spirit of God, let us meet the paganism of our day with a social gospel that is content to leave no part of life of God outside the kingdom, with an educational program that enlists in the cause of Christ the whole range of human powers, and with an evangelism wide enough to include the full redemptive purpose of Him who came that men might have life, and have it abundantly."

The Church school, in its effort to teach missions, to care for the orphans, and has the individual child to dedicate his life to Christ, is indeed helping to evangelize the world. Evangelism is the whole program of the Church. J. E. M.

THE COMMITTEE.

By REV. C. WILSON.

"And when it was day, he called His disciples; and He chose from them twelve whom He also named apostles."—Luke 6:13.

MEDITATION.

Democracy functions through the committee. The people, just as people, are a human chaos out of which the committee brings order. At the beginning, our Lord selected His committee of twelve. That would assure intelligent guidance when the new movement gathered people and momentum.

It is a significant thing that Jesus spent so much of His precious three years in the training of the committee. Through them He would reach the multitude and the future. There is cheer for the minister preaching to a small congregation; he is reaching the committee of the community, and they will multiply his influence. No man knows to whom he is speaking through his committee. Joseph Parker said that the man who preached to Carey had the millions of India in his congregation.

A little country Church in Pennsylvania, in the hundred years of its history, sent over forty of its sons into the ministry and a score of its daughters into the missionary field. What a congregation the minister of that congregation reached!

It was to the committee that Jesus said: "Ye are the salt of the earth," and "Ye are the light of the world." Twelve men of humble station, it was, in that day when "the glory that was Greece and the grandeur that was Rome" seemed to dominate the world. Yet the twelve men, more than the glory of Greece and the grandeur of Rome, have made history.

Let us not be discouraged by the outward aspect of things in our day. The noisy crowd only seems to have its wild way. Somewhere the committee is in being. God's elect men and women, wiser and stronger than the crowd, patiently seeking to make reason and the will of God prevail. Foolish men may talk about "the twilight of Christianity" if they will. Christianity still has the committee.

MAKE MAY TELL! TELL WHAT? TELL FOR MISSIONS AND THE KINGDOM OF GOD

Many Churches have not yet taken the ANNUAL MISSIONARY OFFERING. Let the month of May tell the story of the effort and self-denial in every Christian Church of the Southern Convention, where the offering has not been taken, of a desire to help win this world to Christ through proclaiming His gospel, giving His message to those in the foreign field and the home field who have not heard and had the opportunity that we have had. Many Churches have not yet taken the offering. Can any Church afford to miss this opportunity of trying to let its light shine out to those who sit and wait in the dark places till that light comes?

Many pastors have not yet been heard from. Can any pastor take the responsibility, the awful responsibility, of not giving his people a chance to express, through their self-denial and their sacrificial offering, their love for their Lord by trying to give a message of that love to those who are dying without it?

Let every Church, every pastor MAKE MAY TELL for Christ and the kingdom of God through our Annual Missionary Offering. The spiritual task of the Church is that of winning the world to Christ—and this is Missions. Through self-denial we carry on the work of the kingdom of our Lord on earth. He gave all, denied all for us. What will we give for Him?

SUFFOLK LETTER.

On Saturday night, May 2nd, I was called by phone to preach for Rev. J. E. McCauley at First Christian Church, Norfolk, Va. The occasion for that call was the death on that night of Betty Paige McCauley, the dear little seven-month-old baby of Rev. J. E. McCauley and wife. The sweet baby was sick only two days with pneumonia. Betty is survived by her parents, one sister, Jane McCauley, two brothers, Joseph Franklin and Laurry Bauman McCauley.

The funeral service was held at the funeral home of Graham & Sykes, 124 East Berkley Avenue, on Monday, at 2 o'clock in the afternoon. Scripture was read by Rev. W. W. Staley; the Church choir sang "Have Thine Own Way, Lord" and "Asleep in Jesus"; Dr. L. E. Smith offered prayer, and Revs. J. F. Morgan and O. D. Poythress sang, as a duet, "Safe in the Arms of Jesus." Interment was in Memorial Cemetery. There was a large attendance, many beautiful flowers, and many signs of sympathy for the parents in the loss of this sweet child, so dear to their hearts. The mother was too sick to attend the funeral. At the grave, Rev. J. W. Fix led in the Lord's Prayer, and Rev. O. D. Poythress pronounced the benediction.

Parental hearts suffer untold grief when infants are taken away, and all need to learn lessons from experiences such as the McCauleys have passed through in the loss of dear little Bettie. It is well to keep in mind what Jesus said, in Matthew 19:14, "Suffer little children, and forbid them not, to come unto me: for of such is the kingdom of heaven." This was said after "little children were brought to Him, that He should put His hands on them and pray, and the disciples rebuked them." But Jesus said, "It is plain that the kingdom of heaven embraces little children." There is none so innocent, so sweet, and so entitled to a place in heaven as a little child. That raises the question as to what heaven would be if none were there except old people. Suppose the whole human race were to live to be old, and then only those who repent, believe and follow Christ went to heaven. It would, indeed, be an old folks' home. What would this world be if there were no children, no schools, no Sunday Schools, no toys, no future, no dolls, no sweet homes? The home where the children have left and none remain except the old people, is usually a gloomy home. That is what the old people say when left alone. To spend eternity with none in heaven but old people might make a gloomy heaven.

But heaven is a home, and a home has grown people and children, and often the baby is the most interesting member of the family. If some homes are happier in heaven than others, it may be parents who have babies and children there. To say the least, all will be happier because all ages are there together. When David's child was very sick he besought God for the child, fasted, lay all night upon the earth, and he would not be comforted; but when the child died, David arose from the earth, washed and anointed himself, went into the house of the Lord and worshiped. Then he went into his own house, they set bread before him and he did eat. His servants were surprised and wanted to know why he wept and fasted while the child was alive, and now is changed. "I shall go to him, but he shall not return to me."

"Praying to the Highest makes taller men."—Anonymous.

ELON LETTER.

The Church is not dead. Religion is not dead. We are in the midst of change, and that is a wholesome situation, because things that move do not stagnate. "Religion in a Changing World" is the title of a recent best seller by a Jewish rabbi.

The Church has always made progress from the day of its founding unto this hour; and there is not any likelihood that its dissolution is near at hand. There are members of Christian Churches in America at this time totaling 50,037,245, which is ten out of every twenty-five of the population. The net gain during the year 1930 for all Churches in the country was 88,350; not an appreciable gain to be sure, but a gain nevertheless, and those of us who belong to the United Congregational-Christian Church are delighted that our body shows a net gain of 753. One-third of the earth's population is definitely allied with one of the three major branches of the Christian Church. So we see that the Church has made progress even numerically during its 1900 years of history.

The Church has made progress in education. The Church pioneered in education in this country. There would have been no public school system and no system of higher education but for the adventurous pioneering of the Church, and of those who espoused the cause of education through the Church. For the year 1927-'28, the last year for which figures are available, the United States spent, in round numbers, two billion dollars on its public school system. In addition to this, colleges of the Churches spent $290,775,330, teacher-training institutions controlled by various Churches spent $3,785,000, while private elementary and secondary schools of the Church spent $228,250,000; a total of $532,810,330 for education through the Churches. No small sum.

The Churches render great service in the care of orphans and dependent children. The latest statistics show 408 children's institutions with a resident population of 22,701, maintained by 60 religious bodies. In addition to this, the Churches maintain 340 hospitals, clinics, and sanatoria, and 310 homes for the aged. These figures are for Protestant Churches, and do not include the Catholic Churches, of which there are 13 bodies in the country. I have not been able to find the cost of maintaining these institutions, but it must be at least one billion dollars.

The Church has a wonderful program of home and foreign missions. The missionary enterprise has been under fire these last few years, but it is coming through its scathing experience beautifully, gloriously, I should say. New methods commensurate with the new situations in the world are being inaugurated, and we shall see the most rapid growth in major fields in the next quarter-century, in my judgment, that has characterized the Church in all its history. During any period of searching examination and ferment and criticism, such experiences as we have just been passing through are but the consequences that accompany a flood in the river of progress in any realm of organized life. It is rather disturbing at times to read the trenchant criticisms of our missionary efforts, but when we have passed safely through this period of examination and realignment of forces, we will find that higher ground has been taken and that the Church has been advanced along the whole front.

In stewardship which is a real test, an acid test of spiritual vitality, twenty-five Protestant Churches have made a wonderful showing last year, giving for all purposes $507,491,165.08.

These Churches reporting include one-half of the membership of the Church in America, so that if we were to double this princely sum we would find that a billion dollars were given for this purpose last year.

The Church is making progress, too, in spiritual matters, in comity, in polity, in good-fellowship, in co-operation, in federation. There are a growing number of persons in every Church who not only tolerate persons of other communions but who have real appreciation for them. There is a vast difference between tolerance and appreciation. Appreciation is tolerance affectionalized, and there can be no genuine Christian fellowship without affection. Community Churches more than a thousand in number, strong and vigorous, have sprung up in all parts of our country. Church federations, local and sponsored by the Federal Council of Churches, are multiplying. The Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America in itself is a major achievement in the field of fraternity and Church fellowship and brotherhood.

There is a danger, however, that we may accept the results of federation for the plain Christian duty of Church union. This would be lamentable for the Church and the kingdom. We must not let the better retard the best. Some one has said that the leaders in federation hope to stem the tide of Christian union by this means. But the rank and file of the Churches see in the federation movement but an initial step in a progressive future. Be that as it may, we should certainly rejoice in the evidences of good will and fellowship and brotherhood which are everywhere so characteristic of the Churches in their relationships the one to the other in our day—a genuine growth in Christian grace as compared with a half-century ago even.

THE BEAUTY OF LIFE.

BY DOROTHY LOUISE THOMAS.

Give me a clean, sharp sense of the beauty of life,
O Lord.

Let my heart leap at the glory
Which lavishly Thou hast poured
Over the hill and the valley,
Over the mountain and sea;
May there be answering beauty
Deep in the heart of me.

Daffodil gold in spring, and white violets, sweet with rain,

Tender young green of the meadow,
The flush of the sunset's stain;
Birds winging home through the twilight
Blue of the mist-shrouded hill—
These feed my soul when it hungers:
Thirsting, I drink my fill.

All these are poignantly lovely: sorrow, when bravely borne,
Faith of the little children,
With cheeks blush-pink as the dawn;
Youth with its flaunting splendor,
Flinging dull care to the breeze;
Age by the flickering fire,
Clinging to memories.

May I, by insight unerring, separate gold from dross,

Learn from the Master of Beauty,
Who taught from a flaming cross;
Freed from all cynical scoffing,
Freed from all taunting jeers;
One who knew life with its laughter,
Life with its falling tears!

PROPOSED SUCCESSORS TO DR. HARPER.

Now that the shock produced by the announcement of President Harper's intention to retire from the presidency of Elon College on May 31st has passed, there is much speculation as to who his successor will be. At first there was hope on the part of a great many alumni, students, trustees and other friends of President Harper that he would reconsider his decision, but as the days have passed it has become clear that Dr. Harper, true to his executive nature, has decided this matter finally and that there is no possibility of retaining his services beyond the close of the present academic year. It is rumored that he plans to spend the next year in studying religious education at first hand in Europe, but Dr. Harper does not confirm it. President Harper has served Elon with assiduous application for the twenty years of his presidency, working almost unbelievable hours daily on her behalf, and no doubt a year in European study and investigation is just the physical tonic his jaded vitality needs.

But the tide of discussion relative to his successor rises as the list of eligibles suggested increases. A name not frequently heard in connection with the vacancy is that of Dr. L. E. Smith, Norfolk, Va. Dr. Smith is in his prime, is a graduate of Elon and Princeton, pastor of the largest Church of the Christians in the South, whose magnificent plant he has erected at a cost of $350,000; an Elon trustee, and President of the Southern Christian Convention.

A local man, too, is mentioned for the post—the pastor of the college Church, Rev. Alfred W. Hurst. Mr. Hurst was formerly president of Palmer College, and so is an experienced executive. He is an eloquent preacher and public speaker and a scholar of the first rank, being a graduate of Defiance College and of the University of Chicago, with the M. A. and B. D. degrees from that university.

Since Christian and Congregational Churches are now merged, there is a sentiment on the part of not a few that it would be a gracious act to elect a Congregationalist to succeed President Harper. It is pointed out that such a selection would cement the two Churches together by giving them in this area a joint task in the field of higher education, a field in which the Congregationalists have always pioneered and greatly excelled, having founded such institutions as Harvard, Yale, Oberlin, Carleton, and Pomona, though they have no college in this section. Two Congregationalists have been mentioned for the post—Dr. J. Edward Kirby, of Raleigh, at present pastor of the United Church of that city and formerly president of the Atlanta Seminary and of Drury College, Springfield, Mo., and Dr. Jason Noble Pierce, now of Nashville, Tenn., and professor in the Vanderbilt School of Religion, but known best as President Coolidge's pastor in Washington.

Dr. Havilah Babcock, '18, and now professor in the University of South Carolina, is the choice of a considerable group of alumni, who know him as one of the readiest scholars Elon has produced. He is a splendid publicity man and a public speaker of rare charm, a great teacher, and a real executive.

Rev. Stanley C. Harrell, pastor of First Christian Church, Durham, graduate of Elon and of Union Theological Seminary, has also been mentioned for the position. He is a member of the board of trustees and is known as a thinker and leader in the Christian Church and a tireless worker at whatever he undertakes.

Prof. L. L. Vaughan, of Raleigh, head of the department of mechanical engineering in State College and trustee of Elon, is the candidate of a group who want a man for the presidency who has had actual experience in a North Carolina institution of higher learning. Prof. Vaughan is also favorably known in Christian Church circles.

Rev. H. S. Hardcastle, pastor of the great Christian Church of Suffolk, Va., is also prominently mentioned. Mr. Hardcastle is an Elon man and also a B. D. graduate of Yale. He has had experience as teacher and dean of men in Defiance College.

Dr. H. Shelton Smith, professor of religious education in Yale University, an Elon man and Yale Ph.D., formerly leadership training superintendent of the International Council, is favorably regarded by many as a suitable man for the place.

Another proposal is Dr. Walter S. Athearn, former dean of the Boston University School of Religious Education and Social Service. Dr. Athearn is recognized as one of the outstanding educators of the world, having served on several international commissions in the field of education. This summer he will be in England, making a survey of college administration there for one of the commissions of the National Education Association. Dr. Athearn dedicated the Christian Education Building that crowns the Elon campus and is in thorough sympathy with Elon's program in religious education. It is believed that Dr. Athearn would make of Elon the religious education training center of the country. It is known that he is being importuned by leading citizens to found such an institution. Those who advocate his election to the presidency of Elon think he would do well to build on the Elon foundation already laid, and so carry forward the dream of President Harper in this regard.

Others, too, have been mentioned for the vacancy, but no intimation has so far come from any trustee as to whom the choice will fall on, and it is not likely that there will be any suggestion of President Harper's successor till the trustees gather in their regular session on May 26th. At present, there seems to be a fine group of capable men from whom to select.—Burlington Times, Burlington, N. C.

NEW EDITORIAL SECRETARY.

The election of the Rev. John R. Scotford, of Cleveland, Ohio, to be editorial secretary of the National Commission on Missions of the Congregational and Christian Churches, is announced. Mr. Scotford will begin his work with the May 14th issue of the Congregationalist and Herald of Gospel Liberty.

Mr. Scotford will edit the publications of the Commission on Missions as well as the missionary department of the denomination's weekly journal, the Congregationalist and Herald of Gospel Liberty, with its monthly supplement, the American Missionary Magazine. He succeeds the Rev. Dr. George Warren Hinman, acting editorial secretary since 1930.

Mr. Scotford was educated at Dartmouth College, New Hampshire, and Union Theological Seminary, New York City, and has held pastorates at Kingfisher, Okla., Dallas, Texas, Waukegan, Ill., and Cleveland, Ohio. After eight years at Glenville Church, Cleveland, he resigned in 1927 for writing and lecturing. He has written for religious publications of all denominations, including Lutherans, Southern Baptists, Unitarians and Christian Scientists. He has spoken at Rotary clubs and lectured at public schools and Churches in many cities. He has roamed extensively on numerous trips in Mexico and Central and South America. His grandfather was Rev. John Scotford, a pioneer Congregational home missionary in Michigan.

MISSIONS

REV. J. O. ATKINSON, D. D., Secretary.

A PRAYER.

Eternal God, who didst provide a Saviour to live and work with and for men, we bless Thee that forever there is vouchsafed to prepared and willing hearts the power of becoming fishers of men; that, watching from the eternal shore, Jesus speaks and reassures, as obediently His helpers toil for the deliverance of struggling souls. Defend us, Thy workers, Father, from the thought of self-preservation. Help us to fear not even the sea, that the adrift and sinking miss not the proffered gospel rescue-net. In saving effort, keep us ready and unafraid. We ask it for Jesus' sake. Amen. J.

FROM THE PHILIPPINES.

Cagayan, Misamis, P. I.,
March 21, 1931.

Dear CHRISTIAN SUN Friends:

I realize there has been quite a delay since my last letter; but soon after we got the X-ray installed and working, my teeth were X-rayed, and that showed that I needed to go to Manila at once for dental work, and a 600-mile journey here means almost a week's traveling by boat. So we both got our teeth fixed and returned two weeks ago.

Perhaps you would like to hear more about the X-ray and the curiosity it is producing here. Many people come just to see what it looks like, and they regard it almost as a miracle-worker. An old woman, a paralytic, came, insisting the X-ray would cure her when the doctor had told her the most important thing was to have her mouthful of decayed teeth taken out. Another asks treatment for his mother, who has cataracts over her eyes. But four broken bones have been set under the fleuroscope, and a baby who had swallowed a whistle was examined to satisfy his anxious parents, and a number of dental pictures taken. Walter says the X-ray is worth while here if for no other reason than to show these people how bad teeth cause disease. He has many more cases here than in the States. Tomorrow the science classes of the high school are coming for a lecture and demonstration of the X-ray.

So far this year there have been twelve babies born in the hospital. The better class are learning to enjoy the advantages of hospital babies. We have one neighbor who has had five children in the hospital. But one cannot expect the poor people to come when they can obtain the services of the public health nurse or an unlicensed midwife for almost nothing. Besides, the women are very timid about coming to a doctor. A case which is puzzling the doctors now is that of a deaf and dumb man who has a pain somewhere which he cannot locate. I guess the poor man will have to undergo an operation.

You cannot realize the superstition which still abounds until you have lived here for some time. I don't think I told about what happened here when every one was getting vaccinated for cholera. An old man, living along the wharf, got up one night and aroused several people in other houses, saying, "You must make a sort of procession, with your patron saint, San Roque, along the seashore for at least twenty-five evenings. Every one must be barefooted, with candles lighted. Then every Saturday evening from now on you must place a roasting-pig and money in a small boat and let it drift to sea. If you do this, you will be free from cholera; if you don't, 300 of our people will die." Then the old man disappeared suddenly without waiting for questions. The people were scared, and these parades actually took place. Can you imagine such a thing, and in sight of a high school where there are eight or nine hundred students attending.

One morning last week our beds rocked so that we were awakened, and we felt an earthquake of about five minutes' duration. The paper today says that the severest shock was felt in Ilocos Norte. There were several people killed and a few houses blown over.

Sincerely yours,

RITA T. WHITE.

A PLEA FOR BIBLE STUDY.

A plea that the women of our missionary societies will give themselves to the study of the Bible—God's Word:

"The entrance of Thy Word giveth light" (Psa. 119:130).

"Open Thou mine eyes, that I may behold wondrous things out of Thy law" (Psa. 119:18).

"Thy Word is a lamp unto my feet, and a light unto my path" (Psa. 119:105).

The Bible is the Word of God. Over and over we have these words within its pages, "Thus saith the Lord." Some one has said the Bible is a greater miracle than any miracle recorded within its pages.

One of the greatest needs today is to read, study, meditate and memorize God's Word. It is bread for our hungry hearts. Let us feed our souls upon it.

May we come to the Book with the faith of a trusting child to hear the Father speak, and then take time to listen.

May I ask, then, questions for you to ponder in your own heart? Why read the Bible? How much is the Bible worth? Has the Bible first place in my life? Can we set our hearts to study the Bible? Can we set our hearts to live the Bible?

The Bible is a book of light. Wherever the Bible has been taken and given a chance, how it has brought light; it has changed darkness to light. The story of missions is the story of the Word bringing light to darkened minds and places.

The Bible is a book of love. There is no other love story in all the world to compare with it.

The Bible is the book of life and power.

To know God, we must know His Book, for within its pages we find the revelation of His heart. "God is Love."

"To know God is life eternal" (John 17:3).

To know God's will, we must seek to know His Word.

To walk in God's way, we must know His Word.

The Bible tells us the only way out of sin.

"Thy Word have I hid in mine heart, that I might not sin against Thee" (Psa. 119:11).

There is cleansing power in the Word. "Wherewithal shall a young man cleanse his way? By taking heed thereto according to Thy Word" (Psa. 119). Moody said, "This Book will keep you from sin, and sin will keep you from the Book."

Just think of the millions of souls all down the ages to whom this Word has brought healing, comfort, wisdom, light, strength, courage, peace and power. This Book is indeed a guide-book and will be a "lamp unto our feet and a light unto our path" if we will only give it a chance. It is filled with warnings about dangerous paths. It is filled with precious promises to all who will walk in its light.

Dr. James I. Vance says, "There is a message in the Book for everybody. Somewhere in it shines the light that will show to every wanderer the path back home. Sometimes it sings a song that will quicken hope in every heart that has turned to despair. It places a halo around every earthly relation. Christ makes the Bible a book for all people with His picture of the face of God. It is the face of the great Father. As long as men wander into the far country, the music of the home call will be the song they love to hear. The Bible proves itself to be the Word of God by doing the work of God. It needs to be proclaimed."

"To proclaim it, we must know it. Let us make it our own. You can reflect what is another's; you can radiate that which is your own."

May we seek to know God's Word; may we in deed and in truth live it and radiate it.

"Let your light so shine before men that they may see your good works and glorify your Father which is in heaven" (Matt. 5:16).

THREE DENOMINATIONS UNITE.

On the island of Porto Rico, three distinct denominational groups—the Congregational, Christian and United Brethren—have just united in what is to be known as the "Iglesia Evangelica de Puerto Rico" (Evangelical Church of Porto Rico). News of this significant event was recently brought to the States by representatives who were present and assisted at the formal consummation of the union on January 28th.

The new United Church embraces a total of thirty-six native organized local Churches, most of which are located in the larger towns of the former Congregational territory, on the east end of the island, and the United Brethren and Christian territories, which are contiguous and cover a large section of the south coast along the Caribbean.

The total membership of the United Church is 3,518. Besides the organized Churches, there are 74 other points where services are being held regularly. There are 77 Bible schools, with a membership of 6,292; 42 young people's societies, with 1,587 members, and 29 other Church societies, with a membership of 857. A total of $13,416.23 for the work was raised in Porto Rico last year, the balance of about $57,000 being contributed by the boards in the States. The property involved, including fifty Church edifices and other buildings, with a total valuation of $457,300, is held by the boards for the time being and is loaned to the United Church.

This movement toward union originated in the island itself. While the boards in the States approved, the actual working out of the merger was left with the Porto Ricans and the handful of missionaries working with them. The plan of organization is simple: The local Churches send delegates to an annual assembly; the annual assembly elects an executive council of fourteen members, which in turn elects a president, executive secretary and treasurer, and which is responsible for carrying out the instructions of the annual assembly. The first president of the annual assembly and of the executive council is Prof. F. Saez, of the Union Theological Seminary of Porto Rico.

The new Church will continue to co-operate in what is known as the Evangelical Union of Porto Rico, a co-operative organization formerly composed of seven groups, the number now being reduced by this merger to five.

It is expected that the additional administrative responsibility which this union places upon the Porto Rican Church will result in greatly increasing self-support and ultimately lead to an indigenous Porto Rican Church; but before this can be approximated, economic conditions on the island must improve.—W. P. Minton, in Federal Council Bulletin.

I AM THE MISSION-STUDY CLASS.

(Apologies to author of "I Am the Immigrant.")

I am the Mission-Study Class—join me.
Since the time of my birth I have helped others.
I was born of the craving for wider knowledge, more efficient work, and deeper spirituality.
My footprints are found in many Churches.
I am often in some homes.
I even enter the colleges.
I am glad when I mingle with the members of the young people's societies, for I help them to reach the highest standard of efficiency.
I delight in the company of those in the young women's missionary societies.
I serve at the men's clubs and help them to know world affairs.
I pass wonderful hours in conversation with women of the missionary societies.
I am found in some Sunday Schools; always in those doing the best work.

I consist of a few congenial people, preferably from six to ten.

I meet once a week, for one hour or more at each session, for a course lasting six weeks; or one full day a week for three weeks.

I dispel ignorance, remove prejudice, overcome indifference, and arouse interest.

I encourage benevolence.

I increase and vitalize prayer.

I develop strong, active Christian character, and provide missionaries.

I present for study a literature which excels "in truth, in pathos, in dignity, in simplicity, in its contribution to scientific research, in its direct bearing on great world problems."

And yet, there are some who say they have no time for me.

I am one of the "worth-while" things, and you should learn to "put first things first."

If I can be fused into the Church work, I will do you good.

For information on textbooks and leaders' helps, write to your own denominational headquarters.

MISSIONARY RALLIES.

The Vance-Franklin-Warren District held its rally with the Henderson Christian Church on Friday, April 24th. The attendance was not what we had hoped for and expected, but we had a good rally. The entire program for the day was splendid. The following ministers were present: Revs. R. L. House, E. M. Carter, H. E. Crutchfield, S. C. Harrell and Dr. J. O. Atkinson. They added greatly to the success of the day, and we are indeed grateful to them for their presence and inspiration.

The outstanding item on the program was the address by Dr. Atkinson. Words are inadequate to describe this wonderful message. Using the theme, "Spiritual Light Bearers," it just seemed that our beloved Mission Secretary had been given a greater vision, with increased faith and power, to enable him to bring such a soul-stirring and inspiring message. We were reminded of that good king to whom the Lord added to his life fifteen years that he might lead his people on (2 Kings 20:1-6). So we believe that our God is giving renewed strength daily to our Mission Secretary, that he may live on to lead us in mission work.

A round-table discussion, led by Rev. S. C. Harrell, was very helpful and enjoyed by all. The same officers were re-elected for another year, and the leader, Miss Margaret Alston, hopes and plans to get this district more thoroughly organized in the woman's work. We hope that each pastor will do his best to create a stronger missionary spirit in his Church. We are very grateful to the ladies of the Henderson Church for their splendid hospitality during the day, and especially the bountiful dinner served.

We adjourned to meet next year with the Youngville Church. Plan now to be there with a good report from your Church.

MRS. R. J. NEWTON,
Henderson, N. C. Acting Secretary.

STUDENT SUICIDES.

Over 13,000 young persons between the ages of sixteen and twenty-five commit suicide annually in Japan, says Doris F. Smith, new worker of the American Board in Tokyo, said to have more students than any other city in the world. "Japanese youth is dissatisfied with the present social and economic system," she contends; "they seek something better." Above all, as these awful figures suggest, a new philosophy of life is needed. What has the Christian to say? Japan still has licensed prostitution, although her finer women are fighting this evil. Communism is holding the attention of Japanese students who are also eager to acquire English and all Western knowledge. So don't be surprised if you are addressed almost anywhere with, "Madam, or Sir, may I have the pleasure of talking with you? I am sorry; I do not speak English well."

ADVENTURES IN YOUTH FELLOWSHIP

"Youth at Work in the Church."

JEWEL TRUITT, Editor, Waverly, Virginia.

"OUR CONTRIBUTORS."

Miss Allie Higgins, vice-president and Christian Endeavor secretary of the North Carolina Sunday School and Christian Endeavor Convention. Allie was elected last June and went right to work, for she was to enter college in September.

Miss Doris Eure, energetic and eager missionary superintendent of the Bethlehem Christian Church Sunday School, near Suffolk, Va. Doris is also chairman of the western district of the Eastern Virginia Young People's Congress.

Miss Lottie Mae Cross, a wonder with children! Superintendent of the beginners' department of the Suffolk Christian Church.

BLAZING A NEW TRAIL IN C. E.

It is a fact that it is young people who have visions and who dream dreams, and who are willing to work that those dreams may become realities. If you want something done, just get an enthusiastic group of young people back of the project and it will go over the top every time.

During the summer months, I wrote letters concerning Christian Endeavor work to all of the Churches in our Conference. I made personal calls to some of the Churches from which I did not hear. I found it impossible to visit all of the societies in our Conference. As loyalty is one of the essential things for the success of a young people's group, I asked my own Church society for co-operation, that I might be able to carry out my plans. They responded readily. Our Christian Endeavor Society gave programs at other societies and helped to organize other groups. In our program we tried to show what we were doing and trying to put across in our own society. We had young people from our own and other denominations to speak at our society meetings. In this way we got new ideas and inspiration for better work.

There have been four new societies organized in our Conference since our last Convention. There are prospects for several more new senior societies now.

ALLIE HIGGINS.

YOUTH AT THE HELM.

As superintendent of missions at Bethlehem Sunday School, I try not to over-emphasize the means by which we work to keep missionaries on the field and the missionary work moving. Emphasis is put on the missionary spirit. As program leader, I find that I must be responsible for our Sunday School, knowing our missionaries in a personal way. Therefore, I have placed a group of pictures of our best-known missionaries in the Church. Quite often reports from particular mission fields are given. Children are also given parts on our missionary programs. Sometimes we use a missionary reading. Through all the methods we may use, I try to make outstanding the missionary challenge of the Master, "Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature."

WITH THE TINY TOTS.

For the last four Sundays we have been having missionary programs in our beginners' department. We have been learning about Japan. On the first Sunday, a little boy, dressed in Japanese costume, entered the room. He said, "Good morning" in Japanese. Then he explained the costume he was wearing, giving the Japanese words for shoes, bow, etc. The next Sunday we had a story about silkworms, "Taku and Her Spring Babies."

The next Sunday we talked about Japanese homes, studying a picture of a Japanese home. The fourth Sunday we spent looking at some gifts from Japan. On the fifth Sunday we discussed some things that we can send to Japanese boys and girls.

ELON SUMMER SCHOOL.

Elon Summer School of Leadership Training will be held at Elon College June 10-17, 1931. Young people and leaders from Congregational and Christian Churches in North Carolina and Virginia meet at Elon each summer. Adequate leadership provides opportunity for efficient work and study, and fellowship with old and new friends makes the week an even happier one. Greater visions and true, helpful friendships come as a result of the week spent at Elon Summer School.

Dr. W. C. Wicker has been added to the faculty since a previous announcement went to press. Dr. Wicker will teach "The Teaching Work of the Church." This course will be of particular interest to Sunday School superintendents and pastors. There will be several other leaders to teach and to help.

The hope of the future Church depends upon the young people of today. Young people depend upon their leaders and their opportunities for their own training. Elon offers a great deal for the training of leaders and for the training of Christian young people. Every one of our Churches should be represented at Elon Summer School. Will you represent one of them?

JEWEL TRUITT.

MY BIBLE AND I.

We've traveled together, my Bible and I,
In all kinds of weather, with smile and with sigh,
In sunshine or sorrow, in tempest or calm,
It's friendship's unchanging, my lamp and my psalm.

We've traveled together, my Bible and I,
When life has grown weary and death e'en was nigh;

But all through the darkness of mist and of wrong,
I found there a solace, a prayer, and a song.

So now, who shall part us, my Bible and I?
Shall critics, or scoffers, or others who try?
Shall shadows for substance, or stone for good bread
Supplant thy sound wisdom, give folly instead?

Ah, no, my dear Bible, revealer of light,
Thou sword of the Spirit, put error to flight;
And still through life's journey until the last sigh,
We'll travel together, my Bible and I.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR NOTES.

SUNDAY, MAY 24, 1931.

TOPIC: "Why is the Bible Worth Knowing?"
SCRIPTURE: 2 Tim. 3:16, 17.

For the Program.

Appropriate hymns for this program should be selected, and the program prepared by the committee. The interests and needs of the particular Christian Endeavor group for which the program is being prepared should be kept in mind.

The Scripture reading for the evening is 2 Timothy 3:16, 17. Psalm 139:1-12 may also be used, and Psalm 119 contains many beautiful passages about God's Word. Especially appropriate for this occasion are Psalm 119:9-16, 89-96 and 105-112.

Various themes and topics should be developed in connection with this topic. The following paragraphs are to serve merely as "self-starters."

The Greatest Book of the Ages.

The Bible is the greatest Book of all time. It has served as inspiration for nations, Churches and individuals. Art has found in the Bible its authority. Music is spread upon its pages, and has been brought out for use. Additional music has been written because of the inspiration other Scripture passages afford. Though the Bible makes no claim for itself as a literary production, it contains the most precious literary gems. The Bible has a message for all our moods and needs. The high and the low, the rich and the poor, the learned and the ignorant, the happy and the sad—all who search its pages—can be satisfied with the messages revealed upon its pages.

Why We Have the Bible.

The Bible is the sacred Book of the Christian Church. Other religions have their sacred writings, i. e., Hinduism had the Vedas and the Upanishads; Buddhism, the Tripitaka; and Mohammedanism, the Koran. Our Bible is the record of God's progressive revelation of Himself. It tells what men have thought of God and what they have experienced of God. Tracing the history of the search of the people of Israel for God makes it easier for us to know how to find God. The early fathers of the Jewish people preserved their experiences in the discovery of God until they were written. Later the prophets and other writers added their experiences. During the years man's idea of God changed, with God becoming a more wonderful God as more was learned about Him. The highest interpretation of God is found in the New Testament.

Jesus in the Bible.

The Bible gives us the story of Jesus. It is worth years of study just to know Jesus. The Old Testament gives the setting for the story of Jesus. The New Testament tells of His life. He is the central personality of the Book. It gives the substance of His teaching. It tells of His power with men. It gives His understanding of what God should mean to man. Through the pages of the Bible, Christ points the way to a higher type of life for mankind. Hereafter, God is to mean more to His people because of Jesus' life and His interpretation of God.

Jesus can be known only by a study of the gospels. There is no other way to know Him. To know about the greatest person the world has ever known, we must study the greatest Book, because it is the best source of information concerning Him.

The Bible is Life-Giving.

The Bible, we must not forget, is a source of inspiration today. It has furnished inspiration to men for all the great reformations and all the progress of the Church. To Christians in every land today, and even to some who are not Christians, it proves itself a source of strength. It is only because the Bible is a revelation of God to His people that it can have this life-giving quality in it. The Bible does not give definite answers to all of our questions, and thus solve our problems for us, but it does give us a chance to know other men and women who have solved similar problems, and it does give Jesus' teachings and life. It is a Book by which we do well to grow.

What the Bible Can Do for Us.

The Bible helps us, with each study of it, to realize anew the important things that Christians believe. Among these are the love of God, the

JESUS PREPARING FOR THE END.

LESSON VIII—MAY 24, 1931.

GOLDEN TEXT: "This do in remembrance of me."—Luke 22:19.

LESSON: Luke 21:1-22:23.

THE WIDOW'S MITES.

Christ observes us as we make our offering to Him. And He judges us not according to the amount which we give, but according to the proportion which we give. There are those who give what seem like large sums, which are, after all, comparatively small gifts, while there are others who give comparatively small sums, but who give largely and liberally, because their giving represents sacrifice and real generosity. There are many people who think that they are liberal givers when, as a matter of fact, they are simply poor bookkeepers. "Not what we give, but what we share" is what makes the gift acceptable. We are to give as God has prospered us.

"Withhold not the gospel from souls needing bread,

For giving is living," the Bright Angel said.

"And must I be giving again and again?"

My peevish and pitiless answer ran.

"Oh, no," said the Angel, thus piercing me through;

"Just give till the Master stops giving to you."

WARNINGS.

Jesus saw the inevitable fate that awaited Jerusalem and the nation. It is not necessary to read too much meaning into the language of the twenty-first chapter of Luke, which comprises a large part of today's lesson. He was simply putting in a striking and, in some senses to us, a mysterious way the incidents and events which would accompany the downfall of the city and the calamity which would fall upon the people. Pride, sin, selfishness had about run its course. He warned His hearers that the time of reckoning had come. He enjoined them to be on their guard and to prepare for the catastrophe by prayer. So far as these particular sections of Jesus' teachings are concerned, they found literal fulfillment. "This generation shall not pass away till all be fulfilled" evidently meant just what it said in this case.

JUDAS.

Poor Judas! What a tragic and pathetic figure he is! He betrayed His Master for a paltry eighteen or twenty dollars. And then when he learned that he had betrayed innocent blood, he went out and hanged himself. His name is almost a stench to all that is best in life. But let no one think that Judas was a wholly exceptional type. He simply represents the fruitage and ultimate end of the life which is dominated by avarice and greed and dishonesty and worldly ambition. The wages of sin for us, as for him, is death.

IN REMEMBRANCE.

"This do in remembrance of me." What was it that Jesus wanted His disciples to do in remembrance of Him? Was it to build a towering monument? Was it to establish some great foundation? Was it to name something after Him? No, it was simply to take common, unleavened bread and break it and eat it in the simplest way. And it was to take the cup, the fruit of the vine, the common drink of the day, and drink it in remembrance of Him. Nowhere else is the genius and the greatness of the Master more clearly shown than in this. Wherever and whenever men and women, boys and girls are gathered together, and eat the bread and drink the wine, they are

THE CHRISTIAN IDEAL FOR HUMAN SOCIETY.

By Alfred E. Garvie. Richard R. Smith, Inc.; $4; pp. 477.

Principal Garvie is one of the deep thinkers of our generation. His book, "The Christian Doctrine of the Godhead," was a masterpiece, and this is its companion in importance. A more complete system of Christian ethics has never been written. While the book is written for scholars, it is easy to read and, taken in broken doses, will be fairly delightful.

The book consists of four parts—first, a historical survey, including the present challenge; secondly, the cardinal virtues of wisdom, temperance, courage and justice, together with a discussion of the Christian graces of faith, hope and love; thirdly, the psychological factors of human development, human character, and the redemption of human personality; and fourthly, the sociological factors, such as the family, education, industry, leisure, citizenship and the Church. The book is the mature thought of a mature thinker.

reminded of Him—of His life, of His ministry, of His service, of His sacrifice, of His death, of His resurrection, of the ultimate triumph of His kingdom. One marvels at the influence of this simple memorial on the life of both the individual and the Church at large.

"The bread used was one of the cakes of unleavened bread used in the Passover meal. It was broken to symbolize the breaking of our Lord's body on the cross. The wine of the Lord's supper symbolizes Christ's blood, shed on the cross for the remission of our sins. It is called the blood of the New Covenant, or New Testament, because it takes the place of the lamb sacrificed in the Old Testament Covenant of the Passover. Without the shedding of blood, there is no remission of sins."

It is a sad commentary on human nature that, even as they sat there for that sacred meal, the disciples had an argument as to who should be accounted greatest. And none of them was willing to humble himself and do the task that was usually allotted to servants. Thus it was that Jesus Himself took upon Himself the form of a Servant and washed their feet.

But there is also a note of encouragement in the situation. When Jesus, like a bolt out of the blue sky, announced that one of them should betray Him, they began to ask themselves—they did not accuse others—as to whether they should be the ones. It was out of this kind of material that Jesus fashioned the men who went out to take the world for Him. He knoweth our frame; He remembereth that we are dust; He knows that we have this treasure in earthen vessels, but He can use us in a large way if we will but give ourselves to Him.

Lordship of Christ, the fact of sin, the need of redemption, the power of the Spirit of God, and the hope of immortality. These are eternal truths which we face each day and which are significant to us. The Bible can also deepen and purify our emotional lives; it can help us appreciate the truly lovely and cast aside imaginary fears. From our study of the Bible, we should get a true idea of God and we should learn to love and trust Him as Jesus loved and trusted Him.

LOVE AND PATIENCE.

"The Lord direct your hearts into the love of God and into the patience of Christ."—2 Thess. 3:1-5.

Love and patience do not always go together, but they always belong together. Patience is the best preserver of love, and love is the best promoter of patience. Love is said to be blind to faults, but often its eyes are very keen for them. Just because we love some one very much, we are most annoyed by his misdeeds and we sorrow most deeply over his sins. It is a mistake to think that love is not in need of patience. But often a mother spoils her child just because she does not recognize his shortcomings. Her loving patience becomes the child's most extreme peril.

How greatly, then, do we need to be directed into the love of God and the patience of Christ! For God's love is never blind to our faults, and Christ's patience is ever kept alive by His love. Ideal love and ideal patience reign in the divine school, and make it the ideal place in which to attain the perfect life.

Prayer.—We try Thee so often, our Father! We are in such sore need of Thy patience, O our Saviour! Bear with our frequent sins. Forget our many iniquities. Endure our insistent faults. Be loving to forgive. We ask it in humble dependence and in loving gratitude. Amen.

TUESDAY.

PUSH.

"I have determined."—Titus 3:1-12.

The verb, "determine," plays a conspicuous part in the writings of Paul and the account of his life. The great apostle could not have done his glorious work if he had not been a man of determination.

An interesting story is told of the way in which a millionaire merchant of Philadelphia got his start in life. He stepped ashore from a ship without money or friends. Going up to a man on the wharf, he asked him what he should do. "Work," the man replied. "What is your motto?" the man asked. "I have none," the boys answered. "Every one should have a motto," urged his hearer. "You think of one, and go out and hunt for work." The lad went along till he saw the word "Push" on a door. "I'll take that for my motto," he said to himself. So he began to practice it by pushing open the door and going up to the proprietor of the establishment, telling him his story. The proprietor said, "I want a boy of push, and as that is your motto, I will try you." Such was the beginning of a successful life.

The same spirit will bring success to any life. "I have determined," said Paul, over and over. He faced hundreds of closed doors, but he pushed them all open. He faced hundreds of obstacles in his path, but he pushed them all out of the way. He undertook as difficult a task as man could undertake, but he pushed and he pushed till he had rolled it to the top of the hill. "I have determined," he kept on saying, till at last he could write, "I have fought the good fight, I have finished the course, I have kept the faith."

Prayer.—Our Saviour, no courage or zeal will accomplish anything without Thee. Be Thou our determination. Strengthen our hearts. Confirm our wills. Guide our spirits. And bring us to our goals. Amen.

WEDNESDAY.

IF WE KNEW.

"Putting away, therefore, all . . . envies."—1 Peter 2:1-10.

A wise writer says: "We see how much a man has, and therefore we envy him; did we see how little he enjoys, we should rather pity him." In the same way it may be said that we pity many a poor man, because we see how cramped are his means; but if we only knew how much pleasure he gets out of what he has, and how much good he does with it, we should envy him.

One might ask, therefore, why God does not give us the power of insight into other people's lives. The answer is, in the first place, that certainly we should not want other people to see the inside of our own lives; in the second place, it is not difficult to discern the happiness and usefulness of many who are poor in this world's goods; and in the third place, if we are rich, we have experience of many sorrows, and if we are poor we may have experience of many joys, so why should we seek from the lives of others what we may find at home in our own souls? No true Christian will envy another man, for he will realize that in Christ he has all things richly to enjoy. Christ came that we might abound.

Prayer.—Yes, Lord Jesus, we do abound in Thy joy. No one can take it away from us. No one exceeds us in it. We anticipate it splendidly in heaven, but we begin it splendidly on earth. Whom can we possibly envy, having Thee? Amen.

THURSDAY.

GETTING AN EDUCATION.

"The meek will He teach His way."—Psa. 25:1-9.

When David wrote, "The meek will He teach His way," he said virtually that all teachable persons shall be taught, that no one who really is ready to receive an education shall lack it. It may not be a school education, but it will be a real education.

So it is with the highest of all learning, the knowledge of God's way. If we want that education, it may be ours. We can have for our teacher no less than the Holy Spirit of the Most High God. We can have for our textbook no less than the supreme Book of ages. We can have for our fellow-students the noblest and friendliest and most helpful souls of the past and the present. Who, since all this is so, will fail to obtain the enduring education?

Prayer.—Teacher of teachers, we enroll in Thy school. Accept us as Thy pupils. Quicken our intelligence. Lead us from study to study. May we know ourselves and Thy world and Thee. In Thy name. Amen.

FRIDAY.

OUR SCAPEGOAT.

"And the goat shall bear upon him all their iniquities unto a solitary land; and he shall let go the goat in the wilderness."—Lev. 10:20-22.

One of the most impressive pictures ever painted is "The Scapegoat," by Holman Hunt. In order to get the right atmosphere for his weird painting, he went into the savage and barren country south of the Dead Sea, and there painted in the marvelous colors of the desert. There too he found the wild goat, and he put into his picture of the animal the expression of infinite patience and suffering. It was a perilous task, for the robbers might be upon him at any moment, and Mr. Hunt painted with a loaded gun always ready under his left arm; but he was willing to endure any hardship, that he might give the world the wonderful message of the scapegoat.

That message, of course, is that Jesus Christ is our Sin-bearer. Whoever by faith lays his iniquities upon Him, need no longer fear their penalty and groan beneath them. The heavenly Scapegoat has borne them into the wilderness.

Prayer.—Our Saviour, we receive the truth, and we rejoice in it. We know Thee as our Atonement. Thou who alone canst remove our sins, hast laid them on Thy shoulders. Thanksgiving and praise be to Thee from all the world, ages without end! Amen.

SATURDAY.

WATCHMEN.

"Son of man, I have made thee a watchman unto the house of Israel."—Ezek. 3:16-21.

Ezekiel is not the only one whom the Lord has appointed to be a watchman for the house of Israel. Every child of God has been set by Him on the walls of Zion, is bidden by Him to peer out over the landscape for the coming foe, and to shout a loud warning of his approach.

The enemy sends no notice ahead. We do not know when he is coming. We shall not be ready for him at any time, if we do not remember that He is likely to come at all times. Must not even a watchman sometimes sleep? Yes, but the Lord's watchman must be then most strictly on his guard, when he sleeps. When he is weak, he must be strong. When he perceives that his own powers are naught, he must lean most heavily on the heavenly powers. For he must be on guard all the time.

Prayer.—Thine is the kingdom, Lord, and Thine is the power and the glory. We are only Thy servants, set to keep Thy walls against the foe. Help us to keep awake. Amen.

SUNDAY.

"HERE!"

"There shall in no wise enter into it anything unclean . . . but only they that are written in the Lamb's book of life."—Rev. 21:21-27.

A great battle had been fought, and the hospital tents were crowded. Moans and cries rose from the sufferers, and surgeons and doctors had far more than they could do. Suddenly, from a cot where lay a young man who had been uttering no sound, came a clear call that rang through the tent: "Here!" The surgeon hurried to him, thinking that he must be in great distress. "What do you want?" the surgeon asked. "Nothing," the young man answered; "they are calling the roll in heaven, and I have just answered to my name." Then in an instant he was gone.

When the blessed list is announced, will our name be in it, and shall we gladly, gratefully answer, "Here"? For there must be an endless distinction between the evil and the good. God's and the devil's can not go to the same place. There must be a book of life and there must be a book of death. And those—this is the final horror of it—those that are written in the book of death would not, if they could, have their names inscribed in the Lamb's book of life.

Prayer.—O Lamb of God; that takest away the sin of the world, free us from our sin, we pray Thee. All undeserving as we are, write us in Thy book. Amen.

SEEKING THE BEST.

By DR. C. C. RYAN, Pastor
First Christian Church, Richmond, Va.

"Again, the kingdom of heaven is like unto a merchantman, seeking goodly pearls, who, when he had found any pearl of great price, went and sold all that he had and bought it."
—Matt. 13:45.

Because of the blood which has been poured into our veins by our ancestors, our dispositions and temperaments may be different; because of our education and the fact that we are the victims of superstitions and prejudices, our reasonings may not be similar and our ideals and conclusions may be widely separated, and yet, with most men, there is an honest purpose of search for that which to them is the best gift of life and eternity. Not the majority, but the minority is represented in that treatise of Cicero which he labeled "On Old Age." In that, he tells of a time when a great theater is filled and an old Athenian came into the place and not one of his country-men cared enough to make room for him, but when he came to a special section occupied by the ambassadors from Lacedaemon, they every one arose to receive him into their midst. Then the whole assembly burst into applause and somebody cried out, "The Athenians know what is good, but they will not practice it."

The search for the best is a search for the superlative in life. Positive good, comparative better, superlative best. What is it and where is it found? Christ alone holds the secret, and He Himself gives the answer in the words of the text. With matchless skill the artist makes a pen-picture of the seeker after the best.

Mark the statement! A seeker, not an empty dreamer, erecting glittering castles in the air of some never-to-be-realized attainment; castles made to be all ablaze in the golden sunlight of a fervid imagination. Not a vapid enthusiast, who has thrown judgment to the winds and despoiled reason of its sceptre as he blindly follows some plausible vagary that has made its appeal to a credulous brain. Neither is he to be a sluggard, ever voicing "A little more sleep, a little more slumber, a little more folding of the hands to sleep," though all the while duty sternly calls, "Up and to the doing."

The search for the "best" has naught of the visionary, the credulous, the idler. It demands the seeker, set of purpose, tireless of energy, and expert of values. I have seen a picture painted by Retsch where, with wonderful skill, a game of chess, played by a young man and Satan, is depicted. The young man has such a care-free look on his face, though he has waged his soul on the outcome of the game; and there is a cunning, hellish leer on the face of Satan as the game proceeds and favors his chance. But the seeker of "goodly pearls" realizes that there is a graphic and solemn scene which shows Christ and Satan battling for the soul of man. This is not picture only, but a reality, and as all earth and heaven look on with interest, the present and future welfare demands that we seek the best.

The picture reveals the fact that the seeker was in search of "goodly pearls"—not the paltry, the common-place and the cheap. One little girl, at the age of four years, was made glad with a glittering bracelet, until she found that it was purchased at Woolworth's store, and then she threw it from her with the words, "Only ten cents!"

The ancient idea of the pearl was that it was formed by the dews of heaven entering into the sea-shell, and its shape and perfection was dependent on the condition of the atmosphere at the very moment of its conception. Thus it was the type and symbol of heaven's most precious gift to man; an ideal something well worth the seeking and well worth the having. Human life pulsates with this essential truth. A seeking for a prize that outranks every other prize and lures us on to its coveted securement by mighty spell of heart and fascination of mind. Some seek the prize and the realization of the best in nobility of character, a stainless reputation for virtue, a flawless rectitude of conduct. Culture has its appealing force with the elect few. Philanthropy spells the magic word with others in a life devoted to the social and economic betterment of their fellows.

Many crowd the temple of mammon, the marts of trade, the arena of fame, the vanity fairs of frivolity in their search for the best that life below the stars has to give. Whatever the earthly "pearls" that man may secure, in all their variety, sooner or later there comes a disappointment, for "All is vanity and vexation of spirit."

A Splendid Finding.

In mental vision we can follow the pearl merchant as he passes from city to city, country to country, ransacking the famous bazaars of distant climes in his search for the "best" among the gems of the earth. He shows the greatest care lest he be imposed upon by a fabricated stone or given a jewel with a secret, undetected flaw. Somewhere, we know not where, but one day, a day that eclipsed the sum-total value of all the other days of his life, his quest was suddenly ended, and there flashed before his ravished gaze a pearl of wondrous beauty. With tingling nerves and throbbing heart, he looked upon it. Perfect in its symmetry, parless in lustre, fabulous in price. None like it in all the treasured gems of men. "One pearl of great price"—one! What does it all mean? There is but a single answer, and that answer—Christ. He is the soul's Superlative, for in Him and through Him alone do we realize a supernatural change of nature, a pardon of sins, a peace of conscience, a sonship with God, and in the world to come immortal life and eternal glory.

A Joyous Buying.

"And when he had found one pearl of great price"—what then? Pass it by with indifference? Bought it how? Sold all that he had and gave the all in exchange for the one. A large price to pay, wasn't it? Worth it, and worth it a thousand times over!

To find in Jesus Christ the preciousness and pricelessness of what He has to confer upon us, we must let go of all and forego all of whatever we hold of earth's competing things. "If any man will come after me, let him deny himself, take up his cross daily and follow me." Jesus is a test Pearl. He is our life's Superlative, or He is nothing. There was no sob in the heart of the pearl-seeker, neither a tremor in his voice as he gave the all for one. Paul said: "I count all things but loss that I may win Christ." In the end, we find he had made a good bargain. A person of distinction was dying, a mark of honor was brought him from his monarch. Taking it in his shaking hands and looking at it through the mists of waning eyesight, he feebly said, "This is a mighty fine thing here in this country; but I am going to a country where it will be of no value to me." We, too, my friend, you and I, are soon to go to a country where the pearl honors, pearl treasures, and pearl pleasures of this life will have no quotations. The "Pearl of great price" will irradiate the gloom of a dying chamber, be our passport through the gates of the new Jerusalem, and make the countless age of eternity unspeakable in rapture and glory.

A skilled nurse in the Dufferin Hospital, in India, explained to a high-class Hindu woman Holman Hunt's picture of Christ knocking on the closed door. When winter had come and the snow was falling, the nurse went to minister to that same Hindu woman and found the door of the home open and the snow blowing in; and when she said the door should be closed, the woman said, "I know it; I have seen the snow, I have felt the cold, but I thought that perhaps your Jesus might pass by, and I wanted Him to find the door open."

Christian Orphanage

Dear Friends:

It has often been said that the leaves on the trees get their growth by the 10th of May. From the general appearance of the trees now, it seems that this season will be no exception to the rule. The spring season is always a beautiful season in the year. The trees, clothed in their new spring coats, with all the flowers arrayed in their beauty, make one feel like taking on new life and energy and doing greater things. God has made this a beautiful world in which to live, and has thrown around us every blessing of life to make us happy and contented. But with so many things to make us happy, the superintendent of an orphanage comes in touch with those who are unhappy because misfortune has come into their life. A few days ago, a bright little boy came to see us. His father and mother had recently died and left him with little sisters and brothers to be provided for—nine in all. Kinspeople and two orphanages had provided for all except this boy, who is fourteen. He had passed the age limit when orphanages take children. We could not help but have a deep sympathy for him. It was a great shock to lose father and mother; then to lose family ties of his brothers and sisters from whom he is separated; and then, too, no home he can call his own. Left in the world alone, a fine little fellow. As we talked with him, how our heart ached, and it was hard to keep back the tears that just wanted to fill our eyes. We have two little boys, six and eight, in our home. We wondered, while talking to this little boy, if such a misfortune should fall to their lot and they were left homeless and appealed for friends and a shelter, if they would be received kindly. A home and a father's care would mean so much to this little boy during the next three years of his life. We wish we had the friends to enable us to help him now, when it would mean so much to him. Have we a big-hearted friend who could make it possible for us to help him? Now is your opportunity to do a good deed and make a good investment.

NEW YORK ESTABLISHES PRECEDENT.

A precedent has been set for other States in the action taken by the executive board of the New York State Federation of Women's Clubs just before the opening of its annual convention in Utica. Without a dissenting vote, this board voted not (not) to admit to membership in the organization the New York State division of the "Woman's Organization for National Prohibition Reform."

The letter to Mrs. Charles J. Reeder stated that the purpose was to enter the federation as a means of offsetting the arguments of the New York State Woman's Christian Temperance Union. In an interview with a representative of the Christian Science Monitor, Mrs. Reeder stated: "The New York State Federation is unequivocally on record for prohibition and law enforcement."

We sometimes think from reports that all of New York State is enrolled in the membership of that body of women, whose public speaker on the platform in St. Louis recently stated (a lawyer and an orator, she was too): "Some say we should live up to the law while it is a law. I have been guilty of violating it . . . an action of which I am proud . . . I openly defy it; I encourage open rebellion against it."

Is this law-defying creed the one they prescribe for the future citizens of the United States? What more could underworld criminals want to justify their attacks on property and human life than this sort of philosophy?

METHODS CORNER

By REV. ELISHA A. KING, D. D.
Miami Beach, Fla.

There are many forms of evangelism, but not all of them are recognized as such. Publicity or advertising the Church is one form not usually recognized, but it is easy to see that it does have a right to be included.

When we hold evangelistic services, we desire to have people come to our Churches. In order to arouse their attention, we send out letters or make announcements in the newspapers. The people of the community learn of our meetings and come. In a similar way, of course, we seek to win people to our Churches throughout the year.

However, there is a danger of misunderstanding the nature or ethics of advertising. It has sometimes been thought that the end justifies the means, and so even Church publicity has not been wholly truthful. For example, I remember two ministerial friends who always advertised their large audiences, stating that two or three thousand people crowded into their Churches, when, on an exact count, there was room for only 1,200. It is true that extra people crowded in, but the advertisement was intended to induce people to come to Church on account of its exceeding popularity. This is a small failing compared with the minister who advertised such themes for Sunday night as "Why Mary Fell Out of Bed." This sort of thing drew a crowd of curiosity-seekers, but the preacher never referred in any way to the question he used to get his crowd.

Another Church advertised that it had the coolest auditorium in town and the most comfortable seats, neither of which were true. Examples without end could be given of such methods of publicity, but there goes the inevitable sequel that all such attempts to build up a congregation fail in the long run.

There are a few general principles to keep in mind when advertising a Church service. One is the name of the Church, the name of its minister, its location, and the hours of all its services. Another is the subject of the sermon, or address, or the event, for people are often moved to go to Church these days on account of what is being done or said at the Church. We still have a large number of people who go to Church out of a sense of duty, but we must try to interest the "outsider," and this may be done partly through advertising. But, above all else, let there be honesty in our published statements about the Church. Rightly conducted, regular, informing publicity pays and brings to the Church many good people who would not be likely to attend Church without some such arousing information. In time, they become interested and often develop into good workers and helpers.

COMPARATIVE LEARNING.

The Moody Monthly gives an interesting comparison of the answers given by a modern American boy and a native African boy to Bible questions. The black boy was employed as cook to a missionary and had only been six years converted from heathenism; the other was a high school boy who had attended Sunday School for ten years in the United States. Here are the questions and answers. The "(1)" represents the answers of the American boy; the "(2)" those of the African boy:

When was the Bible written? (1) "After the birth of Christ." (2) "Part before and part after Christ. God told Moses to write the laws and put them in the ark."

By whom was the Bible written? (1) "Paul; the twelve apostles." (2) "Good men of long ago chosen by the Holy Spirit."

Who delivered Israel from Egyptian bondage?

(1) "David." (2) "Moses and Aaron."

How long did Israel wander in the wilderness?

(1) "Ten years; two years." (2) "Forty."

Name one Old Testament prophet. (1) "Leviticus; John the Baptist." (2) "Isaiah."

Who was the greatest missionary of all time?

(1) "David Livingstone." (2) "Paul."

How are we saved? (1) "By joining the Church; by becoming a member of some house of God." (2) "By faith and acceptance of the blood of Christ shed for us."

What is meant by the Christian's hope? (1) "Every one can be saved; the hope of being saved; to live a clean life." (2) "Christ's coming."

There is force in the statement of the woman missionary who submitted the answers of the black boy, that the time may yet come when Africa will have to send Sunday school teachers to teach the youth of America.—Missionary Review.

ELON COLLEGE

of the

CONGREGATIONAL CHRISTIAN CHURCHES OF THE SOUTHEAST

ELON was founded to train Christian leaders for the New South.

ELON has done its task well—one graduate in seven being in the Christian ministry. The other six express Christian leadership in the various professions and vocations. Experience teaches that spiritual leadership must be indigenous.

The South is now a New South ready for an inclusive Church, the type of Church for which Elon has stood for forty years and for which she is prepared to produce capable leadership.

With no Church in the community, save the College Auditorium, ELON has practiced Christian Union for faculty, students, and community for four decades.

Its contribution to Christian Education is nationally known and approved.

Its Christian Education Building, providing laboratory facilities for religious leadership training, is unique and is the first college building of its type in the world.

ELON confines itself to undergraduate liberal arts work with that religious emphasis which befits the Christian College.

In ELON the Congregational-Christian Church has an asset of marvelous hopefulness.

The South needs her Yale, her Oberlin, her Carleton, her Pomona for the intellectual leadership of the United Church. Many regard ELON as strategically located and spiritually endowed to become such a center of illumination and leadership training.

OBITUARIES.

SMELSER.

Mrs. Eliza Anne Smelser was born in May, 1844, and died April 2, 1931, aged 86 years and 11 months. She is survived by six children, twenty grandchildren, and thirty-four great-grandchildren. She was an invalid for about four years, but bore her sufferings with Christian fortitude, and died in the triumph of a living faith. She was a member of the Methodist Church. Funeral services were held at Leak's Chapel, near her home at Honeyville, Page County, Va., April 4.

A. W. ANDES.

KENT.

J. W. Kent was born on August 5, 1859, and departed this life April 11, 1931. He was married to Miss Josephine Hodges in 1875, and to this union were born nine children—four girls and five boys. In 1914, the Lord saw fit to take this good wife and mother. The same year, Mr. Kent married to Miss Carrie Long, and they lived happily together until on last Saturday the Lord called him to his reward.

Bro. Kent was one of those old-fashioned men who believe in earning their living by the sweat of their brow. As long as he was able to work, he was independent. He provided well for his family, and it was the joy of his heart to give of his substance to the support of the Church, which was so near his heart. He was a good citizen, firm in his convictions, and stood for that which he felt was right, regardless of how other men thought or felt. He served in the Christian Church as deacon for more than thirty years, and his was a life of unselfish service, always preferring others' pleasures before his own. He leaves to mourn his going his wife, four daughters and one son, one brother, a host of grandchildren, and an unnumbered company of friends. May God richly bless them in this hour of deep sorrow.

The funeral service was held in the

EDITOR CHRISTIAN STANDARD DEAD.—

Russell Errett, since the death of his father, Isaac Erratt, the guiding genius of the Christian Standard, the conservative Disciples' weekly, published in Cincinnati, died in that city April 27th. Mr. Errett, we are told, had been in poor health for the past two years.

SANKEY'S TEACHER DEAD.—

Galusha Cole, who taught Ira D. Sankey, noted singer and associate with Dwight L. Moody in his evangelistic work, how to sing by note, has just died in his 105th year. He was hale and hearty to the last, and his end was hastened by an untimely fall. Mr. Cole climbed Mt. Wilson on his 85th birthday. He last attended Church the Sunday before Easter. It is a great blessing to live a useful life to a goodly old age and make the transition without long suffering.

MAY DAY MEETING.—

The New York Presbytery showed an encouraging interest in the implications of Christianity in the economic world by holding a meeting on the historic "Labor Day," May 1st. The general subject was the problem of unemployment and what the Churches may do about it. The speakers were Prof. Broadus Mitchell, of John Hopkins University; John Fitch, of the New York School of Social Work, and James Myers, of the Federal Council. The presbytery was in a mood for something more than listening, so a set of resolutions was proposed and unanimously adopted calling for the displacing of the profit motive by the motive of service and urging upon the general assembly of the Church more serious attention to these great economic issues.

DEWEY'S THREE QUESTIONS.—

John Dewey, of Columbia University, says that there are three important questions around which our thought moves: Where have we come? Where are we going? Meantime, what are we going to do for the time we are here? Dewey says philosophy has not been very successful in answering one and two, and when we sum up Dewey's effort to answer the third, in spite of his voluminous writing, we may say that his conclusion is that he does not know exactly what to say. Meantime, we must live, just as we must eat, while the dieticians are carrying on the seemingly endless debate about calories and vitamins. The only thing I know to do is to keep busy either in self-government or in helping others, or both, until we graduate for the life above.

THE TEACHINGS OF JESUS.—

A new book with the above title has just appeared from the Cokesbury Press. The author is Harvie Branscomb, who won the Cannon Hall Greek Testament prize, and also a "first class" with the added honor of the congratulations of the examiners as a Rhodes scholar at Oxford University, where he graduated. He continued his work at Union Theological Seminary and Columbia University and received his Ph.D. degree from Columbia. This work will be greatly appreciated by ministers who periodically refresh their minds on the subject, and by teachers of the New Testament, and Sunday School teachers who wish to delve deep beneath the surface of the gospels, for it is fully abreast of the scholarship of our day. Ministers who are not "grown" will find food for thought here.

"IF I WERE A PREACHER."—

Prof. Frederick P. Woellner, of the University of California, at Los Angeles, recently spoke to the preachers of Los Angeles upon the subject, "If I Were a Preacher." Among other things, he told them not to be unduly alarmed by the prophets of doom who are forever ringing the charges upon the drifts and cross-currents of life and prating about the new morality and the new religion. He reminded the leaders of religion that the great spiritual values, right, justice, good will, love, faith, and hope, abide amid the ever-changing forms of expression. Christianity, he said, is the best the race has come to know, and we should ally ourselves with it. The address was all compact of common sense and alive to the world of today. Prof. Woellner teaches a Bible class of college students numbering one thousand every Sunday, and his messages are broadcast.

MCCONNELL VISITS CHICAGO.—

It was not so much as president of the Federal Council of Churches, nor even as the fearless prophet of a Christian social order that Bishop Francis J. McConnell was welcomed to Chicago recently. The intensity of the interest in his visit was due rather to the fact that he had just returned from India where he delivered the Barrows lectures, under the auspices of the University of Chicago, and multitudes were eager to learn what impression the great and dramatic events in that land had made upon his alert and well-balanced mind. He lectures on "The Influence of Christianity on the Religions of India," under the auspices of the divinity school of the University of Chicago. He spoke at the university chapel by request of President Hutchins, on his experiences and observations as Barrows' lecturer in India. "The Christian Ideal and Social Control" was the general subject of the Barrows' lectures, and what astonished the bishop was that in India such a topic should be viewed as a novelty. It seemed strange to India that God should find expression in devoted service to men. Wonder what the missionaries have been doing in India!

BANDITS AND CHRISTIAN PASTORS.—

The type of Christians made in China seems to be as fine as any in the whole history of Christianity. The Congregationalist and Herald of Gospel Liberty says that the Chinese Christian pastor made prisoner by bandits endures suffering about which the world never hears, and relates the following story to illustrate:

"Mr. Jen's salary is nine dollars a month—barely sufficient to cover the most meager expenses. Jen owned some farm land, upon which, of necessity, he was semi-dependent. He was captured by bandits with other prisoners, some of whom were beaten, mutilated and killed. Before he was free, his family had to sell his farm and give more than four hundred dollars to his captors. Twenty-five miles from Tehchow lived the widow of a Christian pastor, herself a former Bible woman. Her husband had carried a thousand-dollar insurance policy with a foreign company. Upon his death, the money went to his widow. She was abducted and held until her family had turned over twelve hundred dollars, the insurance money plus other savings. Yet, in the face of such tales, Rev. Leonard Outerbridge declares that 'this has been the most encouraging year in evangelistic work that I have seen in China.' This kind of Christian pluck insures the final success of Christianity in China, India, Russia—everywhere.

GRAHAM TAYLOR.—

Graham Taylor celebrated his 80th birthday May 4th. At eighty he still pioneers on social frontiers. Perhaps the pioneering was a bit more evident and dramatic when he was forty years old, forty years ago. Today whenever there is a group fighting for social progress, he will be found among them, and is usually in front. He says that when he first went to Chicago Theological Seminary as the first professor of sociology in a school of theology, he wanted a place where he could bring his students face to face with life conditions. He settled and started Chicago Commons, and today, "Enter whatever sphere of socially constructive work you may name in Chicago, and presently you will encounter Graham Taylor. Rehabilitation of broken families, war on social evils, physical and moral; creation of opportunities for youth, recreationally and educationally; improvement of housing facilities; cleansing of politics; election of better aldermen and other public officials; breaking down the barriers of race and creedal prejudice—these are among the things for which he has lived and still lives gallantly and hopefully." Whenever Christian men and women realize that the genuineness of their Christian profession is attested most genuinely by the "outfluence" of their Christian profession in social service, the world will feel their professed influence for Jesus Christ.

NOTES-PERSONALS

"Ye are my friends if ye do whatsoever I command you."—John 15:14.

"This is a faithful saying, and worthy of all acceptation, that Christ Jesus came into the world to save sinners, of whom I am chief" (1 Tim. 1:15).

Not how much of my money will I give to God, but how much of God's money will I keep for myself! That is one of the most vital questions we will ever be called upon to answer in this world.

Quite a large per cent of the Churches have not yet taken or completed their annual missionary offering. Pastors and Churches should look upon this offering as a blessing and not a burden, for such it will be if pastor and people enter into it in the spirit of self-sacrifice, self-denial and for the glory of their Lord.

The forty-first commencement of Elon College begins with the baccalaureate sermon, Sunday, May 24th, and will conclude with the graduating exercises and the baccalaureate address Tuesday, the 26th. This is always a gala occasion, and Elon becomes a mecca for hundreds of CHRISTIAN SUN readers, friends and parents of graduates and lovers of Elon College. It is anticipated that this commencement will uphold and even surpass the high standard set and maintained by the college in other years.

The Woman's Mission Board of the Southern Christian Convention met in annual session in the home of Mrs. J. A. Williams, president, Franklin, Va., on Thursday, May 14th. Other members of the board attending were: Mrs. L. W. Stagg, Mrs. E. L. Beale, Mrs. M. J. W. White, Mrs. H. C. Caviness, Mrs. W. M. Jay, Mrs. R. T. Bradford. Visitors: Dr. W. M. Jay and Mission Secretary J. O. Atkinson. The day was made most happy through the gracious hospitality of Mrs. Williams, and the work for the various conferences of the Convention was gone over in detail and plans were made and discussed for the coming year.

It is learned with deep regret that Rev. T. N. Lowe has resigned as pastor of the Elm Avenue Church, Portsmouth, Va., to take effect June 1st. Bro. Lowe has worked faithfully at Elm Avenue and was instrumental as pastor in greatly enlarging the scope of the work there and in increasing the membership of the Church and Sunday School. Under his pastorate, the Church paid off its indebtedness, and also built valuable additions to the Church plant for the work of the Church school and religious education. Bro. Lowe is a faithful and consecrated preacher, and any Church securing his services will be fortunate. After June 1st, his address will be 310 Eighth Avenue, Hopewell, Va.

The women of the Alabama Conference held their missionary rallies—first, at the Christiana Church, on Sunday, May 10th, in the presence of a large and happy audience; the second, at Wadley, on Monday, May 11th, and though not largely attended, the sessions were of deep interest and significance and seemed to be thoroughly appreciated and enjoyed by all present; the third, at Roanoke, May 12th, which was largely attended and was exceedingly interesting and full of encouragement and enthusiasm. Mrs. G. L.

Stephens presided at the Christiana meeting, Mrs. V. E. Kitchens at the Wadley meeting, Mrs. G. H. Veazey at the Roanoke meeting. Mrs. V. E. Kitchens, of Roanoke, is the president of the Conference Woman's Board, and Mrs. G. L. Stephens, of Wadley, is the secretary, and both of these deeply interested officials attended all three of the rallies and aided much in making the sessions a success. Our Alabama women certainly are rapidly developing into leaders and workers of ability and faithfulness, and a great day is ahead for the work of the women in that growing Conference.

THE SUN's editor had the coveted privilege of delivering the baccalaureate sermon to the graduating class, seventeen in number, and to a magnificent audience in the beautiful and spacious auditorium of Piedmont Junior College, Wadley, Ala., on the evening of May 10th. The occasion was a very happy one, enlivened with the hope and expectation of youth, the thrilling and inspiring songs of the occasion, the choruses of some thirty or more voices, the inspiration and the joy of assembling at the close of a perfect day and the end of the college year to worship God in praise, prayer and sermon. Piedmont Junior has had a good year, President Beougher laboring with tireless energy to carry on the work, and financial secretary, Dr. Jenkins, with his splendid devotion to a great task out in the field, making it possible for the work to be maintained and carried on. Against many odds and under many difficulties, Dr. Beougher and Dr. Jenkins have labored zealously, and wrought heroically, to maintain, under most stringent financial depression, the work at the high standard set for it in previous years. President Beougher has resigned and expects to return to the ministry to which he had given many years of active service before accepting the presidency of the college which he has wrought so tenaciously and zealously to maintain and to build up. His successor has not at this writing been decided upon, we are advised.

NEW VOICE IN RELIGIOUS RADIO.

A wholly new voice will be heard over the air in the summer schedule of religious services sponsored by the Federal Council of Churches. It will be that of Rev. Frederick H. Knubel, president of the United Lutheran Church of America. Dr. Knubel is probably the best-known Lutheran in this country. When the United Lutheran Church was organized, in 1918, through the merger of three Lutheran bodies, he was elected president, and has held that high position ever since.

Rev. Frederick K. Stamm, pastor of the Clinton Avenue Congregational Church, Brooklyn, N. Y., who has been heard on several occasions in radio programs, now becomes a regular speaker throughout the season.

Two other voices which have become thoroughly familiar to radio audiences will be heard again this summer—Rev. Charles L. Goodell, executive secretary of the Federal Council's Commission on Evangelism, and Rev. Ralph W. Sockman, minister of the Madison Avenue Methodist Episcopal Church, New York.

The summer schedule goes into effect on the first Sunday in June. The schedule of hours (E. S. T.) sponsored by the Federal Council will be as follows:

The Friendly Hour (3-4 P. M., WJZ and associated stations)—Dr. Frederick K. Stamm, speaker.

National Sunday Forum (4-5 P. M., WEA and associated stations)—Dr. Ralph W. Sockman, speaker during the first half of the season; Dr. Frederick H. Knubel, speaker during the second half of the season.

Sabbath Reveries (5-6 P. M., WJZ and associated stations)—Dr. Charles L. Goodell, minister.

All these hours are expected to have a nationwide hearing, as was the case last summer, when the high point of religious broadcasting was reached.

The daily morning devotional period, which has been so widely appreciated as a form of family worship, will be continued, as will also the Thursday evening half-hour of worship and song.

As in past seasons, the coast-to-coast networks of the stations associated with National Broadcasting Company will be used, and the Greater New York Federation of Churches will serve as the local conducting agency.

METHODS CORNER

BY REV. ELISHA A. KING, D. D.

Miami Beach, Fla.

One of the most important departments of our Church activity is that which includes the young people. Just now I am not thinking of the Sunday School, but the young people's society in many Churches called the Christian Endeavor Society. I have recently heard Rev. Harry Stock talk on suggested programs for young people's meetings.

The first one he mentioned was the discussion meeting, which is in such vogue today. This is a very successful method and is carried on under the direction of a leader. If possible, there should be an adult sponsor, but the leader of the meeting opens the discussion by announcing the theme and asking leading questions, while the members present express their opinions and debate the subject generally. He said that there has been so much discussion and for so long that perhaps it would be just as well to try other kinds of programs.

He thinks that a current-event program would be good to have occasionally. It is worth while to get the young people to talk about outstanding events, such as the activities of Gandhi in India. Local items of importance might be discussed, and, of course, the plan would be to consider them from a Christian angle.

It seemed to Mr. Stock that once a year at least there might be a formal worship program. Once a year there could be a Communion service for young people. And again he emphasized the vespers service out-of-doors.

The "share-your-reading" service is another idea. Read with the young people. To remove the formality, place the chairs in a circle; that brings friendliness at once.

Then he mentioned making use of homes for some of the meetings. Where this plan has been carried through successfully, the people of the homes were benefitted. The young people found a new experience themselves. It brought a new attitude between the old folks and the young folks.

Another plan mentioned was the question-box service. A box may be placed in the vestibule of the Church and young people encouraged to place unsigned questions in it. These can be answered by the pastor. He suggested that the pastor might invite the young people to his home for an evening. Another plan suggested was for the minister to preach a series of sermons to young people and ask them to discuss them in the meeting. What we need is to keep alive to what is going on and try to see religion in a fresh, new way. The young people need the sympathy and co-operation of adults, but they desire to work out their own problems by themselves where they may be free to express their thought. Mr. Stock thinks they should learn by doing useful Christian things.

CONGREGATIONAL NEWS

REV. E. C. GILLETTE, Editor; REV. F. P. ENSMINGER, and REV. M. J. SWEET, Associates.

THE MISSIONARY HERALD for May carries an interesting and informing article on Protestantism in Mexico, written by Dr. Elisha A. King, pastor of the Community Congregational Church at Miami Beach, Florida.

W. PALM BEACH, FLA.: A mothers' and daughters' banquet was given on the evening of the 8th by the Woman's Association of Union Congregational Church. More than one hundred were present. The banquet was served by the men of the Church. An interesting program followed, with music and speaking.

KEY WEST, FLORIDA: This church of which Rev. E. Richard Evans is pastor, has an enterprising church reporter and furnishes nearly a column of notes weekly for the local papers. One of the items in a recent issue is of especial interest as indicating the attendance at the prayer meeting of the church "because of the rain and of the illness of a number of our people there were only about thirty present at the mid-week service."

WINTER PARK, FLA.: The Congregational, Methodist Episcopal and Episcopal Churches of this city will hold union services during June, July and August, and the first two weeks in September. Among the preachers will be Drs. Vincent, Thomas, and Treadwell and two able preachers from the city. Some minister will be on hand for any needed personal work during the whole summer. It is a hopeful indication for the religious life of the place when the Churches work together in hearty accord.

HALEYVILLE, ALA.: Rev. M. L. Hargraves writes as follows: "An example of truly Christian interdenominational spirit is being found among the Churches in some of the North Alabama Congregational communities. We held an interdenominational Sunday School convention near Mt. Carmel, of Hamilton, Ala., May 2nd and 3rd, of which three denominations were well represented. It may be noted also that we have a fifth Sunday School institute which brings together the different leaders of all denominations in these communities, and the programs are carried out fittingly and is having a great influence in the building up of Sunday Schools in this section. We are developing more and more the spirit of good will among the Christian people here."

CHATTANOOGA, TENNESSEE. The Pilgrim Church Herald, edited by the pastor, Dr. C. Rexford Raymond, has a paragraph relative to the union of the Christians and Congregationalists, and says, "take a copy of our combined paper for the southeast, THE CHRISTIAN SUN, as you leave the vestibule of the church and learn more about our new members." Concerning the advantages of union he says: "Someone asked what advantage there is in the new union of our two denominations. One manifest advantage is in reduction of the cost of overhead management, by uniting our religious newspapers, and by uniting our mission work. In cities where there are Churches of both bodies, it has been possible in some cases already to unite the congregations. American Protestantism needs such church union more than it needs any other one thing. The consolidation of weak churches and a united program in the mission field would register a great step in advance. Our divisions may have had a historic reason; but, in many cases, they now have no reason except unworthy and selfish excuses for continued separation."

DEDICATION AT MEANSVILLE.

A crowd which overflowed the auditorium and stood about the doors and windows outside helped to dedicate the beautiful new brick Church at Meansville, Ga., May 3rd. Rev. Lawrence L. Stanley is the happy pastor, and there was great rejoicing as the people sang and prayed and praised at this great meeting. It was Dr. W. Knighton Bloom, secretary of missions, who preached a masterly sermon for this unusually significant service.

The local Baptist and Methodist ministers were present and shared in the service. Appropriate words of greeting were beautifully spoken by the pastor. The music was in charge of Mr. John Bush, of Barnesville, and a few of his singers from the Fredonia Church. The dedicating prayer was offered by Rev. J. J. Horne, the act of dedication was led by Rev. M. J. Sweet, pastor-at-large, and the benediction was by Miss Annie R. Campbell, extension worker in Georgia.

Following the dedication, a most bountiful picnic dinner was served on the beautiful Church grounds, where tables had been prepared for the purpose. The afternoon service was given to singing of hymns to the glory of God and the good of men. It was a wonderful day in the life of this Church. The people had worked hard and knew what sacrifice meant to bring the Church to dedication free of debt except for the loan by the Church Building Society. New hymnals had recently been secured, and in every way this was a most satisfying event in the life of rural middle Georgia. Great credit goes to the pastor and the people who have stood by him during the strenuous days when this building, a credit to any city, was planned and erected.

CONFERENCE OF CAROLINAS.

In reporting this great Conference for THE SUN, one word should be spoken first. That word is a hearty "Thank you, Dr. Rowland and all your people who so wonderfully cared for the large number of delegates and visitors who came expectant to your doors May 5, 6, 7." Following that, there should be a word of appreciation for the splendid spirit of good-fellowship coming into this meeting from the many pastors and friends from the Christian Churches of the region.

"An Advancing Church" was the theme of the program. The intent of the framers of it was to bring intelligent inspiration and practical help down to each individual Church. They were not disappointed. Not a single utterance was made, not a voice was heard but brought some thrilling note of appeal or zealous suggestion of "how" and "why," and often "what" the individual Church might attempt to do to make more efficient its program. "Pragmatism" was not mentioned by any one, but inspiration to action seemed to vibrate in every session.

Dr. Halliday's "Three Voices from the Mount," "The Church Out in the Open" by Dr. Serl; "Building My Church," by Mr. Scott, and "An Advancing Church, Its Passion," each carried the audience to high and still higher levels. Of course, space and time make it quite impossible to give even a fraction of the things they said here, but their messages are living memories to those who heard them. And there was Rev. Ernest Riggs, secretary of the American Board, speaking on "An Advancing Church in the World." What a subject! And how his master interpretation of conditions and suggestion of duties brought home responsibilities for clear thinking in order that we not lose leadership in the representation of the real Christ, while outstanding characters like the great Indian mystic outrun us, though they call themselves by another name than Christian. No more important or profound a message was given than his.

And of course, President Harper, always brilliant, marshaled fact and figures to the amazement of everybody while he pointed the way to the necessity of all becoming one, if we are to do more than live by denominational statistics and vagaries of creed. There were other important words spoken, among them Dr. Lobingier's, those of the young people, Truitt, Canoy and Penn, introduced facetiously by Miss Chase at the banquet, the impressive Communion service by Dr. Clark, the reports of officers and committees, and much else.

But, insofar as parliamentary usage was concerned, the "Council" formed by delegates from the Christian Churches with those from the Carolina Congregational Churches furnished the greater interest. It was here one of the most important matters of union was considered. It is presumed that others have written of this for THE SUN. Suffice it to say here that the forming of a great fellowship to be known as "The Conference of the Congregational and Christian Churches of the Carolinas and Virginia" (this including a few Churches near the border line only) was unanimously voted, and it is expected will come before both bodies meeting jointly in 1932.

The Conference closed with many remarks from "Old Timers" that it was the best one held for many years. Doubtless, the fact of the union with the Christians helped to bring this happy result about. Rev. George N. Edwards was elected moderator for the next year; Dr. W. Knighton Bloom was elected to represent the Conference at the meeting of the National Council at Seattle; Geo. Penn was elected scribe, with Rev. William T. Scott as assistant; Rev. M. J. Sweet was re-elected to serve as registrar, treasurer and pastor-at-large. After a final closing word by Dr. J. Edward Kirby, which was filled with statesmanship, idealism, looking with hope to the future, the moderator pronounced the benediction and the Conference adjourned, with everybody happy.

ORGAN DEDICATED.

The Circular Church, Charleston, S. C., of which Rev. George W. Edwards is pastor, has completed the installation of a new pipe-organ. It was dedicated with an organ recital on Tuesday, April 21st. Concerning the recital and the organ, the Charleston Evening Post has the following to say:

"The dedication of the new organ at the Congregational Church, with Alex Zenier as organist, took place Tuesday evening. The Church was fortunate to have Mr. Zenier at the organ on this important occasion. Mr. Zenier is a very fine musician, and organist. The chimes installed with the organ are particularly sweet. The swell organ is very good, and the diapasons have a voice like the deep chanting of the sea. As the Rev. Geo. N. Edwards declared, this organ may be said to be of the Church universal. It belonged to Westminster Church. The Roosevelt console was formerly used in Grace Church. Added to the old stops and wind-chests were new stops from Atlanta. The case was bought from Trinity Methodist Church. In a way, the organ is an antique, used in the worship of various Churches through long years. It was originally built in 1859 by Henry Knauff. The organ has been possible through donations from friends near and far, and it is a standing memorial to the energies and persistent activity of the present pastor, Rev. George N. Edwards."

PRINCIPLES OF THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

- (1) The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
- (2) Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.
- (3) The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
- (4) Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship and of Church membership.
- (5) The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by, all.

THE PURPOSE OF THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

The purpose of this Church is to cultivate a spirit of union among the followers of our Lord Jesus Christ of every persuasion, and to secure, if possible, the associate efforts of all true religious teachers in pointing the wicked to "the Lamb of God who taketh away the sin of the world."

The peculiar doctrines and tenets which have confused and distracted the Christian world are remanded to private judgment, and hence cease to be matters for debate, only in so far as may be necessary to prevent a sectarian influence from entering the Church.

This Church requires no compromise of faith on the part of any child of God in order to communion or fellowship; here, denominational distinctions cease to exist, and Christian love binds the brotherhood together.

The purpose of this Church will be consummated in the conversion of the world and the union of all Christians.

DR. HARPER AND ELON.

Mr. C. M. Cannon, college correspondent, gave to the news columns of THE CHRISTIAN SUN, and others papers, recently, the surprising and regrettable information that Dr. W. A. Harper had resigned as President of Elon College, and told of the achievements of his administration. These need not be repeated here. This line now is given to THE SUN to express the deep regret of the editor, and he believes that of hundreds of our readers, at conditions which brought Dr. Harper to the conclusion that he could not serve the College as president after the end of the present scholastic year. Through twenty years of brilliant service as president, and prior to that, six years as professor in Elon College, Dr. Harper has given the strength, energy and consecration of a vigorous manhood to an institution which he loves as his own soul.

A man of vision, sustained and carried forward by a great mind and tireless energy, he has wrought to noble ends and a great purpose in helping to create a college plant and equipment, in which his own heart can but indulge a pardonable pride, and one which the entire Church glories in and delights to call its own. Dr. Harper has spared no effort, no energy, no strength he could command by day or by night, to build a great institution to which the present generation may look with pride, and which posterity cannot forego or forget. His name will be inseparably linked with Elon College through the years of a history yet to be written. By the powers of his brilliant intellect, by the forcefulness of his thinking, by his acquaintance with themes of universal interest and import, he has made Elon College known far beyond the borders of his Church and has given it a place of esteem, of approval and of admiration in the high circles of academic and collegiate interest throughout the country. In the outlay of buildings and the architectural designs and achievements on the campus, as well as in the outlay of his own powers of personality, he has been instrumental in building a college not only in brick and mortar, but in the minds and conduct of thousands far and near who will share with us the feeling of personal regret that he must relinquish the helm he has held so firmly, and with which he has steered so zealously, through the years of his fruitful and far-reaching administration.

Although his mind thinks comprehensively and in terms of large tasks and great results, he has at the same time the genius of infinite detail and the ability to be a friend and a neighbor. This writer has lived by him through these many years, and, with sincerity, he can say that a man never had a more kindly neighbor with a ready hand to help, and a more willing disposition to befriend in time of lack and need, than President W. A. Harper.

And now that he lays down the burden too great for one man to bear continuously (it is a marvel that he has borne it for twenty years), the highest tribute we, his friends, can pay to him and to the great work he has done, is to find a successor who will carry to even greater consequences and results the task in which he has wrought so faithfully and with such persistence through the years. The glory of any achievement, the success of any undertaking, the strength of any institution is reflected and is most manifest in the manner it is carried on after he who has directed has turned the helm over to another. It will reflect honor and credit on Dr. Harper and his administration if the trustees are able to find a man who shall carry on to better consequences and results the work he has so nobly and well begun. It will but dim the luster of his achievements if the trustees, in such a crisis, do not rise to meet it, and to cast the mantle on the shoulders of one who, inspired and stabilized by the past twenty years of Elon history, shall, by consecration of hand and heart, "carry on," and thus reflect an ever-increasing light from that torch passed on to him from the hand of him who kept the light burning, for twenty brilliant years, from the warmth and passion of his own great mind, heart and soul.

J. O. A.

THE GOSPEL—ITS TWO SIDES.

That which is reclaiming and redeeming human society and the world is the gospel of the Son of God. As one has recently said, "Bring Jesus Christ into any scene or picture, and He at once becomes the central figure there." Bring His gospel, the story of His life and crucifixion, into the mind and to the attention of the world, and He becomes the central figure there. There are two ways in which His gospel—the good news of Him—is brought into the picture of life and of human experience. One is "promotional," and the other "devotional." The preachers are the promoters of the gospel. They pronounce the gospel; they proclaim the gospel; they preach the gospel; their lives are dedicated to the promotion, to the propagation of Him who died on the cross to save and redeem the world. Theirs is the task of the herald, heralding to mankind the glad tidings of peace, of power and of good will.

And then there is the devotional side. Many are held to the Church and to the ways of righteousness, and not a few are attracted thereto by the devotional life of those who have heard the gospel message and have accepted it as the way of life. One wonders if this latter task is not the essential factor and feature in the missionary societies, especially the Woman's Missionary Societies in the Church. Here we find the gospel being practiced and deepened and demonstrated by and through devotion.

It was not enough that His disciples should be taught by our Lord and trained to proclaim Him to the world. Certain women must come in. And in every instance theirs was the part of devotion. It was a woman who broke the alabaster box of very precious ointment and poured it upon Him out of sheer devotion to her Lord. The disciples themselves rebuked the act and could not understand the divinity, the sacredness, much less the need and the merit of it. But Christ praised the woman as He had never praised any disciple. She, too, was helping to proclaim and to make sure the gospel message by her devotions, and so the Saviour said: "Whosoever this gospel shall be preached in all the world, this that this woman hath done shall be told as a memorial of her." The disciples would promote the gospel by proclaiming it. The woman would deepen and enlarge the power and the glory of the gospel by her devotion to Him whose life and love and death on the cross constitute the gospel.

Not all can be preachers of the gospel; not all are called; not all may promote by proclaiming. But all who have heard and have been quickened to newness of life in Him may help spread the gospel, may help deepen it and give it permanence, place and power by a steady, unswerving devotion to the Church, to the gospel, and to the Christ, the Son of the living God.

CHURCH AMID FINANCIAL DEPRESSION.

The first reaction when the Church and "hard times" are mentioned, is to think of diminished support for the local work and reduced contributions for benevolent enterprises. And doubtless both of these have been experienced in many Churches during recent months. But ought our first thought to be of money when we consider this subject?

The first consideration of the Church ought to be humanity and human needs. Instead of the Church leaders thinking first of what the present hard times are doing to the Church exchequer, they ought to be thinking what the Church can do to help those who are experiencing hard times. The fact that in most situations that confront us today, our first thought is of money, results from two conditions. First, money has come to play an important part in all human affairs. And, second, most of us have come to be too greatly influenced by the power of money.

Does the Church have a message that will help the souls of men and women in such a time as this? Christ very clearly taught that money can be either servant or master. In fact, I believe that Jesus taught that it not only can be, but that it always either is the servant of man, or the master of man. Church members ought to be clear, at least in their thinking, on this point. Man, without a master, is even more hopelessly lost than a dog without a master. Only Christ is worthy to be the master of the lives of men. It may be that many of us are in a bad way, because we have been swearing allegiance to the wrong master.

The Church ought to fortify the souls of its members against such times as these. "Set your affections on things above, not on things of this earth," ought to be so thoroughly the basis of our thinking that we would not be overwhelmed when business goes to pot. One might be led to think from much of the conversation one hears among folks who ought to know better, that our faith is in the prosperity of the market-place rather than in God.

There was never a time so favorable to a correct appraisal of things as the present. One does not have to believe that the present financial depression is a direct visitation sent by an avenging God, in order to realize that it is an excellent time to sit down and thoroughly test the value of things that we have been permitting to dominate our thinking and our activities.

The world is sitting around waiting for business to again hit the up-grade, and it will be ready to start afresh with hammer and tongs at the business of piling up profits. One of the causes of the prolonging of the financial depression is that the world wants to be certain that it has a "sure thing." There is no such thing as an absolutely safe business proposition. There is but one human institution that has the assurance of permanency and stability. It is the Church of Jesus Christ; and that is permanent only because it partakes of the divine.

If the Church is all that it ought to be, there has been no time within the last half-century when the Church could have issued a more challenging appeal than it can issue today. Now is the time of all times when men and women ought to be investing their lives in the kingdom of the Lord Jesus Christ. It ought to be that if people have less money to give to the work of the Church, that they should then give more of themselves. I have heard preachers say, "My people are embarrassed because they are not in a position to give as much as they once did." But if gifts are measured by the Christ standard of giving, the poorer they are, the larger their gifts; that is, if they really give out of their poverty.

The trouble is that we have fallen into the error of thinking that we can meet all our responsibilities to the kingdom by the giving of money. It is the heart and the life for which Christ is bidding. It is faith, and loyalty, and love that He expects of us. These are the things that the Church so badly needs. The only poor Churches are the Churches that are weak in love; and if love be lacking, then are they bankrupt indeed.

Christianity is designed especially to meet the needs of men and women in difficult times. Christians are especially fitted and endowed to meet and conquer hard times. It is amid such situations that the value of real Christians may be correctly appraised. Who knows but that we have come to the kingdom for just such times as these?

S. C. H.

EXTREMES.

The danger point in human progress is in the extremes. It is even so in weather. Too cold or too hot interrupts work, comfort, health and business. People who go too far in one line fail in some other. A very brilliant mind is dull in practical judgment. A very fine musician is of little use in ordinary spheres. A great orator is rarely a good business man. A great society woman is rarely a good housekeeper. Where extremes meet is where the average man is at his best. It is sometimes a long distance between the highly educated man and the uneducated man with common sense. The same is true in the social world. The very fashionable woman rarely wins prizes in a cooking-contest; and an ordinary woman rarely wins prizes in a fashion show.

There are extremes in the moral and spiritual world. There is the outlaw, the immoral man, and the sanctified claimant. The extremist misjudges others, and opposite extremists rarely agree. The middle people are on better terms, work together in harmony, co-operate in business and religion, and really maintain the balance in society. The very rich and the poor are so far apart that they fail to appreciate the value of one another. Light and darkness are far apart, but both are necessary and we could not have one without the other. Extremes are necessary, and the conflict between them produces the normal, the average, the working capital in education, business, social life, and religion. It is the conflict between God and the devil in human hearts that produces the genuine Christian. When God wins, the man is saved; when the devil wins, the man is lost. Christian character is built between these two extremes of righteousness and sin. The world is between heaven and hell, and the fight is on all the time in this present life. The better people are, the more they are tempted. The conflict in the individual man is between his best self and his worst self. The devil does not bother a very bad man. He has him already under his control; but as soon as he rises in his thought, his aspirations, and his resolves, the devil begins to tempt him to a different course. It is the successful business man who receives suggestions for investments that will yield greater dividends. The unsuccessful man has no such temptations. The real business of life is to avoid extremes, though extremes are necessary. There can be no valley without hills, no success without extremes. The great conflict is the battle between the past and the future, between the best and the worst.

HELP SEND YOUR PASTOR TO SEATTLE.

One of the most important, possibly the most important, sessions of the General Convention of the Christian Church is to convene in Seattle, Wash., June 26th to July 5th. At this Convention, Christians and Congregationalists will assemble for the first time in joint session, and the merger, already voted by both national bodies, will be effected. Your pastor should be there. Grave questions as to our future are to be decided, and many addresses of information and inspiration are to be delivered. Your pastor cannot go at his own charges. His going will be better equip and fit him for your pulpit. Why not help him go? The Church needs what he will get by going as much as the pastor does. Why not put heads, hands, hearts, and pocketbooks together and make it possible for your pastor to attend this eventful and epochal meeting? It is worth all any Church will put into it for its pastor.

First Humanist Society, of New York, a few days ago, passed a resolution urging the immediate discontinuance of the War and Navy Department at a meeting of the peace committee. Readers of the newspapers will recall that this society was organized about a year ago by Charles Francis Potter, one of the best-known advocates of religious humanism. Whether one agrees with this particular resolution or not, it is encouraging to find that this movement of religious radicalism does not propose to spend itself in negation of the philosophical tenets of other faiths. We may not think much of this society as to its religion, but we may admire its humanitarianism.

What would you do with more money and greater opportunity?

That's not the question. What will you do with the advantages you already have at hand? —Van Amburgh.

MAKE MAY TELL! TELL WHAT? TELL FOR MISSIONS AND THE KINGDOM OF GOD

Many Churches have not yet taken the ANNUAL MISSIONARY OFFERING. Let the month of May tell the story of the effort and self-denial in every Christian Church of the Southern Convention, where the offering has not been taken, of a desire to help win this world to Christ through proclaiming His gospel, giving His message to those in the foreign field and the home field who have not heard and had the opportunity that we have had. Many Churches have not yet taken the offering. Can any Church afford to miss this opportunity of trying to let its light shine out to those who sit and wait in the dark places till that light comes?

Many pastors have not yet been heard from. Can any pastor take the responsibility, the awful responsibility, of not giving his people a chance to express, through their self-denial and their sacrificial offering, their love for their Lord by trying to give a message of that love to those who are dying without it?

Let every Church, every pastor MAKE MAY TELL for Christ and the kingdom of God through our Annual Missionary Offering. The spiritual task of the Church is that of winning the world to Christ—and this is Missions. Through self-denial we carry on the work of the kingdom of our Lord on earth. He gave all, denied all for us. What will we give for Him?

SUFFOLK LETTER.

Benjamin David Crocker, born in Isle of Wight County, Va., passed from this life and its activities on March 26, 1931. His father settled in Suffolk, Va., engaged in the lumber business with William H. Gay, and B. D. came up in close touch with that business. He afterward engaged in that business with the Camp Lumber Company, in Franklin. Later he organized the Suffolk Lumber Company, in 1921, and was the sole owner and head at his death. He was a successful business man, a quiet, peaceable citizen, a faithful and liberal member of Suffolk Christian Church, a good neighbor, and an exemplary husband and father.

He was first married to Miss Adona E. Brinkley, September 24, 1890. She was the mother of four children—Marvin Franklin, who died March 13, 1913; Jane Eloise, Neva Sarah, and Margaret Berm. His first wife was a member of the Church choir and her daughter, Jane Eloise, now Mrs. C. R. Wallace, is the faithful and efficient organist of the Suffolk Christian Church. Her sister, Margaret, is the organist of the Presbyterian Church, though a member of the Christian Church. Their sister, Neva, married Charles Haynes, and they live in Chicago.

On June 30, 1914, Mr. Crocker was married a second time to Iola Graham Johnson, of Southampton, Va., and she was also a graduate of Elon College. She is the mother of one daughter, Rachel Graham Crocker, now in high school, Sunday School and Church. They had a sweet, Christian home on Saratoga Street, in Suffolk, and there is nothing of more worth to the Church or the State than a good home. It is the fountain of character, the flower-bed of good manners, the altar of worship, and a type of heaven. Mr. Crocker and his good wives were the makers of such a home in the unobtrusive spirit of genuine life. It is worthy of note to think of such a Christian home, creating an atmosphere of faith, love, liberality and devotion to the highest and best in thought, speech and conduct.

Gold is not like the rough boulder on the side of the mountain, but must be sought and then found precious and valuable. It is not the people that appear in the limelight that support the cause of business, State, and Church, but it is the quiet, silent worker, that moves the world of human progress. Mr. Crocker was of that type of retiring disposition that did not court publicity for himself or his loved ones. He sought rather to fill his place in all relations in such a manner as to accomplish some worthy end for himself and others. His life was a model, his success was permanent, his friends were many, his business was an example. One business man said: "I have done business with him for thirty years, and there has never been a word or transaction between us that required correction. It was satisfactory all the time for the thirty years." He said less and did more than almost any other member of the Church. Always present, always liberal, and always cheerful.

ELON LETTER.

The forty-first annual commencement of the college begins on Saturday, May 23rd, at 8 o'clock in the evening, with a musical program provided by the department of music of the college. The May queen will be crowned earlier in the evening, and immediately following the May Day event there will be a tea complimenting Mrs. Harper.

Sunday morning, the 24th, at 11:30, the baccalaureate sermon will be delivered by Rev. Russell Henry Stafford, D. D., pastor of the Old South Church, Boston, Mass. Dr. Stafford is one of the outstanding ministers of the United Congregational-Christian Church. His recent book, "Christian Humanism," has brought him into the forefront of outstanding Christian thinkers of today. His message will be heard with great satisfaction and profit.

At 4 o'clock on Sunday afternoon, the final vesper service of the year will be given by Prof. C. James Velie on the Skinner organ.

At 8 o'clock that evening, the message of the president of the college to the senior class will be given. The subject for this baccalaureate address, the twenty-first in the series and the final one by the present president, is "The Best is Yet to Be."

Monday morning, the class-day exercises will occur; Monday afternoon at 2:30 the representatives of the junior class under the direction of the literary societies, will give orations, and that evening Mrs. Grace McElroy Rainey, of the class of 1923, is to give the alumni oration before the Alumni Association and the commencement group.

Tuesday morning, the graduation exercises will occur. The senior class this year has, according to the catalog, fifty-five members, and forty-nine of these will receive diplomas. There are also to be awarded two certificates in piano and one diploma in fine arts. The speaker for the literary address for commencement morning is Mr. Ivy Lee, one of the foremost thinkers in the field of social and religious life today. Mr. Lee is known to be the adviser of Mr. John D. Rockefeller, Jr., in economic, social and religious matters.

On Monday afternoon, at 2 o'clock, there will be a joint meeting of the ministers and the alumni of the college in the chapel of the Christian education building to discuss the future program and policy of the college, and particularly to outline a method by which the Church and Alumni Association may get under and behind the "Million-Dollar Campaign," the success of which is absolutely necessary for the future development and stability of the college. This is to be a most important meeting, and it is hoped that there will be a large attendance, and that a constructive program of real merit will be the result.

The trustees of the college will meet at 10 o'clock on the morning of Tuesday, May 26th, in their regular annual session. They will adjourn for the commencement exercises and reassemble in the afternoon, when they will elect a new president and transact the business that may rightfully come before them.

It is hoped that the friends of the college will attend the commencement exercises in large numbers and help to make it an outstanding one.

OUR NEW FIELDS.

BY VIRGINIA COCKES.

I visited the afternoon session of the rally recently held at Rosemont Church, and was much impressed when Mrs. Cartwright, who, by the way, spoke on this same subject, began her talk with the words, "I am truly embarrassed." You can doubtless imagine that if Mrs. Cartwright was embarrassed, there is no explanation for the mingled emotions which surge through my being this afternoon. You have just listened to two most inspirational talks, and I must say that I feel very keenly my incapability of following them up.

Many of us in the Christian Church have felt for some time that we ought to have a larger foreign mission outlook; that our own souls would be spiritually quickened if we could but catch the vision of direct Christian service to other lands as well as Japan and Porto Rico. We have longed for a larger challenge to call out the best that we believe is in us.

Now, that the Congregationalists and Christians have merged, that challenge has come, and we want the facts about our foreign mission work. The two Churches are taking an immediate step toward complete union by exchanging support of projects on their respective fields. In other words, the Congregational Church assumes $10,000 of our work in Japan, while we in turn will assume the same amount of their work in a dozen different stations in six countries—Africa, India, Greece, Turkey, China and the Philippine Islands. By this plan, both Churches will at once be supporting the work of the United Church. All our foreign missionaries are retained, of course, and now work under the American Board.

And here, may I take time for just a word about the American Board. "The Tree of Life" informs us that the American Board is one of the life-producing, transforming forces of the world. It is held responsible for sharing the truth, goodness, beauty and love of Christ in areas containing sixty million souls. It covers ninety-seven stations and 1,641 sub-stations in thirteen countries on five continents. It is the agency of the Congregational and Christian Churches of America for the concrete expression of good will around the world, and for the spreading of the good news "in every land and unto every creature."

The countries in which the American Board works are Africa, China, India, and Ceylon, Japan, Michronesia, the Papal Lands, including Spain, Czechoslovakia and Mexico, the Philippines, Bulgaria, and the Near East, including Turkey, Greece and Syria.

In these countries we have 649 missionaries, forty-six of whom are physicians. Native workers number 5,281, 1,132 of whom are preachers. There are 695 Churches, with a membership of 105,442, 6,641 of which were added last year. There are 1,345 schools of all grades, with a total enrollment of 91,221 pupils. To this work the natives contributed $379,226.

In these fields there are numerous hospitals, widows' and orphans' homes, child welfare centers and dispensaries, and other benevolences, helping hundreds of thousands every year. The mission hospital in the Philippine Islands, where our own Dr. and Mrs. M. J. W. White are located, had last year 485 in-patients, gave total dispensary treatments of 2,037, and visited the sick in 306 homes.

Every day an army of 90,000 children and young people march to and from day schools and Sunday schools supported by the American Board. Truly a wonderful work and one which should have, as it needs, the daily prayers and self-denial offerings of all our Christian forces.

And still somebody asks if the local missionary society has lived its life and served the purpose for which it was organized. What of the future generations—how could it have lived its life? How else is the mission work to be carried on. Paul said (in Rom. 1:14, 15), "I am debtor . . . so, as much as in me is, I am ready to preach the gospel to you." In these forcible words, the great apostle expresses his own personal missionary conviction and resolve. He confesses himself the heathen's debtor. He owes them the gospel. It is his duty, his debt, and he is only seeking as an honest man to discharge it. Now, if it was Paul's debt, can it be something less for the rest of us? Yet, how few treat it so! So many professing Christians regard missions with utter indifference, if at all. They wonder by what strange freak of nature certain pious folks choose to go and live among yellow or black people rather than to stay at home. And it is to be feared that very many even of those who profess a degree of interest in this work conceive of it merely as a philanthropy, a charity.

Is there any essential difference between regarding missions as a charity and regarding missions as a debt? Let us see. Here comes a ragged, unkept creature holding out his cap to me. I recognize him as a beggar. So I take from my purse a coin—a nickle, a dime, anything—and throw it to him. That is charity. But now another man steps up and hands me a paper. I open it and find it to be a bill. Do I presume to deal with this man as I did with the first, by flinging him the first coin that comes handy? Not by a great deal. This is an entirely different matter, for it is a debt. I am bound to face it seriously and do all in my power, even giving my last dollar, to wipe it out. Applying this illustration to missions, what have we? The result certainly doesn't balance. Today we have a greater debt—an added debt. And it is a debt to physically and morally and spiritually lost humanity. If we are honest we'll not fail to meet it. Truly the American Board of the Congregational and Christian Churches is doing a great work. What are you, as an individual, doing to make it greater?

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL TEACHER'S TASK.

By MRS. R. L. RAIFORD.

(A paper prepared by Mrs. R. L. Raiford, Franklin, Va., and presented to the teachers of the Franklin Christian Sunday School at their last monthly meeting.)

1. The teacher himself. The great problem is to secure teachers—real teachers of power and devotion. When we revert to our own pupil days, we find that the impressions which cling to our memories are not chiefly impressions of facts taught and of lessons learned, but of the personality of the teacher, we have forgotten many of the truths presented; but the warmth and glow of the human touch still remains. The secret of developing personality is living constantly in the present of the best. This will include the best in thought, memory and anticipation. It will permit none but cheerful moods, nor allow us to dwell with petty wrongs and grievances. It will cause us to try to live every day, so that when we are trying to teach our classes we will want to have a broad background of general preparation and special preparation for each lesson taught.

2. The great objective. We must realize that we have failed unless we have caused a spiritual growth and helped a character to grow towards Christ's ideals.

3. The fourfold foundation consists of, first, right aims; second, right material; third, right organization, and fourth, right presentation.

4. Religious knowledge of most worth. We should use that which will give our pupils the understanding that religion is life. Probably no greater defect exists in our religion today than our constant tendency to divorce it from life. There are many persons who undertake to divide their lives up in to compartments, one for business, one for the relations of the home, one for social matters, one for recreation and amusement, and one for religion. The child should be saved the comfortable assumption so tragically prevalent that religion is chiefly a matter for Sundays.

5. Attitudes to be cultivated. Most people are loyal to their homes year after year because of the satisfying experiences connected with love, care, protection and associations. In a similar way, if the experiences in Sunday School and Church yield satisfaction, the child's loyalty and devotion are assured.

6. Connecting religious instruction with life and conduct. One of our first cares in teaching is to form religious habits, such as attending Sunday School and Church services every Sabbath.

The main summary of the other chapters are the ways of teaching which we know will have to be suited to all grades of classes. But the main ideas to remember is that a teacher will have to live a life daily before the classes before we can hope to help form character.

Finally, Jesus was Himself the embodiment of the truths and ideals he offered others. He lived the lessons He desired His pupils to learn. He rendered concrete in Himself the religion He would have His followers adopt. His life was a lesson which all could learn and follow.

Franklin, Va.

GIVING FOR JESUS' SAKE.

In a special campaign for funds to carry on a worthy world-wide work for the salvation of souls, caring for the poor and bringing relief to suffering, one who was not a member of the organization but who felt led to offer aid because of lack of helpers was made to realize just what giving for Jesus' sake meant.

Located at a busy center, varied and sundry reasons were expressed as people gave of their abundance or of their poverty. One said, "It will help our Church," and we thought of how so many give with the idea of helping one certain phase of Christian work with so little thought of the wide field and the many opportunities in the great vineyard of our Lord. Another gave because of the one who was receiving the donations, thinking that in so doing one was doing a humanitarian act to all concerned. Others gave because of the benefit which they or some loved one had received from the organization at a time when help was sorely needed, anxious to help further a worth-while cause. But a little lad, poorly clad and evidently not used to the luxuries of life, gazed in an inquiring manner as the people passed. After quite a time had elapsed, he approached the solicitor and asked the question which had arisen in his mind, adding his own bit of philosophy, then returned to his post of interested watching. Again he came and asked if a penny would be accepted, seeming anxious to do his bit, and dropping it into the receptacle, went back to his post. Once again he came, bringing a small piece of candy, from which he had been eating, as an offering. His penny, his candy, the two things that meant so much to his child-heart, were cheerfully offered. Truly, in the words of our Saviour, "Except ye be converted, and become as little children, ye shall not enter into the kingdom of heaven. Whosoever, therefore, shall humble himself as this little child, the same is greatest in the kingdom of heaven."

Giving for Jesus' sake is not giving that we may have the finest Church in town, nor that our own little work may prosper. It is not giving for the sake of the one who makes the plea, or to get rid of him. It is not giving just because the cause is worthy and we want it to prosper so as to carry on its good work. It is, we feel, giving something that is vital to us, and so sacrificing life, love and service. If we truly love we truly give, withholding nothing, that we may obtain the fullness that is in Christ Jesus, our Lord. The things we hold most dear are laid in sweet surrender at His blessed feet to be used according to His will.

Frances Havergal's beautiful hymn of consecration is so complete and should be the keynote of our lives, the last verse of which sums up our giving for Jesus' sake.

"Take my love, my Lord, I pour
At Thy feet its treasure store;
Take myself, and I will be,
Ever, only, all for Thee." "W."

MISSIONS

REV. J. O. ATKINSON, D. D., Secretary.

A PRAYER.

Eternal God, who didst provide a Saviour to live and work with and for men, we bless Thee that forever there is vouchsafed to prepared and willing hearts the power of becoming fishers of men; that, watching from the eternal shore, Jesus speaks and reassures, as obediently His helpers toil for the deliverance of struggling souls. Defend us, Thy workers, Father, from the thought of self-preservation. Help us to fear not even the sea, that the adrift and sinking miss not the proffered gospel rescue-net. In saving effort, keep us ready and unafraid. We ask it for Jesus' sake. Amen. J.

SOME MISSIONARY FIGURES AND FACTS.

Many want facts about foreign missions. Very well, let's see if we can give them.

1. Facts as to our now United Congregational-Christian Church and its work on the foreign field. Christians and Congregationalists are one now in their foreign missionary work under the name of United Christian Church. All our missionaries have become theirs, and theirs have become ours.

The countries in which we work are Africa, China, India, and Ceylon, Japan, Michronesia, Czechoslovakia, Mexico, Spain, Philippine Islands Turkey, Greece, Syria, and Bulgaria. In these countries we have 649 missionaries, of whom 46 are physicians. We have 5,281 native workers, of whom 1,132 are preachers. We have 695 Churches, with a total membership of 105,442. To these Churches were added last year 6,641 members. We have 1,345 schools, with an enrollment of 91,221 pupils. Every day, including Sunday, 90,000 children march to schools supported by our United Church. There are numerous hospitals, widows' and orphans' homes, child-welfare centers and dispensaries helping thousands every year.

All Denominations.

2. As to missionary work in general, by evangelical Churches, there are throughout the non-Christian world now 29,188 missionaries. In addition to these, there are 151,735 native workers. In non-Christian countries there are 36,246 Churches, with nearly 10,000,000 communicants and adherents on the threshold of the kingdom of our Lord. In addition, there are 50,079 missionary schools, with 2,440,148 pupils. There are 858 hospitals, who in one year recently treated nearly 5,000,000 patients. The Bible has been printed in 853 languages and dialects and is distributed at the rate of 25,000,000 copies a year. There are 104 leper asylums, 32 schools for the blind and deaf, and 361 orphanages.

Thus when we give to missions we are giving to schools, colleges, orphanages and the rest, and where they are most needed, for wherever the gospel is preached, there benevolent and charitable institutions spring up and are supported. For this vast work, the natives themselves are contributing almost as much as is sent for missionary work from America and Europe. (Thus when we give a dollar for foreign missions, it means two dollars where it arrives, and often more.) India alone averages 3,000 converts a month, and the last government census shows that 4,000,000 people in India put down their names as Christians. Now read Rev. 7:9-12 and realize how true John's vision is.

J. O. ATKINSON,
Mission Secretary.

AROUSING MISSIONARY INTEREST.

By what method can missionary interest be aroused among the entire membership of the Church?

The best method, as I see it, is to begin with the individual. For instance, I am a child of God. I have accepted Christ, the Son of God, as my Saviour. "For God so loved the world that He gave His only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth on Him should not perish, but have everlasting life" (John 3:16). The very minute that I came to know God and accepted Jesus Christ as my Saviour, I wanted to tell the world about my new and amazing experience. So I tell all whom I see, and all whom I can't see I want to send them word.

Then, what must be done? Study and learn how I can get this great message to those even far off in other lands. So the best method, as I see it (though I have a poor way of telling it), is to first get the entire membership to accept Christ as Saviour, then educate them as to how the individual can help to get the message all over the world. Then I think missionary interest will be aroused among the entire membership of the Church.

SUGGESTIONS FOR CRADLE ROLL DAY.

Again the time has come for our rallies. May this year show most successful results for you and your children. For your invitations, fold a strip of paper into a book. As June is the month of roses, it would be appropriate to cut roses out of seed catalogues, magazines, etc., and paste them on the invitations or use them in decorations or on posters. On the outside, write the verse,

"Jesus loves me, this I know,
For the Bible tells me so."

On the inside write the invitation, giving place, date, and hour. Pretty place-cards may be made by the children. Cut them in the shape of some flower, and let them color them a place being reserved for the name.

Program.

For the program, we suggest the following:

1. Song: "Jesus Loves Me, This I Know."
2. Greeting by one or three children.

Cradle Roll Rally again! Roses in our garden,
Sunlight on the meadow, birds songs in trees;
Daisy fields are glowing, forest brooks are flowing,
Fragrance like sweet incense floats upon the trees.

Cradle Roll Rally again! Summer's happy Sabbath,
When the youthful voices sing their very best;
Many choirs are raising hymns of joyous praising
To the King of glory, in the temple blest.

Cradle Roll Rally again! Welcome as the sunshine,
Glad as woodland music, precious as flowers;
Let us all, in greeting, at this happy meeting,
Praise our great Creator for these blessed hours.

3. Devotionals: Scripture, Luke 2:8-16; story by the superintendent.

4. Prayer: By the pastor.

5. Bible exercises: "Who shall enter the kingdom?" (Pilgrim and four children.)
Pilgrim: "I am one of a group of earth's pilgrims, seeking to enter the kingdom of heaven. Can any one tell me how to gain admission there? Must one be wise and great? Or the winner of many triumphs; the hero of a thousand victories? Must he be a person of vast wealth, making the journey thither with pomp and luxury? Or is it only the learned folks, the seers, and the sages, who are welcome there? Tell me, you children of the kingdom, who dwell within its shining borders, what must I do—what must I know—have—be—to enter there?"

First child: You need no wealth, no great possessions; only a lowly heart (Matt. 5:3).
Second child: You need no triumph, no victory, save that of right over wrong (Matt. 5:10).
Third child: You need no lore or learning, save a knowledge of the Father's law (Matt. 7:21).
Fourth child: Are you willing, too, to serve your fellow-traveler? The poor and needy, the sick and weak, in the name of the King you are seeking? (Matt. 25:34, 40.)

Pilgrim: I will gladly follow all that you have told me, if only I can find the kingdom. I pray you, show me the gateway. (Children surround pilgrim, leading him off.)

6. Song: "Saviour, Like a Shepherd, Lead Us."

7. Recitation: By one or four children.

If I were a penny, I'd shine so bright
That my little corner would gleam with light;
I'd be glad if a little child should give me away
On Christmas, or Easter, or Children's Day.

If I were a dime, I'd shout for joy
If I belonged to a big-hearted boy
Who'd send me away across the sea
To spread the gospel message free.

If I were a dollar, I'd never stay
In somebody's pocket both night and day;
I'd work for the Lord with all my might,
And carry abroad the gospel light.

Or large or small, I'd do my part
With ready hand and a willing heart;
I'd give as the Lord had prospered me—
His lovingkindness, Oh, how free!

8. Offering.

9. Remarks: Warmly welcome new friends and invite new babies to join your group.

10. A Cradle Roll benediction prayer:

"God bless the babies on our Cradle Roll:
Bless them and keep them throughout each day;
Watch them in daylight, and guard them in darkness;
May they grow gentler and sweeter each day."
Amen.

MRS. I. W. JOHNSON.

A TRIBUTE TO J. U. GUNTER.

I am happy, even in my sorrow, to have this opportunity to express to you, the friends and co-workers of our departed brother, J. U. Gunter, my impressions of him during the more than twenty years that I knew him.

To know him intimately was to love him; to associate with him, was to be elevated, informed, and entertained; to work with him in the business, social, or religious field was to see daily the acts of a character whose foundation was laid deep in honesty and whose walls were built of charity and liberality. His motto in life was the literal interpretation of the Golden Rule. He had an abiding faith in his country, his fellowman, and in the God of his fathers. He gave freely of his means and of himself for the uplift of humanity and the upbuilding of the kingdom of our Lord in the world. His Church and Sunday School occupied first place in his mind and heart. Never was he so busy or so engrossed in material things but that he found time to steal away and prepare his Sunday School lesson; and he never failed to notify the superintendent if he would be absent. He was a great teacher and had unusual ability in understanding and interpreting the Scriptures in an able and inspiring manner. The deep expressions of his soul were as pure as the morning sunshine.

His ideals of life were above the average, and sometimes he was misunderstood. His faults were few, but he knew them and fought daily to overcome them. I have walked with him through years of success, popularity and power, and found in him no change from his motto or high ideals. I have seen him pass through many strange and fiery trials, waters that were deep, sorrows that seared his soul and left an indelible scar thereon. He knew the briny taste of his own tears, saw his hopes shattered, his plans destroyed, his dreams dissipated like the mist before the morning sun, but I found in him no change from his motto or high ideals.

His unselfishness knew no bounds, and his devotion to his family and friends won the admiration of every one who knew him. He was happy when he was rendering service to others, and it can be truly said of him that he went about doing good. Finally, when affliction laid its hand heavily upon him and body and mind were racked with pain and suffering, I looked in on him and found him in that trying hour still holding high his banner—the Golden Rule. And later when the hand of death was slowly drawing the curtain between him and his friends, I looked in again and found the great light of hope still burning as he exercised that unusual gift of cheerfulness, and even wit and humor. It was a benediction to any one to hear him express his hope and faith and know his thoughts during his last conscious hours.

He is gone, and has left an example of living to which I only hope I may be able to attain. He has entered the portals of peace, there to exchange the rugged cross that he has borne with his Lord for a crown.

ADVENTURES IN YOUTH FELLOWSHIP

"Youth at Work in the Church."

JEWEL TRUITT, Editor, Waverly, Virginia.

MY WORK AS COUNSELOR AT ELON SUMMER SCHOOL.

Mrs. Ethel M. Chapman.

Somehow or other, I do not like the word "work," used in the title for this article, for it isn't work at all to be counselor at Elon Summer School. Indeed, in every respect, it is more like real, wholesome play. There is no gift so rich as life, and certainly there is no life so rich as that of Christian youth. I treasure most highly the rare privilege I have had of being playmates together with some of our own Christian Church youth.

In looking back over the three years of my counselorship, I think first of the genuine friendships formed and of how much richer my life has become by having made such contacts.

Even though there are several groups at summer school, each working under a counselor, and the competitive element does creep in, there is a consecrated fellowship permeating the entire student body. And with such groups, there is no end to the possibilities they have and the work they can do to further the advancement of God's kingdom.

We have our group meetings each night just before going to bed. In these group meetings we have our devotionals as a group. It might be a bit surprising to some of the older people in our Church if they could hear these boys and girls of theirs lead in prayer. Oftentimes the counselor becomes a sort of mother-confessor for these boys and girls, as they unburden their whole hearts and souls to their counselor friends.

MY WORK AS SUPERINTENDENT OF WILLING WORKERS.

Eunice Stevens.

In our Willing Workers' Society we have not only the children of the Christian Church, but also the children from all of the other Churches in town. The majority of the members are from other Churches than the Christian.

We have a program committee, composed of children of the society. This committee often makes out the program without any aid from the superintendent. The children can plan and carry out splendid programs. We sometimes dramatize Bible stories. One I especially remember is the story of Joseph. We study the books assigned for Willing Workers. Sometimes I tell the story; other times the children tell it.

We use picture attendance cards, with seals, to be placed after each child's name when he has repeated a Bible verse. These cards seem to arouse more interest than anything I have been able to find so far. An interesting attendance card is one picturing Noah's ark, with animal seals. We have our dues of five cents a month per member. After our regular program, we sometimes play games together. The children enjoy this feature of the program very much.

REFLECTIONS OF A YOUNG MINISTER.

Robert Lee House.

Is there a more pathetic sight than a young graduate standing on the threshold of the ministry? Only yesterday he held aloft his diploma and triumphantly exclaimed, "Hurrah! I am educated." But he is not yet able to see himself as others see him. He knows more about the art of preaching than he does about the heart of preaching. He is more skilled in grammatical gymnastics than in soul-winning. If he had anything to preach, the chances are that he would find a way of doing it. But he has been taught how to preach rather than what to preach. He is very much like the girl who has received instructions for making a dress, but no material for the experiment. He has the gun and knows how to manipulate it, but he has no ammunition.

But what other equipment has he? Is he enthusiastic? Has his heart burned within him? Has his soul been set on fire by the magnetic influence of the risen Lord? Very well. Better the undisciplined enthusiasm of youth than the stagnation of complacent maturity. The pulpit has lost much of its enthusiasm. In its effort to become dignified, it has almost become petrified. It is afraid of becoming emotional, while, at the same time, in the center of its message is a God who has been most perfectly described in terms of an emotion—"God is love." It is doubtless true that the theater has its grip upon the masses, not primarily because of the type of picture shown, but because, regardless of the type of picture, the actors give free expression to the emotions. They attempt to vividly express what the ordinary person feels but is unable or afraid to express. The pulpit too often says "no" when it should say "NO!" It is the sublime task of the pulpit to lay hold upon those human emotions which have plunged nations into war and taken their toll of human life, and, through the processes of consecration, sublimation, and transformation, lift them up before the eyes of the people until they come to understand that "God so loved that He gave."

Apparently, birth and death are a part of the divine providence whereby conservative old age gives place to vigorous youth. The young minister brings new life into the pulpit. He keeps preaching from falling into a rut. This is a great service, for, as some one has reminded us, a rut is a grave with both ends knocked out. He remembers that the prophets of old refused to be enslaved in the hobble-skirts of propriety. Thus, having been saturated with divine enthusiasm and having begun to lay hold upon the wisdom of old age, the young minister becomes an important asset to the ministry.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR NOTES.

SUNDAY, MAY 31, 1931.

TOPIC: "How is the Work of the Missionary Changing?"

SCRIPTURE: Luke 10:25-37.

When missionaries went out, twenty-five or thirty years ago, they were strangers in a strange land. They were looked upon as representatives of a great Christian country across the sea. Today there is quite a difference. The East knows the West. The West is challenged to produce a Christianity that will witness for Christ in non-Christian lands. The people of the Orient know not just the good about America; they also know the bad. Sometimes the present-day missionary fears a Western movie more than the temples and idols of the people among whom he works.

One of the most challenging and encouraging things in all countries of the Orient today is the longing of the native Church to become self-directing and national. Some countries, especially Japan, have already accomplished much in this direction. The modern missionary must encourage this desire. The people with whom he works must take the lead and build up an indigenous Church. The building up of a Church that is really a part of the land in which he works is the biggest task of the modern missionary. The missionary can help Eastern leaders, but it is the Eastern Christians who can come closest to their own people. The Church must grow in the minds and lives of each nation. Each nation must express its own religious feeling, write its own hymns and have its own leadership. It is the modern missionary's task to help Christianity grow and spread in each country by working in his humble place as servant. That is the final test of the success of the work of the missionary. If he is able to work gracefully in the background and let other men and women reap the reward of his labors and receive the honor for his work, he is a good missionary and worthy to represent Christ.

In some countries where missionaries are at work trying to preach the gospel, men and women are starving by the thousands. In some of these countries, only one-half a crop is raised because of careless cultivation. Would a missionary who introduced better farming methods be overstepping his duties as a preacher? Some interesting facts on this phase of modern missionary work can be found in recent copies of Far Horizons and the Missionary Herald. Forestry in China has been undertaken as a missionary project. Almost every missionary, whatever his particular profession, has to know something of hygiene and health. Some take a supply of medicine with them whenever they make trips to visit the people.

In many countries, missionaries have interested the governments in educational work because of the splendid results accomplished in Christian schools. Some missionaries today teach in government schools, where classes in religion are not permitted to be taught. What service can they render as Christians? Can they ever hope to win any converts to Christianity as a result of their work? Why?

There is a change in the emphasis on denominations. Many of our Churches at home would be surprised to know how little emphasis is placed on denominational work in other fields. It has always been hard for those who were strangers to our denominational mix-up to understand what it was all about. Denominations are out-of-date in some countries. Out of thirteen Church colleges in China in 1925, ten were really union schools instead of denominational schools. In Santo Domingo, four Church boards pool their resources instead of dividing up the territory between them as is so commonly done. Twenty-eight societies join together in the Committee of Co-operation in Latin-America. What is the significance of this attitude in other countries?

DAMASCUS.

Mothers' Day service was held at Damascus Christian Church, Sunbury, N. C., Sunday morning, May 10th. Our pastor, Rev. E. B. White, preached a splendid sermon, the subject of which was, "The Glory of Christian Motherhood." Special selections were rendered by the choir, and a solo, "Mother Machree," was sung by Mr. Joe Byrum. The Church was decorated with beautiful flowers and there was a large attendance.

The Church is active as a whole, and striving to be more so. Mr. White is liked by all and is an eloquent preacher. The Sunday School is steadily improving, and the Woman's Missionary Society is a wide-awake organization. The cradle roll department will have a program and mite-box opening the afternoon of the 23rd of May. The prevailing spirit of the Church seems to be to ever strive onward in the work of the kingdom.

JESUS IN GETHSEMANE.

LESSON IX—MAY 31, 1931.

GOLDEN TEXT: "Father, if Thou be willing, remove this cup from me; nevertheless, not my will, but Thine be done."—Luke 22:42.

LESSON: 22:24-71.

THE GREATEST.

"And there was a strife among them, which of them should be greatest." It was an ugly spirit that prompted the disciples to quarrel among themselves over this matter. They missed the point entirely. True greatness is a matter of character and service. Every man should aspire to be great—great in character, and great in the willingness to serve. It was a strong rebuke to them and to us when Jesus said, "I am among you as he that serveth."

THE INTERCESSOR.

"But I have prayed for thee." This is not an isolated phenomenon; it was not just a case of Jesus praying for Simon Peter on a certain occasion. It is a universal and abiding fact. We have an Intercessor. In our sorrow and our trouble and our weakness, we have one who ever liveth to make intercession for us. It ought to help us to know that.

THE GARDEN.

"Gethsemane"—the word means an "oil-press," and it was not inappropriately named. It is the scene of the world's greatest battle. It was here that the greatest issue of all time was settled, and settled right. If Jesus had not won in Gethsemane, all would have been lost. And we miss the point of the whole story if we think that Jesus could not have lost. He had a will of His own. He could have chosen the easier way—His own way. But He knew that if He did that, He could never save the world. In an agony, He prayed that, if it were possible, the cup, or the experience, might pass from Him. But here as always the will of God for His life was the main thing, the determining principle. And when He finally became convinced that it was the will of God, He made His decision in harmony with that will.

It is to be noted that Jesus did not try to change God's mind or purpose. The peak of His prayer is "not my will, but Thine be done." True prayer is not trying to get from God what He does not want us to have, or getting Him to change His mind or plans, but rather to put ourselves into harmony to be and to do what God wants us to be and to do.

"And there appeared an angel unto Him from heaven, strengthening Him." Prayer does that. It releases heavenly forces to strengthen us.

THE BETRAYAL.

"He that was called Judas, one of the twelve." It was one of the inner circle who betrayed Jesus. Mere association with Jesus is not enough. There must be a response to His ideals and His spirit. And what contemptible hypocrisy often underlies the professed discipleship of Christ's followers! Judas drew near unto Jesus and kissed Him. The kiss, an emblem of friendship used to betray his Master. But Judas was not the only one who has done this. We are guilty of the same thing whenever we profess allegiance to Christ which is not carried out in our lives.

THE DENIAL.

"And he denied Him, saying, Woman, I know Him not." Only a little while before, Peter had emphatically asserted that, even though the other disciples denied Jesus and forsook Him, he would

THE CHURCHES IN CO-OPERATION. By Minor C. Miller. Virginia Council of Religious Education, Inc.; 75c; pp. 108.

The general secretary of the Virginia Council of Religious Education has gathered a vast amount of factual material in this pamphlet. Not only so, but he discusses religious education in general with a fine insight. He regards the next step as week-day religious education, and gives facts and figures for his conclusion. This brochure should put new enthusiasm into co-operative Sunday School work in Virginia, and certainly it is needed.

A SERVICE HYMN-BOOK. By the Seminar on Worship. The Commission on Evangelism and Devotional Life, 287 Fourth Ave., New York City; single copy, 60c; quantities of 50 or more, 50c; paper bindings for 30c and 25c, respectively.

Here are gathered ninety-four ageless hymns, which will render a great service to those who truly wish to worship. In addition, there are included responsive readings and special forms of worship. It is one of the best things to be had. Christian and Congregational Churches will find it especially valuable and to their ideals suited.

stick by Him. But, alas! Peter did not know his own weaknesses. He followed Jesus afar off; he really wanted to stand by his Master, but he got into the camp of the enemy, and was afraid of the consequences. He did the very thing that we so often do. Who is there of us who does not deny our Lord, not only with our lips but with our lives?

THE INDIGNITIES.

One reads with astonishment and something akin to horror the treatment accorded Jesus by His captors. They mocked Him, they smote Him, they blasphemed Him, they heaped indignity upon indignity upon Him. It is a striking commentary upon human life in its more hardened and cruel aspects. There is nothing to be proud of in human life as revealed by the soldiers and elders.

But there is one redeeming feature about the picture. There is something that sobers and shames us. It is the attitude and action of Jesus. He answered them not a word in protest of their coarseness and cruelty. Here is an example that we should follow. How much different life would be if the followers of Christ would always try to follow His example and express His spirit under similar circumstances.

SURPRISED.

On the 8th day of May, I was very much surprised when Bro. Stevens and Bro. Ward came for me and carried me to town and presented me with a nice suit of clothes; or, in other words, dressed me up. And after they had dressed their humble servant out—lock, stock and barrel—they turned over into the hands of my wife $21.25 to buy her a new dress. For all this, we are very grateful. May God's richest blessings be ever upon the 51 contributors and also to all those who did not give anything. It is more blessed to give than to receive.

We feel very much indebted to the good people of Lowell and Roanoke for their many kindnesses shown us, and especially of Lowell Christian Church.

FAMILY ALTAR

CONDUCTED BY H. E. ROUNTREE
One of our Chaplains in the U. S. Navy.

"If thou wilt make the Almighty thy treasure . . . then shalt thou delight thyself in the Almighty . . . and thou shalt make thy prayer unto Him and He will hear thee."—Job 22: 25-27.

MONDAY.

OUR FAULT.

"But if ye have respect to persons, ye commit sin."—James 2:9.

Jesus, the carpenter's Son, had access to the society of the rich and educated people, but He chose His intimates among the lowly. The early Church, it appears, did not have in it many people of distinction. It has been always the fact that exclusive Churches become separated and alienated from those who labor and are heavy laden. Whatever our condition, the friendship of God's poor and lowly is wisdom. They have more to give us than we have to give them.

Prayer.—Most gracious Father, who hast made one blood all men, forbid that we shall harden our hearts against any, but grant us charity toward all. May the mind which was in Christ Jesus be in each one of us. Amen.

TUESDAY.

THE REMEDY.

"Until I went into the sanctuary."—Psa. 73:17.

The psalmist seemed to be perplexed over something. But when he went to the sanctuary he was relieved. There came to him the right point of view.

It is really wonderful how a Church service lifts one out of his perplexities. Nowhere else do troubles fall away, temptations ease their power, and is grief so assuaged as in the sanctuary.

Many Christians stay from the sanctuary when troubles come, and deprive themselves of all its benefits, when of all times they need it most. There they have not only the blessings of God, but they have the communion of saints, they ease themselves in the multitude; their sorrows are lost in the sorrows of the world; feeble faith is caught up in the strong, unwavering faith of the ages. Tides of the outer seas sweep the soul; trivial, fleeting things are lost in the transcendent; temporal, transitory things change to the enduring.

At the Church, for one tranquil hour, one can be one with his kind. Worship there reconciles one to life and gathers him irresistibly into its purpose and its place. No one can afford to neglect it. Every one needs it sorely. There is nothing in the world that will take its place.

Prayer.—Almighty God, be near us now. May our hearts be open to every holy affection and ready to conserve every noble impression. May our every selfish passion and desire be quiet, and, by penitence, purify, Thou, our souls. Teach us patience and keep our thoughts centered on Jesus Christ our Lord. Amen.

WEDNESDAY.

MY GOD AND FATHER.

"He is my God . . . my father's God."—Ex. 15:2.

My God is mine, as He is my father's. He is a part of my inheritance. He belongs to me. Surely my understanding of Him is directed by my imperfect comprehensions and by my incapacity to know. But that does not distress me, for life is an endless voyage of infinite exploration of Him. Therefore, His ways are ways of contentment, and there is so much to be enjoyed as we go along. It is "in part" that we know, but that part leads unto riches of God.

Prayer.—O God, whom the world and the heavens cannot contain, we are so thankful that Thou dost deign to dwell in our hearts. May we never lose Thee nor forsake Thee. Amen.

THURSDAY.

GOD SPEAKING.

"The heavens declare the glory of God."—Psa. 19:1.

"The fool hath said in his heart, There is no God." The witness of Him is everywhere about us, and that witness increases as we go along. By day and by night we read a divine handwriting everywhere. We have but to listen to hear "the earth, with her thousand voices, praising God." He who clothes the grass and flowers of the field will also take care of us, His children.

Prayer.—Dear Father, who has established the world and all its creatures in a wonderful order, wilt Thou illumine our minds by Thy Spirit, that we may behold Thy glory, discern Thy goodness, hear Thy voice, and know Thy works which Thou hast done. Amen.

FRIDAY.

DO WE HEAR?

"He that is of God heareth God's words."—John 8:47.

We may not be able to see God, but that should not disturb us, for no one has ever seen us. Our bodies are seen, but not the real soul. It is hid in a light where no man can approach.

Though we are invisible to one another, we are sure of our existence and our souls communicate with one another and bring comfort, companionship and helpfulness to one another. We are sure of God in the same way.

"Speak thou to Him, for He hears,
And spirit with spirit can meet;
Closer is He than feeling,
And nearer than hands and feet."

Prayer.—Holy and loving Father, leave us not desolate. Give us ears to hear and an understanding heart. Amen.

SATURDAY.

A WORLD INQUIRY.

"Lord, shew us the Father, and it sufficeth us."—John 14:8.

This is a world inquiry, but so many who make the inquiry do not put themselves in the way of God to find Him. It is said that a big-game hunter in India returned and said, "There are no missionaries in India, for I saw none." We suppose that he expected to find them in the habitats of lions.

The world is so much with us, and its distractions are so obtrusive that His presence is dim and His voice is drowned in the thousand confusions.

Jesus says, "I am the Way." The early apostolic Church, Luke says, showed the way. Ever since then, the Church of the living God has been the way. In the Church and in those realms of devotion where her branches extend, we find God as nowhere else. He reveals Himself through search for Him in devout worship. That is what we go to Church for—to find God.

Brilliant sermons and beautiful music may be no more than exhibitions and entertainments; but worship is seeking for God until we find Him, and, finding Him, we are wrapped in peace that passeth understanding, and we have an escape from soul-bondage to complete communion with God.

Prayer.—Most Holy and gracious God, satisfy us early with Thy mercy, that we may rejoice and be glad all day. Guide our feet into ways of understanding and peace. Be our strength in weakness, and help us to ever search for Thee in Thy way, through Jesus Christ, our Lord. Amen.

SUNDAY.

"I will say of the Lord, He is my refuge and fortress: my God. In Him will I trust."—Psa. 91:2.

This is one of the constant thoughts of the psalmist. Those were perilous times and full of bitterness. He hid in the unseen presence of God.

When our cup of bitterness is full; when every human resource is exhausted, we can take flight to God, in whom and from whom we learn to make Him first in all things, and our constant resort.

Our lesson today gives us some luminous words on this thought—"dwelling," "abiding," "at home with Him." Is there greater security and peace?

Prayer.—O God, Thou art our refuge and our strength. Teach us the humility that belongs to our ignorance and weakness. Forbid that we shall try to fight our battles alone, or to bear our burdens in our own strength, but to cast all on Thee. Amen.

MAKING AND GRANTING REQUESTS.

BY REV. CHARLES B. TUPPER.

"Ask, and it shall be given you; seek, and ye shall find; knock, and it shall be opened unto you: for every one that asketh receiveth; and he that seeketh findeth; and to him that knocketh it shall be opened."—Matt. 7:7, 8.

Taken as it stands, this is one of those astounding and baffling statements of Jesus which seem to tantalize and to defy the understanding. There are such extravagant promises here—promises of granted requests, rewarded searches, and opened doors. We recall at once how we have asked and did not receive, how we have sought and were disappointed, how we have rapped at doors which did not open. But, Jesus was not the kind of Preacher to bewilder or to dishearten.

What, then, is the meaning here? It must be remembered that these words were spoken to disciples of Jesus—the kind of men who are described in the Beatitudes—humble, sincere, sympathetic, pure, peaceful, quieting men. They were men who were "seeking first His kingdom and His righteousness," and thus were in the process of fulfilling the conditions which make the text feasible and intelligible.

This prepares the way for the statement that the ultimate reality in the universe is of such a character that man may so adjust himself to it that resources of strength and guidance far exceeding his own power and intelligence do become available to him. Or, to say it another way—the organizing, unifying, reality in the universe is that which Christians call God. When appropriate adjustments are made to this ultimate reality, God, He does respond to human beings, to personality. And in that response to human seeking, there is answer to our questions, satisfaction for our needs, and open doors to our knocking. Or, another much better way to say it is in the text: "Ask, and it shall be given you; seek, and ye shall find; knock, and it shall be opened unto you." And this is the essence of the gospel. God waits eagerly, patiently, longingly to say the great, glad word to us when we put ourselves into position to receive it.

It is well also to remember that the text constitutes no easy, magical formula to which an indolent or rebellious man may turn to get himself out of a tight place, or to give him a heritage which will make it possible to dispense with hard work. It presupposes, not a perfect life, but a whole-hearted commitment to the highest one knows. Jesus said, "Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy mind, and with all thy strength. And thy neighbor as thyself." That is, with all there is of you. It is the mind in an outreach for truth, like some unselfish doctor seeking to isolate the germs of disease. It is the heart in the warmest glow of feeling and desire like some lover who will be satisfied only with his beloved. It is the will in the most ardent consecration like some crusader fighting for a noble cause. It is the complete consecration of the entire personality to this quest for the best. And when you do that, you shall receive when you ask, you shall find when you seek, you shall see doors swinging open when you knock.—Christian-Evangelist.

RELIGIOUS EDUCATION IN MEXICO.

BY ROBT. M. HOPKINS, Gen'l Sec'y
World's Sunday School Association.

This is my third visit to Mexico. The first visit was made in December, 1928. The National Christian Council, meeting at Aguascalientes in June of that year, had sent Rev. Epigenio Velasco to Los Angeles in July as the fraternal messenger from Mexico to the tenth World's Sunday School Convention, bringing the urgent appeal of the co-operating Christian forces of Mexico to the World's Association for assistance in making possible a national interdenominational program of religious education in that republic. The time seemed most propitious on account of the stand of the Roman Church against the Mexican government and the appeal of the Mexican Churches was most sincere.

In July, 1929, again at the invitation of the National Christian Council, I made my second visit to be present in the national convention, which was held that year in Puebla. The man had been found whom the Mexican Churches desired as their director of religious education in the person of Prof. G. Baez Camargo. Considerable progress had also been made in securing the financial support that was needed. Five foreign mission boards at work in Mexico had made special grants for this work, including those of the Methodist Episcopal Church, the Southern Presbyterian Church, the Congregational Church, the Disciples of Christ, and the Friends. To these were added substantial guarantees from the Committee on Co-operation in Latin-America and the World's Sunday School Association. These annual grants from boards and agencies totaled $3,450, while contributions totaling $650 had been assured from national Churches in Mexico, including the Congregationalists, Nazarenes, Disciples of Christ, Holiness Pilgrims and Methodists.

This third visit is again made upon the invitation of the National Christian Council. The serious economic conditions which Mexico confronts in common with the rest of the world, together with the fear that decreasing missionary appropriations to Mexico may mean serious curtailment in the support of this work of religious education, have made the leaders in Mexico very apprehensive as to the future.

Some observations made at this time will be of interest to those who have the progress of Christianity in the republic of Mexico upon their hearts.

1. First of all, Mexico is becoming more and more accessible to the United States. Excellent through-train service is now maintained, without change of cars, from St. Louis to Mexico City. The time has been reduced twelve hours between San Antonio and Mexico City, and the trip may be made as comfortably as the trip to California, and at about the same cost. There is no delay at the border, customs and immigration inspections being made on the train en route. The Pan-American Airways System has shortened the time of transit even more in the recent establishment of daily air service for the carrying of mail, express and passengers to Mexico City. Air mail may now be sent in four hours from Brownsville, Texas, to Mexico City, while the connecting service in the United States brings air mail from all points in an almost incredibly short time and for only the customary air mail charge of 5 cents for the first ounce. Mail leaving New York City daily on one evening will be in Mexico the second day shortly after noon.

2. While Mexico is suffering from the general economic depression through which the whole world is passing, one does not feel the dire distress that characterizes, for example, the Southern States. On the contrary, there are many evidences of the substantial progress which is being made in Mexico, and several cities visited are experiencing an era of prosperity. Politically, there is a widespread feeling of security and satisfaction. As expressed by one well-versed leader, "We are beginning a period of peace and prosperity that will continue for at least a score of years." Educationally, much progress has been made in establishing schools throughout the republic and particularly in rural communities where they have hitherto been so lacking. State governments are spending in the aggregate 40 per cent of their budgets for schools. Many rural schools are holding night sessions for adults, and commendable inroads are being made upon the 60 per cent of the population that has been reckoned as illiterate.

3. The stand which the Mexican government made so heroically against the oppression of the Roman Church has now become the permanent order. The supremacy of the government is quite generally conceded. The ministry of the Churches, both Catholic and Protestant, is now unanimously native-born, according to the present legal requirements of the government. All Church property belongs to the government, and by it is held in trust for the use of the Churches.

4. In the midst of all these transitions, evangelical Christianity is making a commendable advance. A recent controversy broke out in the daily press of Mexico City over an utterance of President Hoover in his congratulatory message to the Lutheran Church, in which he referred to the fact that Protestant Christianity has made substantial contributions to the progress of civilization. This statement was challenged by a Catholic layman in one of the leading daily papers of Mexico City. When the press was asked by Protestants for an opportunity to reply, the request was granted and the press has given space as never before to a presentation of the Protestant viewpoint. The American Bible Society reports greatly increased sales of Bibles and Testaments both over the counter in Mexico City and by the colporteurs throughout the country. Evangelical schools, almost without exception, are full to overflowing, and there is increasing respect expressed for their work by even Catholic prelates in their vicinity.

5. In the minds of Mexican evangelical leaders, religious education occupies a most strategic place in the ongoing of their work. For that reason, they feel that the leadership of G. Baez Camargo must be continued with all necessary backing. They urge the missionary boards to stand by this work in the present financial emergency, for there must be no backward steps taken in this regard at a time when the struggling Mexican Churches are unprepared to assume larger financial burdens. They hopefully look forward in the not distant future to their own support of this program of work which is of such vital concern to them all.

We believe in education and in the creation of public sentiment as a result of education; but we think a lot of this demand for public sentiment that already exists is a mere blind behind which unfaithful public servants hide their dereliction of duty. We need prosecutors who will keep their oaths instead of kowtowing to wealth and political influence.—Pittsburgh Christian Advocate.

Christian Orphanage

Dear Friends:

Who can tell what there is in the heart of a little boy? Sometimes we are greatly surprised to know the kindness and the unselfishness that fills the heart of a little child. We had a real demonstration of that in our Orphanage last week. We have a little boy here about ten years of age who has been here about seven years. He is a real quiet little fellow, attends to his own business and don't bother any one. We don't know he is here by the noise he makes, but by seeing him moving around on the campus and at his work, one might think he cared for no one but himself, as he is so quiet. You would hardly think he was interested in those about him. But such was not the case with this little boy one day last week when a man came to buy some sweet potatoes, and this little boy was real nice to him, and when he had loaded his potatoes and was ready to leave, he put a dollar in this little boy's hand. Now, what do you guess he did with it? He did a real beautiful thing. He selected ten of the little children of his age and size and paid their way to the picture show. Wasn't that unselfish in this little child? He could have kept his money and gone to the movies a number of times, but he wanted his little chums to enjoy the show with him. Are we grown people as unselfish as he? Many little children in need of a home here; many applications on file. God has been good to us and blessed us with plenty and to share. Will we be as unselfish as this little boy?

The following has been sent in: Mrs. P. N. Gay, Wakefield, Va., 1 dress; Mr. & Mrs. C. E. Young, Durham, N. C., dress, blouse, handkerchiefs; Mrs. Bryant, Chuckatuck, Va., 1 dress; Providence Memorial Church, Graham, 20 dozen eggs; Philathea Class, High Point, 1 box clothing for little girls; Philathea Class, New Lebanon Church, N. AN APPRECIATION.

Dear Dr. Beougher:

We, the members of Piedmont Junior College Alumni Association, in annual session, May 9, 1931, wish to express to you our sincere appreciation and congratulations for the efficient work done and achievements accomplished by you since you have been president of Bethlehem and, later, Piedmont Junior College.

Few men would have manifested such an unselfish spirit as you have. Wherever you may go from here, always remember you have made life-time friends of many graduates of Piedmont Junior College.

We also desire to express to you our individual appreciation for your kind consideration and helpfulness to us. We sincerely hope for you a broader field of usefulness wherever you may go, and that you may always remember us. If there is anything good about us, remember that and forget the bad. We hope to be of better service to humanity because of what you have done for us.

Sincerely yours,

Whereas, God, in His infinite wisdom, has deemed it wise to call from our midst our beloved sister, Linda J. Eure; therefore, be it resolved:

1. That we bow in humble submission to our Heavenly Father's will.

2. That, in the death of Sister Eure, Sarem Christian Church has lost one of its most loyal members, and her beloved family a loving wife and mother.

3. That we strive to emulate the Christian character of Sister Eure.

4. That we extend our heartfelt sympathy to her bereaved family.

POWELL.

Whereas, God, in His divine wisdom, has seen fit to take unto Himself our friend and comrade, J. Walter Powell; and,

Whereas, for a great number of years he was a devout and active member of the Baraca Class of the Suffolk Christian Church, pious without ostentation, tolerant and charitable in every thought; and,

Whereas, he was of a generous and unselfish disposition, and with his lovable disposition he was a true and loyal friend, which made it easy for him to make many friends and retain them; now, therefore,

Be it resolved, by the Baraca Class of the Suffolk Christian Church, That we, through this resolution, express our grateful appreciation of the long and able service which he has so faithfully rendered, and of his happy, genial and companionable spirit.

That, while we deeply deplore the death of our friend and comrade and miss his cheerful fellowship, his memory will linger with us; that of him it may be truly said, "His delight is in the law of the Lord, and in His law doth he meditate day and night."

That we extend to his bereaved family our deepest sympathy.

That a copy of this resolution be sent his bereaved family, a copy given the secretary of this class for his records, and also a copy be sent to the press.

STOKES.

Mrs. Mary Frances Marshall Stokes was born January 17, 1898, and died on April 14, 1931. She was reared in Salem Chapel community, Forsythe County, N. C. She was educated at Walnut Cove and Eastern North Carolina Teachers' Training College. On September 14, 1922, she was married to John Augustus Stokes, of Greenville, N. C., where they had built up a happy and influential home. To this union, two children were born—Bettie Joe, 7, and Frank Marshall, 4. The devoted husband and children survive the good wife and mother.

The sudden and unexpected going of Sister Stokes has brought deep sorrow and loss to the immediate families and good neighbors. She was an intelligent Christian woman, and by her manner of living she had established herself well in her adopted community. She joined Salem Chapel Church when about 12 years old and remained a member till about three years ago, when she transferred her membership to the Disciples Church at Greenville, N. C.

Splendid testimony was given as to the faithfulness of her living by the friends who accompanied her remains to her parents' home, Mr. and Mrs. A. F. Marshall, Walnut Cove, N. C., and to its last resting-place. She was buried from Salem Chapel Church, April 16, 1931. The attendance was very large. The floral offerings were many, beautiful in design and fragrant in their silence.

The funeral services were conducted by the writer, assisted by Revs. Hutchinson, Hartsfield, Wood, and Campbell. Beautiful hymns were sung. Her life is held in sacred memory. Great love and sympathy go out to the broken-hearted husband and the motherless children; also to the bereaved father and mother, brothers and sisters.

ELON COLLEGE

of the

CONGREGATIONAL CHRISTIAN CHURCHES OF THE SOUTHEAST

ELON was founded to train Christian leaders for the New South.

ELON has done its task well—one graduate in seven being in the Christian ministry. The other six express Christian leadership in the various professions and vocations. Experience teaches that spiritual leadership must be indigenous.

The South is now a New South ready for an inclusive Church, the type of Church for which Elon has stood for forty years and for which she is prepared to produce capable leadership.

With no Church in the community, save the College Auditorium, ELON has practiced Christian Union for faculty, students, and community for four decades.

Its contribution to Christian Education is nationally known and approved.

Its Christian Education Building, providing laboratory facilities for religious leadership training, is unique and is the first college building of its type in the world.

ELON confines itself to undergraduate liberal arts work with that religious emphasis which befits the Christian College.

In ELON the Congregational-Christian Church has an asset of marvelous hopefulness.

The South needs her Yale, her Oberlin, her Carleton, her Pomona for the intellectual leadership of the United Church. Many regard ELON as strategically located and spiritually endowed to become such a center of illumination and leadership training.

COGHILL.

Charles Benton Coghill was born July 31, 1862, and fell asleep in Jesus April 27, 1931. He was the son of a minister, Rev. Charles Coghill, and professed faith in Christ during early manhood, uniting with Liberty, Vance, Christian Church, where he remained a member till death. He was a man of high ideals, and stood for the things that go to build Christian character. Those who knew him best, paid high tributes of praise to him as a devout Christian, a good neighbor and a loyal friend. Although a member of Liberty, Vance, he lived near Fuller's Chapel and attended service there regularly. His wife, who was Miss Mary Faulkner, preceded him to the grave a little more than a year ago.

Bro. Coghill leaves to mourn their loss a faithful and devoted daughter, Essie; four sons, M. G. Coghill, I. L. Coghill, R. M. Coghill, and W. F. Coghill; two brothers and three sisters, and a host of friends.

Funeral service was conducted by the writer, at New Bethel Baptist Church, and interment was made in the Church cemetery by the side of his wife. The floral offering was beautiful. We feel that our loss was his gain, and may the Father of all grace and comfort heal the broken hearts.

C. E. AT CHURCH-BUILT HOTEL.—

The Christian Endeavor World is playing up the fact that the William Taylor Hotel, which is to serve as general headquarters of the International Jubilee Christian Endeavor Convention to be held July 11-16th, at San Francisco, was built by a Church. The Temple Methodist Church is housed in the same building.

SHALL IT CONTINUE?

Zion's Herald reports that Dr. S. Parks Cadman recently announced that, without further financial support from the Church public, it would be necessary to discontinue his Sunday afternoon radio hour. The services of the National Broadcasting Company are freely given for this hook-up of forty-six stations, and, although Dr. Cadman receives nothing for his services, the musical programs and incidental expenses of the weekly broadcasts amount to about $18,000 annually.

DR. POTTER HONORARY MINISTER.—

When Dr. Rockwell H. Potter resigned the pastorate of Center Congregational Church, Hartford, Conn., three years ago, to become dean of Hartford Seminary, he declined to allow the Church to confer upon him an honorary title; but at this insistence of Rev. John M. Phillios, who was installed as minister a year ago, Dr. Potter consented to accept the offices of honorary minister of Center Church, which he served for twenty-eight years. The installation service was held April 19.

EARTH'S UNEXPLORED SECTIONS.—

Time gives the following list of unexplored corners of the earth: the airless peaks of the Himalayas, the cold hearts of the polar ice-packs, and a few large jungle-guarded areas of the Amazon basin, the vast forests and swamps of northeastern Siberia, the fastnesses of northeastern Tibet, the bandit-infested northern reaches of the Gobi desert, the sandy center of Australia, the eastern slopes of the unmapped Andes, the vast Patagonian ice-cap, stretching over South America's narrow end, the snow-swept islands stretching vaguely north from Canada's "barren lands," and the American Southwest's trackless deserts.

RUSSIA, INDIA AND U. S.—

Mr. Eddy recently returned from a world tour. He is profoundly convinced that the next few decades will witness greater changes than have taken place in any equal past period—a transition of greater significance than the renaissance or reformation. Between Russia, with its Communistic proposals to obtain social justice by compulsion, and India, led by Gandhi, striving for independence through the spiritual of love, there should be found a way of world amelioration. He thinks America with its free democracy, which with many is almost unrestrained liberty and lawlessness, presents problems more fraught with evil. The golden age is yet to come.

A GREAT FUND FOR RELIEF.—

During the past fifteen years, more than one hundred million dollars has been spent under the direction of the American Jewish joint distribution committee for the relief of Jews now in various parts of the world. Just now one of its tremendous projects is the raising of sufficient funds to meet the pitiable social, economic and reconstruction problems of the millions of Jews in Poland, Roumania and other eastern European countries. A minimum sum of $2,500,000 is required to take care of barest needs of eighty million Jews in eastern and central Europe. The fund is being raised under the direction of the distribution committee, headed by Rabbi Jonah B. Wise, of New York City.

DR. SCOTFORD EDITORIAL SECRETARY.—

Rev. John R. Scotford, whose selection as editorial secretary of the Commission of Missions of the Congregational National Council, comes to a large task. A part of his duties will be to carry on the associate editorship of the American Missionary numbers of the Congregationalist; also the editorship of the department "As the Kingdom Comes" in that paper. This department has been edited by Dr. George W. Hinman. Dr. Scotford was born in Chicago forty-two years ago. Educated at Dartmouth and Union Seminary, he was ordained in the Congregational ministry in 1912, and has had pastorates at Kingfisher, Okla.; Dallas, Tex.; Waukegan, Ill., and Glenville, Cleveland, Ohio. He resigned from his last pastorate three years ago, since which time he has been engaged in preaching, writing and lecturing.

HANDS OFF THE 39 ARTICLES.—

The evangelicals in the Church of England are protesting against any attempt to lighten the ship by throwing overboard the document on which they rely chiefly in their interpretation of the Protestant character of their Church. "Hands off the thirty-nine articles!" is the sum of their claim. "In judging the Anglican doctrine of Holy Communion," they say, "the principal weight should be given to the thirty-nine articles. . . . If the articles be set aside, the danger of one-sided presentation of the doctrine of the Church of England would be largely increased." It brings some surprise to see among the signatories the name of Dr. Major, a leader among Anglican modernists. But perhaps the articles, which Newman claimed were patient of a Catholic interpretation, may also be patient of a modernist rendering. What patient articles!

REALITY IN PREACHING.—

At the close of one of his Lyman Beecher lectures at Yale in mid-April, Dr. George A. Buttrick pleaded for the accent of reality in preaching. "All means and methods might almost be cast to the winds," he said, "if the preaching is real. If preaching is not real, every method becomes a broken reed or an offense. Why do preachers use a pulpit voice? Why do they play the sedulous ape, when every man has his own gift? Why do preachers use phrases drawn from old theology which was vital to our fathers but is often not vital to us? And why does the preacher discuss problems and sufferings which he has not himself lived? That discussion is not real. The world today is tired of the cleric. It wishes to hear the man, speaking with his own voice and telling that which he himself knows concerning God and forgiveness and life and duty."

"MEN OF AMERICA."—

The National Advisory Council on Radio in Education, of which Levering Tyson is director, announces the first of a series of radio lectures, entitled the "Men of America" series, to be broadcast over country-wide networks. President Hoover, from the White House, introduced the first speaker of the series, Dr. Robert A. Millikin, who spoke from Los Angeles at 10 o'clock, Eastern daylight saving time, the evening of May 22nd. The co-operation of both the National and Columbia broadcasting systems is assured. Other leaders who have been invited to speak in the series for this year are Nicholas Murray Butler, Charles E. Hughes, Walter Lippman and John Dewey. The organization of the council was announced only last month. Its function is to demonstrate the type of educational broadcasting that will excite the interest of the American people.

"A CONVENTION IN HIMSELF."—

Prof. H. Augustine Smith, of Boston, was introduced to St. Louis as "a convention in himself." His pleasing personality, his knowledge of his subject and enthusiasm in the world of esthetics were contagious. He gave six addresses and held numerous conferences. In interpretation of hymns, the use of all arts, color and drama clothed with the spiritual for the purposes of worship, he made a large contribution to Church life and service. More than 3,000 persons were registered for his series of addresses. There is a large place for the esthetic in Church service to inspire the esthetic appreciation through contemplation. Anything that will contribute to appreciation, stir the imagination for the divine, and give a powerful impulse to the will for spiritual service is legitimate. Beautiful hymns, beautifully rendered, with religious associations that inspire the soul to come into communion with the supreme reality find a large place in worship.

NOTES-PERSONALS

At the annual meeting of the Elon Alumni Association, Monday afternoon, R. S. Rainey, of Charlotte, N. C., was elected president of the association, succeeding F. F. Myrick of Greensboro, N. C., who has efficiently filled this position for the past two years.

The program for the Woman's Missionary Societies will be found on page 9 of THE CHRISTIAN SUN in the last two issues of the month preceding the month in which the program is due to be presented in the societies. This was done by request of the Woman's Board of the Convention, recently in session.

Rev. B. J. Earp, Harrisonburg, Va., writes: "We have closed at Woods' Chapel an evangelistic meeting of twelve days, resulting in the addition of twenty members to the Church. We begin our meeting at St. Peter's May 18th." Brother Earp is serving several rural Churches, and is doing a much-needed work, which seems to have divine leadership and approval.

The "clans" and classes, kindred, friends and visitors are gathered in hundreds at Elon College this week for the happy and ever-memorable commencement festivities. Elon College becomes a mecca for multitudes of SUN readers and Christians from many quarters on this glad gala occasion. Next week, THE SUN will carry items of interest from the occasion.

Chaplain H. E. Rountree, with his wife, is now located at the United States Navy Yard, Charleston, S. C., and wishes to say that any Christian minister or friend passing that way will be greeted with gladness and hailed with delight. He is "at home" to the beloved of THE CHRISTIAN SUN family and of the many he has served from the pulpit and in the pastorate of other days.

Mrs. W. M. Jay and Mrs. I. W. Johnson gave, in last week's CHRISTIAN SUN, page 9, suggestions for "Cradle Roll Day." These suggestions will be very helpful to all superintendents of missionary cradle rolls. If mite-boxes for these cradle rolls are desired, they can be had at 25 cents the dozen by sending the order, with cash, to J. O. Atkinson, Mission Secretary, Elon College, N. C. Any superintendent desiring the mite-boxes should send their orders in at once, and they will have prompt attention.

Rev. S. E. Madren, fancy Gap, Va., begins an evangelistic meeting at Rocky Ford this week and reports the work in Carroll County as hopeful and progressive. He has recently found and established another preaching place where a Church seems to be needed, near the county seat, Hillsville. He purposes to build an arbor and hold a meeting of some days at this point during the summer. It is purposed to dedicate the Rocky Ford Church the second Sunday of July, the house having been recently painted and paid for, but never yet dedicated.

Sunday, May 17th, was a great, good day for Lebanon Church, Semora, N. C. It was the occasion of their annual memorial and missionary service. A large congregation gathered, the flowers were abundant, the service was appropriate, the offering for missions liberal. Rev. C. E. Newman is the beloved pastor, though on this particular day he was away, engaged in a memorial service at his home Church, Oakland, in Eastern Virginia Conference. The Mission Secretary, J.

O. Atkinson, enjoyed the day and service at Lebanon, where he met again many familiar faces and delighted in the sweet fellowship of the occasion.

Rev. J. H. Lee, Route 3, Raleigh, N. C., writes: "We certainly had a nice, good Sunday School at Six Forks last Sunday. We have there such a splendid group of young people. It is a genuine privilege to work with them and see them interested in the newly organized Sunday School. On May 3rd, Dr. J. Edward Kirby went with me to Six Forks and preached at the regular service." Bro. Lee is working to reorganize and build up the long-neglected Sunday School at Six Forks and feels much encouraged at the efforts so far made. There are many good people in this community, and a Sunday School there is greatly needed.

It is learned with deep regret that Dr. Edwin G. Gillette, associate editor of THE CHRISTIAN SUN and superintendent of missions for the Florida Congregational Conference, Jacksonville, Fla., is ill. His secretary, writing, says: "Dr. Gillette's work has been so strenuous for the past five months and the nerve strain so great that the doctors have ordered him to the hospital to take a complete rest for at least a month to avoid serious results." Through his writings and his contacts, Dr. Gillette has endeared himself to a host of us who will be exceedingly anxious and will be praying that he shall soon be restored to full health and strength. Another will supply his copy, that our news page from our Congregational fellowship shall not be altogether neglected.

On Wednesday after the fourth Sunday in July the Wyche Elder monument, erected on the New Hope Church grounds, a few miles out from Roanoke, Ala., will be unveiled and dedicated. This Bro. Elder was the founder of New Hope Church in 1850, from which the other Christian Churches of Alabama and Georgia have sprung; or rather these Churches have been planted and built since the New Hope Church, the original Church of the Conference, was founded in 1850. The name, "Elder," is inseparably connected with our work in the far South, and from that family have come faithful ministers through nearly a century who have borne onward the torch handed them by their devout ancestor. The Churches do well now to erect a monument to the memory of this great man, whose work still goes on, ever increasing.

Rev. A. W. Sparks, Dayton, Ohio, has spent several months in Birmingham, Ala., surveying the situation and getting the number and names of our Christian and Congregational constituency there and in trying to decide for us if it is worth while to proceed to the task of placing a pastor in Birmingham and building there a United Congregational-Christian Church. Bro. Sparks' survey is now before us and is given to the public, and it shows a most hopeful outlook for us at Birmingham. It looks like if our united forces are to build anywhere in the South and plant a Church where one is sorely needed, and in the real heart and center of the South, then the work must be taken up at Birmingham. It seems now to be our very greatest opportunity for a real contribution to our Christian and Congregational activities in the South. Some 200 or more Christians and Congregationalists are located in Birmingham. Bro. Sparks has found a house which, by some minor changes, can be used as a parish house and a preaching-place, and a lot on which a building may be later erected. The purchase price is $7,500, and the local members found are now busy making contributions to meet the first payment on the purchase price of this building and lot, the first payment being $1,500. This seems to be a start in the right direction, and will be hailed with delight by many SUN readers in the various sections of our constituency.

Rev. E. B. White, of Windsor, Va., writes: "In these dark and trying days of great economic depression and anxiety, we should remember that our Blessed Saviour revealed the eternal and majestic God as a Father, devoted, tender, sympathetic, yearning over His faithful children with infinite compassion; always ready and willing to succor, no matter what the problem. He is a living, personal, everlasting Friend. Beloved, have you experienced His living, loving, friendly presence? In these trying days let us not forget that God is the King Eternal, Infinite Jehovah, our blessed Heavenly Father. With such a Father, how could we want for anything for time or eternity? He has promised that every need of body, mind and soul shall be supplied. Therefore, go to Him with every disappointment, every fear, every joy, every hope. The soul of man can never know genuine peace until it is brought into loving harmony with God, its Maker and coming King. Brethren, do we realize the responsibility that our Lord Jesus Christ has thrown upon His individual followers to rescue lost men from ignorance, degradation and ruin by becoming the 'light' of a dark, sin-cursed world, and the 'salt' of a corrupting humanity? Time is too short for idleness on the part of God's workers in the white-harvest field of lost souls. Let us face our task of kingdom building with our eyes upon the cross of Calvary and our wills bent to the will of God, the Father Almighty, Maker of heaven and earth. Remember that nothing is eternal but that which is done for God and others. 'Acquaint now thyself with Him, and be at peace: thereby good shall come unto thee.' Trust God, and the present will be full of comfort, the future bright with hope, and your life one of eternal joy."

REMEMBERED.

Some time ago I received a letter from Mrs. L. C. Thomas, president of the Woman's Missionary Society of the Howard Church, at Brookline, Mass., desiring the names of each member of our family and the size of each, saying that the society was planning to send us a box. Not long after complying with this request, I received a letter, stating that the box had been shipped and another one would follow soon. Calling at the express office, I found that it had arrived. On carrying it home and opening it in the presence of the family, to say that the contents were wonderful is putting it mildly. We were simply astonished at the contents of the box. The second box was no less wonderful! To list the articles here would take too-much space. Suffice it to say that every member of the family was remembered, including father and mother, who were living with us then. He has died since.

The total value of the contents of the two boxes was well in excess of $200. The articles consisted of things we needed very much, but because of financial difficulties we were having to do without. We always feel at a loss to find words to say when our parishioners remember us in a special way, but when a people whom we have never seen nor served and whom we will in all probability never see nor serve, remember us in such a wonderful way as this, we are simply struck dumb. It is truly the spirit of Christ, for they have given, not expecting to receive. We feel more our responsibility since this kind remembrance. May the good Lord richly reward every one who contributed to this unworthy servant. We are thoroughly convinced that "the Lord will provide."

CONGREGATIONAL NEWS

REV. E. C. GILLETTE, Editor; REV. F. P. ENSMINGER, and REV. M. J. SWEET, Associates.

DAILY VACATION Bible school was conducted by Miss Annie Campbell at New Light Church, Doerun, May 17th to 23rd. There was a good attendance and much good work was accomplished.

SOUTHERN COLLEGE: President Hamilton Holt is to deliver the commencement address at Southern College, Lakeland, Fla., May 26th. The Southern College is supported by the Southern Methodist denomination of Florida.

REV. M. L. HARGRAVES, of Haleyville, Ala., is working co-operatively in his parish with the Free Will Baptists. He recently preached at one of their associations and will have a part in their State Sunday School Association, which our Conference superintendent hopes to attend.

PEARSON, GA.: The high school graduating class honored the pastor-at-large, Rev. Milo J. Sweet, by inviting him to deliver the sermon for the graduating class Sunday morning, May 24th. He accepted with pleasure and enjoyed this very interesting and inspiring school of learning.

ROLLINS COLLEGE: The corner-stone of the Knowles Memorial Chapel at Rollins College, Winter Park, Fla., was laid Thursday, May 12th, with an impressive program led by Dr. Hamilton Holt, president of the college, and participated in by Dr. Campbell, dean of the college, and by representatives of the student body and others.

REV. C. A. LINCOLN, pastor of the Congregational Church at Daytona Beach, Fla., had the misfortune to both sprain and break his ankle. After spending some days at the Halifax River Hospital, he was removed to his home, where he will be confined for some time, though he will be able to move about later with crutches. The sympathy of his very large circle of friends in the Southeast is extended to Mr. Lincoln in this unfortunate accident.

UNION CHURCH, Chattanooga, which is located at East Lake, had its corner-stone laying May 24th, Dr. Marston S. Freeman being the chief speaker. In April, the pastor, Rev. George W. Blount, secured Dr. Jason Noble Pierce, of Collegeside Church, Nashville, to preach the last sermon in the Church, which has stood on the old site since the middle of the nineties. It is now being torn down and re-erected in a larger, better and more prominent site.

REV. A. CALVIN NELSON and Rev. J. Marion Dopson are pastors of six rural Churches in Chilton and Elmore Counties, Ala., and have other preaching points. As their fields somewhat overlap, they have agreed to assist each other in pastoral work and preaching. This arrangement is agreeable to the Churches. At the present time, this two-minister parish is leading in Alabama in the movement to can fruits and vegetables to be sold for the benefit of missions.

SUPT. ENSMINGER, of Alabama, had the pleasure of attending a Christian Church missionary rally at Christiana Christian Church, near Dadeville, Ala., on May 10th. It was an all-day meeting, with a sumptuous dinner on the grounds. Mrs. Stevens, of Wadley, was in charge, and Mrs. Kitchen brought a message. Dr. J. O. Atkinson, of Elon College, was chief speaker, coming from North Carolina for this event and the commencement at Wadley. He had a strong and impassioned argument for missionary work, showing that the Jews were made missionaries to the nations and that missions was God's plan. After dinner, there was a discussion, led by Rev. C. W. Carter, pastor of the Church. It was interesting to know that members of the former Pleasant Hill Church, of the neighborhood, were good workers in this Christian Church.

A PROPHET AMONG PREACHERS.

Dr. William T. McElveen is the man. The pastor-at-large dropped into United Congregational Church, Atlanta, Ga., Sunday morning, April 19th. A good Sunday School. They believed in religious education there. Men and women of culture and resourcefulness were searching the scriptures for truth and direction under the straight-forward leadership of their minister. Throughout the Sunday School hour people kept coming in, and always with a cordial greeting from the leader as soon as they entered the door. It seemed that the spirit of "the old-time religion" rejoicing in the "new time" manifestation of vision and power, had taken hold of everybody.

But it was in the Church service and sermon that one felt that here "altars to God" should be erected. It was all so human and yet every one was drinking deep from the wells of spiritual thinking digged by one who manifestly knew his ground and longed to bring "living water" to a thirsting world.

"Why call me Lord and do not what I say?" Saying things and forthwith forgetting them, failing to put them into action, results in practically denying Him. And, not as a major, but as an incidental note of warning, he told a little about the Religious Education Association meeting held in Atlanta the preceding week. Like a prophet, he pointed out the fallacy of warning students among the younger generation against the search for realities in truth found by reverent study of the Holy Word. The reference was to the scant response shown by the ministry to attend this great convention. Only five Protestant ministers actually registering, and one theological seminary, even in progressive Atlanta, practically telling the students they should not attend this gathering of the many leaders of religious thought and teaching of the world. But some of them registered that independence of souls in training and attended many sessions of this great gathering. But the sermon went straight to the mind and to the heart as well. "Inspiration, stimulation without action results in worse than nothing."

On high levels, the spirit and words of this master of preaching made men feel guilty of "thinking and not acting"; confessing to this or that dogma, but failing to bring into life the activities which alone give honest testimony to truth. One wondered whether Churches and men who boast of true orthodoxy in creeds and personal convictions, but which are bitter as gall toward good men of high character and giants in the grasp of essential truth, are just saying, "Lord, Lord," but failing in weightier matters of the life of a Christian. Any way, one (many) came from that service feeling that here in United Church Atlanta could boast of a genuine prophet of God who is thinking in terms of practice as well as confession; of doing as well as saying—and doing it in a big way. It was surely good to be in such a service. A stranger by the side of the writer said he had heard this minister talk to the men in the railroad shops, liked it, and so came to Church Sunday. He went away, saying how glad he was to find such friendly greetings and such inspired services.

METHODS CORNER

BY REV. ELISHA A. KING, D. D.
Miami Beach, Fla.

Summer is coming along now with rapid strides and we will be considering plans for our summer work. I wish to suggest union services for Sunday nights. There are many communities where there are several Churches that have similar problems. One problem is the Sunday-night service. Many Church buildings are very warm by time for the evening service, and people hesitate to go to a service where they are sure to be uncomfortable.

Why not arrange with as many Churches as possible for an evening service out-of-doors on some lawn or under some tree or by the side of a lake where that is possible. One of the most pleasant experiences of my first pastorate in a small town in Ohio, a county seat, were the union gatherings on the courthouse steps on Sunday nights during the summer. The choirs united and the ministers took turns preaching. Then it was a real solution to the vacation problem. The ministers of the community got together and decided when they would take their vacations and arranged them so that the community was never without a minister. This union spirit led also to the groupings of congregations at Sunday morning services so that the pastors could be away for a month without the Church having to pay for summer supplies. These union meetings brought the people closer together and encouraged them in arranging other similar gatherings during the year. I recall many very splendid union prayer meetings for stated periods during the winter.

There is another way to solve the summer problem, and that is to dispense with the Sunday evening service entirely during July and August, or any other months that might be desirable. In place of this service, the young people's society could hold its service and in some places might easily take full direction of an evening service, to which any adults who cared to might come. This would throw responsibility on the young people and be a good experience.

We do not believe it is worth while to hold a second Church service just for the sake of having it, especially if it is not well attended. It is hard on the minister and everybody else. There are some places where the Sunday evening congregation is larger at night, but usually the second service is not well attended in the summer-time. Why not try the union plan?

"I'M SO GLAD!"

Rev. Daniel Albright Long, D. D., who celebrated his eighty-seventh anniversary May 22, 1931, at his home, Myrtle Cottage, 108 North Guerry Street, Florence, S. C., gladdens our heart and remembers his friends with the following lines which are so expressive and suggestive. We are sure hundreds will read and enjoy this sublime sentiment and expression from the mind and the heart of a man who refuses to grow old.

I'm so glad! I'm so glad! for all that is bright:
The sun by day, and the "songs in the night,"
The companions of youth, the friends of old age,
As I read God's dealings on every living page.

Yes, let us thank God today and tomorrow,
In mercy He sends the blessing and sorrow;
It is never unkindness, and never in vain,
His mercy permitted a sorrow or pain.

O Father, we can trust Thee for days yet to be,
We know they will bring us still closer to Thee;
When all tears have vanished through Thy boundless love,
We will spend our eternity in the mansions above.

PRINCIPLES OF THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

- (1) The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
- (2) Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.
- (3) The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
- (4) Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship and of Church membership.
- (5) The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by, all.

THE PURPOSE OF THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

The purpose of this Church is to cultivate a spirit of union among the followers of our Lord Jesus Christ of every persuasion, and to secure, if possible, the associate efforts of all true religious teachers in pointing the wicked to "the Lamb of God who taketh away the sin of the world."

The peculiar doctrines and tenets which have confused and distracted the Christian world are remanded to private judgment, and hence cease to be matters for debate, only in so far as may be necessary to prevent a sectarian influence from entering the Church.

This Church requires no compromise of faith on the part of any child of God in order to communion or fellowship; here, denominational distinctions cease to exist, and Christian love binds the brotherhood together.

The purpose of this Church will be consummated in the conversion of the world and the union of all Christians.

SHALL WE EDUCATE?

The president of Defiance College has resigned. The president of Piedmont Junior College has resigned. The president of Elon College has resigned. This is not by accident nor by concurrence on the part of these three of our Christian college presidents. There is a deeper significance in the fact of their resignation.

Originally, the Church alone undertook to educate and to build colleges. All of the early institutions of our country for higher education were founded by and creatures of the Church. Moreover, all education then was religious. The Church led off in the matter of higher education, and the State, discovering at last the benefits and assets to be derived from the liberal education of its citizens, began to found universities. History has changed all this. Today the State, or personally endowed corporations, own and control the larger colleges and universities, and the matter of teaching religion has, for the most part, been left out of the curriculum or relegated to the background. The Church college, therefore, is the only hope in our day of teaching religion and of giving young men and young women the influence and impact of Christian education, while preparing them for life by training and instructing them in the liberal arts. While the larger institutions, colleges and universities, are owned by the State or individual corporations, there are yet left enough Church colleges to enroll in their student body about one-half, or a fraction over one-half, of all students in the colleges of America today. The Church college, therefore, still carries on. Its day is not done; its task is not finished; its work is yet incomplete, because it is essential and indispensable.

There could be no greater calamity, no more serious a tragedy to befall our country and our citizenship than that of dispensing with the Church college; and no greater calamity or tragedy could happen to the Church than for her to close up the doors of her schools and colleges. The Church must educate; the Church must instruct; the Church must train her youth under Christian surroundings, amid Christian influences, in a Christian atmosphere, inspired by men and women endued with the Christian spirit, if those youths are to fill their rightful place in society, in State, and in the Church of the future.

Elon College has a history of forty-one years. Not a long time in the life of average Church institutions, and yet what a history! what a glorious history! what an indispensable history! As a Church here in the South, we can't think in terms of our deeds and achievements of the present and of the past quarter of a century without thinking in terms of the history and achievements of Elon College. Those who are occupying our pulpits today, for the most part, were educated at Elon College, and they realize that they received at Elon College that which they could not have received elsewhere than in an institution of their own Church. There are hundreds of teachers, Christian teachers, in the schools of the South, physicians, merchants, manufacturers, farmers, who received their collegiate training at Elon and who realize full well that they got at Elon College, their college, that which they could not have had from any other college, and that because of their training, that which they secured at Elon, they are more loyal to their Church than they could have been without it, and are more anxious today that their Church live and go forward and take its place in the world in prestige and in power than they would have been or could have been had they been educated elsewhere than in their own Church college.

The Church college is indispensable. The Church college is yet essential to Church life and growth.

Two factors of the present make against the Church college and make it difficult for it to live and carry on:

1. We are living in a day of mergers, of centralization and of large interests. The State is merging its interests, centralizing its efforts and expenditures. Commerce and industry are doing the same. It's the big store or the chain stores, the big hotel or the syndicate of hotels, the big newspaper or the holding corporation of a string of them, the great factory or the corporation that controls scores of them, the big university or the ones that can control millions. These are the order of the day. These are the champions and the challenge of the times. Commerce and industry have become obsessed with the craze of consolidation, the idea of bigness, and of mass-production and distribution. The small institution or enterprise in every line of human industry in our day is having rough sailing and hard going.

2. The world, with its secularism, is pressing hard upon the Church with its spirituality. The world of our day is stressing the secular, putting things, the possession of things, the ownership and development of things, above that which is purely moral and spiritual. Not only is the Church college being hard-pressed, the Church itself is being hard-pressed. Thousands of small Churches, not to say scores of larger ones, are having the struggle of their lives to maintain themselves, to even live at a poor dying rate and to keep going. The Church college, like the Church itself, is hard-pressed by the world, by that which is of and in the world, by that which is worldly and secular. And this only makes the fight for the Church itself and for its institutions the more desperate and, in the minds of the courageous, the more determined. On this very account, the Church college was never so essential, so indispensable, as it is today. It must be maintained; it must be supported; it must be carried on, or the flickering light of spirituality which still shines on our pathway will grow dimmer and weaker, and the darkness of doubt, skepticism, agnosticism, atheism, secularism, humanism, will settle down upon us even more deadly and disastrously than we have experienced or dreamed of in the past.

We of the Christian Church must have our Elon College. We simply can't think of our history, of our appointed task, of all that is near, dear and sacred in our Church life without it.

For twenty of the forty-one years of our history, President Harper has borne the burden and struggled with the difficult problems of Elon College. No man living more than he knows how heavy those burdens have been, how difficult and desperate the struggle for its life and growth and development has been. Out of a great dream, he has led in carving a magnificent plant and a great institution. That institution, as has been stated in these columns before, reflects more eloquently than any words we can use, the power of the great purpose that has possessed him and the tireless and consecrated energy with which he has toiled and labored through the years. And now as he hands over his burden to another, there will be no higher tribute of praise to his name than for the people of the Church to see to it that the work he has begun shall be carried on, and the college he has loved with such passionate devotion shall not only live, but shall go forward to larger proportions and achievements. This is essential not only as a tribute to past achievements, but to the very life and achievements of the Christian Church of the South in the future. More than ever is the Church college needed.

Evangelism is essential, and without it a Church cannot live. Missions are essential, and without missions the Church cannot grow. Charity and benevolence are essential, the care for the widow and the orphan, and without these the Church cannot express its affection and its heart's love. But if all of these are to survive and to carry on and to be made effectual and to be established, then we must educate. This is essential; this is vital; this is necessary to every interest and enterprise and movement of Church life, growth and power.

GETTING GOD COUNTED ALSO.

A book of recent publication carries this in its introduction: "In our technique of the census, we have worked out a method of estimating all values except spiritual values. We have learned how to gauge all signs of progress except moral progress. We have learned how to count everybody but God." And yet it may be declared that God alone counts more, and for more, than all the rest of us. Moreover, there are no values in our civilization equal to spiritual values. The fact is there is no progress except moral progress.

We have drawn into our language from history "the dark ages." The sole reason for calling medieval history "the dark ages" is because there are found there so few signs of moral progress. The wheels on which moral events and issues go round and go upward seem to have stopped for those centuries, and we call the time of their seeming inertia "the dark ages." Human history is written in the lives and in the trail of those who carry forward and bear higher the standards of morality. There is no progress in the true meaning of the word except moral progress.

Moreover, there are no real values except spiritual values. The Church is a spiritual body, working at a spiritual task—that of creating spiritual values. In her task of creating spiritual values, she blazed the way in the wilderness and the wilds of America, and she has been blazing the way ever since in the creation of values in America and in all lands wherever real values have been created. Commerce, we are told, follows the flag. True, but the heralds of the cross, the ministers of God, have preceded the flag. Our traders could not go. It was neither safe nor possible for them to go into China, Japan, Africa and India till the preacher had first gone there with the Book of God under his arm, the Word of God on his lips, and the love of God in his heart. This man, with his message, made the way and the work safe for the trader and the manufacturer. We need not go to fields afar, just take this fact from history here in our own country. I quote from a page before me as I write: "When this minister" (going with great hazard and difficulty through the wide stretches to the wild west) "reached St. Louis, Mo., he found a typical Western town. There were no hotels. The buildings were all framed, and none were more than one-story high. There were plenty of saloons and gambling-halls and dens of vice, and the people on the western shore of the river made the boast that the Christian Sabbath never had crossed, and never should cross, the Mississippi."

It was this minister of God in trying to get God counted for the first time in the lives of those who were founding the city of St. Louis, that carried the Christian Sabbath across the Mississippi, and it's the ministry of the sons and daughters of God that not only carried the Christian Sabbath across the river, but have kept it there, in a measure at least, in their effort to get God in the census and to get Him counted in the lives of men. Truly is that historian correct who declared that "getting God counted in a community is never accomplished without a struggle."

This is that for which the Church came into the world. It is that for which it exists, and for which it strives among men and the children of men. A struggle, yes, ever and always a struggle. Go out now and plant a Church in a new place, even here in our homeland, to say nothing about the Church in fields afar, and immediately, or at a very early period, a struggle begins. Often there is division in the ranks of the new Church organization; there is schism in the body; one faction arises to oppose and fight another faction in the newly organized Church; difficulties arise and dangers assail on every hand. The Church is a militant body, and because it is to fight for every effort it makes in creating spiritual values and in getting God counted in the hearts of men and in the life of a community, it must remain militant, aggressive, determined, courageous and daring till the kingdoms of the earth shall become the kingdoms of our Lord and His Christ.

DREADING AN ILLITERATE MINISTRY.

An "Official Register of Harvard University," vol. 28, bearing date of April 24, 1931, carries on its opening page a very interesting and quite suggestive bit of history. After stating that Harvard College was established in 1636 by the General Court of the Colony of Massachusetts Bay and was opened for instruction in 1638, a foundation having been bequeathed by the Rev. John Harvard, minister of the Church at nearby Charlestown, the motives of the founders of Harvard are set forth in a publication entitled "New England First-Fruits:"

"After God had carried us safe to New England, and wee had builded our houses, provided necessities for our livelihood, rear'd convenient places for God's worship, and settled the civill government: One of the next things we longed for and looked after was to advance learning and perpetuate it to posterity; dreading to leave an illiterate ministry to the Churches, when our present ministers shall lie in the dust."

The dread of leaving an illiterate ministry to the Churches is still one that may well be cultivated and developed. The pulpit is the place of preaching, but it is also the platform of teaching and instruction in the most vital and important doctrines and truths which the mind of man has to grapple with. Our Saviour inspired His preachers of the Word by His personal contact, but drilled into them through three years of constant instruction, truths and doctrines they could not forget before saying unto them, "Go ye into all the world and teach all nations." CHURCH MEMBERSHIP.

The implications of Church membership are among the serious questions of human life and human obligations. Preparation for Church membership is spiritual birth. "Ye must be born again" (John 3:7). That is the only way one can get into the family of God. The new birth, regeneration, born from above, no matter what expression is used, spiritual birth is the necessary preparation for Church membership. Carried further, it implies right relation to God, self, and others. To be a child of God implies obedience to God, support of His cause, and a life in harmony with His will. To be a member of the Church is to attend its services, contribute to its institutions, and the mission cause. To live a life that expresses the spirit of Jesus Christ, that others may see His spirit and believe.

The member of the Church must not only be in right relation to God, but to himself. The Word of God and the Holy Spirit produce inner convictions of personal conditions and personal obligations, and to be his best he must obey these inner feelings of loyalty to his best self. This is a field where conscience approves, condemns, or warns the real being of its obligations. That is a field as sacred as life itself; and a Church member must be true to himself or he cannot be true to God and the Church.

The Church member must be true to others—to other Church members and even to outsiders. For the obligation reaches to enemies: "Love your enemies, bless them that curse you, do good to them that hate you, and pray for them which despitefully use you, and persecute you" (Matt. 5:44). That requires some faith and consecration to God and self.

How to get along with other people is a problem that nothing but real religion can solve. It is plain that Jesus loves all men, the worst as well as the best; and if the Church member follows Christ in sincerity, he will be like Jesus. That means that the Church member will love his friends, his enemies, his fellow-members, and the worst people outside of the Church. Anything short of that fails to live up to the implications of Church membership. Moreover, the Church member must not base his loyalty and his support upon personal likes and dislikes, but upon his membership in the institution. It is God's Church and His claims are first always. Non-support of the Church for personal likes or dislikes of pastor or member, is a low standard of living, loving and loyalty to the Church of which one is a member.

MAKE MAY TELL! TELL WHAT? TELL FOR MISSIONS AND THE KINGDOM OF GOD

Many Churches have not yet taken the ANNUAL MISSIONARY OFFERING. Let the month of May tell the story of the effort and self-denial in every Christian Church of the Southern Convention, where the offering has not been taken, of a desire to help win this world to Christ through proclaiming His gospel, giving His message to those in the foreign field and the home field who have not heard and had the opportunity that we have had. Many Churches have not yet taken the offering. Can any Church afford to miss this opportunity of trying to let its light shine out to those who sit and wait in the dark places till that light comes?

Many pastors have not yet been heard from. Can any pastor take the responsibility, the awful responsibility, of not giving his people a chance to express, through their self-denial and their sacrificial offering, their love for their Lord by trying to give a message of that love to those who are dying without it?

Let every Church, every pastor MAKE MAY TELL for Christ and the kingdom of God through our Annual Missionary Offering. The spiritual task of the Church is that of winning the world to Christ—and this is Missions. Through self-denial we carry on the work of the kingdom of our Lord on earth. He gave all, denied all for us. What will we give for Him?

SUFFOLK LETTER.

One might call this age the sparrow age, because it cannot be still long in one place or one activity. The sparrow has no commercial value, and is not used for food. The eggs are not sold on the market. It multiplies rapidly and contributes little to society. It is always on the go, but its activities seem to contribute little to society. It is found throughout Europe, and as far as the Arctic Circle; eastward into Siberia, and southward in Africa to Lake Albert, Nyanza, Morocco, and Madeira. It is also in England. In fact, it is spoken of in the United States as the "English" sparrow. Its depredations on crops have induced many farmers to use means for their destruction. But the destruction of sparrows may be carried too far. In France, the destruction of sparrows has been followed by an increase of caterpillars, vastly more destructive to crops than the sparrows themselves. The sparrow came into the United States in 1850, and is the most active bird in this country. In this country it is modern, to say the least of it. It is a great convenience at the close of a marriage to clean up the rice that is thrown at the bride and falls on the ground.

My suggestion to call this the sparrow age is because it is so active, moves so often, and has to be followed up carefully to find out the value of so many movements that seem to mean nothing but movements, activities that consist chiefly in activities. Organizations multiply almost as rapidly as sparrows; and many of them seem to be in the way of the best results. There is hardly an afternoon in towns and cities that do not call for attendance upon some society, club, some organization that chirps, nests, adjourns, and goes to another meeting. Many of these organizations are religious, benevolent, educational, and take time, money, thought and devotion. Much complaint is made in these days about over-organization, the multiplication of societies, and that we can't keep up with them and do our regular work. That complaint seems to be as widespread as the sparrow organizations; but, it may be that if these societies were destroyed that other caterpillars even more destructive would spring up as the caterpillars did in France, and do still greater damage to the best interests of society. To say the least, this is a chirping, skipping, going age, with song, activities, movements, that make it a fast age in the better sense of that phrase.

One thing is certain, and that is that this age is active, not long in one position, in a hurry to fly to another yard or limb, singing as we go. Motion has increased, quiet in one place has decreased, every one looking for himself moves on to something else for thought, association, work, higher ground, or up in the air for a trans-Atlantic, or trans-Pacific flight. No matter what one may think of the times, poking no longer gets anywhere, and one must be up and moving in thought, business, religion, and social life, or be left in the march.

ELON LETTER.

(Remarks delivered to the commencement audience, May 26, 1931.)

Thirty-two years ago, at Elon's 1899 commencement, I began my valedictory address on behalf of the senior class of that year as follows:

"It is always sad to say good-by, and especially when you are about to separate from those with whom you have been intimately associated, and with whom you have in common many cherished memories."

The past thirty-two years have been spent, two of them in graduate study, four of them as high school teacher and principal, and twenty-six of them in the official service of my alma mater, six years as professor and twenty years as president. On the 31st of this month, I close that service, and this occasion marks my final official commencement exercise.

It is naturally to be expected that I will depart from my usual custom on these occasions, and that I will have something to say to the magnificent audience here assembled, in the way of a second valedictory.

I wish first of all to express my grateful and heartfelt appreciation to trustees, faculty, students, alumni, the Christian Church, and that larger host of generous friends who during the twenty years of my presidency have supported me in my efforts to serve Elon College, by their gifts, by their advice and counsel, by their many evidences of friendship and by their sympathetic co-operation and earnest prayers. But for these assistances, I could not for these twenty years have carried the burden I now lay down. My duties have been arduous, my burdens have weighed heavily, but I can truthfully declare that the support I have felt I always had in my efforts to meet them has made these duties and burdens a delight to the heart. No man has had more pleasant associations than it has been my fortune to enjoy. Truly the lines have fallen for me in pleasant places.

For what has been accomplished here, I feel a pardonable gratitude—gratitude to you and my other friends and to God who gave us the vision and guaranteed the program. I particularly rejoice when I look upon this present physical plant and realize that competent judges rate it not only as one of the beauty-spots of North Carolina, but also as one of the best-equipped small colleges in the world.

I rejoice also when I recall that Elon has not only become a collegiate member of the Southern Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools, but that this college is recognized as making a distinctive contribution to Christian education, the very thing for which the Church college exists and which entitles it to continue to exist. Our Christian education building, with its laboratory facilities for religious education in preparing leaders for pulpit and pew, has given Elon recognition not only in America, but everywhere in the world that Christian education is appreciated—recognition as a pioneer in this great realm of Christian service on the college level.

But most especially do I rejoice when I think of Elon's future. A great leader has said of her indebtedness that it "is a credit, for it means daring to face a great educational need by putting in a splendid material equipment." The "Million-Dollar Campaign" (four hundred thousand for indebtedness incurred in the Greater Elon rebuilding program, and six hundred thousand for additional endowment) now in process and the additional four-million-dollar progressive campaign now in contemplation, will succeed, in my judgment, because Elon has a distinctive program that will appeal, and likewise a distinctive place to fill in preparing leaders for the Congregational and Christian Churches of this Southeast area. In addition, she has more friends and more devoted friends today than she has ever had. She has the respect of educational leaders and the confidence of the great lay public. I rejoice in Elon's future.

I do not know who my successor shall be, but I herewith pledge him my earnest co-operation and sincerest prayers for the success of his administration. I am with him and for him 100 per cent. And what I say for myself, I confidently bespeak for the board of trustees, the faculty, the students, the alumni, the Congregational and Christian Churches and the public generally. May God richly bless and greatly prosper in all his efforts for Elon's upbuilding in educational and spiritual leadership the fifth president of Elon College, whoever he may be.

In my valedictory address of thirty-two years ago, I spoke particularly of three problems that college men and women would be called upon properly to solve—the tenement-house problem, grinding poverty, and the saloon. The saloon is gone. It will never return. The tenement-house situation has greatly improved. We still have the problem of the masses toiling amid poverty and squalor, while nearly two hundred individuals have incomes of more than a million dollars a year, and 5 per cent of the population control 95 per cent of our gigantic national wealth. The problems of war, race, industry, and Christian union have become ominous now in their demands for solution. I think I know the remedy for these and the other problems that cry to us for solution, and that shall continue to cry to us till we have heeded and made satisfying response. The remedy is Christian education, and that is why I believe so heartily in Elon and her future. We must Christianize education, or it will paganize the world. Christian education holds the key to the future, and it shall not fail. Elon will not be found wanting in its service. I pledge her anew my hand and my heart in the noblest aspiration that ever stirred a college—the aspiration to Christianize education here and to make our social order truly Christ-like in all its life and endeavor. To this glorious task, I summon my successor and you, Elon's friends, and that growing company who will rally to Elon's cause and will crown his administration, I am confident, with good success.

PIEDMONT JUNIOR COLLEGE LETTER.

THE PRESIDENT RESIGNS.

"Better is the end of a thing than the beginning thereof."—Eccl. 7:8.

The president of the college resigns, to take effect May 25, 1931.

Bethlehem College, a school of liberal arts, was opened in Wadley, Ala., eight years ago. This school holds that no two men are alike, that drill is subordinate to insight and reflection, that obedience is worthless unless it springs from conviction, and that the "psychology of the crowd" must be replaced by the quiet determination of a reasoned faith.

It was a great day for this section when the college was founded, for it has been the means of opening minds. A college is absolutely useless unless we bring to it genuine intellectual interests. Some come to college with their eyes closed; the greater interests of life have not gripped them.

My predecessor was Prof. M. W. Hook, who did his work well and is now professor in Duke University. I have been deeply interested in this institution for the past seven years, but am now turning it over to another, whom the board of trustees may elect, believing that he will be able to do a much greater work than I have been able to do. During this time, the college has not been the mere unlocking of doors and the sweeping out of dusty rooms, but the opening of hearts to friendships, of minds to new truth, and of souls to the inflowing spirit.

The college, through these years, has made a large circle of friends, which have been true and faithful. The board of trustees have been loyal friends of the college. We have fought our battles together, and borne each other's burdens together, and have done the best we could for the college with what we could get to work with. Friendship is not based on identity of opinion. Enduring friendship cannot be based on personal, selfish advantage. Lasting foundations of friendship are to be found in united effort for a common cause. To sit still and look at our friend is to criticise and lose him. To work with him steadily, patiently, hopefully, is to keep him, and to find constantly new reserves and resources in him.

Many changes have taken place on the campus since we came here. The girls' dormitory was finished the second year, and in 1926 the administration building was started and is largely on the way toward completion; the laboratory and library are a credit to any small college, and the grounds are looking much better. We live in an age of transition; the world of yesterday is passing into the world of tomorrow. The swift changes that threaten us, also summon us. The world is waiting for our message, if we have any.

The college has had a hard struggle for its existence. Its friends have laid their all upon the altar, that the institution might live to serve the needs of the region. Has it been worth while? Has this course of conduct been vital and central to our purpose and to the cause of truth? Virtue does not consist in keeping out of things, but in getting into things worth while. There is no romance like that of doing one's duty.

Beginnings are good; they are indicative of courage and the foundation of hope. They are the parent of great achievement. God's gifts and our opportunities to commence. But endings are better than beginnings, for they are the fruition of hope and the reward of labor. The larger good may be realized through a proper understanding of the highest good and the proper use of present opportunities. A realization of the importance of little things and the possessing of a patient spirit. Soon another will stand at the beginning of a great work—that of guiding the college through another crisis and preparing for great living. What an opportunity! What a responsibility! We bid the college godspeed, and bespeak for our successor great achievements.

CONGREGATIONALISM.

A STATEMENT OF FAITH.

While Congregationalists do not have an official creed, the following declaration adopted at Kansas City, in 1913, is widely used among the Churches:

The Congregational Churches of the United States, by delegates in national council assembled, reserving all the rights and cherished memories belonging to this organization under its former constitution and declaring the steadfast allegiance of the Churches composing the council to the faith which our fathers confessed, which from age to age has found its expression in the historic creeds of the Church universal and of this communion, and affirming our loyalty to the basic principles of our representative democracy, hereby set forth the things most surely believed among us concerning faith, polity and fellowship.

Faith: We believe in God the Father, infinite in wisdom, goodness and love; and in Jesus Christ, His Son, our Lord and Saviour, who for us and our salvation lived and died and rose again and liveth evermore; and in the Holy Spirit, who taketh of the things of Christ and revealeth them to us, renewing, comforting and inspiring the souls of men. We are united in striving to know the will of God as taught in the Holy Scriptures, and in our purpose to walk in the ways of the Lord, made known or to be made known to us. We hold it to be the mission of the Church of Christ to proclaim the gospel to all mankind, exalting the worship of the one true God, and laboring for the progress of knowledge, the promotion of justice, the reign of peace, and the realization of human brotherhood. Depending, as did our fathers, upon the continued guidance of the Holy Spirit to lead us into all truth, we work and pray for the transformation of the world into the kingdom of God; and we look with faith for the triumph of righteousness and the life everlasting.

Polity: We believe in the freedom and responsibility of the individual soul, and the right of private judgment. We hold to the autonomy of the local Church and its independence of all ecclesiastical control. We cherish the fellowship of the Churches, united in district, state and national bodies, for counsel and co-operation in matters of common concern.

The Wider Fellowship: While affirming the liberty of our Churches, and the validity of our ministry, we hold to the unity and catholicity its branches in hearty co-operation; and will of the Church of Christ, and will unite with all earnestly seek, so far as in us lies, that the prayer of our Lord for His disciples may be answered, that they all may be one.

Copies of the pamphlet, "Congregationalism," including "A Statement of Faith," can be obtained from the Commission on Evangelism, 287 Fourth Avenue, New York City; 2 for 1 cent.

C. Taken from "Plan of Union of the Congregational and Christian Churches":

I. Sec. 1. That the National Council of the Congregational Churches and the General Convention of the Christian Church be united under the title of the General Council of the Congregational and Christian Churches (Unincorporated), looking toward complete union so soon as necessary legal steps can be taken. . . .

Sec. 2. That the basis of this new relation shall be the recognition by each group that the other group is constituted of the followers of Jesus Christ. Each individual Church and each group of Churches shall be free to retain and develop its own form of expression. Finding in the Bible the supreme rules of faith and life, but recognizing that there is wide room for differences of interpretation among equally good Christians, this union shall be conditioned upon the acceptance of Christianity as primarily a way of life, and not upon uniformity of theological opinion or any uniform practice of ordinances. . . .

XXV. In conclusion, these plans and recommendations of necessity deal with legal and technical details, but they have their justification in the spirit of unity which they presuppose and are designated to promote. If a desire for that unity for which the Master once prayed be the actuating motive of all plans and all acts, the way will become clear, as we proceed, where now it may appear filled with uncertainties, hesitation and hindrance. We may be sure that no legal entanglements will be too difficult, no ecclesiastical customs too deeply fixed, no sentiments seem too precious to yield, no ambitions or personal commitments too intense, if the will to achieve be ours, and the Spirit of God lead us. Going forward, thus led, we may ourselves secure, and may make plain to others, the road to joyous fellowship and enlarged usefulness.

MISSIONS

REV. J. O. ATKINSON, D. D., Secretary.

A SPIRITUAL TASK.

Quite a few of our Churches have not yet sent in their annual or Easter offering for missions. Surely these Churches and their pastors cannot forget the fact that the one spiritual task of the Church is missions. The world will help the Church in all of its benevolences and activities except that of missions. God appointed this task and created His Church to perform it, and unless the Church does the missionary work it will never be done. There are in non-Christian countries today more than 36,000 Churches, over 50,000 Christian schools, with over 2,000,000 pupils in them, 858 hospitals, 104 leper asylums, 32 schools for the blind, and 361 orphanages. How came one of these out there? Who sent them out? Who started them? Who is responsible for them? Who is supporting them? There is but one answer. The Church of the living God.

We may be indifferent to missions, but God in heaven is not. We may not believe in missions, but God does. He began the task and is carrying it on through the Church, a spiritual task through a spiritual body. It is for the enrichment of the spiritual life that He appointed missions as the supreme task of the Church, and He has reserved that task for the Church that the spiritual life of the Church might be developed and the membership might be enriched. Every Church blocks its own progress, stays its own activities, paralyzes its strength for soul-winning and for progress when it neglects its missionary task and refuses to enter into and obey the supreme command of our Lord, "Go ye into all the world." MISSIONARY PROGRAM FOR JUNE.

BY MRS. W. M. JAY.

Women's Societies.

The program for this month is the second taken from the little booklet, "Yesterday and Today in Porto Rico." This is an interesting study and one that we may do well in following. Those who used the program last month on "A Visitor Returns from Porto Rico," spent a profitable and happy hour and feel that they are nearer our neighbors in these islands than ever before. This month our topic is "Education in Porto Rico," and the subject itself shows us that there is a wealth of information in waiting. If you do not have the booklet, you may obtain same for 10 cents by sending to American Missionary Association, 287 Fourth Avenue, New York, N. Y.

Program.

Subject: "Education in Porto Rico."

Worship helps.

Suggested hymns: "Lord, Speak to Me, That I May Speak," "Take My Life and Let It Be." Scripture: 2 Chron. 1:1-13.

Prayer: For Miss Martha Lindsey, principal of the Blanche Kellogg Institute; for all the teachers, that they may be wise and efficient; for all the girls, that they may receive a large vision of service.

Three talks: (1) "General Educational Conditions," (2) "Our Own Responsibility," (3) "The Girls of the School."

Special music.

Discussion and conversation on the following:

1. Educational advance in Porto Rico during the past thirty years.

2. The Blanche Kellogg Institute.

3. Should the establishment of adequate schools be a task for the Churches or for the government?

Young People's Societies.

Program of Chapter VIII—"Troubled Waters."

I. Business.

II. Study period:

1. A brief review of the study: "Behind the Curtain," leader.

2. Today's study: Leader's approach to lesson. India's ship-of-State is certainly in troubled waters. Approach this lesson with all available sidelights. The Literary Digest carries interesting articles in the following numbers: March 1, 1930; April 19, 1930; May 10, 17, 24, 1930; June 14, 1930. Interesting photographs are also in these numbers. Our reading circle book, "India On the March," by Clark, deals with Gandhi and political India, pages 50-55. E. Stanley Jones' "Christ of the Indian Road" is valuable here. Perhaps members might stage a debate for an extra meeting, with the query: Resolved, that India should be granted "Swaraj"—self-government. With such a popular subject and so much collateral material, the leader's chief concern will probably be to keep the lesson period within its time limit.

3. Mahatma Gandhi (pp. 111-121): First member.

4. Progress toward home rule (pp. 121-126): Second member.

Conclusion.

5. Preparation for worship: Leader.

Leader's preparatory talk: India is a pronounced and world-known example of a situation existing here in our own country. Confusion reigns because Christ is left out of our every-day life. Gandhi has touched the vulnerable spot in our American Christianity. He has watched so-called Christian nations deal with one another. He has watched our industrial world, and he sees that we are leaving Christ out. E. Stanley Jones tells him not to follow us, but to follow Him whom we pretend to follow. But truly Gandhi is right when he says, "If all Christians would live as Christ lived, the world would soon become Christian." Let us resolve that we will live the lives that we know we should live, and that we will "let our light so shine that others may see our good works and glorify our Father which is in heaven."

III. Worship program:

Theme: "Witnessing for Christ by Daily Living."

1. Prelude: "Brightly Beams Our Father's Mercy."

2. Call to worship: "Be ye therefore perfect, even as your Father in heaven is perfect" (Matt. 5:48).

3. Hymn: "Hark, the Voice of Jesus Calling."

4. Scripture: James 1:1-3, 19-27.

5. Prayer: While the group is bowed in prayer, the leader or some member very reverently reads the hymn, "Lord, Speak to Me, That I May Speak."

6. Offertory: Music, "Lord, Speak to Me, That I May Speak."

7. Hymn: "O Master, Let Me Walk With Thee."

Willing Workers or Juniors.

Theme: "God's Children." (This meeting is to be public, and may take up the Church hour.)

I. Worship service:

1. Call to worship: God be merciful to us and bless us, and cause His face to shine upon us.

2. Hymn: "I Love to Tell the Story."

3. Scripture: Matt. 18:1-14.

4. Prayer: (3 & 4 may be given by pastor, if desired).

5. Offertory: The collection going to the Willing Workers. If leader deems it wise, this may be taken at the close of service.

II. Dramatization.

1. "Alice's House-warming," by Anita B. Ferris.

2. "The Honorable Guest," by Frances Cavanaugh.

(It is suggested that one of these be presented. Copies may be gotten from the Woman's Mission Board, C. P. A. Building, Dayton, Ohio.)

Benediction.

THE BEST IS YET TO BE.

(By President W. A. Harper to the graduating class and the public at Elon College, Sunday P. M., May 24, 1931.)

"The next generation has news of the Lord; His saving deeds shall be declared to generations yet unborn."—Psa. 22:30-31.

This scripture is guarantee of spiritual progress. God has not ceased to speak. He will continually reveal His will and mind and purpose to men. The human method of progress is revolutionary, but God's way is slow, evolutionary, educational.

Education has been defined as the process of effecting desirable changes in persons. A better definition perhaps would be that it is a quest, an adventurous discovery of the meanings and values of experience and their organization into programs of living. Christian education goes further than this, and includes the evaluation of these meanings, values, and programs of living in terms of the gospel of Jesus Christ.

Education has two purposes—to make persons efficient and to develop character. It is not enough that education should equip a person to make a living or even amass a great fortune. It must also qualitatively fit him to live a life, to live the good life, to live the Christian life, which is the best life. We do not measure a man by the length of his days, nor his possessions, nor his successes, but by his growing power in the realization of what Jesus called the abundant life, which I repeat is the best life.

Education accomplishes these two purposes not by imparting information, not by imposing certain disciplinary conditions, not by repeating for the individual or the group the evolutionary experiences by which the race has reached its present state of progress; not by creating situations through which controlled experience becomes the purposive guide for on-going life, but by stimulating the growing person to interpret his present experience in terms of the past and to organize his life program in terms of the highest ideal he can discover. In this adventurous process, every conceivable body of knowledge will be useful as resource material. The acquisition of knowledge will thus be dynamically motivated. He who approaches the arts and sciences in this spirit will be a far better informed man than he who approaches them for the information they will yield.

In this process the growing person will meet three types of things, ideas, or institutions. He will in the first instance, meet certain things or ideas, or institutions that are to be discarded because they have been tested in the crucible of racial experience and been found inadequate; such, for example, as the spinning-wheel, astrology, and autocracy, whether in the home, the school, government, industry or the Church. He will, of course, approach these things, ideas and institutions open-minded, ready to be convinced, but he will ultimately discard them as unsuited to that enlargement of the human personality toward which his adventure beckons him.

Then he will find certain things that are abiding, because they are worthy to endure—things that minister permanently to the growth of personality, such things for example, as the inclined plane and the level in mechanics, as the family and the school in social life, as Grecian architecture and the world's great literature in the aesthetic realm, such as patriotism in the political realm, such as personality and God in the spiritual realm. Here again the growing person's attitude will be tentative and pioneering, but ultimately he will agree with the matured judgment of his fellows that here inhere meanings and values that have been abiding worth.

But, in the third place, he will find many things that need reinterpretation, and not the least among them the very abiding values he has discovered in the racial experience. Falling water has been reinterpreted as electricity in our day, for example. While a man may not improve on Grecian architecture, he may create new types of architecture, using it as the basis, thus giving modern life types of buildings better suited to our needs than the Grecian structures would be. The family is the basic institution of our social life, but the family is being reinterpreted before our very eyes. Patriotism is fast becoming international, and ultimately will be cosmopolitan. Men, like God, will come to love the world. There is unquestioned need for a fresh and satisfying interpretation of human personality and of God in our day. Behaviorism and humanism decry both, and physics points the way suggestively at least for the doctrine of the indentification of matter and spirit in the ceaseless motion of the electron. Now we need a spiritual seer, a spiritual interpreter, a spiritual prophet today! He will come—the very need of the human heart will bring him forth.

There can be no question that the kind of situation I have been describing alarms not a few—persons who are naturally conservative, persons who are naively trustful, persons who prefer safety amidst fixity, rather than security amidst change. Much is to be said in defense of the attitude of these persons. They have been the governors on the engine of progress. They have kept that engine from tearing itself to pieces by the very momentum of its speed. In every realm of life we have need for the conservative and the progressive. We may illustrate it by religion. Priest, conservative, and prophet, progressive, have both played an important role in the religious experience of mankind, and will continue to do so. Religious leadership cannot dispense with either of these types. In the ranks of religious-minded persons also we find a corresponding cleavage—persons who look upon religion as comfort and those who look upon it as an inspiring enterprise. The saint and the reformer are always with us, the one regarding the religious life as an abiding comfort and the other regarding it as a crusader's commission to transform the world. These two types do not fully understand or appreciate each other. The militant reformer looks upon the reflective, contemplative saint as living on a glacier. The saint retorts that his social-reforming friend is living on a volcano. These two types must not merely tolerate each other; they must appreciate each other. Each represents values that will abide. The saint exemplifies those values, while the reformer reinterprets them and applies them to new situations, even as Jesus did when He said not once, but many times of the abiding values of the Hebrew experience of God: "It hath been said unto you, but I say." In every such case, our Master gave a new interpretation and application to an abiding spiritual verity. He was no static character. His personality was radiantly dynamic, gloriously and refreshingly new and progressive.

Last September, when the senior Sunday School class, acting upon the recommendation of its curriculum committee, decided to make the general problem around which should gather the Sunday morning discussion periods for the year we now close, "Changes that have occurred in my life during my college experience," I got a real thrill. My exhilaration was even more intriguing when the specifications under this general problem were decided upon. They included changes in knowledge, in beliefs, in meanings, in values, in attitudes, in ideals, in purposes, in motives, in choices. And then when the group voted to spend just as long as might be necessary on any one topic to turn aside to the consideration of any problem that might at any time invite attention, and to be perfectly free to state any position whatsoever, my satisfaction was complete. Here was an ideal situation for real education and at the same time to sit in judgment on the workmanship of our college. You seniors may not have had a good time in these discussion groups, but I have enjoyed them beyond expression. We were able to consider only three of our subsidiary problems, changes in knowledge, in beliefs, and in meanings, but we have faced real issues and resolved them in truly Christian terms. We have become accustomed to a method that will eventually be the vogue in young people's and adult departments of our Church schools, and that in itself would have made the discussions worth while. Our two detours from the general problems, too, were entirely proper. We felt we just had to know what the Bible teaches relative to industry and why we have such love and reverence for mother, and so very profitably we turned aside to consider these problems. Life is just that way, and education will increasingly become so.

Such a discussion group as the seniors had this year in their Sunday School hour comes very close to the method of Jesus in teaching His disciples. His method was informal, so was ours. He dealt with actual experiences, sowers going forth to sow, discouraged fishermen, publicans and Pharisees at prayer, the ordinary daily routine of life, so did we. Out of the storehouse of our experience we brought forth the changes that had occurred in our lives during our college careers. We looked at them. We appraised them. We pronounced them good. Not one of us felt that college had injured us or spoiled our Christian integrity. Some of us who, up to our senior year, had not committed ourselves to the Christian way of life, took that step, took it calmly, deliberately, voluntarily, because we felt that the changes which had occurred in our lives warranted us in taking our stand with the cause of Christ. I say this is real education, because it is based on the informal, experiential, democratic, spiritually quickening method of the Master Teacher Himself.

You love your homes, and rightly. They gave you birth and nurture and opportunity. But after we had discussed the meaning of home for us for some five or six weeks, my very soul rejoiced when you concluded that the home is the basic social unit of our civilization and that its primary function is to serve as the seminary of Christian character. But I rejoiced all the more when you decided that Christian character is no fixed achievement, but a progressive adjustment of the individual to vital life issues in terms of Christian living. The good days lie ahead for you. You hope to improve on the Christian homes from which you come. You conceive it to be a compliment to those homes to expect to do a better part by your children than they were able to do for you. And you are right. Life is progressive. We profit by our experience. We ought to be better home-builders than our parents, else they have lived in vain. They did not obtain all the promises, God having provided some better thing for us that they without us should not be made perfect.

We find this spirit of advance, of improvement, of progress in every realm of our experience. Yale, for example, after more than two hundred years of experiment, has removed the requirement of Latin or Greek for the A. B. degree. Your alma mater, in my undergraduate days, would not grant any degree to any student without two years of higher mathematics of college grade. The whole thing seems ridiculous now, but it was real business thirty-five years ago. I remember when our faculty used to meet weekly for several hours to consider absences of students and discipline them for the infraction of college regulations. Now the deans and the student governments handle such matters administratively, and there is some time left for professors to become scholars.

ADVENTURES IN YOUTH FELLOWSHIP

"Youth at Work in the Church."

JEWEL TRUITT, Editor, Waverly, Virginia.

YOUTH TO CRUSADE FOR PROHIBITION.

"The Allied Forces," a new and united movement for the eighteenth amendment and in support of "liberty under law," has been organized. Three campaigns will go forward as one.

First, Allied Youth. After a series of conferences from coast to coast, an organization meeting was convened in Pittsburgh, Pa., on Monday, April 13th. At this meeting, reports were received from every State of the Union. Nine hundred and eighty-six young people were nominated and confirmed as State and local vice-presidents. In this executive group are Catholics, Jews and Protestants. A continuation committee was appointed with power to complete details of organization and campaign plans. Field activities of the movement will begin immediately after Labor Day. It will enroll hundreds of thousands of young people, and it will promote a national youth program of education and inspiration. Already a number of State and national organizations have merged their programs in this movement.

Second, Allied Campaigners—a flying squadron for the eighteenth amendment. Beginning in Washington, D. C., September 8, 9, and 10, the Allied Campaigners will conduct in over two hundred and fifty of the largest and pivotal cities of the country, including every State capital, a three-day program of educational conferences and inspirational mass-meetings. This campaign, while conceived on even a larger scale, will follow the general plan of the famous flying squadron of America, led by Governor J. Frank Hanly, of Indiana. It will be remembered that seventeen years ago Governor Hanly and his associates conducted a remarkable nine months' campaign for national prohibition.

The Allied Campaigners will be in the field daily from early September of 1931, into June of 1932. More than fifteen hundred mass-meetings will be addressed by these speakers. It is estimated that more than two million persons will be reached directly.

Among the Allied Campaigners are Colonel Raymond Robins, Dr. Ira Landrith, Miss Norma C. Brown, Dr. Stanley High, Hon. Oliver W. Stewart, Colonel Patrick Callahan, Mr. Carlton M. Sherwood, Dr. Edwin C. Dinwiddie, Mr. Robert Ropp, president of Allied Youth, and Dr. Daniel A. Poling. Dr. Poling is chairman and Dr. Stewart is vice-chairman. Both of these men and Dr. Landrith were members of the original Flying Squadron of America. In addition to the work of the regular speakers, in certain zoned meetings in the larger centers like New York, Chicago, Philadelphia, Boston, Washington, Cleveland, San Francisco, Seattle, Denver, and Los Angeles, the three regular "divisions" will be supplemented by such outstanding men as Senator William E. Borah, Governor Gifford Pinchot, Mr. Fred B. Smith, and others of like standing and ability.

Third, the Allied Business Men and the reorganized Business Men's Prohibition Foundation. The chairman of this group is Mr. R. H. Scott, president of the Reo Motor Car Company. The Allied Business Men will conduct a comprehensive nation-wide advertising and publicity campaign.

The unity of the Allied Forces for Prohibition is essentially that of the allies of the World War. Each group retains its identity and responsibility for administration, but the command is united.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR NOTES.

SUNDAY, JULY 7, 1931.

TOPIC: "The Need for Christian Thoughtfulness and Kindness."—Acts 3:1-10.

"The Lord Christ dwelleth not afar,
The King of some remoter star;
But here among the poor and blind,
The weak and helpless of mankind,
In deeds we do, in things we say,
Life of our life He lives today."

The men and women of our communities whom we admire and respect most are usually kind and thoughtful people. Influential, though sometimes very inconspicuous, people are those who are kindest. Others are drawn by the power of the helpfulness that grows out of kindly thoughtfulness.

Jesus Christ meant most to the people of His day, and to all people since then, because of His natural desire to care for the needs of others, forgetting Himself. Kind and thoughtful people treat all people the same. They are not the ones who treat some well and scorn others. They are the ones who recognize good in others and help them develop by appreciative praise and encouragement. More of the spirit of the kindly neighbor, the good Samaritan, is needed in lifting men and women and children up to their best selves.

A beautiful story is told of Robert Louis Stevenson, a man who had to spend much time in bed when he wanted to be writing his wonderful stories. He was sick a great deal. Finally he went to the Island of Samoa to live. Stevenson wanted to know the people of the island, but they were suspicious of strangers. He tried the way of kindness. The people soon found him to be a friend; they came to him to settle their disputes and to give them advice. Wars between the tribes on the island became less and less frequent. Peace came. The people invited Stevenson to a council fire one evening. All was quiet for a while. Then one chief said, "You have helped us in our life as a people. We do not want to call you by a foreign name. We want you to have a Samoan name, for you have come to live among us and to help us. We shall call you 'Tusitala,' our brother.

"The handclasp that is warm and true,
That says, 'I share each joy with you';
The look that says, 'I love you well,'
Conveying more than words can tell;
The flowers picked by loving hand
That whispers, 'Dear, I understand'—
Small things, perhaps, but O the power
To cheer and bless the darkest hour!

"The smile so loving, kind, and true
That says, 'I still have faith in you';
The eyes with tears that overflow
Because my heart is filled with woe;
The simple, honest, heartfelt plea
Of prayer that's offered up for me—
Small things, ah! No, for these alone
Have power to lead me near God's throne."

—Cora M. V. Preble.

CHILDREN'S DAY SERVICE.

Quite a number of people met at Shady Grove Christian Church on Sunday, May 17th, to celebrate Memorial and Children's Day combined. Rev. G. M. Talley preached an interesting sermon in the morning, and we also had a short program by the children. Then the graves in the cemetery nearby were decorated with beautiful flowers, after which we enjoyed a bountiful dinner. In the afternoon, the children continued their program, with songs, recitations and Bible drills, and the young men of the Baracca Class rendered a beautiful quartet, "When Jesus Speaks." After some very helpful remarks by pastor and a number of visiting brethren, we closed the afternoon service. It was indeed a worth-while day for all who were fortunate enough to be there, and every one seemed to enjoy it very much.

REPORTER.

FLORIDA YOUNG PEOPLE'S CONFERENCE.

The sixth annual Florida Congregational Young People's Conference will be held at Camp Immokalee, near Keystone Heights, Fla., June 9-19th. It promises to be the best-attended and finest conference in its history. The mornings will be devoted to class work, with the following courses offered: "Life of Jesus," taught by Dr. H. Samuel Fritsch, pastor of the Union Congregational Church, Jacksonville; "Youth and World Friendship," by Miss Daisy Atterbury, who was born in China and taught there for five years after graduating from college in this country; "Young People's Materials and Methods," by Miss Annie G. Campbell, extension worker for Georgia; and "Pageantry and Dramatization," by Miss Martha Race, well-known writer of pageants. In addition to these classes, there will be discussion groups dealing with personal problems, and special conferences on vacation Church schools, recreational leadership, story-telling, Church history, world peace, and worship.

The afternoons will be given over to recreation under the leadership of Rev. Frederick Held. Camp Immokalee is located on Lake Brooklyn, and water sports are enjoyed especially. The evening programs include vespers by the lakeside, meeting around the council ring, music, nature programs, a water carnival, Immokalee night, and Communion service, and an outdoor candlelight service on the closing night.

Those in charge are especially pleased with the registration, with a large number of Churches not represented last year sending delegates, and with large numbers coming from Churches which ordinarily send delegates. Mr. Chas. A. Hoyt, of Jacksonville, will serve as dean, and Miss Pattie Lee Coghill as registrar.

HARD TIMES.

BY BENJAMIN COPELAND.

Hard times are bad; but there's something worse
Than a scanty wage and an empty purse:
For often, in man's extremest need,
God's grace all measure doth exceed.

Hard times are bad; but hard hearts are worse!
The good Lord save us from the curse
That doth the nobler self dethrone,
And transforms flesh and blood to stone.

Hard times are bad; but they turn to good
When the heart expands in brotherhood,
And in life's sorest trials shares
The heavy burden another bears.

Hard times seem bad; but the struggle and pain
Work out for the soul's eternal gain,
In the deeper sense of the Father's care,
And the richer harvests of trustful prayer.

Hard times are good, if they lead us to God
From the things that only deceive and defraud,
And restore to the spirit its rightful domain
In the life more abundant forever to reign!

Sunday School Lesson

BY REV. H. S. HARDCASTLE.

JESUS CRUCIFIED.

LEXXON X—JUNE 7, 1931.

GOLDEN TEXT: "He was wounded for our transgressions, He was bruised for our iniquities; the chastisement of our peace was upon Him; and with His stripes we are healed."—Isa. 53:5.

LESSON: Luke 23.

PILATE AND HEROD.

There is something pathetic and tragic about Pilate. He knew that Jesus was innocent, and he wanted to release Him. But when the shrewd Jewish leaders suggested that it might cost him his position if he did not deliver Jesus to them to be crucified, he overrode rough-shod his conscience and turned Jesus over to them. He is not the first nor the last one who has followed expediency rather than conscience in dealing with Christ. We had better not condemn Pilate too severely, lest in condemning him, we condemn ourselves.

Herod wanted to see Jesus do some miracle, but when Jesus, with imposing dignity and self-control, refused, Herod would have nothing to do with Him, and sent Him back to Pilate, but not until after he had mocked Him. Alas! that Herod could not see that he was the one who was mocked.

CHRIST OR BARABBAS?

The incident where Pilate has the alternative of releasing either Christ or Barabbas has a universal and abiding principle in it. Every man must decide what spirit he will release into the world, and in essence the two men in this incident represent the kind of spirit which men turn loose into the world.

CALVARY.

It was called "the place of the skull," and it was well named. On this elevated place, just outside the walls of Jerusalem, there was enacted the world's greatest triumph. That lonely, despised, suffering figure on that rude and rugged cross symbolizes something abiding and universal. He was putting in concrete form great, abiding truths. Here, for instance, was sin in its true character. It was sin that nailed Jesus to the cross. Sin stops at nothing, not even the death of the world's best and sinless one. Here is divine love, going to the uttermost to save others. The cross is God's attempt to tell us of His limitless love. Here is divine forgiveness. "Father, forgive them, for they know not what they do" is more than a passing sentence; it is the central theme of the gospel. Here is the evidence that suffering has a legitimate place in human life and that it has a redemptive purpose. And here is the ultimate triumph of love. In apparent defeat, Jesus was victor. The cross conquers all.

THE KING OF THE JEWS.

"And the superscription was also written over Him in letters of Greek, and Latin, and Hebrew." Greek, the language culture and incidentally the language in which the gospel story was given to the world; Latin, the language of law and organization; Hebrew, the language of religion. Pilate probably did not realize the true significance of what he had written or of the languages in which he had written it. It was a foreglimpse of the universality to be attained by Christianity.

THE ROBBER.

"Lord, remember me when Thou comest into Thy kingdom." There was the title, the King of the Jews. This poor, suffering robber did not know what it was all about, but somehow or other he felt that that Man on the center cross ought not to have been there, and he also felt that somehow or other there was some meaning in that word King after all. He did not ask for honors or pardon; only to be remembered. "Today shalt thou be with me in paradise"—he had more than he dared ask for.

THE RENT VAIL.

"And the vail of the temple was rent in the midst." It was the thing that separated the holy of holies from the outside world. It was not needed any more. Jesus had opened up a new and living way. We can always and all of us come unto God through Him.

FRIENDS.

The women that followed Him from Galilee were there to pay their last respects. Joseph was there to see to it that He had a decent burial. Jesus always has unknown and unnumbered friends on whom He can depend in the last analysis. In bustling city and in quiet country-place there are those who are following the Master and rendering Him humble and loving service.

THE BEST IS YET TO BE.

The consolidated public school has now its right to serve the life of children against community prejudice, which wanted a school-house in walking distance of each home. We used to think that each ward of a city had to have direct voice in the city government by electing a representative to the council. When the commission form of government was proposed and with it a business of city manager, who most often is not a citizen of the city he manages, the politicians bewailed the decline of democracy. But experience has shown us the wisdom of the new method. The short ballot is coming in the States, and ought to come. It will insure efficiency, economy, and democracy, and will definitely fix responsibility on the State's chief executive officer. One of these days we will have only one legislative house. When the upper house represented the lords and the lower house the people, there was some excuse for providing two legislative houses for any general assembly. But what is the justification now? There is nothing sacred about our government or about any of the institutions that serve our life in organized form. Whenever we discover a method that promises better service to the life of men than the one we now employ, we will rise up in our sovereign rights to institute the new. That is democracy's way, that is freedom's way, that is Christ's way. Progress is the breath of our nostrils, the inspiration of our endeavors.

We find this spirit of progress in Christianity itself. We would certainly expect to find it there, because its Founder was the world's real progressive. Such confidence did He have in His followers to go forward that He promised them to send the Holy Spirit to lead them into all truth—not carefully that He said "into all truth." He also said to them that He had things to say to them which then they could not bear. The progress of the Christian centuries bears eloquent evidence to the fact that those things have been spoken and that they have been heeded; nor is He through speaking yet. As John Robinson of Pilgrim fame said, more truth is yet to burst from God's word. Let us not be vain over our achievements. Let us rather be humble in the presence of the towering possibilities that challenge us on every hand—open doors of progress for the kingdom.

It has been remarked by an incisive thinker in the field of achievements of the early Church that we have there three distinct and separate periods of advancement, represented respectively by Peter, Paul and John. Peter, he says, represents the childhood of the early Church—the period when the disciples drank in the audible words of their great Leader around the campfire or the festive board, or in the long journeys which they took afoot. They noticed His accents, asked the meanings of parables, wondered at His miracles. His every act for them was idealized. Sense impressions and externals were the important things. This, VonHuegel calls the Petrine, or childhood period of the early Church.

Paul, however, in his argumentative letter to the Romans, and likewise in his letters to the Corinthian and Ephesian groups, represents, Von Huegel says, the period of youth for the early Church. In this period their experience must be rationalized. Theology must square with the highest intellectual demands. Paul's writings (Continued on Page 15.)

One of our Chaplains in the U. S. Navy.

"If thou wilt make the Almighty thy treasure . . . then shalt thou delight thyself in the Almighty . . . and thou shalt make thy prayer unto Him and He will hear thee."—Job 22: 25-27.

BY DR. AMOS R. WELLS.

MONDAY.

WITH THE WILD ASSES.

"When his heart was lifted up . . . he was deposed from his kingly throne, . . . and his dwelling was with the wild asses."—Dan. 5:17-24.

The story of Nebuchadnezzar is told for every one of us. We also, because of our pride, may be deposed from our royal thrones and brought down to the level of the wild beasts. We also may have no other food than the grass of the fields, and our bodies may be wet with the dew of heaven. The story of the haughty king is a parable for us.

For God will teach us, by this means if by no other, that He is Lord of all. He will not yield to our silly pride, our vain ambitions. If in our hearts and lives we defy Him, He sends us to our place with the wild asses. Thus humility is a kingly gift, and pride is bestial. If we are lifted up in our own conceit, it is only to fall down into the deepest pit of shame and sorrow. Nebuchadnezzar was earth's mightiest monarch; Nebuchadnezzar was earth's most degraded slave.

Prayer.—Put far from us, O God, all vanity and arrogance. Show us ourselves as we are, and make us know our folly. Teach us how mercifully Thou dost bear with us, and grant us the grace of meekness. We ask it in the name of Thy Son. Amen.

TUESDAY.

LOOK TO YOURSELF.

"Commune with your own heart upon your bed, and be still."—Psa. 4:1-8.

A man ought to have far better warranty than most of us have when he concerns himself with any one's else life to find fault with it. Few men realize how little they really know about their neighbors or even their relatives who live in the same house.

Unless the Holy Spirit of the All-seeing and All-knowing works mightily in us, we would best confine our efforts at reform to ourselves. A life of purity, love, and strength is the best agency reform. The quiet and modest Whittier was an ideal reformer in his lines:

*"Search thine own heart. What paineth thee
In others, in thyself may be.
All dust is frail, all flesh is weak;
Be thou the true man thou dost seek."*

Prayer.—Lord, teach us to praise. Lord, give us grace to command. Lord, make us the true men we seek in others. For we would follow Thy divine example. Amen.

WEDNESDAY.

JUDGED INSANE.

"Whether we are beside ourselves, it is unto God, or whether we are of sober mind, it is unto you."—2 Cor. 5:11-19.

D. L. Moody once said, in his salty way, "In my opinion, no one is fit for God's service until he is willing to be considered mad by the world.

They said Paul was mad. I wish we had many more who were bitten with the same kind of madness." He quoted the remark of some one else to the effect that if we are mad in the Pauline fashion, we have a good keeper on the way and a good asylum at the end of the road.

Dead conformity is the enemy of all progress. Being thought queer is no proof of genius, but every genius is thought queer. Our time-worn roads twist and turn around every tree and boulder, but progress is made by striking off a straight course for one's self. Even Christ's friends went out to lay hold on Him, for they said, "He is beside Himself." If you are not beside yourself in the sense, you are not beside Christ.

This heavenly daring is a glorious insanity. This adventurous spirit that is willing to lose all things in order to find the good of God, is the supreme sanity. "Woe unto you," said Christ, "when all men speak well of you!" Woe unto us when all men declare us perfectly sensible!

Prayer.—The new path with Thee, O Thou Pioneer of the ages! The fresh, new thoughts, the brave new ways! Amen.

THURSDAY.

IN SPITE OF THE DARK.

"Though the fig-tree shall not flourish . . . and the fields shall yield no food, . . . yet I will rejoice in Jehovah."—Hab. 3:16-19.

It is easy with a full purse to trust in God; but that is not trusting in God, it is trusting in the full purse. Many think they have faith in God, but have never put the matter to the test. They have not lived through any experience that called for faith. As Bishop Boyd Carpenter says: "Faith is not born for days of sunshine only. It is the attribute of faith to believe in good in spite of evil, to believe in the light, although she is environed in the darkness." If the dark days have come to you—days of sickness, or sorrow, of failure, of threatened death—and if still you believe in God, still rest joyfully in Christ, then you may know that you have faith.

How glad must God be when we rejoice in Him! Then He knows that we are His children indeed. We are not merely His fair-weather friends. We are not His by virtue of a good bargain. We are not His through a transient experiment. We are His because we love Him and know that He loves us, and so we are His through all changing fortunes and for all of His eternity.

Prayer.—"Our faith looks up to Thee, Thou Lamb of Calvary, Saviour divine!" Our faith looks up to Thee, though it must gaze through sullen clouds. Our hearts are Thine because Thou art ours, forever and ever. Amen.

FRIDAY.

FINE FIDELITY.

"A faithful man who can find?"—Prov. 20: 1-10.

Once a Korean youth, longing for an education, came to this country and went to school in Colorado. They had a college supper which the Korean was asked to attend, but did not have the dollar charged for a ticket; so the student selling the tickets told him to take one and pay him later. A few days later, the Korean was suddenly called home because of a death in the family, and the student who gave him the ticket thought he would never see his dollar again; but about three months later he received a letter with a strange postage stamp and containing an international postal order for one dollar. At once the American student formed a different and wholly favorable idea of Koreans and of all Asiatics.

No one can estimate the far-reaching influence of a single act of honesty and faithfulness. If it is done by a Christian, the attitude of many men toward Christianity is immediately more favorable. Here is a sure method of evangelizing the world: let men see Christ imaged in your life!

Prayer.—Our Father, we pray that Thy kingdom may come, and that to that end Thy will may be done by us, Thy servants. Done humbly. Done trustingly. Done with steady fidelity. Done in the power of Jesus Christ. Amen.

SATURDAY.

"How often shall my brother sin against me, and I forgive him?"—Matt. 18:21-35.

Peter wanted to make his forgiveness of his brothers a matter of arithmetic; Christ led it out into the infinities and made it countless. Over against the vast and timeless realities of existence, any wrong done to us is such a little thing! To resent it, places us among the trivialities, whereas we belong out among the universes of time and space.

Francis Quarles put this matter clearly: "Hath any wronged thee? Be bravely revenged. Slight it, and the work is begun; forgive it, and it is finished. He is below himself that is not above an injury." Those are manly words. The happy way is to be so far above an injury that we cannot even see it. The soul is impregnable that does not know it is wounded.

Prayer.—Our Saviour, who, on the cross, in the midst of unutterable agonies, didst pray God to forgive Thy crucifiers for they knew not what they were doing, may Thy spirit of strength be ours. Bless us so gloriously that man cannot curse us. In Thy name. Amen.

SUNDAY.

THE CHRISTIAN PROOF.

"And the Spirit said unto Philip, Go near, and join thyself to this chariot."—Acts 8:26-40.

Dr. Campbell Morgan was in the midst of a series of revival services when a cabinet-maker told him of a strange thing that had happened to him. Another man had worked by his side for five years, and he got up courage to ask him to go to the meetings. Said the man, "You don't mean to say that you are a Christian!" He answered, "Yes, I am." "Well," said the man, "so am I." "Wasn't it funny?" the cabinet-maker asked Dr. Morgan. "No," was Dr. Morgan's reply; and he went on to urge both of the men to begin the Christian life in earnest, saying that it was impossible for two men, filled with the Spirit, to work side by side for five years and neither of them find it out.

If we really have the Spirit of Christ in our lives, He will say to us, as He said to Philip, "Go near, and join thyself to this chariot." He will bid us tell the nearest person about Him. It may be a queen's officer, like the Ethiopian treasurer. It may be some newsboy in the street. It may be the cook in the kitchen. Chariot or afoot, rich or poor, high or lowly, wise or ignorant, "join thyself" to him and tell him the good news of Jesus Christ.

Prayer.—Dear Lord, so fill us with Thyself that our mouth shall show forth Thy praise. So fire us with Thy love that it must burst out in ardent speech. Amen.

All life is surrounded by a great circumference of death; but to the believer in Jesus, beyond this surrounding death is a boundless sphere of life. He has only to die once to be done with death forever.—James Hamilton.

REV. JOSEPH W. FIX, Preacher.

THE LAST SUPPER.

BY REV. J. W. FIX.

"Verily, I say unto you that one of you shall betray me."—John 13:21.

(An art study of Leonardo da Vinci's "The Last Supper.")

Through the gospel narratives it is now possible to trace all the movements of Jesus, hour by hour, from Thursday afternoon till His death. All of these outstanding events are described by the sacred writers in such a way that one can almost see Him as He moved toward the cross.

The first of these events that comes before our eyes, and the one upon which we are to look today, is the Lord's Supper with His twelve disciples. According to tradition, the room in which they met was on Mt. Zion, not very far from the palace of the high priest. The room in which the supper was served was a part of the home of John Mark. Not only is this house sacred in that it was the place of the Lord's Supper, but Pentecost was there. This may truly be called "the Mother Church."

There are three famous paintings of this supper preserved for us. Each of the three artists has conceived and painted it from different angles. The picture by Justus of Ghent is nothing more than a dogma. It is said to be everything that a Lord's supper should not be. Instead of it being a representation of the gospel story, it is a piece of tangible theology. Instead of it being portrayed in an upper room, it is a scene in a Church. Angels in adoration hover over the scene. The disciples are upon their knees as if in prayer. It is a picture of the miracle of Transubstantiation. It is not our purpose to think of the Lord's Supper from this point of view; hence, let us take the picture of another.

Fritz von Uhde has painted the Lord's Supper for us as a spiritual experience. He shows us a group of men, at least four of whom are past the prime of life, sitting around a table and looking at Christ with the varied expressions that would naturally follow such a statement as Jesus has just let fall from His lips. These men are all German peasants and are enjoying a meal with their Lord. It is a real spiritual experience with Him. This masterpiece portrays the spirit of the Lord, such as may be manifest at every meal. It is a true commentary on the old German blessing at the table.

This picture is representative of a wealthy family rather than the home of an humble follower of Jesus, such as was John Mark. Everything is neat and clean. There are no signs of poverty. With raised hand, the Master sanctions the blessing upon the food. The pious wife has brought in a large dish of food and is about to explain to Jesus, their Guest, that she has done her best for Him and her family. Portrayals of the grandmother and grandfather reveal a love for Him who is their Guest. The bashful children look with curiosity upon Jesus, even as your children and mine would do were Jesus to come to dine with us. Some one has described this painting as "a family idyll set to music."

This picture teaches us the power of the mystical element in the sacrament. It also calls us to consider the spiritual experience we gain from gathering around the Lord's table once a month in our Churches and partaking of a wafer and cup of wine in memory of Him. While this form of Communion offers men and women great fellowship with Him, the picture by Von Uhde suggests to us how immeasurably more beautiful it would be if, when we gather our families about the supper table, we would just stop and be conscious that Christ was our Guest; that the seat of honor was for Him; that the Spirit of His love and cheer was there to dominate the hour. It suggests that when parents give bread to their children, they should do it "in remembrance of Him" and for His sake.

All meals to Jesus were sacred, for He made all serve His holy purposes. Today He will graciously come into our homes, if we so desire. He will hallow our daily breaking of bread and become for each of us our Bread of life. Each and every one of us need the Bread of life. It is sustaining in content and power. The physical bread lasts only for a day, but the spiritual Bread, such as Jesus offers, will abide with us and strengthen us forever and ever. Jesus is that living Bread. If this great painting of Von Uhde means nothing more to us than this supreme fact of religious experience, the work is worth while.

And now to the greatest and most popular portrayals of the Lord's Supper. I speak of the genius of Leonardo da Vinci, who has given to the world the last word on the Last Supper. In Bailey's "Gospel in Art," we have a minute description of this event in which we see not a doctrinal or sacramental supper, or not a great spiritual presentation as in the other pictures studied; rather, Da Vinci has given us a picture of Jesus and the twelve and turned it into one of the great events of the passion of our Lord.

Art critics tell us that all pictures of the Supper up until Leonardo's were but mere attempts, and all that have since followed have been imitations, for this is the work of the genius of the Lord's Supper. A more effective presentation of the thirteen men about the table has never been given to the world.

The Supper takes place in a plain room, hung 'round about with tapestries. Through the windows we catch a glimpse of a quiet and beautiful landscape, while the central window serves as a frame for the head of Christ. The side of the table near us is unoccupied, being left free for serving the meal, and also that we may view the scene. On the far side and at each end, the guests are grouped.

The artist has chosen to depict the moment when Jesus, in the center of the group, spake that terrible truth of condemnation which we have selected for our text: "Verily, I say unto you that one of you shall betray me" (John 13:21).

Let us, according to Baily, notice the effect of this statement upon the twelve, for truly these unexpected words fell upon them like an electric shock. The company divided into four distinct groups of three each as is clearly portrayed by Da Vinci's brush. Each group seems to be distinguished by some peculiar psychological state. Baily points out:

"On the extreme left are Bartholomew, James the Less, and Andrew, all speechless and dumb-founded over the announcement. Bartholomew stares incredulously; Andrew protests by holding up both his hands; James cannot believe his ears and reaches over to Peter to verify the word. In the next group, Judas recoils, smitten by his guilty conscience, from the Master and instinctively clutches his bag that has been his undoing, while in his agitation he upsets the salt cellar; Peter leans forward with breathless haste and whispers, 'Tell us who it is of whom He speaketh'; John, in utter distress, sinks back toward Peter. On the extreme right, Simon holds out both hands as if to show his utter innocence of any treachery, while Thaddeus gazes earnestly into his face, as much as to say, 'This is preposterous; He is certainly mistaken,' and Matthew says excitedly, 'But He says it is one of us!' In the right center is the most interesting group of all. Each one is bidding for the Master's attention and expressing unmistakable protest. Emotional and self-distrustful, Thomas, with finger raised almost in the face of Jesus, exclaims, 'Is it I, Lord?' James, acting surely his part as the Son of Thunder, explodes with a double gesture of horror; and Philip pours out his soul in a look of utter sincerity while he would lay open his naked heart for inspection. All this is passionate, dramatic action. It dwarfs every other representation of the scene."

Christian Orphanage

Dear Friends:

I wonder how many friends of the Christian Orphanage have remembered the Christian Orphanage in their will? If God has richly blessed you with this world's goods, plenty and to spare, what are you going to do with it when you are through with it? Will you leave it to some relations to have a good time spending it, or will you make a more lasting contribution where it will live for you after you are gone. A very wealthy man was planning a great university, to which he gave of his millions to establish and endow, and while planning it he said to a friend, "I will be looking down on this institution a thousand years from now." Let us hope he may, because he gave to mankind an institution that will be a blessing to humanity for thousands of years to come. In making your will, it would be easy to put this clause in it: "I will and bequeath to the Christian Orphanage, located at Elon College, N. C., the sum of . . . dollars for its uses and purposes."

We often read of wills being probated where all of the property is left entirely to the family or relations; nothing to their Church, which they had attended for years and loved; nothing to their college, which is training the young manhood and womanhood; nothing to their orphanage, which is giving a home and training to the homeless and helpless children. Do we take these things into our heart and thinking when we sit down to write this one important document?

We could not help but be impressed some weeks ago when we received a letter informing us that a lady had passed away and had willed the Christian Orphanage her farm. We had never met this good woman in person, but had visited her Church. She could have given this property to her relatives, but she decided to give it to help orphan children. She will live in the hearts and lives of little boys and girls that will, by her gift, be trained for useful citizens. One cannot help but appreciate such a godly spirit.

THE SUN'S PULPIT.

While every group is separated, they all seem united about that wonderful central figure who hath said, "One of you shall betray me." It is to be noticed that He sits calmly and unmoved in the midst of the turmoil and confusion that has resulted from the shocking statement of our text. His hands are spread open in innocence and He seems to be wholly surrendered to the fate that shall befall Him. Here, Da Vinci has given us a Christ, with the face of a young man under the prime of life. He has painted a beardless face, whose unconcealed contours reveal the subtlest movements of the thoughts that lie within His soul. He has painted an intellectual face, keenly alive to the meaning of the issues that lie about Him. It is also a disciplined face, one that has become subordinated to the higher will and can thus look tragedy in the eye. We see an emotional face—described as the saddest face in the history of art—a face revealing the sorrow of one who must endure betrayal at the hand of one who pretended to be a friend.

Jesus said, "I speak not of you all; I know whom I have chosen. I have not been deceived." It was impossible that Jesus should undisturbedly eat out of the same dish with the man whom He knew to have already betrayed Him. It would be unfair to the other disciples and a violence to His own feelings to allow such a man any longer to remain in their company. But our Lord does not name the traitor and publicly denounce him; but He singles him out and causes him to leave the table on his own account, and as he leaves, the other members of the group stare in wonder as to why Judas goes forth as if on a mission for Jesus. Because of a guilty conscience and an unfair act against Jesus of Nazareth, Judas could not continue to face his Lord and Master.

abound in "buts," "therefores," "nows"—the technical conjunctions of close reasoning. The Mediterranean world was adjusting its thinking, its idealism to the Christian way of life, just as every high-minded youth must adjust himself, his ideals, his thinking, his altruism to the ripening powers of adolescence.

The period of adulthood was reached for the early Church, according to VonHuegel, in the fourth gospel. John is not chiefly concerned with relating the facts of the human Christ, nor yet with arguments for His Lordship in the building of a rational theology. Fact and reason had in this second century fruited in philosophical concepts that satisfied the great life urges and aspirations of the Mediterranean peoples. John states their philosophical convictions, shows that Christ satisfies them, and clearly demonstrates what Christianity had therefore come to mean to the life of individuals and to their corporate political groupings as well. The opening words of his gospel bear convincing testimony that Greek philosophy had become Christian. "In the beginning was the Logos, and the Logos was God, and the Logos dwelt among us and became flesh"—a complete wedlock of the reigning philosophy of the time with the Christian theology and tradition.

This analogy to the plain facts of personal experience may, however, mislead us. Each individual does have prospectively at least his periods of childhood, youth, and adulthood, and then he dies. But it is not so with the institutions that serve our lives or the great spiritual verities that legitimize those institutions that support and validate them. They go on to further development, as each new generation appraises them in terms of its own experiences and reinterprets them to meet its own needs more adequately. This situation greatly troubled the poet Tennyson, who felt that God and nature were at strife, since nature seemed to him to be so determined to preserve the type, while God seemingly was careful of the individual life. The solution is found in the ongoing process we call human progress and the immortal development of the individual to which our faith gives alluring witness. We would rather rejoice that we pass from the picture as individuals, but that the work, the cause, goes on. "Blessed are the dead that die in the Lord: their works do follow them." This is not an attempt to sidestep reality. It is rather a bold facing-up to reality and a challenging utterance of a spiritual conviction that will not down. Men die. Men pass out. But institutions and causes live. They may pass through periods of development suggestive of childhood, youth and adulthood, but they do not necessarily like individuals come to the experience of death.

For example, there have been numerous periods of advance, of progress, of dynamic reformation in the Christian religion since the early Church reached its maturity, as VonHuegel expresses it in the "Fourth Gospel." Vital periods for the life of the Church are associated with the Church fathers, the Franciscan movement, the Reformation, the Catholic or counter-reformation under Loyola, the Oxford movement, the Wesleyan period, Puritanism, the missionary movement, the social gospel of our own day, the cry and tendency toward Christian union also of our day. These are only a few even of the high-lights that have meant progress and development and spiritual enrichment and increasing depth of insight for the Church. We do not understand Jesus fully yet. Note the various viewpoints of such modern interpreters of His life as Papini, Ludwig, Chesterton, Bruce Barton, and Middleton Murry. Who shall deny the validity of any one of these interpretations, and who shall say that we have no further need of fresh and original interpretations? Shall we not rather expect, as a great modern preacher puts it, that the greatest revelation of the meaning, the value, the power of God in Jesus Christ is yet to be experienced? And how better can we express that conviction than in the words of the psalmist, which we have selected as the suggestive embodiment of our approach to this matter, when he says: "The next generation has news of the Lord, His saving deeds shall be declared to generations yet unborn?"

Let me urge you not to be afraid of progress, nor of fresh and original viewpoints. Who knows but that these fresh and original interpretations are God's voice speaking enlarging truths to you and through you, for the uplift of men's hearts, for the healing of the nations? Have that confidence in dynamic, progressive living which Jesus had. He believed the best was yet to be, and so it is. He leads the way. You need not fear to follow in His footsteps. So will your golden age lie ahead. So will your best be yet to be.

ELON COLLEGE

of the

CONGREGATIONAL CHRISTIAN CHURCHES OF THE SOUTHEAST

ELON was founded to train Christian leaders for the New South.

ELON has done its task well—one graduate in seven being in the Christian ministry. The other six express Christian leadership in the various professions and vocations. Experience teaches that spiritual leadership must be indigenous.

The South is now a New South ready for an inclusive Church, the type of Church for which Elon has stood for forty years and for which she is prepared to produce capable leadership.

With no Church in the community, save the College Auditorium, ELON has practiced Christian Union for faculty, students, and community for four decades.

Its contribution to Christian Education is nationally known and approved.

Its Christian Education Building, providing laboratory facilities for religious leadership training, is unique and is the first college building of its type in the world.

ELON confines itself to undergraduate liberal arts work with that religious emphasis which befits the Christian College.

In ELON the Congregational-Christian Church has an asset of marvelous hopefulness.

The South needs her Yale, her Oberlin, her Carleton, her Pomona for the intellectual leadership of the United Church. Many regard ELON as strategically located and spiritually endowed to become such a center of illumination and leadership training.

OBITUARIES.

KERNODLE.

George A. Kernodle, Jr., second son of Mr. and Mrs. G. A. Kernodle, of Burlington, N. C., and grandson of Dr. Daniel Albright Long, of Florence, S. C., was born November 19, 1908, and was tragically taken away in an automobile accident on April 13, 1931. George had spent practically his entire life in Burlington, where he attended grammar and high school, and where he was known and appreciated by a large circle of friends. He was a young man of amiable disposition and of a number of fine traits of character. He was a member of the First Christian Church.

He is survived by his parents and the following brothers and sisters: Daniel, John Robert, and Lula Kernodle, of Burlington, and Mrs. George Hackney, of Durham, all of whom very deeply mourn his tragic going away because he was such a faithful son and devoted brother.

The funeral was held at the First Christian Church by his pastor, the rites being attended by a concourse of sorrowing relatives and friends, and interment followed in the local cemetery. May the God of all comfort and grace be especially near his loved ones in their deep sorrow and loss.

HEARD.

Rev. H. R. Heard, who was an ordained minister of the Georgia and Alabama Christian Conference, and who was living at Avendale, Ga., suffered an acute attack from which he was not able to rally, and on the evening of the 28th of April he fell asleep in Jesus and his body was laid to rest in the cemetery at Avendale, Ga.

Bro. Heard was a good man, a devoted husband, a kind father, a consecrated Christian, a fearless preacher. He loved his country, he loved his home, he loved his Church, he loved his God supremely.

EPISCOPALS BECOME CATHOLICS.—

Four clergymen of the Protestant Episcopal Church in the vicinity of New York have recently left that Church and have been received into the Roman Catholic Church. Three of them are to study for the priesthood of the Catholic Church. The ties of traditions and teachings of different Churches seem to be less and less binding on the constituency, and denominations are drawing closer together, so that individuals and Churches have a tendency to promote the spirit of Church union and fellowship.

ALUMNI DINNER.—

The annual alumni dinner and other festivities held at Union Seminary, at commencement time for next week will be attended by many graduates of this great institution. At the Tuesday morning meeting, Bishop Francis J. McConnell and Dr. William A. Brown are to address the alumni on the present situation in foreign missions. As both of these well-known leaders have spent the last few months in the Orient, their addresses will have unusual significance. At the alumni luncheon on Tuesday, the new portrait of President Henry Sloane Coffin will be unveiled.

DR. BROOKS PASSES.—

Dr. Samuel P. Brooks, president for twenty-nine years of Baylor University, Waco, Texas, died of internal cancer May 14th at sixty-seven years of age. Dr. Brooks was told about a week before his death that he had but a few days to live, and he made a valiant fight to sign the diplomas for the students to be graduated the following week, although his physician told him that the least exertion might shorten his life. More than half the diplomas were left unsigned. Dr. George W. Truett, of Dallas, and Dr. J. M. Dawson, of Waco, officiated at the funeral services.

NEW RADIO VOICE.—

A new voice will be heard over the air in the summer schedule of religious services arranged by the Federal Council of Churches. The Rev. Frederick H. Knubel, president of the United Lutheran Church of America and probably the best-known Lutheran in the country, will be the speaker over WEA and associated stations during the second half of the summer season at the Sunday forum hour from 4 to 5. During the first half of the season, Dr. Stockman, of the Madison Avenue Methodist Church, will be the speaker. Many will hear these distinguished speakers with pleasure and profit during the summer season.

DR. FELIX ADLER.—

The venerable Felix Adler, founder of the Ethical Culture Society, last Sunday week delivered the address commemorating the fifty-fifth anniversary of the founding of the society. In the course of his address, he uttered words of ripe wisdom very much needed by most of us today. He said, "People today seem to forget that it takes both happiness and suffering for spiritual growth. Today there isn't a movement which isn't infected with happiness. There is not one that is not infected with pain, and it takes the sunshine and the shadows to produce the most beautiful pictures of life."

YOUTH CONFERENCE.—

Nearly two hundred workers among young people, and young people themselves, met at Winona two weeks ago in the fourth annual State young people's conference, under the auspices of the Minnesota Council of Religious Education. The promotion of summer camps, the development of self-governing groups of youth in religious activities were among the topics discussed. No State-wide organization in Minnesota is doing more valuable service than this youth conference. It would be a great stimulus to the promotion of interest among the young people of any State in religious education if similar conferences could be held in all the States.

FELLOWSHIP MEETING.—

The close fellowship existing between the Congregational and the Disciples Churches in New York State was manifested at the second joint convention held May 19-21 at First-Pilgrim Congregational Church, Buffalo. Among the speakers were Rev. A. E. Cory, secretary of the U. C. M. S. of the Disciples; Rev. Jay T. Stocking, of Pilgrim Congregational Church, St. Louis; Pres. Charles T. Paul, of the Disciples College of Missions; Pres. Robbins W. Barstow, of Hartford Seminary; Margaret Slattery, of Boston, and Raymond Robbins, of New York City. Such fellowship and joint communion in convention will promote unity among Christian people of different faiths.

AMERICAN MISSIONS.—

According to a recent message issued by the Home Missions Council of North America, there are 10,000 villages in this country without Churches of any kind, 30,000 villages without resident pastors of any faith, and more than thirteen million children receiving no religious instruction. At this rate, with our public school system teaching nothing about the religious life, and many of our colleges doing nothing in religious education, and many of our Sunday Schools and Churches doing very poor work in the religious instruction of the young, America will soon become paganized for the ethical life of many of the younger generation is becoming more and more devoted to other things than religion.

INSTITUTE INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS.—

An institute of international relations will be held, under the auspices of the American Friends Service Committee, at Haverford College, June 8-20th. Three basic courses will be offered, with classes covering economic, political and spiritual aspects of the effort for world peace. Among the lecturers engaged for the sessions are Prof. H. J. Cadbury, of Bryn Mawr; Rev. Leyton Richards, of Birmingham, Eng.; Dr. H. F. Fraser, professor of economics at Swarthmore, and Dr. Edward W. Evans, instructor in international law at the University of Pennsylvania. It has been characteristic of the Friends Church to promote peace among men as opposed to war since their origin under George Fox. They have the inner light as a religious experience, and this light of God guides them to the Prince of Peace.

FEDERATION SECRETARY.—

Dr. Clair E. Ames, for ten years pastor of the Linden Hills Congregational Church, Minnesota, has been elected secretary of the Minneapolis Church Federation, to give full time to its activities and organization. The federation is, at the present moment, in the midst of a campaign to raise $32,000 for its program during the ensuing year. This program represents a considerable enlargement of activities, chief among which is the extension of week-day religious education through its public schools. Dr. Ames, the newly elected executive secretary, is a veteran in this type of work, having served at one time with the St. Louis Church Federation. A group of the most aggressive and influential laymen of the city are affiliated with the federation, and its prospects for the year ahead are excellent. If such work can be done in Minnesota, why can it not be done in other States rather than rear and educate our children as pagans in education in a Christian land.

ADVENTIST PROSELYTING.—

Among the factors contributing to what many observers wish to call a renascence of religion in the orthodox world are religious movements among peasants. In some countries these are very strong and growing rapidly. In one country, a group of fifty of its leaders has just completed a two-week training school under the direction of Bishop Nicolai, well known to many Americans. The visitor was struck by the almost cyclopedic knowledge that these peasant leaders have, first of the Bible, and secondly of patristic literature. Although most of them have only a common school education, their practical acquaintance with Holy Writ would compare favorably with that of many seminary graduates. One main topic for discussion in the school was the best method to use in countering the widespread propaganda of the Adventists. This sect has had enough success in making Adventist Christians out of orthodox Christians to cause orthodox leaders some concern. They may be great missionary workers, but such missionary work adds nothing to the kingdom.

NOTES-PERSONALS

Rev. J. W. Patton was with the pastor, Dr. P. H. Fleming, and preached at Union Ridge to a great audience on the fourth Sunday at 11 A. M. At the close of the service, two young men were ordained deacons of the Church.

Pastor G. C. Crutchfield is greatly rejoiced over paying off the $1,000 note and indebtedness formerly against Lynchburg Church. It was a glad day when the note was paid in full, canceled and burned. Bro. Crutchfield reports the Church on the forward march and working harmoniously. A series of evangelistic meetings begins this week, Dr. C. C. Ryan, Richmond, Va., doing the preaching.

The trustees of Elon did not elect a president for the college to succeed Dr. W. A. Harper, who retired, but appointed a committee to consider the qualifications, the needs and the possibilities and to report at the annual meeting in February, 1932. Till a president is selected, the college is to function through responsible committees of finance, of administration, and of college and faculty activities.

Rev. J. L. Neese closed a two weeks' meeting Monday night, May 25th, at Palm Street Church, Greensboro. There were about twenty-five professions, and there will be several additions to the Church from the results of the meeting. Bro. Neese did the preaching throughout the meeting. Wednesday, June 3rd, Bro. Neese begins a meeting at Pleasant Ridge Church. Rev. L. A. Nall will assist him in this meeting.

Rev. O. D. Poythress, South Norfolk, Va., writes: "We plan to have the sixth anniversary service of the opening of our new Church on the third Sunday in June, which is the 21st. We are hoping and praying to be able to secure sufficient funds on that date to meet our annual interest payment; also additional funds with which to pay the interest on the short-time indebtedness for the next six months. Our work is moving forward with encouragement, in spite of the severe depression. A great many folks are still out of work, some working part time, but the interest and attendance still holds up." Bro. Poythress and his people have learned what self-denial means for the sake of the kingdom.

Rev. P. T. Klapp, Elon College, passed away on the morning of May 28th, at 8 o'clock. The funeral was in charge of the editor of THE SUN, assisted by Revs. J. U. Newman, R. M. Ricketts and J. W. Patton. There were some sixteen or more ministers at the funeral who were honorary pall-bearers. Owing to the illness of the wife of the deceased, the funeral services were conducted at the home and the interment was in the Elon Cemetery. Our editorial columns carry a tribute of praise, even if an inadequate one, to this worthy man, and our other columns carry a summary of his deeds in the ministry furnished by the deceased to be read at his funeral. The widow, the three daughters, and the two sons have our sympathy in this time of their bereavement.

ELON FACULTY MEETS.

The Elon College faculty met on the morning of May 29th, in the first session of the new academic year, with the new chairman of the faculty, Prof. J. W. Barney, presiding, for the purpose of organizing and attending to matters necessary for next year's school term.

C. M. Cannon, registrar of the college, was elected secretary, and two committees were set up for special items and the old committees continued until next fall.

The faculty unanimously passed the following resolution as presented by Dr. J. U. Newman, professor of Bible and Greek, who is the senior member of the faculty: "That the faculty of Elon College express its appreciation of the arduous work done and the twenty-six years of service rendered Elon College by our retiring president, and wish him many years of happiness and success in an enlarging field of usefulness."

C. M. CANNON.

RESOLUTIONS OF APPRECIATION.

Dr. William A. Harper, the fourth president of Elon College, according to public announcement, with the meeting of the trustees on May 26, 1931, voluntarily retires from its presidency after a continued service of twenty years, or one-half of the corporate life of this institution.

He entered upon his duties at a period of most creditable achievement on the part of those who had preceded him, but while the college was yet in its infancy, with meagre equipment and little known beyond the bounds of our own communion. Notwithstanding these conditions, he assumed this heavy responsibility with the devoutness of vision of a great prophet and leader.

The achievements in the matter of physical equipment on this campus are obvious. Be it said that no college needs in this country have been more abundantly provided for, nor commendably designed and arranged, and we believe that in the succeeding days this group of buildings and grounds will become a place of interest to which pilgrimages will be made by those in search of beautiful educational centers. We here record that this success is sufficient for any administration; but aside from this, he has greatly enlarged its usefulness as a laboratory of culture, broadened its constituency, and correspondingly its support, until now it has a clientele that compares favorably with kindred colleges of the South. Potential candidates for literary degrees in this area are quite ready to give the same consideration to what this college has to offer them, as other colleges established for a like purpose. This clearly indicates the position we now occupy.

The gaining of this prestige has been largely through the very remarkable gifts of mind, and manner, the consecration of purpose and the untiring efforts of this great personality, William A. Harper. Linked inseparably with this man has been the charming inspiration of Mrs. Harper, with whose contribution these achievements would have been impossible.

This association, representing as it does those who have come under the influence of this institution, without respect to their scholastic achievements, hereby records its admiration for the outstanding results of this educational, executive, civic and Christian leader, and its appreciation of the advances of this college during the twenty years of his incumbency.

The retiring president and Mrs. Harper carry with them our love, our blessings and our benediction into whatever field they may enter.

Adopted by the General Alumni Association, in session at Elon College, May 25, 1931.

JUNE CRADLE ROLL RALLY.

It is almost June again. The very best month of all for us who are interested in cradle roll activities. Already we are planning for our annual rally day party, when all the little children from infancy to six years of age come together, bringing their well-filled mite-boxes for an afternoon of joy and learning. Let us strive earnestly to make this occasion one of missionary inspiration and instruction. No Church or Sunday School (it makes little difference under which it is conducted) should neglect to make definite provision for this phase of the child's early religious nurture.

It is not too late to organize and have your rally in June. From J. O. Atkinson, Mission Secretary, Elon College, N. C., you may obtain the cradle roll mite-boxes. Begin to talk about your party and send as attractive invitations as possible. A spacious lawn, conveniently located, proves a nice place, especially where there are a large number of children. The Sunday School room, attractively decorated with flowers, may be used.

The program should be arranged to suit the place and conditions where the service is to be held, varying with the ages of children participating. For this reason, I am not attempting to give a program, but shall be glad to help any one who cares to write to me. I would suggest that you use the songs already familiar to children which they enjoy so much; also readings and Bible verses of a missionary nature. (For suggested programs, also see THE CHRISTIAN SUN, page 9, May 21.)

Though each of you are interested in reaching your financial goal, and impressing the little minds that it is more blessed to give than receive, our highest aim must be to acquaint them with the Babe of Bethlehem, Jesus, who grew in statue and in favor with God and man, and said "Let the little children come unto me, and forbid them not, for of such is the kingdom of heaven."

MRS. ROSA M. ROTHGEB.

MISSIONARY RALLIES.

The New Hope and Roanoke districts, in Alabama, held its rally with Roanoke First Christian Church Tuesday, May 12th. The attendance was not what we were expecting, but we had a good rally day. The entire program was splendid. The following ministers were present: Revs. W. T. Meacham, G. D. Hunt, G. H. Veasey and J. O. Atkinson. This added to the success of the day. We are indeed grateful to Dr. Atkinson for his presence and help. Dr. Atkinson made a splendid address on missions which was very much enjoyed. We hope that the Lord will continue to give health and strength to this great man in the mission work. It would be worth while if we would do more to help him in this work.

"Meeting Changing Conditions," by Mrs. Paul Beaird, was very good; also "Rapid Changing Orient," by Miss Waldrop, and "Our New Fields," by Mrs. T. B. Royston.

A round-table discussion, led by Rev. G. D. Hunt, was very helpful. The same secretary was re-elected. A new leader, Miss Mary Jenkins, Roanoke, Ala., was elected.

We hope that more will co-operate with us in this work, and that greater things may be accomplished in the future, although we appreciate the interest that has already been shown. We hope that every pastor will do his best to create a stronger missionary spirit in his Church.

We are indeed grateful to the ladies of Roanoke for their hospitality during the day, and especially the bountiful dinner served. I hope we can give good co-operation to Mrs. V. E. Kitchens, who is so faithful in the work. May the Lord give her strength and courage to do what He would have her do.

We adjourned to meet next year with Antioch Church. Plan now to be there with a good report.

CONGREGATIONAL NEWS

REV. E. C. GILLETTE, Editor; REV. F. P. ENSMINGER, and REV. M. J. SWEET, Associates.

SANFORD, FLA.: The Mothers' Day program in this Church was conducted entirely by the young folks, even to the sermon and prayer. Many fine compliments were received.

REV. THOS. H. DERRICK, pastor of the Congregational Church at Orange City, Fla., as a member of the hospital committee of the Spanish War Veterans, recently made a trip to Key West for the inspection of the U. S. A. Naval Hospital and to carry good cheer to the veterans.

NEW LIGHT CHURCH, Doerun, is likely to be the first Church in Georgia fully to carry out the suggestion of the State Conference to reorganize by adopting a new constitution and by-laws. This is not forgetting the fine work of the Macedonia Church, which did this very thing last fall; but that Church had started to reorganize before the State Conference made its recommendation. Other Churches are working along the same line and this is another omen of progress.

EAST LAKE CHURCH, Chattanooga, Tenn., laid the corner-stone of its new building May 24, at 3 P. M. Dr. M. S. Freeman spoke. The building is being erected on Fourteenth Avenue, at Thirty-second Street. It faces the lake one block south. The new lot on which the Church is located is 360 feet by 150 feet. The Church will be built of brick and stucco. It will have a basement, Sunday School rooms, and an auditorium. The pastor, Rev. George W. Blount, and the Church are to be congratulated for this forward step.

HIGH SCHOOL auditorium was practically filled to capacity by the crowd who greeted the pastor-at-large, Rev. Milo J. Sweet, when he preached the graduating sermon Sunday morning, May 24th. The pastor and deacons of Union Hill Church shared in the program. The sermon subject was "The Joy of Achievement," and the crowd seemed well pleased and satisfied. The senior class contained thirteen members, two of them members of the Union Hill Church. This is the first time a Congregational minister has preached at these services for many years.

PALM CITY, FLA.: Mrs. W. W. Gulick recently entertained the Congregational Church Aid at an all-day meeting at her home. This was a sewing-bee for the Tampa mission and the time was spent in making dresses and other articles of clothing for the little children of this Congregational center. At noon a covered dish luncheon was served. Rev. James E. Parker, pastor of the Church, with Mrs. Parker and their son, James Treat, left recently for their home in Spencer, Iowa, for their usual vacation. Rev. H. H. Jones, of Stuart, will supply the pulpit in the absence of Mr. Parker.

MELBOURNE, FLA.: Rev. Geo. L. Hanscom, D. D., who has been pastor of this Church for the past six years, retired from service on June 1st. Dr. Hanscom has served in notable pastorates for forty-four years and leaves Melbourne with the high esteem and best wishes of a host of friends. He and Mrs. Hanscom will make their home in Mount Dora, Fla. Under the leadership of Dr. Hanscom, the Church at Melbourne was enlarged and entirely rebuilt. The Church has extended a call to the Rev. Orville D. Ullom, who, at the present time, is assistant minister to Dr. Elisha A. King, Miama Beach. Mr. Ullom is a graduate of Hartford Seminary and has served in the State for three years. He is considered one of our best workers among young people.

VACATION CHURCH SCHOOLS: Two student summer workers, Miss Rosie Gill and Miss Ina Adams, will, with Miss Annie Campbell, conduct a vacation Church school at Union Hill Church the week of June 1-6. Both girls are from Piedmont College. Miss Adams' home is in South Alabama, and Miss Gill is from Meansville, Ga. They will also conduct a one-week school at Friendship Church, Baxley, Ga., June 6-13, and at Antioch Church, Bristol, Ga., June 13-20. Poplar Arbor, Whitehall and New Light have recently had such schools conducted under the leadership of Miss Campbell. It is hoped and planned that every Georgia Church may have such a school during this year.

SIGNS OF THE TIMES: When Ambrose Christian Church and New Light Congregational Church and Vanceville Christian Church unanimously vote to unite with other Congregational and Christian Churches which are considering the same proposition of grouping for increased efficiency and power, it is a sign of genuine progress. While these Churches may not be grouped together, for there will be two groups of about three or four Churches in each group when the matter is finally adjusted, yet they are setting the pace and marking the trail along which many other Churches similarly associated will eventually take. It is a good sign. Wherever a Congregational Church is located near a Christian Church and both of them not very strong, many of the most devoted believe the time will not be long when they will unite or combine forces and march forward.

YOUNG PEOPLE get together at Union Hill Congregational Church, Pearson, Ga., May 30-31, under the direction of Miss Annie R. Campbell, extension worker in Georgia. The plan is to have groups of young people from several Churches prepare to put on the program almost entirely by themselves. For example, Friendship Church, Baxley, will take charge of the entire morning Church service Sunday morning, preaching and all. The Communion service, of course, will be administered by an ordained minister, assisted by young people who have been coached to take the part. The group from Poplar Arbor Church will put on a pageant, the Ambrose Christian Church will present our educational institutions, while New Light will demonstrate an ideal Christian Endeavor meeting; subject, "Adventuring With Christ." The pastor-at-large, Rev. M. J. Sweet, will demonstrate how a Church can organize, actually directing the young people in the organization of a Church Saturday afternoon. The Enigma Church has charge of worship Saturday morning; the Cochran Church will present "Our Religious Papers," and the Whitehall Church will lead in worship Sunday afternoon. Recreation will be in charge of another group, and Pearson group will show the way to perfect hospitality by entertaining everybody through the two days. One of the most "looked-forward-to" hours is the one Miss Pattie Lee Coghill, the Florida director of young people's work, will lead. Georgia young people are most happy to have this young woman in their midst. And besides her, the Conference will be graced with the presence of a national secretary of the Christian Endeavor Society, Mr. Roy Breg, who will assist in many events.

HANKS CHAPEL.

On Friday night, May 22, a Ladies' Missionary Society was organized at Hanks Chapel. Mrs. Ross, the district leader, was present and assisted in the organization. Mrs. Elizabeth White was elected president. A severe cloud prevented many from attending; however, there were nine ladies enrolled in this initial meeting.

Hundreds of people attended the memorial occasion on Sunday. A program was presented by the children during the Sunday School hour. The morning service was concluded with a sermon by the pastor. Dinner was provided for all. The afternoon service was a variety of singing and speaking.

At the beginning of the evening service, Mr. Rowland Farrell made a motion that we organize a Christian Endeavor Society. This motion met the approval of the congregation and the society was organized at that time. Mr. Ralph Riddle was elected president. We believe that these two organizations stand on the threshold of a romantic history.

ROBERT L. HOUSE.

OPPORTUNITIES AT NASHVILLE.

Visitors to Nashville were interested in the many and varied opportunities for training to be found in this university center where it has been said that there are more teachers of religious education than in any other one educational center in America. The meetings of the Regional Committee and Advisory Board were held at the Southern Y. M. C. A. Graduate School, which is one of three of its kind in the country. The educational advantages of this center were brought out by this description: "Standing here in this interdenominational institution, which trains leaders for the development of body as well as mind and spirit, one glances to the rear on his right at a college for the training of missionaries—Scarritt. On the right in front is the School of Commerce of Vanderbilt University; then the School of Law; then the undergraduate department of the university. Immediately in front is Wesley Hall, the seat of the School of Religion, in which is our own Congregational Foundation, the Atlanta Theological Seminary Foundation, and the Disciple Foundation, and which has an interdenominational faculty. Then comes the great Vanderbilt Medical School and Hospital and Nurses' Training School, which is backed by financial assets of $15,000,000. To the left is the George Peabody College for teachers, which rates in the South with Columbia of New York, and not only is full for the school year, but gathers teachers from the whole South for two summer sessions. In the foreground, on the left, is the Demonstration High School of Peabody College, where, among other patrons, fifty physicians pay tuition for their children. To the left, at the rear and completing the circle, is Collegeseide House, which is said by Secretary Stock to have as good a building for a student center as we have in the land. These educational facilities, already furnished, are at the disposal of students, and our Collegeseide Church is making a fine contribution to the ideals and fellowship of the university community.

HITTING THE OREGON TRAIL.

From June 25th to July 3rd comes the National Council of the Congregational Churches and the General Convention of the Christian Church in joint meeting at the Plymouth Church, Seattle, Wash. On Friday, June 26th, at 2 P. M., the American Board will hold its 122nd annual meeting, and on Tuesday evening, June 30th, there will be inspirational messages from foreign missionaries.

HARPER*S. C. HARRELL J. E. McCAULEY*NEWS EDITOR*W. C. WICKER*PRINCIPLES OF THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

- (1) The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
- (2) Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.
- (3) The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
- (4) Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship and of Church membership.
- (5) The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by, all.

THE PURPOSE OF THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

The purpose of this Church is to cultivate a spirit of union among the followers of our Lord Jesus Christ of every persuasion, and to secure, if possible, the associate efforts of all true religious teachers in pointing the wicked to "the Lamb of God who taketh away the sin of the world."

The peculiar doctrines and tenets which have confused and distracted the Christian world are remanded to private judgment, and hence cease to be matters for debate, only in so far as may be necessary to prevent a sectarian influence from entering the Church.

This Church requires no compromise of faith on the part of any child of God in order to communion or fellowship; here, denominational distinctions cease to exist, and Christian love binds the brotherhood together.

The purpose of this Church will be consummated in the conversion of the world and the union of all Christians.

ELON COLLEGE COMMENCEMENT.

Papers setting forth in more or less detail the outstanding events of the commencement have been furnished by Mr. C. M. Cannon, college correspondent, and are presented elsewhere in THE SUN this week, except the president's baccalaureate address which was printed in full in last week's SUN. Those of us who live at Elon and attend the commencement exercises from year to year have a habit of saying "This was the best commencement yet." Possibly that is because we forget, and the present looms up and, in a measure, obscure others. But for dignity, worth and weight of expression; for a revelation of modern and actual conditions of thought and society at present, the three outstanding utterances of this commencement seemed to be unsurpassed, even if equaled, in other similar occasions. Dr. Harper, in his final baccalaureate address, was responsive to this spirit and revealed it in choosing for his topic, "The Best is Yet to Be," and declaring from Holy Writ, "The next generation has news of the Lord; His saving deeds shall be declared to generations yet unborn." In this utterance, President Harper touched modern conditions of thought, especially in the educational world, and dwelt with particular emphasis upon the changes that are taking place, and the outstanding fact that in the world of education, of culture and scholarship, doors are not closed, and the best is yet to be. He believes that the changes of the present portend good for the future, and that the efforts and mental activities of scholars, especially those dedicated to culture and academic effort to uplift humanity, will reveal that the next generation has, and will have, news from the Lord.

Dr. Stafford, in his baccalaureate sermon to the graduating class and the public on Sunday morning, set forth the present effort to grasp the wisdom from a mental point of view of Jesus as Seer as well as Saviour. He insisted that our modern day is seeking to interpret the mental attitude of our Lord to changing conditions, to conditions and problems which confront us today, and declared that this Man of Galilee had a mental grasp and insight not equaled even by that of Plato or Socrates. A strange thing it is that an humble man, working in a shop at Nazareth, should come forth and measure intellects, philosophic insight, mental breadth and sweep, surpassing that of any mental giant that had ever lived before Him or has ever lived since. Jesus, in the light of this insight, has a message for our day, and that message is that material values are not enough; that they are not even the best values. There are moral and spiritual values, and these are the best, the biggest and most essential. What Jesus meant in saying, "Seek first the kingdom of God and His righteousness," was to seek first these eternal values, these priceless values, and lay them down as the working basis of life and as the supreme thing in life. In the kingdom of heaven the eternal values come first.

Then on graduation day, as is shown in the outline elsewhere presented, Mr. Ivy Lee brought a message of similar type from the economic world, declaring that there is upheaval at present, and that we are in a state of uncertainty and transition in the world of economics. His position and plea were that economic stability and security can be brought about solely through the application of mentally and morally consecrated brain and mind to the task of proper adjustments between individuals in human society. The present economic condition, while bad, is not hopeless and can be clarified, stabilized, made secure only by the application of sound and safe moral and spiritual principles to the principles of economy, as applied to industry and also to national and international relationships.

The three utterances fitting into each other were a source of information and enlightenment to the great throngs who attended. As the outline of Mrs. Rainey's address, on behalf of the Alumni Association, printed elsewhere, will show, education must contribute its part, and will contribute its part, in rich dividends to the solution of modern problems, if we are to have the best for our human interests. These addresses were grappling with problems of immediate worth and merit, and in this particular made the forty-first commencement one of immeasurable merit and worth. The spirit of the occasion was delightful, the fellowship was glad and sweet. Students of former days visited alma mater, friends and loved ones of the forty-nine graduates and one receiving a diploma in fine arts and two a certificate in piano, came from far and near.

If one doubts whether "dear old Elon" is entrenched in the hearts of hundreds and thousands, let that one attend a commencement exercise and catch the spirit of the occasion, and as possibly at no other time, one can see that men and women are tremendously in earnest, and are intense not only in their love for the college, but in their determination, by the consecration and dedication of the best that is in them, that Elon shall live and go forward and bear witness to the valedictory message of her retiring president, "The Best is Yet to Be." One devoted alumnus and outstanding minister in the Church, who was close to the writer at the close of an exercise, laid his hand on the writer's arm, looked into his eyes, and said with a devotion that cannot be mistaken, "Atkinson, Elon must carry on, and in the name of God and through the consecration of a devoted people and a living Church, she will carry on."

J. O. A.

OUR ELON.

Dr. W. A. Harper ceased, by his own motion and unyielding decision, to be president of Elon College, as he had previously announced, with the close of the present collegiate year. The trustees were in no position to elect a successor. A committee was appointed to take under advisement the matter of finding a man who would be deemed a suitable successor to Dr. Harper. This committee is to report at the next regular meeting of the board, in February, 1932. Till that time, and until his successor shall take charge, the many duties of administering the affairs of the college will be shared and carried on by several. First of all, there is to be a chairman of the faculty who, through his deans and faculty, will be charged with responsibility of faculty administration. Matters that pertain to the conduct of the college, so far as its faculty and student activities are concerned. Then, secondly, there is a committee of finance who, when it begins to function, is to be charged with the responsibility of financing the institution, laying out financial policies and plans for the institution, securing, investing and directing the financial affairs of the college. And then there is an executive committee empowered by the trustees to act with authority in allocating to the departments questions and functions pertaining to each, and to administer the affairs of the institution in place of a president, in so far as those affairs are not administered through properly delegated authorities. In brief, the trustees, as we understand it, sought to institute authority that should carry on the institution and cover every detail of its administration until such time as a president has been selected and installed. While there was the deepest regret that Dr. Harper found it impossible to continue as president longer, there is the same determination and desire to carry on the affairs of the institution as a Christian college, as an institution in which Christian character shall have the privilege of developing, and to leave no effort undone and no stone unturned to continue the college in its career of growth and usefulness of power and of permanence as a Christian college.

To this end, every minister in the Christian Church, every alumnus of the college, every friend of Christian education, is assured that the best that can be done under the circumstances is being done to make Elon College a Christian institution, and to carry out the high and holy purposes for which it was founded, and which has characterized it through the years, and to summons these ministers, the alumni and the friends of education to rally to the support of the college by giving to it a continuation of their loyalty, their support, their patronage, their prayers. As President Harper so truly pointed out, "individuals pass out, but institutions go on." Elon College is an institution strongly entrenched in the lives and in the affections of an ever-increasing multitude of men and women who will not let its influence grow less, nor its life and labors become impaired or crippled even for a season. All the friends of the college, and they are legion, should feel that each and all have a personal responsibility now to share in the burden which is too great for any man, and which no man, however strong, can carry continuously. God bless Elon College and the work it has done, and the better work it is yet to do in the field of education that is truly education, which means Christian education.

THE CHRISTIAN SUN.

THE CHRISTIAN SUN is the organ of the Southern Christian Convention and was established by Rev. Daniel W. Kerr, in 1844. It is, therefore, in its 87th year. At the present time, it has seven contributing editors, a managing editor, Dr. P. J.

Kernodle, and a circulating manager, C. D. Johnston. The contributing editors receive no pay for service and the managing editor and the circulating manager serve in the same way, without pay for their service. All this information may be found at the top of the left-hand corner of the last page of THE SUN. This is written to suggest to all families holding membership in the Southern Christian Convention to consider it their privilege and obligation to subscribe for this good Church paper. It is in closer touch with the membership of the Church than any other Church paper. Those who subscribe for and read THE CHRISTIAN SUN are among the most useful and the most liberal members of the Christian Church. Now is the time to consider membership obligation to support the Church paper by subscribing for THE CHRISTIAN SUN at the cost of $2.00 per year. It comes to the subscriber at 4 cents a week, and there is nothing published worth as much to the members of the Christian Church as this good paper. It has never been known that a regular reader of THE SUN was disloyal to the Church or unfaithful in its service.

One suggestion might be made to the pastors in the Southern Christian Convention, and that is that each pastor would send to THE CHRISTIAN SUN, 1536 East Broad Street, Richmond, Va., items about their Churches, Sunday Schools, attendance at regular services, support for current expenses, and contributions to Orphanage and missions. It would be interesting to read of some small country Church, having a full Sunday School, large attendance at regular services, and liberal contributions to the calls of the Church. It is understood that the most useful members of city Churches come from some country Church; and it would cheer all readers to see reports of what country Churches are doing. Country preachers, like country people, are too backward in telling the whole Church what they are doing for the Lord. Take time, dear country pastor, to tell what your Church is doing. Jesus was a country preacher and it is the finest place for Jesus to do His work through the country Church. All the great men of the world come from the country; and Jesus, as a Babe, was laid in a manger and spent thirty years of His life in a small village.

W. W. S.

AND NOW HE RESTS.

On the morning of May 28, 1931, at his home near Elon College, N. C., Rev. Peter Thomas Klapp fell on sleep. His pilgrimage on earth numbered eighty-three years, ten months and two days. It was in August, 1865, at Apple's Chapel, in Guilford County, where, according to his own statement, he professed faith in a living Christ, and from that day till he breathed his last he felt himself under command with marching orders from his Lord. Even before his conversion, he often told us "he had a great desire to preach and win souls to Christ." From this desire he never departed throughout his entire career. If any man ever had a passion for souls, if any man ever had devoutness of heart, if any man ever had consecration of purpose and of person to the kingdom of God and the Christ who saved him, that man was Rev. P. T. Klapp. He may have erred in judgment; that is human. Because of the limitations of the flesh, no mortal escapes that. He was human. Those mistakes, when he made them, he attributed to himself and to the limitations of his mind and body. When he achieved, in the name of his Lord, and when he was used to win men to Christ and to carry forward the work of the Church and the Lord, he attributed that not to any power of his own, but solely to the power of his Lord. Many who worked with him in Church and Conferences may have often differed with him in opinions and in points of view, but no man who knew him and worked with him could ever question his consecration or doubt the depths of his devotion to his Lord and to the good of the Church as he saw it.

First of all, he was a man of tireless energy. God endowed his body and mind with a certain dynamic that drove him on and on, and sustained him through the years in a marked and marvelous manner. He was a man of boundless energy.

And then he was a man of piety and of purpose. His personal piety led him to deny himself with offerings, with efforts, with labors abundant, in season and out of season, to deny himself comforts and privileges and pleasures, all for his Lord. The one purpose that ever seemed to possess P. T. Klapp was that of preaching, proclaiming and portraying, at all times and under all conditions, that Jesus Christ was the Son of the living God, and the Holy Ghost, the third Person of the Trinity, was a living Person in the world here to comfort, to guide, to sustain and to keep. This purpose becomes also a passion, and so in season and out of season he lost no occasion to make known the fact that he was a minister of God, servant of the Most High, willing to live and to die for his Lord.

And then, too, he was a man of convictions. From these convictions he never wavered. They were too deep, too firm, too fixed, to let him go, and once he had a conviction of daring and of duty, he followed that conviction, whether it led him to praise or censure, popularity or unpopularity, applause or rejection. His hand once given to a cause, his heart once dedicated to a course, his soul once enamored of a duty, he held to his convictions, regardless of consequences, regarding all things as but loss, if he might but win Christ and reveal Him to others in the way that Christ was revealed to him.

Elsewhere in THE SUN will be found a summary of his life's work, which summary he prepared a few weeks before he passed to the heavenly home. That summary will show that he blazed the way in our Southern Christian Convention for the work of foreign missions, when such a work was unpopular and unpatronized; that he planted Churches, preached the Word, won souls to Christ, and performed such service for his Lord as could have only been performed by a man whose life was wholly dedicated to the single purpose of serving his Lord. Truly a good man has lived out his days amongst us and leaves behind a memory that we shall cherish through the years and a record that neither the living nor the dead can be ashamed of. One wonders how a man could accomplish so much. The only answer is that he was possessed of a single purpose, and that he consecrated all the powers of his body, mind and soul to the pursuit of that purpose.

God rest his soul, and give the rest of us strength and wisdom to carry on, that our days may be full of deeds, and of daring, and of duty, for our Lord and His Christ.

CONSULTING THE SOURCES OF WISDOM.

We are now being told why peoples of many countries, Orientals in particular, are coming to discredit the civilization and despise the achievements of America. These countries are getting our movies, and millions of their youth are daily feeding their minds and their imaginations on what they see in the "cinema," and taking these to be real revelations of our American life and daily activities. Added to this the crimes in America, which find their way in streaming headlines across the front page of the daily press, and the dastardly deeds of gunmen and gangsters, are flashed across the world, and are taken to be the real life we live here in America, and the deeds that are our chief occupation and delight. An editorial in an Oriental paper of wide circulation recently set forth the notorious Al. Capone, of Chicago, "as the typical American gentleman, the hero of the hour, the man of parts and power."

The world, the Oriental world in particular, is considering us and taking counsel about us, are consulting the sources of our unwisdom and folly, rather than the sources of our wisdom and sanity. The fact is that even we ourselves spend much of our energy and effort consulting many other sources than the real and actual sources of wisdom. "When the Queen of Sheba heard of the fame of Solomon concerning the name of the Lord, she came to prove him." The Queen of Sheba, in her day, was wise. She went to a source of wisdom in order to get wisdom.

There are sources of wisdom yet remaining in the world. The wisest book ever written is the Word of God. How very few of us, comparatively speaking, turn to its pages, the very soul and source of wisdom, in order to consult them about wisdom, even the wisdom for our own guidance through the day. The wisest words that fall from the lips of mankind are the words from the men of God, who, on the Sabbath Day, stand up in crass-room and in pulpit to tell men and women, young and old, the old story of the gospel, a source of infinite wisdom to all who come to consult it. And yet how few, comparatively speaking, there are who seek the Church on the Holy Sabbath as a source of wisdom!

The wisest of institutions created by divine appointment, even the Sabbath Day itself, is a source of wisdom to all who accept it and keep it sacred and solemn as such; and yet how many there are who, instead of turning to the day to get wisdom from it, turn instead to the ways of unwisdom, to the frivolities of the world instead of the wisdom of God. "The fear of the Lord is the beginning of wisdom." And yet how few, comparatively speaking, come into His presence with awe, reverential awe, and fear, so that in humility and devotion and consecration of heart and soul, they may get wisdom for the way of life and the activities of the week to follow.

There are yet sources of wisdom if we will but seek and consult those sources and walk in the way thereof. A very, very long time ago a very wise one, writing in the heat of a holy passion and in the light of a heavenly flame, said: "He that winneth souls is wise." When we are seeking to win souls to the way of righteousness and to the better life, we are consulting every source of wisdom and preparing our own hearts to walk in the way of the wise.

A TIMELY DONATION.

The final official announcement by President Harper as he brought his administration to a close here today was to the effect that through the generous kindness of a friend who prefers to remain incognito, sufficient money has been raised and obligations assumed to round out $36,750, which the Southern Christian Convention annually gives to the endowment interest and current expense accounts of the college.

Since 1899 the Southern Christian Convention has been making regular contributions to the endowment fund of the college, and many years ago it capitalized this gift in the form of a note and bonds in the amount of $212,500, representing an income to the college, at 6 per cent, of $12,750 annually. In addition to this, for the past six years the Southern Christian Convention has been donating $25,000 for current expenses. Despite the depression and the hard times, President Harper is able to announce at the conclusion of his administration that again the Church, through the regular sources and generous members, has met in full these obligations.

C. M. CANNON.

CONTRIBUTIONS

SUFFOLK LETTER.

The greatest need of the Church is for all the members of the Church to take real, personal interest in all the affairs of the Church. It is a most difficult thing to interest all in anything. The State takes a census of its citizens to determine who may vote in an election. The State, in addition to the census, requires a poll tax to qualify citizens to vote. Many citizens do not pay this poll tax, and many who pay poll tax do not vote on election day. All citizens should comply with the requirement to pay the small poll tax and then take enough interest in elections to vote their honest convictions. But many citizens do not take part in the control of government, and that is one reason why the will of the people does not operate fully in our government. As a rule, it is the citizens who do not perform their full duty who complain most about the laws and rulers. A good citizen is one who pays his poll tax, votes at the election, and supports the administration, and waits for a legal opportunity to correct mistakes in elections.

What has been said in reference to citizenship will apply to Church membership. There are obligations upon all the members as well as upon leaders. It is as much the duty of the teacher of a Sunday School class to attend as it is for the Sunday School superintendent. The members of the Church are under the same implied obligation to attend regular services as it is for the pastor to attend. It is the duty of the jury to be in the court-room when the judge calls the court to order, as it is for the judge and the sheriff to be present. Church membership is not only an opportunity, but a sacred duty. "When the day of Pentecost was fully come, they were all with one accord in one place" (Acts 2:1). If they had been scattered, if they had not been there, Pentecost would not have come. "Not forsaking the assembling of ourselves together, as the manner of some is; but exhorting one another: and so much the more, as ye see the day approaching" (Heb. 10:25). It is plain, therefore, that it is a part of the duty of members of the Church to remind one another of the time for the preaching service, and the prayer meeting. Citizens talk election day, and Church members should talk preaching day. It is not enough to attend the Church occasionally and when convenient, but attendance should be regular.

Again, as every citizen must pay poll tax, which is small, every member should pay to the support of the Church, even a small sum, it would help very much toward meeting current expenses; and all persons, as citizens or Church members, feel better and live better when they contribute to the support of the State and the Church. Good citizens and good Church members are the best people in the community. The prayer meeting is one of the most important meetings of the Church, and yet, in these days, the report is that the prayer meeting is poorly attended. If the Church does not get the people, it will not save the world—and that is the mission of the Church. Will you do your part?

ELON LETTER.

For many years now, I have been writing almost weekly this Elon Letter. Before this particular letter is published, my term of office as president of Elon College will have closed, and this is my final contribution under this title. I hope that the Elon Letter will go on under the new administration of the college.*

In these letters I have not endeavored to have them conform to any particular type, allowing myself the greatest freedom as to subject-matter and method of treatment. This informality has had its value, I think. If any particular matter of college news was uppermost at the time of undertaking to write the letter, the letter naturally took the form of news. At other times, and for the most part, I have endeavored to interpret the changing ideas and ideals of our times in the field of education and religion as I have been able to sense them. To me, it has been a pleasure to write these letters.

I may be pardoned for being a little reminiscent at this time. I had the good fortune to be born into a Christian Church home. Both of my parents were active members of the Christian Church, and both of them were Sunday School teachers. My earliest recollection of the Church was a summer-time meeting at the Old Providence Church, in Virginia, which Rev. S. B. Klapp was holding.

Another of my early recollections of the Church was in the form of the literature that came to our home. As I recall it now, the Ladies' Home Journal, Youth's Companion, THE CHRISTIAN SUN, and the Herald of Gospel Liberty made regular visits to our home, and were regularly read by my parents, and, as soon as I was able to read, by myself. I recall that at one time Rev. G. A. Beebe was a guest in our home, and after we had had our dinner he took me upon his knee and said, "Son, what do you expect to do in life?" I quite well remember my answer, for I replied immediately, "I expect to edit THE CHRISTIAN SUN and the Herald of Gospel Liberty." I could not then understand the laughter that was enjoyed by those who were present, but that childish ambition, I am happy to say, in a sense, has been realized. For three years I was one of the editors of the Herald of Gospel Liberty, and at the same time was associate editor of THE CHRISTIAN SUN.

The first article I ever wrote for publication was for THE CHRISTIAN SUN—and it never got published. It was "A Plea for Christian Union." But I have lived to see Christian union come and THE CHRISTIAN SUN doing its full part in that great and worthy enterprise.

I cannot but feel appreciative, highly appreciative of the very kind references that readers of THE CHRISTIAN SUN, from time to time, have made respecting the Elon Letter. Not a few friends whose judgment I value most highly, some of them citizens now of the spiritual realm, have made me feel very happy because of their references to this letter. In this final contribution, I bid farewell to each reader of this weekly contribution, and pray God's blessings upon them and THE CHRISTIAN SUN.

W. A. HARPER.

(*Prof. Barney, of the chair of English in Elon College, and now chairman of the Elon College faculty, has, at the solicitation of THE SUN editor, kindly consented to furnish THE SUN each week the Elon Letter.—J. O. A.)

FROM ALABAMA.

Last second Sunday and Sunday night, we had a very fine service at Red Hill (Providence Chapel) and at Richland, Ga. These Churches are working together in a very harmonious way. Sunday School and Christian Endeavor were well attended at Richland Church, both morning and evening, and a good attendance at preaching hour at both places. We will begin our evangelistic meeting at Richland on Thursday night before our next regular service, and will have several days of service if there is nothing to hinder. The old Church building at Randalls Crossing has been sold, and the proceeds are to be used in the erection of a monument to Rev. H. W. Elder. The seats and pulpit of the old Church are to be used by the Church at Red Hill. I think this is a fine spirit, and shows the esteem and appreciation in which Bro. Elder is held in his home town and county. And, too, the Church building is in a state of decay, and the membership principally died or moved away.

Our annual home-coming and memorial service will be held at Red Hill on the first Sunday in July, as usual, unless otherwise ordered by the Church, from which date we hope to be able to hold our revival. We are expecting to have a great day, followed by a great meeting at that time.

We are expecting to have read at that time a partial history of the Church, which will be of great interest to many people. In fact, I am arranging to make a history of all our Christian Churches in the far South, and hope to have all information possible on this subject as soon as possible. My son, Staley, is also preparing a history or sketch of the lives of all our Christian preachers in this section. Now, we will very much appreciate any information or suggestions from any one who could help in this matter. What we do along this line must be done quickly, as our older people are passing away, and when they are gone historical facts will be hard to get. So if you know of an incident of interest regarding either Church or preacher of the Christian Church in Georgia or Alabama Conference, please send it in to me.

It was fine to have our Mission Secretary attend our woman's missionary rallies in this section. We are always glad to have him present in our meetings. The missionary interest of our Church is intrenching itself more and more in the hearts of our women. Little by little they climb the hill toward the goal. God bless them.

STEWARDSHIP INSTITUTE.

The first in a series of stewardship institutes to be conducted during the year by members of the stewardship committee of the Eastern Virginia Christian Conference was held last week at the Christian Temple, Norfolk, Va., by Revs. Joseph W. Fix, of Franklin, and F. C. Lester, of Waverly. For some time prior to the institute, Dr. L. E. Smith, pastor of the Church, had prepared his people for the occasion and had enrolled a goodly number of his members for three evenings of intensive study on the subject of stewardship.

There were two textbooks taught during the institute. The first was a general course, presented by Rev. J. W. Fix, who used "The Larger Stewardship," by Cook. The other course was taught by Rev. F. C. Lester, who used "Jesus' Teaching on the Use of Money," by Brown. A number of interesting posters were used to present the message of stewardship. Charts, leaflets and books were supplied from the general office at Dayton, Ohio, by Dr. Warren H. Denison, Secretary of Stewardship. Every effort was put forth to make the message of stewardship stand preeminently in the ministry of the Church. Any Church in the Conferences of Southern Christian Convention desiring to hold an institute will do well to communicate with Dr. W. H. Denison, Dayton, Ohio; Rev. F. C. Lester, Waverly, Va., or Rev. J. W. Fix, Franklin, Va.

MISSIONS

REV. J. O. ATKINSON, D. D., Secretary.

A PRAYER.

Father Almighty, we beseech Thee defend Thy Church against the spirit of anti-Christ. Deliver it from the effect of evil influences. So invaded are the appointed times for worship, so perverted their purpose and program, that souls hungering for bread too often find only a stone, cold, hard, set, without power or property to feed and warm. Rid Thy sanctuary, O God, of every alien influence and preserve to its offices the light and strength that effectually combat what the world not only attractively presents, but so diligently seeks to impose and instil. In Thy most holy name we pray. Amen. L.

FROM THE PHILIPPINES.

Dear CHRISTIAN SUN Friends:

I wish you could have been visiting us during the closing week of school. Yes, school here closes in March and reopens again the middle of June. There are over 800 pupils in the Cagayan High School, and 132 graduating. But there is only one high school to a province, which is like one to a State at home. That is why all the schools are overflowing. Next year, the Catholics will have a separate high school for boys. They already have two large dormitories here.

As usual, our Church had its farewell service for the nineteen boys and girls graduating from high school who were members of our Church or regular attendants. This event is like graduating from college at home. The preacher had a good sermon for them. The Sunday before, there were seven students from our own dormitories who joined the Church. At the same service, there were eight children consecrated to the Lord. But we are still mixed up with Romanism, because most of the children had "godparents," who came up with them.

Services were held every night during Passion Week, and a big day made of Friday. The emphasis, as in the Catholic Church, is placed on the dead rather than the living Christ. A long service was held in our Church on Friday, seven different persons speaking on the seven last sayings of Christ.

After this service we witnessed the Catholic procession, which was headed by four American priests, followed by hundreds of small children, men and women, carrying lighted candles, and at the end followed by a band and seven or eight floats elaborately decorated with paper flowers and showing events of Passion Week.

There were also impressive ceremonies held in the Church on Saturday. The priest "blesses" fire and plants which are brought by the people. At 4 o'clock in the morning, the ceremony of the fire takes place. All lights are put out and a big bonfire built near the Church. Then the priest "blesses" the fire; after this the candles in the Church are again lighted. The priest enters and "blesses" the plants; then, after a long ceremony, the priest and his attendants lay face downward before the altar. At the singing of the mass the Church bells toll again after being silent for forty-eight hours. I do not know if it is done here or not, but in many provinces when the bells ring again, little children are lifted or told to jump very high so that they may grow to be very tall.

I read today in the Manila paper of the preparations made to handle the mobs of people who will go for the annual festivities at the Antipole Shrine. They begin on April 7th and last until the middle of June. A religious procession is held every night during that time. Service stations will be opened up and four extra trains will make the run daily to Antipolo, in addition to the four regular ones. And these things are done by people who call themselves Christians. What headway can the Protestants make with their 612 ministers compared to 1,771 priests of the Catholic Churches?

Sincerely yours,

M. J. W. WHITE, M. D.

Every dollar sent in now for missions is certainly needed and will be greatly appreciated. It is a crucial period in our mission work. Will not all Churches that have not done so take the offering at an early date and send in same?

RAY'S OF LIGHT IN DARK AFRICA.

By MRS. WM. T. SCOTT.

Let's pretend that our missionaries are high-powered electric-light bulbs. We "screw" them in here and there, feeling sure that if the proper current can be turned on, light will follow. And how far they will throw their beams!

Our Congregational-Christian mission work in Africa is represented by 100 missionaries on the field, with 14 associate workers and 1,850 native preachers and teachers. With that number of "arc-lights," one would think that "dark Africa" would soon become a "white way." But consider the vastness of this great continent.

India and China together could go comfortably into Africa's northeastern corner; there is room for the whole of Europe in the northwestern deserts and forests; and the United States of America could be amply accommodated in the great southern peninsula. Think of it: the Congo and its tributaries alone drain an area equal to nearly the whole of Europe! If the Nile were laid upon the map of Europe, with its mouth at Lisbon, its sources would be far away in Siberia. Ireland could be submerged in the shining waters of Lake Victoria.

So you see it will take a great deal of "current," and this word might well apply to money as well as to electricity or to missionaries to enlighten Africa. What is needed is more rays of light—more people like David Livingstone, who sacrificed his very being for the advancement of Africa; more people like Dr. Mary F. Cushman, who is a medical missionary of our Congregational-Christian Church and who spoke so effectively at the General Christian Convention at Piqua, Ohio, concerning the needs of Africa. Going out to Africa long after the usual age when missionaries begin their career, Dr. Cushman has built up a remarkable piece of work in a part of that dark African continent where there is no hospital or medical aid of any kind for hundreds of miles in all directions. Indeed, one may travel north for twenty-three days straight to the banks of the Congo and not find a doctor, a nurse, a hospital, or a dispensary. Indeed, Dr. Cushman has become a ray of light to her African brothers and sisters.

Dr. Cushman loves the people among whom she works, and they love her. What is more, she understands them and the basis upon which is built up that terrific system of witchcraft that holds the people in a terrible mental and spiritual slavery.

Witch-doctors, in treating their patients, have been known to cut through the scalp right down to the bone and scrape the skull for the cure of headache, or to cut through the skin over a tubercular knee and rub in a very strong irritant to effect a cure. One doctor sucked a disease out of an arm through a horn; another one made a man vomit to get rid of his disease. The ordinary medicine man, or family doctor, if you please, wears around his neck a necklace made of antelope horns, used as bottles, in which he carries his most concentrated remedies. He carries his whole "pharmacopocia" with him. In one bottle, he will have the ashes obtained from burning the dried body of a snake. He uses these ashes, which, of course, contain in concentrated form all the powers and virtues of the whole snake, to cure a person who has been bewitched. Another bottle may contain the ashes from the dried body of a lizard, medicine for a similar sickness; or ashes from the feathers of a vulture to cure insanity; or fat from an elephant to make a man strong, etc. And he may carry some pieces of bark or bulbs of plants or pieces of wood or insects, or any one of a vast number of different substances which he uses for medicine. In fact, the whole treatment of disease by the African witch-doctor is based upon the belief that witchcraft is the cause of all illness, and that the disease is an entity which must be cast out. Therefore, he proceeds to cast it out, to the terrible torture of his patient. That any of his patients recover, shows what nature can do if given half a chance and what a rugged constitution the African has.

The work of Dr. Cushman, then, is two-fold. Her work is to relieve the suffering caused by the terrible tortures of the native witch-doctor, and to combat superstition and to open the way for the gospel. Can you wonder, then, that after the kind hands and loving heart of this Christian woman have brought relief to these simple folk that they should indeed think that the gods had visited them, that indeed a ray of light had shone upon their dark way!

Dr. James B. McCord is another one of our medical missionaries who serves as a beacon-light to Africa. He has built and maintained, practically without expense to the American Board, a "Mission Nursing House" in Durban, Natal, South Africa. The hospital is well equipped and is rendering a wonderful service, shedding the ray of the gospel of Jesus through the healing of broken bodies of human beings. It has been the wonderful spirit of Dr. McCord which has carried on in most discouraging circumstances and inconveniences. The operating-room of the hospital is a comparatively recent addition, and this has come about through the response of missionary-minded people in America and through the genius of Dr. McCord. But for many years, Dr. McCord carried on his relief of human suffering under conditions from which most of our American physicians would shrink. He has operated in native huts, the patient lying on the dirt floor, without tables or chairs, and with a smoky, cheap kerosene lamp serving as the only "electric light." He has also operated on verandas, in dark rooms, under trees, and in all sorts of places. His heart has indeed been made glad now that he can carry on his ministry in a much larger and efficient way in an up-to-date operating-room, with aseptic furniture, skylight and modern conveniences. To the thousands who have found healing of bodies at the hands of Christ's man, Dr. J. B. McCord, they are sure that God has sent a ray of light to dark Africa.

Perhaps our most outstanding work in all Africa is that of education, for in a sense it is the work of all our missionaries. For many years, however, we have been co-operating with the government in the work of schools for the natives. Our schools are today doing a wonderful work, and they number 318, with an enrollment of 20,166 boys and girls, covering all grades. One way of bringing light to Africa is to train natives who will be that light. Education is filling that important place.

The wisdom of the missions in emphasizing industrial training and social service is bearing gratifying results. Inanda Seminary for girls has doubled its enrollment in the last few years because of the fact that the girls are trained for and can take their places as leaders in industrial and social work. Rev. Wm. C. Bell, who is doing a remarkable piece of work in the school for girls at Dondi, and Caroline E. Frost, with her Amanzimtoti Institute, are both sending forth brilliant rays of light which will eventually make that dark continent white.

There are so many people and institutions which are shedding great rays of light upon dark Africa that time and space will not allow me to make further personal references. The missionary work among the black men of Africa reads like a novel, and the contribution of the Christian world to this inferior people is gratifying. A new eagerness is being stimulated on the part of the black man and woman, and hopes are emerging that point to a day when the African continent will no longer be a continent infested by disease, ignorance and superstition, but will become a Christian commonwealth. In Jesus Christ is the African's only hope for abundant life.

"DON'T JUDGE AMERICA BY HER MOVIES."

"You must not judge America by these awful films," said Rev. Clarence E. Wolsted, of Manamadura, to his Indian friends after viewing several pictures. One college student believed that all Americans were cowboys! The movies, or "cinema," are very popular in India, and the tragedy is that the type of film sent there, for the most part, leads to grave misunderstandings and misconceptions. This is one very lively reason why Christian missions should persevere—in order to offset and correct the evil of films and other commercial agencies which pour in from the West. A portable movie outfit, with films on health and agriculture, as well as five reels on the life of Christ, are doing their share in Manamadura to spread the good news.

MISSIONARY PROGRAM FOR JUNE.

BY MRS. W. M. JAY.

Women's Societies.

The program for this month is the second taken from the little booklet, "Yesterday and Today in Porto Rico." This is an interesting study and one that we may do well in following. Those who used the program last month on "A Visitor Returns from Porto Rico," spent a profitable and happy hour and feel that they are nearer our neighbors in these islands than ever before. This month our topic is "Education in Porto Rico," and the subject itself shows us that there is a wealth of information in waiting. If you do not have the booklet, you may obtain same for 10 cents by sending to American Missionary Association, 287 Fourth Avenue, New York, N. Y.

Program.

Subject: "Education in Porto Rico."

Worship helps.

Suggested hymns: "Lord, Speak to Me, That I May Speak," "Take My Life and Let It Be." Scripture: 2 Chron. 1:1-13.

Prayer: For Miss Martha Lindsey, principal of the Blanche Kellogg Institute; for all the teachers, that they may be wise and efficient; for all the girls, that they may receive a large vision of service.

Three talks: (1) "General Educational Conditions," (2) "Our Own Responsibility," (3) "The Girls of the School."

Special music.

Discussion and conversation on the following:

1. Educational advance in Porto Rico during the past thirty years.
2. The Blanche Kellogg Institute.
3. Should the establishment of adequate schools be a task for the Churches or for the government?

Young People's Societies.

Program of Chapter VIII—"Troubled Waters."

I. Business.

II. Study period:

1. A brief review of the study: "Behind the Curtain," leader.
2. Today's study: Leader's approach to lesson. India's ship-of-State is certainly in troubled waters. Approach this lesson with all available side-lights. The Literary Digest carries interesting articles in the following numbers: March 1, 1930; April 19, 1930; May 10, 17, 24, 1930; June 14, 1930. Interesting photographs are also in these numbers. Our reading circle book, "India On the March," by Clark, deals with Gandhi and political India, pages 50-55. E. Stanley Jones' "Christ of the Indian Road" is valuable here. Perhaps members might stage a debate for an extra meeting, with the query: Resolved, that India should be granted "Swaraj"—self-government. With such a popular subject and so much collateral material, the leader's chief concern will probably be to keep the lesson period within its time limit.

3. Mahatma Gandhi (pp. 111-121): First member.

4. Progress toward home rule (pp. 121-126): Second member.

Conclusion.

5. Preparation for worship: Leader.

Leader's preparatory talk: India is a pronounced and world-known example of a situation existing here in our own country. Confusion reigns because Christ is left out of our every-day life. Gandhi has touched the vulnerable spot in our American Christianity. He has watched so-called Christian nations deal with one another. He has watched our industrial world, and he sees that we are leaving Christ out. E. Stanley Jones tells him not to follow us, but to follow Him whom we pretend to follow. But truly Gandhi is right when he says, "If all Christians would live as Christ lived, the world would soon become Christian." Let us resolve that we will live the lives that we know we should live, and that we will "let our light so shine that others may see our good works and glorify our Father which is in heaven."

III. Worship program:

Theme: "Witnessing for Christ by Daily Living."

1. Prelude: "Brightly Beams Our Father's Mercy."

2. Call to worship: "Be ye therefore perfect, even as your Father in heaven is perfect" (Matt. 5:48).

3. Hymn: "Hark, the Voice of Jesus Calling."

4. Scripture: James 1:1-3, 19-27.

5. Prayer: While the group is bowed in prayer, the leader or some member very reverently reads the hymn, "Lord, Speak to Me, That I May Speak."

6. Offertory: Music, "Lord, Speak to Me, That I May Speak."

7. Hymn: "O Master, Let Me Walk With Thee."

Willing Workers or Juniors.

Theme: "God's Children." (This meeting is to be public, and may take up the Church hour.)

I. Worship service:

1. Call to worship: God be merciful to us and bless us, and cause His face to shine upon us.

2. Hymn: "I Love to Tell the Story."

3. Scripture: Matt. 18:1-14.

4. Prayer: (3 & 4 may be given by pastor, if desired).

5. Offertory: The collection going to the Willing Workers. If leader deems it wise, this may be taken at the close of service.

II. Dramatization.

1. "Alice's House-warming," by Anita B. Ferris.

2. "The Honorable Guest," by Frances Cavanaugh.

(It is suggested that one of these be presented. Copies may be gotten from the Woman's Mission Board, C. P. A. Building, Dayton, Ohio.)

Benediction.

ELON COLLEGE PRESIDENT'S REPORT.

May 26, 1931.

Since the March 17th meeting of the board of trustees, I have devoted myself to raising, as far as I had time, that part of the donations account expected from the general public and to dealing with prospective large givers to the "Million-Dollar Campaign." I did this upon the advice of the chairman of the Million-Dollar Campaign Committee and because you had created a laymen's committee to approach the Churches with reference to the Southern Christian Convention Fund.

The budget adopted last May included the following financial items to come from other than regular income sources:

From general donations	$21,000.00
From S. C. C. bonds (interest)	24,000.00
From S. C. C. obligations (End't interest)	12,750.00

Total$57,750.00

The Million-Dollar Campaign Committee assigned, with the approval of the officers of the General Alumni Association, $10,000 to the Alumni for the expense of the million-dollar campaign, and Mr. Geo. D. Colclough was asked to solicit for the fund.

The trial balance of the college books, taken on May 19, 1931, reveals the following facts:

General Donations.		Expected.	Received.
$21,000.	Alamance interest F.....	$	3,130.75
	Alamance Fund		129.00
	Donations		9,052.50
	Loan Fund donations.....		285.00
	Clarke Min. Loan Fund.....		15.00
	Palmer Fund		750.00
Total in cash		$13,362.25
Pledges due from Profs.....			3,200.00
Grand total		$16,562.25
Alumni.
10,000.	Alumni Loyalty Fund.....	$	1,445.00
	Alumni 1931		4.80
Total		$	1,449.80
S. C. C. Fund.
24,000.	S. C. C. Fund	$18,121.45
S. C. C. Obligations.
12,750.	S. C. C. obligations.....	$	2,030.00
Million-Dollar Campaign.
25,000.	Million-Dollar Campaign	$	3,500.00
$92,750.	Grand totals	$41,663.60

Observations.—The amount pledged by professors will be paid as soon as we can pay them the remainder of their salaries.

Of the $3,500 listed under "Million-Dollar Campaign," the $2,500 given by Dr. J. A. Clarke he designated for endowment, but agreed that it might be used temporarily for current expenses, and the $1,000 given by Mrs. John H. Barnwell was an initial payment on the $10,000 bequest of the late Dr. R. M. Morrow. Dr. Morrow did not specify how this money should be used. It has temporarily been used in current expenses.

The shifting of the alumni support from the general donations account to the special sustaining fund for the "Million-Dollar Campaign" has made it impossible to raise the full amount of that account. We have for three years been receiving from the alumni on this account from $5,000 upwards.

There are a good many pledges outstanding, some of which will be paid by May 31st, the closing of the year.

SUNDAY SCHOOL OFFERINGS.

I herewith give a detailed report of the fifth-Sunday offerings in the Sunday Schools for the past years. (The original report was given to the board by schools. It is given here by Conferences only because of lack of space.—Mg. Editor.)

Eastern Virginia Conference	$1,202.86
North Carolina and Virginia Conference....	150.35

Western North Carolina Conference	128.31
Eastern North Carolina Conference.....	98.14
Virginia Valley Central Conference	97.36

Totals for 68 schools$1,676.94

Last year 73 schools contributed $1,739.81.

The scholarships have been won this year as follows:

Eastern Va. Conference, Christian Temple.....	2
N. C. & Va. Conference, Greensboro First.....	2
Western N. C. Conference, Burlington.....	2
Eastern N. C. Conference, Mt. Auburn.....	2
Virginia Valley Central Conference, Linville.....	1
Woods' Chapel	1
Total	10

No Congregational Sunday School has so far participated in the offering, and only two Churches in the Conference of the Carolinas have contributed to the college current expense fund this year.

THE NEW PRESIDENT.

As stated in my letter of resignation addressed to each of you on April 27th, and in my formal announcement to the chapel group of that same day, I am for the person you name as my successor 100 per cent. I have had that same sort of fine support during the twenty years of my official tenure from my predecessors, Dr. W. S. Long (so long as he was with us), Dr. W. W. Staley, and Dr. E. L. Moffitt. This support has meant everything to me, and I know the new president will have the sympathetic, prayerful co-operation of all three of Elon's living former presidents.

I must record my personal appreciation in this formal way to the board of trustees for your loyal and devoted service to Elon and your support of me during my administration. I have not deserved it, but I have appreciated it and shall cherish always the highest regard for you and the college.

A recent study of the presidents of land grant colleges has been made by the U. S. Bureau of Education, and the following results have been gleaned from it by Dr. Archie M. Palmer, of the Association of American Colleges in the May, 1931, issue of the Journal of Higher Education:

"The college president is likely to be fifty-five years old, married, and the chances are that he will not serve more than five years. The actual length of service is short, and that there is considerable turnover in the position is disclosed by that fact that 167 presidents served less than five years. The study shows also that 76 presidents have served between five and ten years, so that the great majority of them have held their positions for periods of less than ten years."

In view of these facts, twenty years does not appear to have been a short administration. I have done the best I could, with the co-operation, support, and prayerful sympathy, and I lay down the office with only the kindest feelings for you and for our college. I predict for Elon under her new president an era of enlarged usefulness and prosperity, and devoutly pray for the same.

W. A. HARPER, President.

NOTE.—Since this report was submitted, the daily papers announce that sufficient money has come in to balance the Southern Christian Convention obligations and the Southern Christian Convention Fund, and so President Harper closes his administration with the Christian Church obligations paid.—Mg. REQUEST AND SKETCH OF LIFE.

By REV. P. T. KLAPP.

(Rev. P. T. Klapp, who recently passed away, left the following in his own hand, requesting same to be read, as was done, at his funeral.—Ed. Sun.)

The text for my funeral: "By the grace of God I am what I am" (1 Cor. 15:10).

I professed faith in Christ in August, 1864, at Apples Chapel. Rev. A. G. Anderson preached a sermon that brought me to see the need of Jesus, from the text, "Is there no balm in Gilead? Is there no physician here?" (Jer. 8:22.) Before I was saved, I had a great desire to preach, and in my play-revival meetings I had conversions. After my conversion I attended school at Lenox Castle for one year; then I went to Bethel one year. From there I went to Graham, and was there for about four years under Drs. W. S. and D. A. Long. While there, I was licensed by Rev. W. S. Long at New Providence Church to preach the gospel. November 22, 1875, at Pope's Chapel I was ordained during the session of the annual Conference. I was principal of the Haw River Academy two years, during which time I had regular Church work. I had four Churches. August 13, 1898, at Damascus, at 5 o'clock, I received the grace and definite experience of sanctification, as a second work of grace. While I was pastor of Hayes Chapel, 1920, Friday before second Sunday in August, while preaching at 11 o'clock, the Holy Spirit came upon me, and I suppose for about 15 or 20 minutes I spoke in tongues, and for a few hours I lived in a state of suprem joy, and I thank God for that wonderful experience. I never asked God for the gift of tongues, but I did ask Him for the baptism of His Holy Spirit. "They shall speak with new tongues" (Mark 16:17).

From January, 1873, to January, 1923, I have preached more than 5,000 times, made more than 15,000 pastoral visits. More than 2,000 have professed faith in Christ under my ministry; I received more than 1,500 into the Church membership, baptized more than 1,000 persons, officiated at from 75 to 100 funeral services, and married about 50 couples.

I thank God that He used me to open up the work of foreign missions in the Christian Church. I offered the first resolution in the Christian Conference at Poplar Branch on the subject of foreign missions during that session, November, 1883. The resolution: "Resolved, That Monday at 11 o'clock be set apart to consider the propriety of taking up the work of foreign missions."

Monday I made my first speech in Conference on the subject of foreign missions, and at the end of my little talk I laid on the table $100.26 that a few of us had raised during the year, starting with 35 cents. A few years later I went to Alabama Conference and opened up the work there. The beginning fund was then $12. I thank God for these privileges. Up to January, 1923, I organized the following Churches: Poplar Branch, Beulah, Antioch (Warren Co.), Ingram, Va., Keyser, Big Falls, Berea, New Lebanon, Turner's Chapel, Asheboro, Youngsville, Lee's Chapel and Mebane, thirteen in all. I had the following Churches built, viz: Shallow Well, Poplar Branch, Beulah, Ingram, Keyser, Asheboro, Youngsville, Lee's Chapel, Mebane, Parks Cross Roads, Caroline Mills—twelve. During these fifty years I have served the following Churches, often in groups: Carolina, 2 years; Damascus, 8 years; Shallow Well, 10 years; Zion, 15 years; Moore Union, 20 years; Turner's Chapel, 2 years; Lee's Chapel, 6 years; Antioch (C), 2 years; Mt. Bethel, 16 years; Howard's Chapel, 7 years; Salem Chapel, 1 year; Keyser, 5 years; Poplar Branch, 5 years; Grace's Chapel, 2 years; Pope's Chapel, 10 years; Good Hope, 10 years; Oak Level, 10 years; Walnut Cove, 1 year; Mt. Auburn, 4 years; Liberty (Vance), 2 years; Danville, Va., 6 years; Bethlehem, 3 years; Big Falls, 2 years; Berea, 5 years; Shallow Ford, 2 years; Beulah, 6 years; Piney Plains, 7 years; Happy Home, 2 years; Pleasant Grove, Va., 7 years; New Hope, Franklin Co., 20 years; Ingram, Va., 9 years; Parks Cross Roads, 2 years; Turner's

RESURRECTION AND ASCENSION.

LESSON XI—JUNE 14, 1931.

GOLDEN TEXT: "It is Christ that died; yea, rather that was raised from the dead, who is at the right hand of God, who also maketh intercession for us."—Rom. 8:34.

LESSON: Luke 24.

IF CHRIST BE NOT RAISED FROM THE DEAD.

There may be some things which Christians may give up without affecting the vitality of their religious life, but faith in the resurrection of Jesus Christ is not one of them. There may be a difference of opinion as to the "how" of the resurrection, but there must be no question about the "fact" of the resurrection. For if Christ be not raised from the dead:

1. The dead do not rise. Certainly if God was not able to raise Christ, the sinless and perfect one, we dare not hope that any of us will rise from the dead.

2. The gospel and Christian preaching is vain and empty. One of the cardinal doctrines of Christian preaching is the resurrection of Christ. If He did not rise, such preaching and such gospel is more than vain; it is dangerous.

3. Our faith is vain. We have been believing in an empty and vain thing. Take away the fact of the resurrection and we have no reality on which to lean.

4. Our sins are yet unforgiven. If Christ be not risen, then He cannot forgive sins.

5. Our loved ones have been blotted out. One of the comforts of sorrowing hearts in time of bereavement is the hope they cherish for their loved ones who died in Christ. But if Christ be not risen, their loved ones have perished.

6. Christ Himself would be undependable. Again and again, He foretold that He would rise from the grave. If He did not rise from the dead, and if we, therefore, cannot believe Him here, how can we believe Him anywhere else?

7. Life would be empty and meaningless. As Paul says, "If in this life only, we have hope in Christ, we are of all men most miserable."

BUT NOW IS CHRIST RISEN FROM THE DEAD.

1. The record of the empty tomb is evidence that must be considered if the New Testament is at all trustworthy. "He is not here" are words that have tremendous weight.

2. The disciples knew that they had seen Him alive. The one whom they thought dead, appeared unto them in such a way that they recognized Him and knew it was He.

3. Paul saw Him and said that over five hundred others saw Him at the same time. It might be possible to fool one man, but it is incredible that five hundred people at one time saw an illusion.

4. Christianity cannot be explained on any other grounds. Here were the disciples, broken-hearted, discouraged, apparently defeated because they believed their Leader was dead. Here were the enemies of Christ gloating over their victory. And suddenly this small band of discouraged men and women became literally world-conquerors. There is only one explanation: they came to know as definitely as men can know anything, that their Leader was alive again. They made that the central theme of their early preaching. It was the heart of Paul's gospel. Christ is alive. And because He is alive, He can be depended upon. The gospel is true. Human life is worth while. Our loved ones have not perished. We

THE CHRISTIAN FAMILY. By Geo. W. Fiske. Abingdon; $1.25; pp. 138.

Dr. Fiske is recognized as one of the leading writers in the field of the family, and this book advances his reputation. The basic idea in the book is that the family is the heart of our civilization, and that religion must undergird the family to prevent its decay. The transition period through which we are passing needs the support of just such a volume as this, scholarly, facing all the facts, yet definitely Christian throughout.

THE DRAMATIC METHOD IN RELIGIOUS EDUCATION. By Carleton Wood. Abingdon; $3; pp. 344.

When is a drama religious? Some will say when it has a biblical setting or biblical characters. This book says a play is religious when it sends its audience away inspired to live on a higher plane and to express the exalted ideals in daily living.

The author differentiates between the commercial theater and the so-called Little Theater, which, in local places, whether schools, colleges, Churches, or community centers, produces plays as an interpretation of life as it is, not for profit, but for the cultural and spiritual assets involved.

Here is a mine of useful and usable information that will help any one who is interested in the production of dramas on the amateur basis.

ALUMNI STIMULATION. By W. S. Stover. Bureau of Publications. Teachers' College, Columbia University; $1.50; pp. 127.

The efforts of college presidents and alumni secretaries to stimulate alumni for a period of nearly three hundred years—to be exact, from 1636 to 1928—are set forth in this doctor's dissertation, which shows the usual patient investigation and the usual restraint in writing. The trend now appearing to stimulate the intellectual interests of the alumni will require even more serious thinking than that to separate alumni from their cash or to secure their support for athletics. College and alumni administrators will want this book.

AND CHRIST ASCENDED ON HIGH.

There are difficulties in the story of the Ascension for the person who takes it absolutely literally, and there are many things that are not demonstrable as a problem in mathematics. But back of the simple and unaffected story as recorded by Luke, there is the abiding and universal truth that the living Christ is in the realm of the spiritual, and therefore universalized and everywhere accessible. He is not confined to any locality, but is everywhere accessible to humble hearts and contrite spirits. It is significant that when he was parted from His disciples He was in the act of blessing them. It was a symbol of His permanent work of grace. "He was carried up into heaven"—he returned to that spiritual realm from which He had come and in which He is now and always active and accessible. He is to be the object of our worship and the inspiration of our service.

FAMILY ALTAR

CONDUCTED BY H. E. ROUNTREE
One of our Chaplains in the U. S. Navy.

"If thou wilt make the Almighty thy treasure . . . then shalt thou delight thyself in the Almighty . . . and thou shalt make thy prayer unto Him and He will hear thee."—Job 22: 25-27.

MONDAY.

A REAL FATHER.

"Like as a father pitieth his children, so the Lord pitieth them that fear Him."—Psa. 103:13.

Here is exquisite comfort for us. God does not expect too much of us. He remembers our weariness. He is as considerate of us as a little child. He does not want us to be miserable. He cheers us with His assurance of his everlasting love, mercy and care. This should make us ashamed of our folly and sins.

Prayer.—Dear Father, we are thankful that Thou knowest our frame and rememberest that we are but dust. Do, Thou, have compassion on our frailty. Forgive us of our sins and everything amiss in us. Lead us forth into brightness and peace and make us serve Thee forever. Amen.

TUESDAY.

A CORRECTING FATHER.

"Whom the Lord loveth, He chasteneth."—Heb. 12:1-13.

Most parents, yea most others, suffer acutely to see a child punished. The spirit of the present age is to save the child from punishment and ourselves the suffering it causes. The tendency is unlovely and pitiable, viz: indulged and undisciplined children, and that makes selfish and arrogant adults. There is no doubt in the correction of the rod sometimes.

We see some of God's children with whom He seems to delay His discipline. Indulged, prosperous, having all that their hearts could wish, they have become God's spoiled children. Great tribulation awaits them.

We must still our rebellious souls, seek God's infinite love and learn our lessons in humility and consecration, lest great tribulation befall us.

Prayer.—Say the Lord's Prayer.

WEDNESDAY.

MY MASTER AND MY BROTHER.

"But I know Him: For I am from Him, and He hath sent me."—John 7:29.

Here is a fact upon which we can rest our faith with great comfort, that Jesus knew God as none other ever knew Him. All else that we think we know about God is from other sources, illuminating what Jesus tells us of Him.

We, too, through Him, may know the Father and His fatherly love, and may have Him preside over all relations of our lives.

Prayer.—O God, who hast given us a sure faith and a faithful guide through the wilderness of this world, give us obedient spirits and help us to accept His words without faltering, that we may follow where He leads. Amen.

THURSDAY.

SWEET.

"Henceforth I call you not servants . . . but I have called you friends."—John 15:15.

Jesus, who was intimate with the Father, entered also into the truest intimacy with men. He who was all good and pure, sought the companionship of publicans and sinners.

It is enheartening to believe that Jesus does not exalt Himself above us. He takes His place by our side. He enters with me into all my perplexities. We may talk with Him freely. He is a wise Counselor—our Master and our Brother.

Prayer.—Holy Father, who hast given Thy Son to be light in darkness, strength to weakness, a guide to our thoughts, and a companion to us in our solitude, we pray Thee to govern our wayward spirits, that the light grow not dim, that the strength do not fail us, and that our souls become not desolate. In His name we ask it. Amen.

FRIDAY.

GOD'S HEART.

"And when He was come near, He beheld the city, and wept over it."—Luke 19:41.

An hour of triumph and an hour of tears! How true this is to human experience! Our successes are very close to our sorrows. If we could see through things as Jesus did, we would not be deceived by the glamor of prosperous days.

Do we know the things which belong to our peace, or are we blind as were the people of Jerusalem? The latter is to be feared. Is our Christ an imaginary Saviour enshrined in great Churches, glorified by splendid music, surrounded by show and great doings? Or do we know Christ as He was, meek and lowly in heart? Do we accept the Christ who never was, or do we reject the Christ who was, who is, and is to be?

When Jesus wept over the city, the city did not know. They went on in their proud openness, the sheen and passing show of the world. They went on blindly to destruction.

What is our way, disaster or peace? One way is as a footpath over the hills, but it is plain if we will follow Jesus.

Prayer.—Our Father and our God, open our blind eyes, that we may see Jesus. Awake our sleeping hearts, that we may welcome Him. Subdue our wills, that we may follow Him. Deliver us from all vain fancies and set our affections on those things which are real and do not pass away. In Christ's name, we ask it. Amen.

SATURDAY.

GREATER THAN THESE.

"And greater works than these shall ye do, because I go to my Father."—John 14:12.

Jesus stood before the afflicted, and their "ears were opened, and the strings of their tongues were loosed, and the lame walked, and the dead were raised," and then He told the disciples that they should do greater works than this. What is that greater work? It is given to His children to carry on Christ's work by loosing the tongues of the spiritually dumb; to unstop the ears of spiritually deaf; make the morally lame to walk with Christian stamina, and to raise the dead in sin to life in Christ.

To be able to speak divine truth for the glory of the Lord, to be able to hear the truth of the Lord in Christ with the ears of the soul, to be able to be up and doing, the living witness for the Master, is the most glorious gift, and the accomplishment of it is the "greater work."

Let the Lord take us aside and put His finger upon us, then shall we speak His praise and proclaim His wisdom, hear His gospel, and the spirit of the Lord abides in us.

"Blessed the soul that hears the Lord speak in the heart, and receives the word of comfort out of His mouth! Blessed the ears which hearken to that which the Spirit of God softly whispers and do not incline to the noisy and confused voices of this world!"

Prayer.—Give us grace, dear Lord, to use this excellent gift, or tongue, for the purpose of speaking Thy praise. Give us this happiness, through Jesus Christ, our Lord. Amen.

SUNDAY.

THE LETTER AND THE LIFE.

"For the letter killeth, but the spirit giveth life."—2 Cor. 3:6.

To be a living witness of the gospel is the most glorious life; Christ has endowed it so. It is personally representative of Him. It is an ambassadorship of the greatest of Kings—God Himself. It means that we represent Him to others with whom we come in contact, in truth, spirit and life, the greatest subjects of the universe. We are set in the sun that shines for humanity to warm their hearts. It is putting on the air celestial music which attracts heavenward. It is throwing out the lifeline to save the sinking from death. How marvelous! Moses was obliged to put a veil over his face to shut out the glory of the Lord. With us, it is different; we make every effort to reveal that glory. Our work is to glorify the Lord, magnify Jesus, make His love victorious, lead men to the place they rightfully belong—the throne of God, deliver them from the power of the devil, translate them to the kingdom of light, and finally to eternal bliss.

Prayer.—Lord Jesus, shine Thou upon Thy Church in Thy gospel and in Thy people and the lives of Thy Servants, and help us to shine for Thee forever. Amen.

THE SPIRIT SPEAKS.

A friend was in the hospital awaiting an operation. Word came that the operation would take place at a certain hour on a certain day. The day came, and with it many tasks to keep the hands and mind fully occupied. The postman brought a card of complain that we had not written as one thought we should. Dropping the tasks of the moment, we stopped to write a few lines, that the neglected one might know that we still remembered. In the midst of the writing, not knowing the hour nor thinking at the time of the one in the hospital, suddenly the spirit of prayer enveloped and filled us, and it seemed that the Spirit prayed through us for the one in the hospital.

Oh, how we praised God that the Spirit was sent, for we knew that the one who sent us the message expected that we would be praying at that special time, and we did not want to fail her in her hour of need. Two hours later and still busy, the wonderful words of the apostle Paul set to music sung themselves in the little chamber of our minds, "Thanks be to God who giveth us the victory through our Lord Jesus Christ," and then on to the "Hallelujah Chorus" from the oratorio, "The Messiah." Some way, we felt sure that our friend in the hospital would come back to us, for who but God could give us such assurance?

So many try to explain away all such revelations from God, but we love to feel that He, through the Holy Spirit, speaks to His believing children, bringing all things to our remembrance and showing us things to come. So many times the revelations come and we are prepared for the circumstances which come instead of being taken unaware. Some one has said, "The Lord does not want us to live wholly on the natural plane, nor wholly on the spiritual plane; but He wants us to live on a plane where the natural and supernatural are alike recognized and harmoniously blended." REV. JOSEPH W. FIX, Preacher.

DAYBREAK.

BY REV. ELISHA A. KING, D. D.

Easter Day reminds us that it is the desire of every normal human heart to live forever. That may seem strange to some who have never given the matter much consideration. The truth is, however, we are born with a sense of moral justice in our hearts, and we feel that life should be rounded out to a complete whole, either in this life or some other. Over in France there is a beautiful bridge partly spanning a running stream of water. The bridge was begun many years ago, but never finished. The span swings out over the water about half-way, and everybody who sees it says that the architect certainly intended to finish it. It ought to have been continued to the other shore! That seems to remind us that every human life is intended to be a complete whole. No sane man can think for long that the discipline of life that mellows into character, the brain of man trained to perfect skill, is born to perish as a tree perishes or, as a beast, dies! The inner reason of man tells him that there must be some satisfying conclusion to serious striving after goodness. On general principles, we feel that there must be something more beyond death. This universal craving and conviction is beautifully expressed in Joseph Addison's "Cato," where he says:

"It must be so, Plato, thou reason'st well,
Else whence this pleasing hope, this fond desire,
This longing after immortality?
Or whence this secret dread and inward horror
Of falling into naught? Why shrinks the soul
Back on herself and startles at destruction?
'Tis the Divinity that stirs within us,
'Tis heaven itself that points out an hereafter,
And intimates eternity to man."

Throughout the ages thoughtful people have considered the subject of immortality. The Egyptian embalmed the body of the dead to last until the resurrection, and the pyramids to hold the precious clay until that day. The Christians of the first centuries buried their dead in the Roman catacombs and marked upon their slabs designs of the evergreen leaf, the blossoming branch, and the Good Shepherd to testify to a sure belief in the future life and joy eternal.

The literature of both ancients and moderns teems with references to immortality. Ancient religions and cults, including the secret societies of all ages, cherish the fond hope of life eternal and teach that the soul is immortal. The old cult of the sun divided life into birth at sunrise, youth in the early morning, maturity at noon, old age in the afternoon, death at sunset, but the next morning a resurrection! Every sunrise is a symbol of resurrection, of new life and new achievement.

"The dawn telleth the coming of the new day.
My soul quickeneth with the beauty of the dawn.
Blessed be the new day which descendeth upon me.

I greet thee, O day, I cross thy threshold with joy and gladness."

We have heard it said that there are many people who do not believe in personal immortality. Some still hold to the belief that we are immortal only in our children, in the memory of our friends, immortal in achievements for man's good, and others have no hope, though they wish with all their hearts that they had.

There are two ways of thinking of death. One is to contemplate it as the end; the other, to think of it as the beginning of a greater experience. At Lourds, in France, I climbed the sacred mount, followed the stations of the cross to the top, saw the crucifixion, and the procession ended in a dark cave. So do we find a great variety of poetry on themes like these: "Evensong," "Twilight," "Sunset," "Day's End," and "Farewell." But there is another and different kind of poem. It is flushed with the glow of sunrise! I find nine passages in the Scriptures that breathe this thought. The phrase found in them all is, "Toward the sunrise." A new word is being used to carry the triumphant note of hopefulness, viz: "beyond." Here is a good example of this onward flow of life:

"Night's gloomy watches fled,
Morning all beaming red,
Hope's smiles around us shed,
Heavenward-away!"

Longfellow's poem, "Daybreak," expresses the idea:

"Sail on, ye mariners, the night is gone;
Awake, it is the day."

And John Oxenham has translated the beautiful thought into a wonderful Christian conception of death:

"This mortal dies—

But, in the moment when the light fails here,
The darkness opens, and the vision clear
Breaks on his eyes.

The veil is rent;

On his enraptured gaze, heaven's glory breaks,
He was asleep, and in that moment wakes."

These verses breathe a lively, confident belief in immortality, based upon faith in the Christ of the resurrection and in the integrity of the Creator. How different this is from the speculations of the philosopher, the questioning of the agnostic or the killing unbelief of the atheist. The Christian trusts God to do all things well. So far, He has led us on, and we trust Him still.

The Christian's Easter is the celebration of the resurrection of Jesus Christ and all that that implies. The resurrection itself is as certified a fact as any in history. The best evidence of the resurrection is the story of the disciples themselves.

They loved Jesus and followed Him to His death, even though at a distance. They hoped that He was to be the Messiah. They had given up their business to follow Him. They had no idea that He was to die so terrible a death. They had staked their all on Him, and now He was crucified as a criminal!

The result of Jesus' death on them was utter despair. They were undone. They gave up and said, "What's the use; let's go fishing." They were the butt of jibes and ridicule. They lost their nerve! With the death of Jesus, Christianity seemed at an end. The new gospel was frustrated.

But soon we see the disciples transformed and full of enthusiasm. They who had been cowards were now brave. They faced the world and started a campaign to win the world to Christ. The Christian missionary spirit was born and it swept the civilized world. How do you account for this great change in the disciples? Many attempts have been made. Some have said that they gathered in the upper room and recalled the things Jesus had said, and that made them feel that Jesus must be with them, and so with this belief they went out to launch the Christian religion.

This is not a satisfactory explanation of a radiant religion, a religion that carried the triumphant note of everlasting life. There is only one rational answer to the query—the disciples believed that they had seen Jesus alive after His death. This is the conviction on which the disciples worked. They faced a cruel, unsympathetic world, and for the bold and triumphant story they told, they gave their lives in martyrdom. Men do not usually die for a fact or creed about which they have any doubts.

The doctrine of immortality as promulgated by the Christian Church has been one of the most potent forces in its spread throughout the world. Though other religions and other faiths believe in some kind of immortality, the Christian faith actually brings comfort and consolation to those who are sad and lonely. If we may draw conclusions from the teachings of Jesus, we may say

Christian Orphanage

Dear Friends:

"I will and bequeath to the Christian Orphanage, located at Elon College, N. C., the sum ofdollars for its uses and purposes." We wonder how many have written this clause in their will! It is a cold, hard heart that does not respond to the cry of a little child. They are the most precious of God's creation. They are the most helpless of His creatures. It takes a lot of loving to make a happy home. It takes a lot of loving care to rear a little child. They are so responsive to love and care, a good parent is willing to make any sacrifice for the child. What can bring more joy in a home than the little child? I once heard a great preacher say in one of his sermons that he pitied a home without children, and his advice was if a home had no children in it to adopt one. Some trouble, of course, to care for a child and rear it; but what a joy when it goes out in life and makes a real success and renders some service for the uplift of mankind! One of the great joys we have in this orphanage work is the joy of seeing our children do well when they go out from this institution. We forget the worry, the care, the task of rearing them in the joy of seeing them make good. Who could wish for a dollar back that they had invested in a little helpless child, if by that investment it makes good in life. We have a girl graduating this month as a nurse. That same girl came to us a little, helpless tot and was for some time the baby of the institution. You gave her an opportunity by your contributions, and now she is ready and prepared to go out to face the world and be of service to humanity. Don't forget to help your Orphanage.

Superintendent.

ANNIVERSARY.

Friedens Lutheran Church, near Gibsonville, N. C., will celebrate its 160th anniversary on Sunday, June 7th, with an all-day program devoted to history, memorial exercises, etc. The morning exercise will begin at 11 o'clock, and the afternoon at 2 o'clock. A large crowd of friends and visitors is expected for this interesting occasion.

SKETCH OF LIFE.

Chapel, 2 years; Hanks Chapel, 3 years; Center Grove, 3 years; Morrisville, 4 years; Mt. Gilead, 1 and one-half years; Hayes Chapel, 1 year; Pleasant Ridge (G), 2 years; Pleasant Hill, 1 year; Bell's Chapel, 1 year; Mebane, 2 years; Asheboro, 2 years; Christian Chapel, 7 years; Kallam Grove, 3 years; Long's Chapel, 2 years; New Elam, 6 years; Mt. Carmel, 2 years. This up to and including 1923.

From 1923 to 1930, I preached 403 times or more; 2,167 professed faith in Christ in my own field, besides those who professed in other fields while doing evangelistic work. Received into Church membership, 54; baptized, 30-odd; funerals, 21; married, 14 couples; made about 1,000 pastoral visits.

During 1930 I led a meeting for seven weeks in Gibsonville, D. N., during which time many souls professed to be saved.

I have done much more not for reputation or earthly honor, but for the glory of God, for the exaltation of Jesus, and for honoring the Holy Ghost.

Yours, saved through Him,
PETER THOMAS KLAPP.

THE SUN'S PULPIT.

that heaven is a place or a state of existence where compensations work out satisfactorily, where life seems worth while, where rest comes for the weary, where work is a joy and service a delight. It may mean different things to different people, but perhaps, above everything else, Jesus gave us to understand it is the "Homeland." Going home seems to be the sweet expression the believer has a right to use.

But immortality means more than that. We may hold it as our creed and rejoice in the thought of our precious possession, but it is much better if we live it and practice it every day. If there are any who still have shadowy doubts about it, let them assume it to be true and live as if it were really true! That is the way progress is made in the scientific world, and this method is equally good in the religious world.

St. Paul constantly urged his friends to live the resurrection life, which means a life with the upward trend toward a practical Christ-likeness. Perhaps we may say, "Live the life of the glowing heart and the radiant soul." Easter should mean to us all a glorious daybreak.

OBITUARIES.

JOHNSON, BRINKLEY, DARDEN, ALEXANDER.

We, your committee on memoirs, beg leave to make the following report:

Whereas, Almighty God, in His infinite wisdom and machless love, has seen fit to call from earth to reward our fellow-alumni—Rev. L. F. Johnson, D. D., class '02; Miss Mary Brinkley, Driver, Va.; Prof. Gilmer F. Alexander, Greensboro, N. C., '19; George Darden, Greensboro, N. C.—therefore, be it resolved:

1. That we bow in humble submission to the will of our Heavenly Father, who doeth all things well.

2. That we express our heartfelt sympathy and prayers, through the secretary of the association, to the members of the bereaved families.

3. That a copy of these resolutions be spread on the minutes of the association, and that they be printed in The Christian Sun.

FALLIN.

Mr. Willie Fallin, the son of Mr. and Mrs. W. R. Fallin, deceased, was born May 19, 1899, and came to a tragic end May 2, 1931, age 31 years, 11 months, and 12 days. He was employed by the West Florida Ice Corp. when fatally injured. He had loaded his delivery wagon from a truck of the company and was preparing to deliver his ice when the truck was cranked while being in reverse gear, he being crushed between the two vehicles.

He was highly esteemed by his employer and fellow-workers. A very appropriate service was held in the First Presbyterian Church by Dr. George White before the body was shipped to North Carolina for burial. He was married to Miss Sallie Michael on May 28, 1919, and to this union were born two children, Edna, deceased, and Ollie Louise.

Funeral service was conducted by the writer, at Bethlehem Christian Church, May 7, 1931, at 2:30 P. M. A large crowd was in attendance and the floral offering was beautiful. May the Lord comfort the bereaved ones.

L. L. WYRICK.

GUNTER.

Whereas, our Heavenly Father, in His infinite wisdom and love, has called to his eternal home our beloved co-worker and fellow-member, June U. Gunter, we, the Sanford Christian Church, the board of deacons, the Sunday School, and his class of young men, unite in offering the following tribute to his memory; therefore, be it resolved:

1. That God, in His all-wise providence, doeth all things well, so, while we mourn the loss of one who meant so much to the Church when he was in the prime of life and service, we bow in humble submission to His divine will.

2. That, in his going, our Church has sustained the loss of one of its charter members, who has been a loyal and active leader in every phase of Church activity during the time since it was organized twenty-eight years ago. He loved his Church and Sunday School, always giving freely and generously of his best in time, in talent, and of his means for their support. He was not only a faithful and active worker, but his cheerful disposition, his optimism, and his love of service inspired and encouraged others to do their best. He was a friend and counselor to those discouraged and despondent, a neighbor and helper to those in need and want. His was a life of service, cheer and good will. His life was spent in making the world a better and happier place in which to live. The memory of his life of usefulness and the fine spirit of Christian fellowship he promoted will be an incentive and an inspiration for us to live better and more useful lives through the years to come.

and sympathy to the family in their loss, and commend them to Him who can sustain and comfort.

4. That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the family, to the papers for publication, and placed on the minutes of the Church.

ELON COLLEGE

AN ACCREDITED COLLEGE

of the

CONGREGATIONAL CHRISTIAN CHURCHES OF THE SOUTHEAST

ELON was founded to train Christian leaders for the New South.

ELON has done its task well—one graduate in seven being in the Christian ministry. The other six express Christian leadership in the various professions and vocations. Experience teaches that spiritual leadership must be indigenous.

The South is now a New South ready for an inclusive Church, the type of Church for which Elon has stood for forty years and for which she is prepared to produce capable leadership.

With no Church in the community, save the College Auditorium, ELON has practiced Christian Union for faculty, students, and community for four decades.

Its contribution to Christian Education is nationally known and approved.

Its Christian Education Building, providing laboratory facilities for religious leadership training, is unique and is the first college building of its type in the world.

ELON confines itself to undergraduate liberal arts work with that religious emphasis which befits the Christian College.

In ELON the Congregational-Christian Church has an asset of marvelous hopefulness.

The South needs her Yale, her Oberlin, her Carleton, her Pomona for the intellectual leadership of the United Church. Many regard ELON as strategically located and spiritually endowed to become such a center of illumination and leadership training.

DIXON.

Mr. E. T. Dixon, son of Brown and Agnes White Dixon, was born in Lumpkin, Ga., June 25, 1852, and died near Nathalie, Halifax County, Va., April 27, 1931, age 78 years, 10 months and 2 days. When he was a small boy, his parents moved to Halifax County, Va., in the Crystal Hill section, and the remainder of his life was spent in this section.

Bro. Dixon was twice married. On January 2, 1882, he was wed to Miss Lillie Davis Jennings. To them one daughter was born, Mary Agnes, who, in 1903, married R. J. Wilborn. Mrs. Dixon died on January 31, 1905. On April 10, 1907, he was married by the writer to Miss Nannie Bray, daughter of the late Deacon J. A. Bray, who survives him. He is also survived by his daughter, seven grandsons, two granddaughters and two brothers, J. J. Dixon, of Nathalie, Va., and William Dixon, of West Virginia; two sisters, Mrs. J. D. Stanley, of Lennig, Va., and Mr. C. W. McKinney, of South Boston, Va.; one sister, Mrs. Sallie M. Norman, deceased.

I can say of Bro. Dixon that he was true in all relations of life. In his home he was a faithful husband and pleasant host. In his last illness, he, in the same spirit of humility so characteristic of him, said he felt unworthy, but loved everybody and could trust all with the Lord. Halifax County has lost an excellent citizen, Liberty Church a loyal member and faithful supporter, his neighbors a true friend, but our greatest sympathy goes out for his family, to whom he was so loyal and devoted. May all be united beyond when life's pilgrimage here is over.

WORLD'S W. C. T. U. CONVENTION.—

The fourteenth triennial convention of the World's Woman's Christian Temperance Union was held in Toronto, Canada, during the past week. It is reported that delegates were present from the five continents, representing forty countries. The programs discussed included the world trend toward prohibition, temperance education, world peace, and political equality for women in countries not yet having woman suffrage.

A SPIRITUAL RALLY.—

The nine congregations of the Evangelical Church in greater Cleveland, Ohio, held a spring rally on Sunday, May 24th. The afternoon program was sponsored by the newly organized Greater Cleveland Evangelical Young People's Union. The evening service was addressed by Dr. W. L. Bollman, executive secretary of the Evangelical Board of Missions. Such rallies among our young people would stimulate the study of the religious needs of the younger generation and prepare them for evangelist work that should follow, by which many of them would enlist for the kingdom of God. This the evangelistic period of the Church and all agencies should be focalized on this function of the Church.

CHRISTIAN EDUCATION.—

The twenty-three Church-supported colleges of the State which make Ohio one of the country's chief centers of Christian education will graduate approximately 2,500 young men and women in this month. Their aggregate enrollment this year is more than 13,000 students. With the number of young people working in the field of Christian education in any State, the future of the morals and Christian character of our country should be safe. All the young people of the Christian Church should patronize their college as far as consistent with their educational needs. The religious and Christian atmosphere will enrich the spiritual life of our youth as nothing else can, and the traditions of the Church of which they are members will adjust them to their future spiritual environment.

THE WETS DIE HARD.—

The Ohio legislative session, now drawing to a close, has offered no encouragement to the wets. Prohibition laws and constitutional provisions remain unchanged, sixteen bills and resolutions on this subject having died in the committees. Repeal of all State prohibition laws, repeal of the State dry amendment, and a formal constitutional convention to consider amendments were among the steps proposed in these measures. The wets do not want to stay dry and the dries do not want to get wet, but the real reason that there is so much effort to return to the legalized crime of selling intoxicating liquors is largely due to the opportunity it offers for speculation and money-making. Certainly it is not for the moral, spiritual, or intellectual well-being of the country. Selfishness is at the root of all evil.

OUR CHURCH CONFERENCES.—

This is the season of denominational conferences in the State of Ohio. The Congregational-Christian Conference and the Ohio Baptist Convention have been held, and the Disciples are meeting this week. During this month the sessions of the Evangelical Synod, the Presbyterian and the Reformed Churches will be held. The two Methodist Episcopal Conferences will be held in September, along with the Central German Conference of that denomination, which covers several States and which is to assemble in Columbus. This reminds me that the Conferences in the Southern Christian Convention will soon be in session and every pastor and local Church should be on the alert in making this the greatest year in the history of the denomination. The Church needs the combined efforts of all forces in the evangelistic and in the financial support of our people this year to meet our obligations.

CHRISTIAN CULTURE CLASSES.—

Many of our Churches are organizing Christian culture classes, in which young people are united in the study of Christian problems under the direction of the pastor or some other well-prepared leader. Following the group study, the pastor holds individual consultations on religious complexes, difficulties in faith, reconstruction work, and individual guidance. This gives the youth of our time an opportunity to acquire their religious inheritance from their most capable spiritual guides. Many problems of pioneering youth can be settled to better advantage by the wise counsel to those who are prepared to advise on spiritual problems. Books are selected for the members to read during the interval between meetings, which are held once a month under the direction of the pastor or some one delegated by him. These books present religious, social, moral and spiritual problems for discussion in the meetings.

FAITHS UNITED IN STUDY.—

Catholics, Jews and Protestants co-operated in a "Marriage and Home Conference" at Cleveland last week. The promotion was directed by the Adult Education Association. On the opening evening the speakers were Monsignor James A. McFadden, Rabbi Abba Hillel Silver, and Dr. Miles H. Krumbine. Bishop Warren Lincoln Rogers of the Episcopal diocese of northern Ohio, presided. There will be a follow-up of the conference in Protestant groups by the organization of classes in local Churches, with the minister in charge. This is a Christian culture course for the study of marriage and home problems. Why cannot any pastor hold such classes with his married people to improve conditions in the homes of his parish? Why not hold such classes with the young people to prepare them for married life, and home study to prepare them for the duties of married life before they enter upon the duties of this new relation?

GIFT FOR EDUCATION.—

The Rockefeller gift to the London School of Economics, a very large and generous gift, will bring needed help to a very valuable institution. Part of it will be used for the rebuilding and development of the library. This will be one of the great libraries of the world, with a complete equipment for all students of social sciences. At present, over 200 post-graduate students are engaged on pieces of original research. The outcomes of such investigation will become the possession of the whole world, so that such a gift to this institution is in reality a gift to the entire world and to all future generations. What wise, what more generous, what more far-reaching thing could a Christian do than invest his money in such institutions to serve all generations for all future time. The membership of the Christian Church should cultivate the spirit of investing their means in the great benevolences of the Church to serve all humanity for all time. This is immortality in the lives of others.

SELF-GOVERNING INDIA AND MISSIONS.—

A statement by Mr. Gandhi on the work of foreign missionaries in the future self-governing India has been the occasion of a great controversy here. Mr. Stanley Jones, the famous evangelist, has thought it fit to address a long open letter to Mr. Gandhi on the subject. Comments have been appearing in Protestant and Roman Catholic journals calling upon Mr. Gandhi to make his position clear. The statement has been cabled to Great Britain, and possibly to America also, and our newspapers here are publishing summaries of the comments that British clergymen and politicians have been making on the statement. He should be frank and say, "If, instead of confining themselves purely to humanitarian work such as education, medical services to the poor and the like, the missionaries would use these activities of theirs for the purpose of proselyting, I would certainly like them to withdraw. Every nation considers its own faith to be as good as that of any other. Certainly the great faiths held by the people of India are adequate for her people. India stands in no need of conversion from one faith to another." Will India be satisfied with the religion that she has, or shall the missionaries be able to introduce the Christian religion there as better than the religions that they hold?

NOTES-PERSONALS

Upon the resignation of Dr. W. A. Harper as President of Elon College, the Board of Trustees elected him a member of that body in appreciation of the services which he had rendered during the past twenty years. He was also made a member of the executive committee.

The Sunday School and Christian Endeavor Convention of the Valley Virginia Conference meets in annual session at Bethel near Elkton, Va., Thursday and Friday, June 18th and 19th. Brother Roy A. Larrick, president, writes that "the program has now been completed." A great convention is anticipated.

We believe in education and in the creation of public sentiment as a result of education; but we think a lot of this demand for public sentiment that already exists is a mere blind behind which unfaithful public servants hide their dereliction of duty. We need prosecutors who will keep their oaths instead of kotowing to wealth and political influence.—Pittsburgh Christian Advocate.

Rev. C. E. Gerringer, Wakefield, Va., writes: "After prayerful consideration, I have given the pastoral committee my resignation to become effective November 1, 1931. This action was taken for no other reason than I felt it best for a change. The Church called a meeting and voted to ask me to reconsider the matter and to remain for another year, giving me sixty days for my decision. The work moves along very nicely here, considering the closing of the bank and the general depression."

Rev. Geo. N. Edwards, pastor Circular Church, Charleston, S. C., requests that the following information be given CHRISTIAN SUN readers: "At the annual meeting of the Women's League of the Carolinas, held at Greensboro, May 6th, the following officers were elected for the ensuing year: President, Mrs. Grady Leonard, Chapel Hill, N. C.; first vice-president, Mrs. W. T. Scott, Salisbury, N. C.; second vice-president, Mrs. Florence L. Squires, P. O. Box 57, Columbia, S. C.; third vice-president, Miss Bertha Morton; secretary, Mrs. G. N. Edwards, 47 Pitt St., Charleston, S. C.; treasurer, Mrs. E. W. Boshart, 125 Woodburn Road, Raleigh, N. C.; social service secretary, Miss Ida S. Robinson, P. O. Box 1316, Southern Pines, N. C."

Our missionary acknowledgement this week carries an item of $1,100.00, an offering from Christian Temple. Those who know conditions in Norfolk will realize that this was given not out of abundance, but out of want; not out of bounty, but out of blessings; not out of plenty, but out of need. Burdened with a great program of progress, even with local church indebtedness, Dr. Smith and his faithful of Christian Temple set the whole Church a high example of self-denial, that the glory of their God may be manifest in the world and the saving power of His life may be theirs. One wonders if the word of inspiration (Nehemiah 8:10) does not apply to this people: "The joy of the Lord is your strength," or of Jeremiah 15:16: "Thy word was unto me the joy and rejoicing of mine heart."

Prof. J. W. Barney has been made chairman of the faculty at Elon College and, as stated last week, is to furnish the Elon Letter to THE SUN. Prof. Barney is no novice with the pen and no stranger to CHRISTIAN SUN readers and the Christian Church. His father was a devout Christian minister, and in early youth J. W. became identified with the Christian Church. He is an alumnus of Elon College, having graduated from the college years ago with high honors and distinction. He has for some years been identified with the English Department of the college and has impressed his students, as well as his fellow associates of the faculty, and the public, with the weight and worth of his wisdom and personality; also of his balanced judgment, of his tireless energy, and with his splendid ability as teacher as well as his loyalty and devotion to Alma Mater, and his walk and work as a Christian gentleman and scholar. He has the confidence and the esteem of those who know him, and the chairmanship has fallen into capable hands. SUN readers will find something from his pen each week of real worth and merit.

That was a wonderful revival that Pastor M. T. Sorrell tells of in his Danville, Va., Church recently. Rev. H. C. Caviness, who was with Pastor Sorrell and did most of the preaching, speaks of the Danville revival as "the greatest meeting we have ever been in, all the glory be to God. Over 100 additions to the church and several to adjacent churches. They are now planning to have a full-time pastor after this year; some seventy or more new tithers, and now over 100 tithers in the church, and two separate Sabbath days set apart each month in which to gather money for Missions. The additions were largely adults, too, and fine folks. The day of revivals is not passed if we will pay the price, and it required a heavy price in Danville. One of the greatest contributing factors humanly speaking, was the poverty and hardships through which the folks in Danville had passed and are passing. Danville is in possibly the worst shape financially of any city in Virginia." Brother Sorrell tells of the meeting from which 102 members have already joined his church. We rejoice with Pastor Sorrell and with Brother Caviness, who was the evangelist of the meeting. Surely a goodly work of grace has been wrought in the hearts of the people there. And if they are to be kept in the way on which they have now started, they will have to be led to see and to realize that the only way of the better life is to share that life with others, and the way to glory and to God is by the way of the cross, self-denial, sacrifice, in His name and for His sake.

JUNE CRADLE ROLL RALLY.

It is almost June again. The very best month of all for us who are interested in cradle roll activities. Already we are planning for our annual rally day party, when all the little children from infancy to six years of age come together, bringing their well-filled mite-boxes for an afternoon of joy and learning. Let us strive earnestly to make this occasion one of missionary inspiration and instruction. No Church or Sunday School (it makes little difference under which it is conducted) should neglect to make definite provision for this phase of the child's early religious nurture.

It is not too late to organize and have your rally in June. From J. O. Atkinson, Mission Secretary, Elon College, N. C., you may obtain the cradle roll mite-boxes. Begin to talk about your party and send as attractive invitations as possible. A spacious lawn, conveniently located, proves a nice place, especially where there are a large number of children. The Sunday School room, attractively decorated with flowers, may be used.

The program should be arranged to suit the place and conditions where the service is to be held, varying with the ages of children participating. For this reason, I am not attempting to give a program, but shall be glad to help any one who cares to write to me. I would suggest that you use the songs already familiar to children which they enjoy so much; also readings and Bible verses of a missionary nature. (For suggested programs, also see THE CHRISTIAN SUN, page 9, May 21.)

Though each of you are interested in reaching your financial goal, and impressing the little minds that it is more blessed to give than receive, our highest aim must be to acquaint them with the Babe of Bethlehem, Jesus, who grew in statue and in favor with God and man, and said "Let the little children come unto me, and forbid them not, for of such is the kingdom of heaven."

METHODS CORNER

By REV. ELISHA A. KING, D. D.

Miami Beach, Fla.

It has been said sometimes that Churches are beggars. This means that some Churches are always asking for money or something. A few days ago a prominent business man told me that he was getting tired of having his pastor asking for money every Sunday. "It is not his business to be always asking the people for Church benevolences. That is the layman's job. I am chairman of the finance committee of the Church, and next Sunday I am going to get up in Church and tell the men of the congregation what I think about it." The only reason for quoting these words is to show that it is not wise to be always asking for money from the pulpit.

There should be stated times when this can be done with good grace. It would be much better if the pulpit could be kept entirely clear of solicitation for funds or of announcements, though it is hard to live up to such a rule, especially in a small Church. We are always desirous of having visitors at our services, and we are anxious to secure new members, but if we create the impression that we want money more than people, we defeat our purpose.

If the Church would carefully consider an annual budget and adopt it and make subscriptions regularly, weekly or monthly, or semi-annually, using weekly envelopes for such payments, the business side of the Church would get on better. If the Church would put into this budget a liberal amount for benevolences, the whole Church would have a part in the whole benevolence program. If something could be given to local needs, to some community charity or relief of some kind, it would put the Church in line with humanitarian efforts and win the hearty approval of the community.

Another way to minister to the needs of the community is to have a society that does actual social service work. For example, we have a woman's association that keeps in touch with various welfare societies and makes dresses and other things for children, and also helps in providing clothes for needy adults. The Sunday School makes a gift occasionally to the children's home or to needy poor children for shoes and stockings. Members of the Church, in considerable numbers, engage in all kinds of social uplift work. When a Church engages in actual social service and welfare work, it becomes a valuable contributor to community life, and the people all about realize that such a Church is a live, practical, helpful society with which they should cooperate. To such a Church, the community will contribute funds. Such a Church gives as well as receives.

CONGREGATIONAL NEWS

REV. E. C. GILLETTE, Editor; REV. F. P. ENSMINGER, and REV. M. J. SWEET, Associates.

AT THORSBY the Commencement Address was delivered by Dr. Frank E. Jenkins, president of the Board of Trustees of the Junior College at Wadley, and father of Miss Helen Jenkins, principal of Thorsby Institute, which had a successful year with an attendance larger than usual.

PROF. SUTLIF and MISS RUTH GERALD were the principals in a church wedding at Thorsby, on May 30th. Rev. J. E. Each officiated. Prof. Sutlif teaches in the institute next year. Bride and groom are from Piedmont College. Mrs. Sutlif has been employed by the Birmingham News.

FLORIDA'S STUDENT SUMMER SERVICE WORKERS this year are Mr. John Rae Chapman of Williams College and Union Seminary, who will supply the church at Coral Gables; and Mr. Charles B. Fulton of Lake Worth, who goes to Holly Hill. These young men will take part in the Young People's Conference at Camp Immokalee, June 9th-19th.

SUMMER WORK BY STUDENTS is now beginning, the vanguard of this selected group of young people being already on the field. Considering the business depression, the number of workers is large. This is due to Dr. Bloom's faith in them and the cause of their support. Congregational and Christian schools of the Southeast are well represented on the list.

VISITORS TO THE JACKSONVILLE OFFICE this week were Rev. Luman H. Royce, D. D., of Cleveland, Ohio, Director of City Work for the Congregational Church Extension Boards; Rev. Milo J. Sweet of Salisbury, N. C., pastor at Large for Georgia and the Carolinas, under the Congregational Church Extension Boards; and Miss Annie R. Campbell of Waycross, Georgia, Extension Worker for Georgia. While in the State Dr. Royce visited several of our most important churches and conferred with the building committee at Fort Myers with regard to the building of the first unit of a new church there.

REV. EDWIN E. WHITE of Pleasant Hill, Tennessee, is girding himself for another summer of strenuous activity in the religious and social extension work for the many unchurched or unpastored neighborhoods and hamlets of his region. This is undoubtedly the largest effort of its kind in any of our Churches of the Southeast. Last season there were sixteen Daily Vacation Bible Schools, with an average attendance of five hundred pupils, and a number of clubs. Brother White preaches sometimes in most of these places and regularly in four centers. Thirty-five people recently attended the week-end training school for workers in which Miss Davison had a leading part.

REV. CARL PARKER, pastor of three of our fine Georgia churches, Duncan's Creek, Center and County Line, reports an unusually successful work for the first three months of the year for these Beacon Lights set for the guidance of men on their pilgrimages to the City of God. Each of these churches is free of all debt; have increased in numbers and spiritual strength. Two of these churches, Duncan's Creek and County Line, have purchased and paid for new pianos during these three months. Duncan's Creek observed Memorial Sunday, May 24th, when about twelve hundred people gathered there. The pastor gave the address. The offering amounted to over $70.00. Center Church, Atlanta, has painted the building and beautified the grounds. In June, this church is to celebrate the sixth anniversary of the present pastorate with an all-day service. The exact day will be announced later. The County Line Church has improved the grounds by placing top soil thereon and it looks exceedingly well. They received three new members at the last communion service. They have extended to Mr. Parker a call to continue for another year as their minister.

FLOYD McMASTER PRICE of New Brookfield, S. C., was ordained in the Chapel of the Vanderbilt School of Religion on May 26th by a council of Tennessee Conference Churches and the Church at Columbia, S. C., and individuals called by Collegese Church. Dr. Jason Noble Pierce made arrangements, including the printing of the program. The examination was interesting in its range and in the romance of a young man choosing a sacred calling. Dr. Raymond preached the ordination sermon. President Campbell of the Atlanta Theological Seminary Foundation was Moderator of the Council and gave the greeting of the right hand of fellowship. Rev. George W. Blount was council scribe. Dr. Zimmermann made the invocation, while Prof. C. C. Haun read the scripture and Dr. Pierce led in the ordaining prayer. Dr. Tillett, Dean Emeritus of the School of Religion, commended Mr. Price, who is a graduate of Country Life Academy, Piedmont College and the School of Religion. The chapel was well filled with the council and friends of the candidate. The theologues were much interested in the exercise which was the first of its kind to occur in the chapel. Mrs. Price is taking a course in the Nurses' Training School of Vanderbilt.

REV. CHARLES W. SMITH of Phenix City, Alabama, had a great day on May 31st, when the beautiful church, which he rebuilt after the fire of December, was re-dedicated. The edifice is improved by a tower and is attractively decorated inside. The pews are of fine appearance and as comfortable as can be made. The art-glass windows of the church add the final touch to its beauty. There are thirteen such windows. The four in front are in honor of Rev. E. W. Butler, Dr. Neil McQuarrie, Rev. and Mrs. Smith, and Dr. W. Knighton Bloom. Brother Butler, who made the dedicatory prayer at the exercise, was surprised to see the window bearing his name, as was also Miss Marguerite Davison, who found one in her honor in the largest class-room. This was subscribed for by sixteen of Miss Davison's fellow workers, including nine of the students of the School of Religion at Nashville. There were five pulpit participants in the dedication program, counting Moderator George D. Hunt of the Alabama Conference of Congregational and Christian Churches, and Rev. C. C. Hamilton, pastor of the Rose Hill Christian and Congregational Church of Columbus, Georgia. At a fraternal meeting at night, about one hundred from Beulah Christian Church congregation of Phenix City attended the meeting in a body and heard their pastor, Rev. T. J. Dean, preach a fraternal sermon.

YOUNG PEOPLE'S CONFERENCE.

The South Georgia Young People's Week-End Conference was held at Union Hill Church, Pearson, Georgia, May 31st. Miss Annie R. Campbell is responsible for this fine conference. She went from church to church, during the last month, helping the young people to catch visions and dream dreams. And the beauty of it in this case is that the dreams came true. A few churches were not represented for local reasons, as, for instance, at Antioch there was a big all-day "Sing." Sickness at Poplar Arbor, with other complications, kept them home; but they came from Ambrose, New Light, Enigma, Vanceville, Friendship, one from Jacksonville, Florida, one from North Carolina, and two from Piedmont College, as helpers.

Union Hill was again at her best. How these young people do like to operate and best of all to "co-operate." They entertained this crowd superbly Saturday night and all day Sunday. They never tired and the delegates were always happy.

The program was carried on almost entirely by the young people. Vanceville had charge of the morning devotions, with Mr. Little of Enigma, assisted by Mr. Carpenter, in charge. Friendship had charge of the morning hour of worship in which Mr. Alvin Branch acted as chairman, with Miss Purcell, Miss Bulliard, Miss Branch and Miss Overstreet sharing in the service. The Communion service was conducted by Rev. Milo J. Sweet, with the assistance of Miss Purcell, Miss Corbett, Mr. Little and Mr. Branch. It was a very dignified and sacred service. The hymns sung and responsive parts were taken from the new hymnal being used by the several churches, and the high standard of all the hymns used at this conference marks an advance in taste for the best in church hymns. These hymnals are furnished at low cost by the Commission on Evangelism, Rev. F. L. Fagley, 287 Fourth Avenue, New York City.

In the afternoon the young people went into a seminar on church organization, followed by a discussion period led by Miss Pattie Lee Coghill of Florida. The group then followed Miss Campbell up a winding path to a hillside where the crowning service of the day, the Vesper Service, was conducted by Miss Coghill. Such meetings cannot be described. Literally everybody felt the power of the Spirit of God, even the children, as they were led by soft, quiet voice in speech, and in song, to the very portals of the place where God lives. They gently knocked and it opened unto them; they sought, O so gently, and they found. He came in and supped with them and they with Him and then on the breath of God, in subduing yet uplifting prayer, the closing service of the whole conference was ended. All present felt the importance of silence and its holiness and cared not to speak but still to think and to drink of the living waters of life flowing into soul after soul from the wells of the blue sky and the soft grassy earth, the woodland, the bird song, the glory of the sun, just going down, and the rising tides of a new devotion experience by the crowd present. Surely God was in this place, mingling with His friends.

The officers elected are: Alvin Branch, Friendship Church, Baxley, president; Hershel Williamson, Antioch Church, Bristol, vice-president; Mr. Little, Enigma Church, secretary-treasurer, with Miss Cole of New Light Church as assistant. It was voted to raise the money to send the president, Mr. Alvin Branch, to Blue Ridge Conference, with Mr. Little as alternate. Although the Friendship people had gone home, and so could not be consulted, nevertheless, it was unanimously voted to hold the next conference, with their consent yet to be obtained, at Friendship Church, Baxley. Informal resolutions of thanks to the splendid hospitality of Union Hill Church were given, and everybody felt greatly repaid for coming to this Week-End Conference.

PRINCIPLES OF THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

- (1) The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
- (2) Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.
- (3) The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
- (4) Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship and of Church membership.
- (5) The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by, all.

THE PURPOSE OF THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

The purpose of this Church is to cultivate a spirit of union among the followers of our Lord Jesus Christ of every persuasion, and to secure, if possible, the associate efforts of all true religious teachers in pointing the wicked to "the Lamb of God who taketh away the sin of the world."

The peculiar doctrines and tenets which have confused and distracted the Christian world are remanded to private judgment, and hence cease to be matters for debate, only in so far as may be necessary to prevent a sectarian influence from entering the Church.

This Church requires no compromise of faith on the part of any child of God in order to communion or fellowship; here, denominational distinctions cease to exist, and Christian love binds the brotherhood together.

The purpose of this Church will be consummated in the conversion of the world and the union of all Christians.

A SQUARE DEAL WITH SUNDAY SCHOOL PUPILS.

Are our Sunday Schools giving teachers and pupils a square deal? Certainly not any intentional wrong is done or error made, but all the same isn't there a wrong? Isn't there an error? Consider a moment.

We send our children to the week-day school, and out of our pockets pay for their text-books. We would hardly think of sending them to a week-day school and then urge that their teachers, once a week, take up a collection with which to buy their text-books. Would we? Yet, presto! when it comes to Sunday School, either our morals or our manners, our customs or our courage, lead us to do this very thing. We carry or send our children to Sunday School, and ask them to contribute their nickels or their dimes, when the "collection" is taken in class. What is that collection for? The answer is very simple in many schools. It is to buy text-books (quarterlies, leaflets, picture cards) for those same pupils to study. We actually do in our Sunday Schools, in all seriousness, that which we never think of doing in our day-schools, viz: Take a collection once a week to help buy books to study.

A few years ago our Christian Church in annual Conferences and in Sunday School Conventions faced this situation, and decided, so far as the delegates present were concerned, that, in a measure, this wrong should be righted, this error corrected, and so it was voted time and time again that every Sunday School in the Christian Convention should give one offering a month to Missions, one offering a month to the Orphanage.

This was an improvement. This is an improvement. It at least goes half-way in correcting an error, and making right a wrong. It says to pupils and the public that on at least two Sundays in a month the children's money shall not be used to buy something for themselves, but shall be used to share with others the joy that the Sunday School gives them. This went half way at least, and so the children and teachers in these schools know that only twice a month is the money they contribute used to buy something for themselves. Hasn't the time arrived when we should be at least as generous to our children on Sunday as we are during the week? Should not we be at least as liberal in supplying them with the good literature they use and study on Sunday, as we are in buying their arithmetics, geographies and reading books for study in the day-schools during the week? Why teach a child to give an "offering" to buy literature to study Sunday, and then in the week buy for that child the literature he is to use in the day-school? Why such a distinction, we wonder?

One day this wrong will be righted and this error will be corrected. Some day the Church will be putting in its budget or parents will be taking from their pockets the money with which to buy literature for the Sunday School, just as the State makes parents do for their children in the week.

But look! One may not think it possible, and yet it is a fact that we Christians yet have quite a few Sunday Schools that will not even give a once a month offering to others—to help give the light of Him for whose love and life the Sunday School was instituted, to those who haven't that light and do not know it. There are quite a few Sunday Schools in our Conventions and Conferences that go on in the same old way, either consciously or unconsciously, intentionally or unintentionally, fooling the children and making them think they are "giving to the Lord" on Sunday, when in very truth, the ones in charge know full well those children are not giving anything to anybody; for every penny and nickel they give will be used to buy something for themselves. Yes, it is a good something, but, nevertheless, it is for themselves—literature, quarterlies, leaflets, picture cards. Yes, they are good. They are essential. They must be had if the Sunday School is to keep going. Text-books must be had also if the day-school is to be kept going, and the child must carry his text-books with him when he goes to the day-school or he will not go long. Strange, indeed, it is that there are yet Sunday Schools who feel like they are so poor that they cannot give any of their money, even once a month, to the glory of God, and for the building up of His kingdom and for the betterment of mankind. Let us play square with the children. If we are using all their money collected on Sunday to buy literature to keep up their school, tell them so. Do not fool them into thinking they are giving something to the Lord or to any unselfish purpose. Just tell them all their little offerings on Sunday will be used to buy something for themselves, that the Sunday School cannot run unless they buy something for themselves. However, when they start to school on Monday do not tell them that, but buy the books they are to use during the week.

Such an error will not hold forever, and a Sunday School that continues to perpetrate that error may expect to remain poor and needy and be strained to the last penny to buy literature and pay local expenses. Such a school ought to be strained, for the simple reason that it is going solely on a selfish basis, and keeping every penny that it collects to be used for itself. If a child spends all his money on himself, we call that selfish. If one hundred children do the same, even at Sunday School, that too is selfish.

Our Lord taught a long time ago, that "where your treasure is, there will your heart be also." If we spend that treasure on ourselves, our heart will be centered on ourselves. If we put that treasure into service for the sake of our Lord, our heart will be centered on Him. "If any man will come after me, let him deny himself, take up his cross daily and follow me." There isn't any self-denial, there isn't taking up any cross, when we use our money, even if collected through a Sunday School, to buy something for ourselves. Let us give our children, and our Sunday Schools, a square deal and a fair chance, and set up there the standard of noble sacrifice and consecrated self-denial, that the cause of our Lord may be honored, and His name glorified even in the Sunday School and in the hearts of the Children.

THE CHURCH AT A STANDSTILL.

"For twenty years now the membership of the Church in relation to population has been at a standstill." So declared the Washington Congress of the Home Mission Council of America, recently. It has not always been so. Time was when the Church expanded far more rapidly than the population. The Washington Congress told why and how: "For a century the Church in America labored under the conviction that it must expand and press on. If that sense of imperative need has been lost, we must re-create it in the Church." Has the Church lost its sense of imperative need for expansion? Has the Church lost its passion for soul saving? Has it lost its power to move forward? For about twenty years we have been hearing very much about "evangelism dying out," many declaring that "the day of the revival was over" and that the period of evangelism had passed. Does this account for the appalling fact, which the Washington Congress declared and faced, that in relation to population the Church has been at a standstill for twenty years?

Fifty-five out of every hundred adults in the United States are affiliated with the Church, or with some society or organization of the Church. This leaves forty-five out of every hundred adults in the United States not affiliated with any church organization whatever.

Church membership varies somewhat as to number in relation to population, but the total for the entire country is that of fifty-five in the Church to forty-five outside.

Here in the South, and along the Atlantic seaboard, with our older settlements and a more stable population, sixty-five out of every hundred adults belong to some church; thirty-five out of every hundred even here are affiliated with no church.

But as one goes west and on out to the Pacific, the figures are reversed, and only thirty-five out of every hundred are members of some church organization; sixty-five out of every hundred are affiliated with no church. We have heard much of churches because of denominationalism overlapping. In many sections this is painfully true, but in others it is equally, even more painfully, true, that there is "under-lapping" and woeful inadequacy. "In New Mexico, in Wyoming, in Idaho, in Arizona, in Nevada, in certain counties of California, large areas and thriving communities are found where the Church has not yet entered." Robert N. McLean, in a paragraph just from the press, says:

"Recently I chanced to visit a town in Arizona which has a population of about fifteen hundred. It is located on the railroad line at the junction of two automobile roads. There is a fine school with seven teachers, a bank, an up-to-date hotel, a goodly number of stores, but there is no church of any sort. God is not being counted in the development of that town. A recent survey conducted by the Home Mission Council shows that there are whole communities in the State of Maine which are absolutely destitute of organized religious work."

Evidently there is something wrong with the Church. It is being pressed hard. Church debts increase. The total Church indebtedness at present, because of expanding church plants for the last decade, is enormous. Figures run up into the millions showing an attempt on the part of the Church to beautify and equip the home base, the church plant, in order that the membership and the world may be attracted to the Church. All sorts of specifics have been resorted to in the last decade to make the Church attractive. And yet, as the Washington Congress found, the Church is at a standstill in relation to population. Pews are painfully vacant on the Sabbath. A large percent of the membership is indifferent. Church papers have a hard time finding their way into the homes of Church people, because the people in those homes are more interested in the secular news of the day than they are in the sacred news of the Church. In thousands of homes in which practically the entire family is on the church-roll, the daily paper will be found with its screaming headlines, and the conversation will hinge daily about the things of the world—murders, crimes and movies, economic conditions, financial depression. And in many of those same homes there is no church paper found that tells from week to week what the Church, through its organized efforts and institutional activities, is trying to do in the world; of the ministers and the faithful few who yet have a passion for souls, and are trying to win a world to Christ and beat back the swelling tide of secularism. Verily, secularism is doing its deadly work, and the sacred is being crowded to the wall. Unless the Church can recover its passion for souls and Christianize our civilization, then we may expect the world to paganize the Church and secularize our civilization, even as was the case in the "dark ages" when the Church seemed to sell its soul for a mess of pottage, and then be poisoned with the pottage. J. O. A.

"WE GET WHAT WE WANT."

Recently a very keen observer of people and things said in the hearing of this writer: "Yes, times are hard, but I have noticed that people still manage to get what they want." He was talking about the super-abundance and variety of food that still goes on our tables; of the good, even fine and fancy clothes, that we still wear; of the spic and span automobiles in which we ride; of the ever and rapidly increasing numbers of cigarettes and other luxuries being consumed; of the radios being installed, et cetera. "Yes," said the keen observer, "times are hard, for the people say so, and unemployment is appalling, and yet somehow we get what we go after and have what we want."

One wonders to what extent this observation will hold. This writer declares here and now, that "church people are not wanting the Church with its interest and enterprises as in former days." Pastors are going with salaries unpaid; churches are dragging with increasing indebtedness; giving to the glory of God and the salvation of souls is declining; and thousands are saying, "We cannot give because we have nothing with which to give." And yet a large percent of those same thousands, according to our observer, are getting what they go after and having what they want. Hasn't the spirit of the times led us to walk in the easy paths, the paths of bodily comfort, the paths of self-indulgence, the paths of material prosperity? And then finding that we cannot walk such paths with the same ease and comfort as in other days, we are complaining of hard times, and are really having hard-times, because we are forgetting that there are values of more worth than material values, and that there is that to be had which is above the physical and the economic.

God has ever been calling man not to the easy but to the difficult task, not to self-indulgence, but to self-denial. In that recent great volume, "God and the Census," this paragraph occurs:

"God does not want us to do the easy thing; He calls on us to do the hard thing. He does not want the time which we call spare time; He wants the time which will really cut into our lives. He does not ask for the contributions we can afford to make; He asks us for contributions which mean a sacrifice when we make them. Just before Walter Rauschenbusch died, I heard him lecture. To facilitate the asking of questions, inquiries were written upon slips of paper and asked, 'What does the Church most need today?' Like a flash came the answer, 'The restoration of the cross.' If one cannot give yourself, the rest does not count. It may be a gift of service in the church or in a mission, or it may be a gift of funds, but you cannot give really except of yourself. Only through such giving can the kingdom of God go forward."

A long time ago a very wise Seer said: "Seek first the kingdom of God and His righteousness, and all these things shall be added unto you." The kingdom of God is that in which self-denial abounds; in which the glory of God is put above the glory of man, and the salvation of society is put above mere physical comfort and ease.

Do we get what we want? Are we getting what we go after? If so, are we very much wanting the kingdom of God to prevail in our hearts and the world? Are we going after that which is rich unto salvation and is essential in life and light and love? Verily, if the world is now getting what it goes after, and having what it wants, it is not going very vigorously after the things of the kingdom, nor wanting very passionately the things of the spirit. For these come by way of the cross, by the way of self-denial. J. O. A.

THE MINISTRY.

Some essential factors enter into a successful ministry. A divine call, not chosen by man, is first in this list. Full surrender to this call and to the will of God is a second step. Then adequate preparation in education follows; and that means education that qualifies for continuous study through life. A seminary course that outlines the work is not sufficient; capacity for initial study is very important. During this period of preparation, economy in personal expenses should be studied and practiced. The financial history of a minister usually determines his standing among men. "Owe no man any thing, but to love one another" (Rom. 13:8). Nothing that is innocent in itself injures the reputation of a minister more than being in debt. As a rule, his earning capacity is small, compared with other men of the same class, and compared with what he is expected to do; and he needs this schooling as a part of his education in preparation for the ministry. His life should be an example in business as well as in social life.

A call to serve a Church is closely related to the divine call to the ministry. He is not only called to the work, but to the place for work; and, if he makes full surrender to the divine call, the Lord will see that he gets to the right place for work. It is unfortunate for a young minister to get to a place of great reputation when he has not had experience, unless he has rare gifts. It is better to begin in a small way and develop the work, for that will develop him. The best farmer is the one who develops poor land so as to produce fine crops.

The spirit of satisfaction is essential to a successful ministry. Dissatisfaction with a place, and looking out for a better place and larger pay usually works defeat to a ministerial career. It may be necessary for a pastor to change, but that should come as a result of his success and the need of his service in a larger field, and not his desire for larger salary and larger reputation. When humanity dies and ambition takes its place, the spirit of Jesus leaves the man and usefulness wanes. Honest poverty is no disgrace, and good service in a small field is more honorable than poor service in a large field. A good crop on poor land shows a better farmer than a poor crop on good land.

THE SPIRIT OF UNITY.

To what extent organic unity will ever be perfected we do not know. There are existing conditions today that cause the thinking world to believe that we cannot tell what may happen in the future. At some future date we may see only a few separate denominations. But the real unity for which the Master prayed in the seventeenth chapter of John exists now to a larger degree than the average individual realizes. Namely unity of spirit, a spirit of Christ-like sharing, a spirit that in the name of Christ helps to make others' burdens lighter.

The experience through which the writer and his family have recently passed, in the loss of their child, has convinced them that a spirit of helping to bear the other's burdens is a united spirit. Christian people know no creeds, sectarian bounds or denominational differences in such a time as this. Words of comfort help and cheer, but actions do even more. So it is by these norms that we judge the real spirit of unity. While the death shadows were hanging about our home, the following came to help bear the burden and bring a ray of spiritual sunlight: Christians (our own), Roman Catholics, Baptists, Methodists, Presbyterians, Nazarenes, Episcopalians, Jews. Our own folks could not have been more lovely than they were, but on the other hand, we could not tell one from the other as they exemplified the Christian spirit. God's people have indeed learned the meaning of the divine command, "Rejoice with them that do rejoice, and weep with them that weep." (Romans 12:15.)

The spirit of Christ and unity of purpose is growing throughout Christendom. We are forced to believe that it will continue to grow until God's people will become one, not only in a time of sorrow, but will also become one in every enterprise of the kingdom.

LECTURING.

We again have the promise of Prof. A. R. Flowers for a series of seven lectures about the last of June. The Church membership of this section is composed of Methodists, "Missionary" Baptists and Free Will Baptists, but Christian fellowship and co-operation prevails, and we know of no man who is better suited to the task of helping us on in this good work than Mr. Flowers. He is a well-known Christian Endeavor worker and is well known in several States in the South because of the successful work he has done. His visits to this section is always a source of pleasure to the community, and especially to girls and boys who are anxious for all the encouragement and good advice in reaching coveted goals in life.

SUFFOLK LETTER.

A unique supper was served in the fellowship hall of the Suffolk Christian Church on Friday night, May 29, 1931. It was called the "Mothers' and Daughters' Banquet," and attended by one hundred and fifty persons, who enjoyed the splendid supper and the special exercises that followed. Mothers brought their daughters, but if their daughters were gone, they brought a friend in her place; and if a mother had passed away, the daughter brought a friend in her place. Some mothers brought several daughters, and the long tables decorated in gold, green, and white, with silver vases and candles in silver holders made the hall a scene of rare beauty. Two guests of honor added to the occasion—Alfred and Miss Mabel, son and daughter of Rev. and Mrs. D. P. Barrett, missionaries for thirty years in Porto Rico. Mrs. Barrett had come to Suffolk for an operation in Lake View Hospital, and was not able to be at the banquet. Alfred and Mabel, who is a student at Elon College, were presented to the interested group of about one hundred and fifty people, who clapped their hands in recognition of these guests.

The banquet was conceived and prepared by the Woman's Home and Foreign Missionary Society of the Church and Mrs. C. C. Rawles, president, presided at the supper and the splendid program which followed. By request, Rev. W. W. Staley invoked the divine blessing. Mrs. Rawles welcomed the guests, and Miss Julia Brinkley made the response. Miss Helen Shepherd Riddick gave the toast to "Mother," and Mrs. Burwell Riddick the toast to "Daughter." Ten commandments had been prepared for mothers, wives, and daughters, and these were announced by Mrs. H. S. Hardcastle and given by Mrs. O'Berry, Mrs. J. C. Philbrow, Mrs. W. H. Andrews, Mrs. J. E. Rawles, Mrs. J. D. Luke, Mrs. H. L. Jacobs, Mrs. Clarence Harrell, Mrs. J. S. Rallings, Mrs. T. A. Barbee, and Mrs. I. W. Johnson.

A dialogue, "The Beauty of Motherhood," responded to in Bible verses, was given by Mrs. George Earl Rogers and Mrs. Dewey Harrell. Miss Page Jones gave as a reading, "The Beautiful Face," and a humorous reading, "Turning the Babies in Bed," was given by Mrs. Clarence Harrell, who closed by singing "Mammy's Religion," accompanied by Mrs. I. W. Johnson.

The program closed with a one-act play, "Mother's Gift," in which Miss Susie Powell was the "Spirit of Remembrance"; other parts were taken by Miss Katherine Luke, Robert Spright, George Earl Rogers, Clifton Joyner, Mrs. George Dunn, and Mrs. M. F. Hall. A song, "I Would Be Pure," was sung by a chorus of the young daughters at the banquet, with Mrs. I. W. Johnson at the piano.

Men from the Church, with Rev. H. S. Hardcastle as head waiter, served the delicious meal, closing with cream and cake. The men, in their white jackets and graceful service at the long tables, earned and received compliments from the women, who enjoyed the meal served by the men as waiters.

People who are not identified with the Church have no adequate conception of the friendly associations, in a sweet way, enjoyed by members.

ELON LETTER.

The editor of THE CHRISTIAN SUN has requested me, as chairman of the faculty of Elon College, to assume the responsibility for a weekly

Elon Letter. The chairmanship was an unsought and unexpected honor, but I am accepting it as divine, and realize that only through divine grace and guidance can its responsibilities be borne and its duties be performed.

We shall miss the wise counsel and direction of our retiring president, who served so long and faithfully, but we believe that in answer to his prayers and the prayers of those who love Elon College and are vitally concerned in her welfare, we shall still go forward in the achievement of greater things in the service of the kingdom.

America and the world needs, as never before, the denominational college truly dedicated to the service of Almighty God and manned by a faculty consecrated to that service. As the poet has said, "The world is too much with us." In our eager pursuit of pleasure, popularity, material success, we lose sight of the real, the eternal values—integrity, self-respect, serenity of soul, peace, happiness. We are paying too high a price for appearances and neglecting the substance. If the youth of America and the world do not find some time and opportunity to obey the command, "Be still, and know that I am God," America and the world are doomed. Therefore, the need of the denominational college definitely dedicated to the task of giving youth a clearer acquaintance with divine realities, relationships, and duties.

I am cheered and strengthened personally and encouraged concerning the future of our own college by the assurance of the loyal support and co-operation of trustees and faculty members in the performance of the duties entrusted to me; and I bespeak from the alumni and friends of the college the same co-operation and support. We need money and students, but, above all things, we need the loyal, undivided support of our constituency. If we do our part in prayer, God will do for us and through us greater things than we have yet conceived.

J. W. BARNEY.

DANVILLE, VA.

We have just closed our revivals at Ingram, Va., and Danville. Our meeting was held at Ingram during the first part of April, with Bros. Wright and Caviness assisting. While we only had ten additions to the Church, the Church was greatly revived. Then, during the past three weeks, we have had our revival here at Danville. This has proven to be one of the best revivals we have ever had and one of the greatest in the history of the Church. We have received at this writing one hundred and two members, bringing our total since the first of January to one hundred and thirteen. Then, in addition to this, we had seventy new tithers added to our list during this meeting, bringing our list to over a hundred. These past four and one-half years have been great in our work. We came here with about one hundred and nine members in the Church, and now we have about four hundred and fifteen. Our Sunday School had about one hundred and fifty enrolled, and now we have about four hundred and fifty. We have come to the realization that people are hungry for the gospel. The day is here when we ministers have the greatest opportunity we have ever had to present the blood of Jesus Christ and the Bible which God has promised to honor if we will preach it. It may seem a bit old fashioned to say that we need more preaching of the old type, when men dared to stand against sin and upheld the Bible and the power of the Holy Spirit.

Well, we are now starting a new adventure. In addition to our Sunday School offering, we want to take up an offering one Sunday night each month for missions and one for the work of the Jews. "I will bless them that bless thee, and curse them that curse thee." Will you not join us in prayer, that God will bless this undertaking for His glory?

During these weeks of fellowship it was a great pleasure to have Bro. H. C. Caviness and his dear wife with us. We have never met two people quite so zealous for souls as they. Bro. Caviness preached the Bible with all its fullness with respect to no one. His messages on the cross, the blood, the pre-millennium of the coming of Christ, the inspired book and the working of the Holy Spirit were a source of inspiration to all and were heard by large congregations. We have never had a man in our midst that has meant quite so much to our own life as well as that of our Church. The Church that is fortunate enough to secure the service of this man of God will receive a blessing that none other will be able to bring. His prayer life, his zeal for souls and missions, will make your Church a new Church. One does not wonder at him being such a power for God when one has been able to live with him for a while. Mrs. Caviness, in like manner, has a great love for souls, and I have never met a woman that could go out and reach the unsaved as she did. Having her with our women has meant a new day for them. May God bless these dear people of God and give them many souls for their hire. Will each of you join with us in prayer, that God may use our Church and our own life in a greater way for the salvation of the lost?

M. T. SORRELL.

THANKS FOR HELPING.

I was standing in the entrance of the church speaking with the worshipers as they went away. "Thank you, Mrs. Denison," I said to one as she went by. "And for what, pray?" was her reply. "For teaching the Sunday School lesson this morning to your class." And what was important to me was that a Sunday School teacher had been teaching so regularly and effectively in my church and yet was surprised at being thanked, even by her pastor, for the help. Publicly her pastor had often spoken of the good work of his teachers, and privately he had talked with them, but a real warm "thank you" had been too long wanting.

More than forty of the fine women of my church hear Mrs. W. H. Denison each Sunday in a most intimate, earnest, spiritual discussion of the great issues of Christian living. It is probable that she is serving them, in helping them with their problems and in inspiring them with their duties, just as greatly as their pastor is doing. He is paid for his work. She is hardly thanked for hers. And what is more, she is giving real time, study and prayer to her teaching, only hoping that she may in some quiet way help to build character, inspire endeavor and advance her church.

It is impossible for me to measure what it means to my church to have someone who loves God and her church have such a close, cordial contact with more than forty mothers and wives. Women's organizations, children's attitudes, Sunday School attendance, church activities and attendance, family allegiance in general, and financial returns in particular, are all greatly helped by such loving service. In their hearts, O Sunday School teachers, and on their knees, pastors everywhere thank you for your help—your great help!

JOHN G. TRUITT.

Would you want to live in a churchless community? Then why help make yours a churchless community by staying away from church?

THE EVANGELISTIC PASSION.

Without evangelical passion in the souls of believing men and women, there can be no spread of Christianity. Faith will die instead of spreading. It is evangelical passion upon which the gospel depends for being kept alive in the earth. A cold philosophy, a precise reasoning, an alluring science, a melodious rhetoric, a fascinating literature will find a proper place in the lives of men; they are not to be excluded from religious thinking, from sermons, nor from the life of the Church. But they are not primary. The heart is offered husks when only things of this nature hold the field of religious discourse. A zeal for witnessing to the grace of Jesus Christ is primary. Churches die when the evangelical passion is not dominant in both the pulpit and the pew.

A sermon which has the direct objective of leading souls to God, thrills everybody who hears it. It melts the heart, stirs the emotions, arouses memories that have long been dormant; the spirit is awakened; a new life is stirred; strength for temptation and for trial is secured. A sermon of spiritual passion never fails to enthrall those who hear it. How great is the mistake of the minister who turns from the theme of personal salvation to the attractive subjects which run through the literature of the books and the columns of the press. There is little life-giving portion in these subjects. They meet the fancy and partially the needs of thousands of lives, but they do not supply manna for the soul. There are many noises, many denunciations and debates and theorizings, but they leave the heart longing after "The sweet story of old when Jesus was here among men."

An exhibition of the evangelical passion amongst believers would startle humanity in every grade of social life. Business and industry, scholarship and toil, would take second place. The first interest of every person would be a knowledge of God.

The evangelical passion has its birth in prayer. After meditation upon the deep things of the spirit, the soul desires to commune with the Heavenly Father. The fountains of grace is reached. There is fellowship with the sources of life; God becomes real; the soul is ablaze with the same passion that fired the early apostles and enabled them to speak the words of inspiration. One who prays in the spirit of an evangelical passion goes forth from his closet glorified with more than human radiance. He is a spiritual Samson.

The evangelical passion is not acquired in the midst of worldly scenes nor in companionship with the dreary pessimistic thinking of the age. It is the product of the head as well as of the heart. The whole man is imbued with the truth as it is in Christ Jesus. Out of meditation and prayerful thinking, one grows into a knowledge like that which lifted the Apostle Paul above the narrow horizon of his early training. The warmth of a passion glows in a great heart; grace abounds; there is depth and swiftness to the range of holy purpose; the mind seeks the profundities; one's neighbor occupies no narrow nor limited place of importance. He is set out yonder on the heights. Every soul becomes an object of redemption. The evangelical passion makes one willing to give his own life as Jesus gave His for the rescue of any and every man.

The evangelical passion does not exhaust itself either in the closet of prayer or in the field of redemptive effort. It works its way through the avenues of personal living. It shows itself in the fruitage of one's life. There is a constant and compelling desire to embody in one's self the tender grace and the mighty powers of the spirit. The purpose of life controls the feelings, the actions, the words, the occupations, the relationships. Life becomes transformed; the principles of the gospel are so exemplified that everywhere is heard the call, "Men and brethren, what shall I do to be saved?" Out of wholesome living, the glow of the evangelical passion exerts its irresistible power. Everywhere the man possessed with this zeal secures his converts; he is a tower of strength; he has a reputation for being a man after God's own heart; he is called a shining light, a living epistle. In him, God has set a light for the guiding of many in the way of righteousness.

The evangelical passion is not to be the possession of merely a class or a few of the followers of Christ. The man in the pulpit should surely have it in great measure; but every believer should be endowed with it. The responsibility and the privilege of possessing it are pressed upon all Christians. The Church cannot prosper unless the whole congregation is ablaze with it; the world otherwise cannot be saved. We may question whether or not individuals themselves in the lack of it may have the approval of God. Upon our knees, with open Bibles, every one of us should earnestly seek to secure the glow and the power of the evangelical passion.—Nashville Advocate.

THE SURE SWORD.

It is well known to all intelligent readers of the Scriptures that our Lord Jesus Christ, while exercising His wonderful ministry here below, was made a veritable storm-center of controversy by the insidious attacks of the Pharisees and Sadducees. He met His crafty enemies with but one weapon—the sharp, two-edged "sword of the Spirit, which is the Word of God." He charged the Pharisees with "making the Word of God of none effect by their tradition." To the Sadducees, on the other hand, who said that there was "no resurrection, neither angel, nor spirit," He said: "Ye do err—ye do greatly err—not knowing the Scriptures, neither the power of God." In the end, these "modernists" of their day, as well as the "ecclesiastical traditionalists," were utterly confounded. "No man," we are told, "could answer Him a word, neither durst any man from that day forth ask Him any more questions."

In the nineteenth chapter of the Revelation, the victorious Redeemer is pictured as leading the armies of heaven, who follow Him, riding "upon white horses, clothed in fine linen, white and pure." It is most significant that the only weapon in the whole host is the "sharp sword," which proceeds "out of the mouth" of the Divine leader. As Isaiah prophesied of old: "He shall smite the earth with the rod of His mouth, and with the breath of His lips shall He stay the wicked." He needs no earthly weapons. Both He and the Scriptures rejoice in the same glorious title, and are known for all eternity as "the Word of God." Blessed are we, if we lay this profound truth to heart, and glory in the supremacy of Christ and the Scriptures.

Let me close with a memorable quotation from the late George Muller, who says, "The vigor of our spiritual life will be in exact proportion to the place held by the Word in our life and thoughts. I solemnly state this from the experience of fifty-four years. The first three years after conversion I neglected the Word of God. Since I began to search it diligently, the blessing has been wonderful. I have read the Bible through 100 times, and always with increasing delight. Each time it seems like a new book to me. Great has been the blessing from consecutive, diligent study. I look upon it as a lost day when I have not had a good time over the Word of God."—Canon G. Osborne Troop, in Southern Churchman.

REV. J. O. ATKINSON, D. D., Secretary.

A PRAYER.

Father Almighty, we beseech Thee defend Thy Church against the spirit of anti-Christ. Deliver it from the effect of evil influences. So invaded are the appointed times for worship, so perverted their purpose and program, that souls hungering for bread too often find only a stone, cold, hard, set, without power or property to feed and warm. Rid Thy sanctuary, O God, of every alien influence and preserve to its offices the light and strength that effectually combat what the world not only attractively presents, but so diligently seeks to impose and instil. In Thy most holy name we pray. Amen. L.

"THIS MEANS ME."

In the warehouse of a large mercantile establishment a lad was given work for the summer. His tasks made it necessary for him to move about from one place to another, and, as with most boys, it was hard for him to understand that he was supposed to close doors after he had passed through them. It was particularly important that he should close the door to the stock room. After reprimanding him repeatedly, his employer called him aside and told him that if he found himself compelled to speak to him again about closing the door when he passed through it, he would dismiss him. So the boy made a sign and placed it upon the door, which read as follows: "Keep this door shut. This means me."

Usually we do not so read that familiar sign; usually we do not so write it. Admonitions, criticisms reprimands, mean you; seldom me. And it is because of this failure to sense individual responsibility that we have so much knowledge and so little action. It is the reason why so many of us are able to give advice and so few are willing to take it. It is why most of us are long on facts and short on deeds.

We are all obsessed with a passion for generalization; the disease is one which affects every phase of our lives. During a period of economic depression we look for some broad economic law which will neatly and adequately explain everything; and while waiting and looking, each man relaxes the individual push and drive in his own business. Education has come to be associated with the thought of well-equipped universities for the training of great numbers; we have lost sight of the importance of the individual contact which Garfield had in mind when he said that a log with a boy on one end and Mark Hopkins on the other was a college. We recommend Americanization drives upon masses of foreigners and are blind to the necessity for friendly, personal contacts. We enunciate the principles of justice, careless of the injustice which too often characterizes our dealings with our fellowmen. We believe in comity in principle, but flee the application of the principle to specific cases.

In the field of evangelism, we are concerned with campaigns and tabernacles and tents and sawdust trails, and forget the presentation to our friends of the claims of Jesus. We remember budgets and forget people. The work fails to go forward because the need of unchurched groups is not my need, and because what we say about sacrificial giving does not mean me.

So writes Robert N. McLean in his wonderful volume, just from the press, entitled "God and the Census." And in the above Mr. McLean has said the straight word not only for evangelism, the personal side of missions, but for missions, the purse side of evangelism. We are willing for the whole world to learn of our Christ, if the whole world can. But where it comes down to a matter of deeds—our denying ourselves to give Him to the world, we do not often write, "This means me."

SOME AMAZING THINGS.

If it be true that the soul of man is immortal, as we sincerely believe, our relation to the next world is the most important problem we face. Connected with this future life, there are in the Christian religion some most amazing facts; facts which for thousands of years have strangely gripped the hearts of men.

The first of these is the marvelous love of God for men, free moral agents, created in His likeness, and knowing the difference between good and evil. From the Scriptures we learn that this love was foreseen when the earth was stardust. "According as God hath chosen us in Him before foundation of the world" (Eph. 1:4). Considering the sinfulness of man, his proneness to evil "as the sparks fly upward," his ignorance and the brevity of his life, this is a most amazing statement.

Not less amazing is the fact that God, in the manifestation of His love, should exhaust the treasures of heaven in sending His only begotten Son by whom the worlds were made and are upheld, to empty Himself of His heavenly glory, that He might become the Saviour of the world. While we cannot understand how in Him dwelt a perfect humanity and perfect deity, the life He lived, the things He taught, the deeds of His life convince us entirely of both.

If we were not made so constantly familiar with the fact, we would be, I am sure, amazed at the fact that no matter how black a man's life may have been, by simple faith in Jesus Christ, the whole black record is blotted out. "The blood of Jesus His Son cleanseth us from all sin" (John 1:7). But the marvel continues in the fact that God treats the forgiven sinner as a son who had always been true. That was the way the prodigal son was treated, was it not?

Considering how people treat their bodies, both as a means of pleasure and of wrongdoing, what a great wonder it is that the bodies of the saints of God are made the living temples of the Holy Ghost! But in giving the Holy Spirit, may we not say that God thus truly gives Himself? The baubles of the world cost sweat and money; only God and heaven are offered as the free gifts to all who will receive them.

It has always been a wonder to us that God should delight in the prayers that we offer, and that we should so many times be commanded to pray. We are so insignificant, and He is so great. But the marvel is much increased by the fact that the Spirit Himself prays for us. "For we know not what to pray for as we ought, but the Spirit Himself maketh intercession for us with groanings that cannot be uttered" (Rom. 8:34).

But if this exaltation were not enough, God promises to enrich us with all the riches which He Himself possesses. "He that spared not His own Son, but gave Him up for us all, how shall He not with Him freely give us all things?" (Rom. 8:32.)

But this is not all. In the endless ages of the future, all the infinite resources of God are to be used for our eternal satisfaction and glory. "That in the ages to come, He might show the exceeding riches of His grace in kindness toward us through Jesus Christ" (Eph. 2:7).

We talk easily about these amazing things, but we ought to keep our minds as keen as Damascus blades to appreciate them and to make our faith strong and our Christian lives active in the service of our great Lord and Master.

Probably not many who read these lines will be either rich or famous, so far as the things of this world are concerned. But if we view life from the godward side, there is no limit to the riches and honor and glory which God will bestow. "For eye hath not seen, nor ear heard, neither hath it entered into the heart of man the things that God hath prepared for them that love Him" (1 Cor. 2:9).

HAS CHRISTIANITY CHANGED?

BY REV. W. Y. FULLERTON, D. D.

Sec'y Baptist Missionary Society, London.

"Has the mission, the message, the aim, and the power of Christianity changed in the past nineteen centuries?"

In trying to answer these questions we must first seek to establish what these were in the beginning. Even then we shall need to be careful, for we are outside other ages and are within our own, and it is impossible to compare an exterior with an interior.

But the mission, the message, and the aim of the gospel have been quite clear all along the ages. Before we compare them, let us see what they were at the start. By the term Christianity we mean the religion of Jesus Christ as set forth in the New Testament, not all that goes by the name today.

The mission of Christianity was to spread the revelation of Himself that God gave through Jesus Christ; to let all men see the mystery that had been hid from the beginning that the Gentiles should be fellow-heirs with Israel and "of the same body and partakers of His promise in Christ by the gospel." Paul fought the battle in Jerusalem and saved Christianity from being merely a Jewish sect, and the Church at Jerusalem discovered and declared that the world-wide appeal of the gospel was no after-thought on God's part, for James, as its spokesman, said that "It was God's original concern to visit the Gentiles and to take out of them a people for His name."

That is still the mission of Christianity. It is still Eclectic; our task is not to win a nation, but to evangelize it, and to find God's scattered "sheep" in its midst. If we apprehend that, it will save us from the idea that we must "not go to the heathen abroad because there are heathens at home." We may indeed, and must, seek to Christianize a nation, but we cannot hope to convert it. While we plant the Church, like a tree, in any country, the gospel will of itself also work quickly as leaven, changing the whole people. But our business is to separate a people from among the nation that shall be as distinct, that, like the people in Antioch, it will be necessary to find a new name for them, and call them "Christian." In China they debated whether they should seek to establish a national Church, and they saw it would not do, but they sang the doxology when they hit upon the term "nation-wide" to express their purpose. It is now as at the beginning.

The message of Christianity at the beginning is set forth by the apostles to the Gentiles in 1 Corinthians 15. He tells us the things on which all the apostles were agreed; things that were also according to the Scriptures which they had in their hands. All of them were related to Christ—He died, was buried, rose from the dead. Of this there is abundant evidence, and this is how the grace of God reaches sinful men. "That is what we preached," he says, "and that is what we believed." So, evidently, the saving grace of God depends on our faith, and quite as evidently it is possible for us to get away from that faith to "another gospel," which is not another; for to the Corinthians he puts their belief in the past tense—"ye believed."

Have we drifted from that faith today? Each man must answer for himself. Dr. MacEwen put the answer for the Church in memorable words at the Edinburgh Missionary Conference when he said, "If in any mind the thought arises that our faith is not the same as the faith of the early centuries, we have before us an answer which no man can gainsay. Out of the heart of these centuries there emerged one statement of beliefs. No one knows by whom it was drafted, or when it first appeared. We find it in Africa, in Gaul, in Italy, on the Danube, and in Asia Minor with slight variations, but identical in its essence and almost in its form—a statement so scriptural and evangelical that it is ascribed to the apostles. In the conference reports you will discover an item, simple but grand, reported by many missionaries—Episcopalian, Wesleyan, Baptist, Presbyterian—that the statement of faith which they find to have most value, and on which they lay most stress, is the Apostles' Creed. In the seventeen centuries that have passed since it was shaped, the Holy Spirit has taught the Church much. He will teach us more if we listen to His voice; but the foundations of the kingdom stand, although the things that were shaken have been removed." There is the answer—the message of Christianity is the same.

What, then, of its aim? If the mission of Christianity is to take out a people for the name, its aim is that "those who name the name should depart from all iniquity." The holy God desires sainthood. The faith of Christ all along the ages has been both ethical and philanthropic. Christ saves people from themselves as well as from the world and the devil. And the more saints there are in a community, the higher will be the level of all life. That the principles of Christ should be applied to the whole life is no new discovery; that the nation should be approximately Christian is the inevitable result of the fact that a great many of its citizens are Christian in reality. Always the aim has been, and the aim still is, to make saints, to bring men to see and to say:

"He wills that I shall holy be;

Naught can withstand His will.

The purpose of His grace in men,

He surely shall fulfill."

There remains but one other question. Has the power of Christianity changed? As in all the other cases, the answer is decidedly no—no, no, ten thousand noes! The Spirit remaineth among us, so we need not fear. The gospel is still the power of God to salvation to every one that believeth. When we are tempted to doubt it, let us remember Lord Kelvin's great sentence, when in attempting to make an experiment in Glasgow University, he failed. Drawing himself up with dignity before his students, he did not apologize, but, knowing the power of God, he said, "Gentlemen, always remember that when you are face to face with a difficulty, you are on the verge of a discovery."—Missionary Review of the World.

MISSION PERIOD! MARCH, APRIL, MAY, AND JUNE!

AND ALL these months are gone, save a part of June. Some Churches have done their best. They have given, to the glory of God and for the salvation of souls, out of their need. The Missionary Offering to them meant self-denial, but it meant joy.

Then other Churches have given something. "Times are hard," and so instead of cutting off one necessity or comfort from the home, the Lord's offering was reduced, and His cause must suffer!!

Then there are Churches in which no offering has as yet been taken. God's work must wait and suffer rather than self-denial of any need or comfort or luxury shall be made for His sake!

The call still comes! The need is great. God and not man instituted missionary work, and He invites all His followers to join in that blessed task.

If your Church has not taken the Annual Missionary Offering, one Sunday of June is the time to take it.

The Kingdom waits, and calls for your decision.

COMMISSIONING SERVICE.

For Delegates to Summer Schools for Young People.

To make the young people of your Church feel the high privilege they have in representing your Church at a summer school this year and to add dignity to the privilege, a commissioning service may be held to commission the representative young people. This service may well take a few minutes of the regular Church service hour. The following suggestive program may be used or adopted for use in your commissioning service.

PROGRAM.

1. A word from the pastor.
2. A word for a leader of young people.
3. Responsive reading of the commission:

Pastor: The Church is happy to commission you young people to go, as our representatives, to the Summer School for Young People, at Delegates: We are happy to be thus commissioned.

Pastor: We bid you enjoy the beauties of nature, the morning's light and sunset's glow, all revelations of the artistry of God; and may the beauty of the Lord our God be upon you.

Delegates: We shall remember that the heavens declare the glory of God, and the firmament showeth his handiwork.

Pastor: We counsel you to take part in the boating and swimming, and in athletic games, that your bodies, which are the temples of God, may grow in grace and strength, and fitness for His use.

Delegates: We accept your counsel to exercise the body.

Pastor: We covet for you earnest study of the Bible, increasing knowledge of the work of God's wide kingdom, and a deepening spirit of reverence for the good, the beautiful and the true.

Delegates: We desire all this in Christian growth.

Pastor: We trust that the new friendships formed will be a source of happiness during your stay and an enrichment of your lives and the lives of others so long as memory and influence shall endure. Let him who would have friends show himself friendly.

Delegates: We hope to find many true friends, and to be good friends ourselves.

Pastor: We crave for you the companionship and inspiration of noble teachers, the thrill of listening to great leaders in Christian work at home and abroad, the beckoning spirit of Christ calling you to high ideals and true consecration of your life-work in a world which needs Christ-like young people.

Delegates: We shall endeavor to learn the mind of Christ.

Pastor: We know that you will honor our Church by your department, your friendliness, your appreciation, your respect, your manliness and your womanliness, and that you will remember at all times the good name of your own Church and keep it honored and respected by the young people of your great State.

Delegate: We wish to be worthy of all confidence, and to do what Christ would have us do.

Pastor: We hope you will return to us, bringing the visions you have seen, sharing with others who could not go the inspiration you have received, and lifting our Church to a new level of attainment in the things of Christ.

Delegates: We do want to aid our own Church by any service we can render.

Pastor (here the pastor may ask the congregation to rise): For this high task, we, the Church, of, commission you, young men and young women, to go forth in the name of the Father, the Son, and the Holy Spirit.

Delegates: In sincerity, humility and prayerfulness, we now accept this high commission.

Attention is called to the change in course announced for Elon Summer School for June 10-17. The course on "World Missions" has been changed to "Home Missions." Principal S. J. Elder, of Pleasant Hill Academy, Pleasant Hill, Tenn., is to teach the course. Mr. Elder promises an interesting course, with exhibits of work done at the academy.

Other courses offered at the school for Congregational-Christian Church credit recognition are:

Worship for adolescents—Rev. H. S. Hardcastle, teacher.

Administration of elementary work—Miss M. Priscilla Chase, teacher.

The teaching work of the Church—Dr. W. C. Wicker, teacher.

Rev. Jesse H. Dollar is head counselor and director of recreation. Misses Ruth Sargeant and Clarice Gunn and Mrs. B. P. Rakestraw are counselors.

Plans are being made to welcome a record-breaking number of students at Elon this year. Prospects are bright for a very inspiring school.

Boys here and there in Congregational and Christian Churches are beginning to tinker with the car to be sure that there'll be no break-downs en route to Elon, June 10th. Even if it is lots of fun to come with a crowd on a car, there'll be no let-down in fun until the "Lizzie" is parked under the shelter again and months have passed (for memories of Elon Summer School linger).

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR NOTES.

Sunday, June 14, 1931.

TOPIC: "How Decide What is Right and What is Wrong?"

SCRIPTURE: John 7:17.

It will be a variation if this meeting is held outdoors, where no musical instrument will be used, and where the meeting may be very informal. The leader may call for a discussion of the questions given below, and for comments on the Scripture assignments for each day of the week and the quotations. The leader should encourage any worth-while discussion by others besides those to whom assignments are made.

The hymns, "Yield Not to Temptation," "How Firm a Foundation," and "Open My Eyes, That I May See," may be used.

The benediction should be, "Let the words of my mouth and meditations of my heart be acceptable in Thy sight, O Lord, my Strength and my Redeemer," repeated in concert.

QUESTIONS FOR DISCUSSION.

1. Do we stop often enough to consider why we do certain things?
2. Are some things always wrong, regardless of who does them and under what circumstances?
3. Is it necessary for one to consider the effect his action may have on others?
4. Can a definite line be drawn between right and wrong? If so, what is right? What things are wrong to do?
5. Where can we go to secure help in deciding what is right and what is wrong?
6. How far can conscience be trusted to guide us in making choices between right and wrong?
7. Is the question of right and wrong one of knowing what to do more than doing it? Explain.
8. Of what value is the Bible to us in deciding between right and wrong?

QUOTATIONS.

"Most rules of life, secular or sacred, undertake to regulate behavior. But when Christianity sums up its rule of life, it addresses itself to the feelings or affections. It states its requirements in terms of a complete transformation of the instincts."

"Even the best conduct is worthless when it is only an outward performance for the sake of show or reward, and not the revelation of a man's inner self. Through His teachings, therefore, Jesus is occupied solely with the will."

If one undertakes to do the right under all circumstances and in all places, he will have many difficulties. One of the biggest difficulties will be deciding what is right and what is wrong. The temptation to quit trying will come. A word of counsel from the lips of General Pershing would apply here: "Hardships will be your lot, but trust in God, He will give you comfort. Temptation will befall you, but the teachings of our Saviour will give you strength. Let your valor as a soldier and your conduct as a man be an inspiration to your comrades and an honor to your country."

SCRIPTURE FOR THE WEEK.

June 15—Conscience (Rom. 2:14, 15).

June 16—Problem of saying the right thing (Matt. 14:3-12).

June 17—Right in right's place (Matt. 22:15-22).

June 18—Wrong to cause others to stumble (1 Cor. 8:13).

June 19—Acceptable to God (Eph. 5:8-13).

June 20—Guided by love (1 John 3:18-22).

Sunday School Lesson

THE SIN OF CAUSING OTHERS TO STUMBLE.

LESSON XII—JUNE 21, 1931.

GOLDEN TEXT: "It is good not to eat flesh, nor to drink wine, nor to do anything whereby thy brother stumbleth."—Rom. 14:21.

LESSON: Rom. 14:13-23.

The verses of the lesson as printed take their meaning and derive their significance from the first part of the fourteenth chapter of Romans, of which they are a part. The heart of that chapter is the seventh verse: "For none of us liveth to himself, and no man dieth to himself." There is no such thing as man as an isolated unit. It was not true in Paul's day with its comparative simplicity, and it certainly is not true in our day with life's complexity and interdependence. Every man's life is inextricably knit up with every other man's life. No man can live to himself. He cannot segregate his acts and his influence. He cannot build a wall so high or so thick that he can cut himself off from society in which he lives. And what is true of individuals is true of nations and is becoming increasingly evident. Life is knit up with life. Any thinking and seeing man can see this truth.

Now, because no man liveth to himself, because a man cannot confine the effects and the results and the influences of his acts and his life to himself, he inevitably must face the fact of his responsibility to others. What a man could do if he could confine his act and its results to himself, he cannot do if his act and its results are going to affect, for ill, other lives. Every one of us shall give an account of himself to God, and that account will include the effect and the influence of his life upon others.

This principle is the basis of progress in civilization. It is only as the rights and liberties of the individual have been subjected to the rights and liberties of the social group that society has moved upward and forward. Take, for example, the matter of disease. Suppose a man gets small-pox. Does he not have a right to get up and about and go and do what he pleases? If he does not care about the consequences to himself, why can he not do as he pleases? The answer is simple and sound. A man with small-pox or any other contagious disease instantly becomes a menace to a whole community. Society, therefore, says to that man: "You cannot go where you please or do as you please. Until the doctor gives you a clean bill of health, you are to be under quarantine." Any right-minded man gladly accepts quarantine because of the recognition of the principle of responsibility to others. This is a generally accepted principle in many other aspects of life.

Unless one starts from this principle, he is not on sound footing in regard to the matter of prohibition. It is not simply, or even primarily, a question as to whether a man can take a drink or leave it alone, as some would have us believe. It certainly is not a question of an invasion of "personal liberty," which is the battle-cry of so many. The crux of the matter is to be found in the principle stated by Paul to the effect that men have no right, and should have no desire to do that which causes their weaker brethren to stumble. Liquor stands indicted at the bar of medicine, of government, of common-sense, and of religion. It is inherently evil in its effects and its consequences. In our modern, complex, interdependent life, it has no place. The prohibition of the liquor traffic was as inevitable as the abolition of slavery. In a society that is developing

W. A. HARPER, BOOK EDITOR.

THE PROPHETIC MINISTRY. By Francis J. McConnell. The Abingdon Press; pp. 308.

This volume from the alert mind of Bishop McConnell contains the 1930 Lyman Beecher "Lectures on Preaching," given at Yale. This book will not offer enticement as popular or light reading, but it offers a basis of study of the present ministry in contrast with the prophets. While Bishop McConnell is not crying for a return of the "Fathers," yet he does sound a challenge of the present-day ministry to be certain of its aim; this aim may be arrived at in study of the moral problems which have been common to all time, together with the solutions reached by the readers of righteousness.

Bishop McConnell maintains that the ministry must be a prophetic ministry, in that the work of the minister must contain the qualities of the Hebrew prophet. The aim of the Hebrew prophets was to "keep religion ethical, to hold religion and morality together" and to "work over all religious ideas to make them conform to a moral ideal." With this ideal as his theme, Bishop McConnell brings the richness of his alert mind to bear upon the moral and religious problems common to our own day—our ideas of God, of mysticism, the practices of institutionalized religion, social reform and progress. Then he gives the perils of prophecy. He closes with a close study of Jesus' religion in relation to the prophetic ideal. In contrast, he pictures Jesus as carrying on the work of a prophet at a definite crisis in Israel's life rather than being a mere teacher of religious truth in "what we might conceive of as more general fashion." "The content of Jesus' teachings were not sufficiently different from Jewish ideals as to arouse rage enough to cause the officials to try to kill Him." "It might have been different from the religious teaching of the time, but it was the emphasis of Jesus upon human values as contrasted with the institutional order of the day which set the official Hebrew against Him from the outset of his ministry." It was his emphasis upon "moral doing as the center of religious experience" as against priestly functions of institutionalized rites and ceremonies of Jesus' day that gave Him the place of prophet.

This book contains content for study, thought, and program for the ministry of today.

toward the ideal, there had to come a time when the "personal liberty" of those who wanted to drink had to be curbed in the interest of modern, complex, interdependent society. To legalize in any way the liquor traffic would be a step backward. And to lessen in any way the machinery for enforcement, and especially to lessen our efforts to educate the coming generation in the underlying principles of prohibition and in the inherent evils of liquor for beverage purposes, would be to play the traitor to them and to society. Liquor for beverage purposes has no place in a society that puts such new meaning into the term, "For none of us liveth to himself."

The unfortunate thing from the standpoint of so many who drink is that in the same moment that they are crying for personal liberty, their conscience is crying in condemnation of the thing they are doing. "Happy is the man that condemneth not himself in the thing which he alloweth. And he that doubteth is damned (condemned) if he eat (because he eateth not of faith; and whatsoever is not of faith is sin.)"

One of our Chaplains in the U. S. Navy.

"If thou wilt make the Almighty thy treasure . . . then shalt thou delight thyself in the Almighty . . . and thou shalt make thy prayer unto Him and He will hear thee."—Job 22: 25-27.

BY DR. AMOS R. WELLS.

MONDAY.

IN LINE.

"Jehovah, I love the habitation of Thy house, and the place where Thy glory dwelleth."—Psa. 26:1-12.

Music lovers in Boston whose purses are attenuated, but whose appreciation of fine music is strong, will stand in line for hours outside Symphony Hall in order to get one of the low-priced, unreserved seats. Rain, sleet, snow, cold make no difference in the number of patient waiters.

Such was the love of God's house which filled the soul of David. Such is the eagerness of worship which animates any true Christian. In these days, he may not need to stand in line outside the Church doors, but he would gladly stand in line for hours if necessary, and his heart is in line all the time.

Love—that is the soul of religion. What we love, we long for. What we love, we work for. What we love, we enjoy with a glorious happiness. The remembrance of it fills our thoughts. The prospect of it holds our hopes. It is the sunshine of our life.

Prayer.—Dear Father in heaven, we will not allow any worldly pleasure to exceed our joy in Thee. Thou art the supreme blessedness, the most exhilarating joy. In Thy presence is fullness of delight, and at Thy right hand there is eternal satisfaction. Amen.

TUESDAY.

"MY REDEEMER."

"I know that my Redeemer liveth."—Job 19: 23-29.

The marginal reading is "Vindicator." A vindicator is a defender. A redeemer is a rescuer. We need to be defended from attacks, for Satan is always drawing our souls into his miry pits. Job's words show that he realized his peril. But Job was not hopeless in his realization, and we need not be. Why have we not the same confident assurance that the wild beasts of sin are no longer to be feared, the savage agents of the devil no longer to be dreaded?

It is because we do not know that our Redeemer lives. We have forgotten that we have a Redeemer; or, if we remember, we affix conditions to His redemptive power, we shackle Him with our fears and our doubts; we do not know that our Redeemer lives, that He will and can redeem.

Prayer.—Forgive our folly, dear Lord. Promote our faith. Restore our trust. Revive our confidence. Cause us to return to Thee. Make us to know Thy redemptive power. And to be to us the Life indeed. Amen.

WEDNESDAY.

CAUGHT AND RESCUED.

"He brought back all the goods, and also brought back his brother Lot, and his goods, and the women also, and the people."—Gen. 14:8-10.

In Quebec the other day, a diver went down and became so entangled that he could not be brought to the surface again. Air was pumped to him from the surface to keep him alive, but it was necessary to send away for other divers, who were rushed to the place by airplane. Only divers, who could go down under the water and stay there, could release the imperiled man and bring him to safety.

One is reminded of Abraham's rescue of his nephew Lot, when that unwise relative, who had chosen to live in Sodom, was carried into captivity by Chedorlaomer and his confederates. Stout-hearted Abraham at once organized a posse, went in pursuit, conquered the freebooters with their host, and brought back their captives and their booty. Lot had gone down into the muddy waters of that sinful city, had become entangled there, and only one from the heroic uplands of Hebron could free him and rescue him.

Prayer.—Thou only Rescuer, O our Saviour, fly to our help on the wings of light! We cannot lift ourselves from the depths. We cannot free ourselves from the snares. We are lost unless Thou dost save us. Come, Lord Jesus, for we have no Saviour but Thee. Amen.

THURSDAY.

FUN THAT WAS FATAL.

"My spirit hath rejoiced in God, my Saviour."—Luke 1:46-55.

Threats against the life of a woman in Atlanta were made over the telephone, and noises were made on her door when she and her mother were alone, so that her husband, when told, became excited and prepared to shoot. Then a young man and woman, knowing the circumstances, planned a joke. Knocking at the door of the threatened pair, when the husband came to the door, they ordered him to put up his hands. Instantly the husband shot the young woman dead and wounded the young man so seriously that he was not expected to live. The coroner's jury declared that it was a case of justifiable homicide.

How few persons, in their search for pleasure, are advanced above the state of children! How few have discovered what makes real fun! Still, the majority of mankind find their amusement in folly, their recreation in what discredits, tears down.

The joy of the Lord is our strength. The joy of worldlings is weakness. Much so-called sport is tragedy. The Puritans, whom a certain type of moderns so foolishly ridicule, knew the abiding pleasure which their deriders scorn.

Prayer.—Thou didst fashion joy, O God. Thou art the Joy-bringer, O Christ. May we scorn the deadly pleasure of Satan, and give ourselves to the pleasures of the endless life. Amen.

FRIDAY.

A LIFE FOR A DOLL.

"He that findeth his life shall lose it."—Matt. 10:34-39.

A few days ago a woman in Massachusetts, aged sixty-seven, lost her life for a doll. It was a celluloid doll, which fell on a lighted gas stove and immediately burst into flames. The woman tried to save it; her clothes caught fire from the doll, and she was burned to death.

A foolish exchange, you say—a life for a doll—and yet exchanges far more foolish are being made every day; not our short earthly life, but eternal life, and not for a toy dear to some dear little child, but for poisons and ulcers and froth and fools' gold!

What trifles we try to snatch from the devil's fires! With what profitless flames we scorch ourselves! We are forever giving everything for less than nothing, for snakes' fangs, for the quicksands of death!

Prayer.—Always, our Father, when we seek to save our poor earthly life, our temporal life, our life that is vitiated and dead, we lose it, and with it our life that endures forever. For a handful of dross we toss away eternal wealth. Save us from this saving, our Father, and make us glad to lose all that is temporal, by whatever fires, that by all means we may gain all that is eternal. Amen.

SATURDAY.

THE BEST GYMNASIUM.

"Herein I also exercise myself to have a conscience void of offense toward God and men always."—Acts 24:10-16.

It was a noble defense which Paul made before Governor Felix, a defense which was also a burning charge against his unjust imprisonment of two long years. But how modestly he put it! He did not say that his conscience was void of offense toward God and men always; he said that he exercised himself to that end, struggled toward it, made it the systematic and persistent aim of his life.

A clear conscience must thus be worked for. If we merely prefer, on the whole, a pure life to an impure one, because of the scandal attaching to evil, the joy of a clear conscience is not ours on such easy terms. No; the evil one delights in an empty house, however swept and garnished. The devil enters every open door. We must stand at the door, prepared for a hand-to-hand fight with the adversary.

Prayer.—Put vigor and vim into our souls, O Thou, Captain of our salvation! May we resist unto blood, striving against sin. May we fight wickedness with all our might. Amen.

SUNDAY.

THE VALUE OF STUDY.

"Study to show thyself approved unto God."—2 Tim. 2:8-15.

The new version is "Give diligence to present thyself approved unto God," which is about the same thing. The Massachusetts registrar of motor vehicles is urging the education of automobile drivers in order to prevent the appalling and fast increasing number of accidents. He proves the value of education in the matter by pointing to the steady decrease in the motor vehicle death rate among Massachusetts children, due to the safety training given in the public schools, and he would extend that training to adults, not only to drivers but to pedestrians.

The registrar is right. Strictly speaking, there are very few accidents, either in the physical or in the spiritual realm. An accident is a chance happening, but when some one is killed by an automobile, it is because of culpable carelessness on the part of the victim or of the motorist. Study, thoughtfulness, prudence, foresight, would have prevented the terrible event.

That is why Paul urged Timothy to study, that he might win God's approval. The divine favor is to be had on no other terms. It does not come by chance or by inheritance. It comes only by planning, by meditation, by a course of life deliberately laid out and persistently followed up. It is precisely like a course of study in school.

Prayer.—Lord Jesus, blessed Teacher, enroll us in Thy class, we pray Thee. We would continue the lessons Thou dost lay out. We would learn Thy textbook thoroughly. We would take Thy examinations. We hope for Thy degree. Amen.

THE CHRISTIAN SUN'S PULPIT

REV. JOSEPH W. FIX, Preacher.

"THOU SHALT LOVE."

By JOSEPH B. HUNTER.

"Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy mind. This is the great and first commandment. And a second like unto it is this, Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself."—Matt. 22: 37-39.

What is being a Christian? Is it merely accepting the belief that such a person as Jesus of Nazareth once lived, and then joining a church? He came with a new idea about God and life and the law of life. He founded a religion. To be his disciple is to accept his religion. It is to think of God as he thought of God, to use the Scripture as he did, and to direct one's life by the same motive which guided him.

We think of Christianity as obeying commandments. There is one commandment which we want to think of now. "Thou shalt love." This is the great commandment. It is the test of discipleship. The extent of his love for God and man is the measure of a Christian. How tragic that this truth has been lost in the midst of theological speculation and traditional rules!

It was observed in the first century that the disciples loved. We must not confuse this great idea with sentiment or affection. Love means the sharing of life, the bearing of another's load. That was Jesus' attitude toward all people. He gave them his life, not that he died for them in some priestly sacrifice—he lived for them.

This is the highroad which the Church has missed. This is the Christian standard which the Church has forgot. This is the sign in the forehead which the saints shall wear, "Lord, I love." This is the spirit of Christ. "If any man hath not the spirit of Christ he is none of his." This is what the Church shall preach. Love and selfishness are contradictory terms. A man cannot love Christ and break his heart. A man cannot love Christ and be indifferent to his desire to have the gospel preached everywhere. The man who says he loves the Church, yet is unwilling to give of himself and his sustenance to tell others of the Church's Christ, deceives none but himself. No man can be a selfish Christian. That fault locks the door against him. Yet some of the most selfish men I know are members of the Church.

My friends this is what plagues the Church, and it must break the heart of our Lord. He gave his time and thought and strength and blood that the goodness of God might be seen and taught. To be a Christian is to do likewise. It is to do all one can to make goodness and love universal.

It is far better in an hour of disappointment to betray Christ, as did Judas, with a kiss in a dark garden, than to wear his name and his robe and not manifest his spirit.

I cannot keep in memory's hand
The rules that guide in this fair land;
I cannot from the record trace
The many precepts for our race;
But God, Who lives in Heaven above,
Is saying, "Surely thou canst love."

No learned book can quite make clear
The message that the heart would hear;
But Christ's full praise our lives extol
If there is goodness in the soul;
He walks the path that Christ hath trod
Who loves his neighbor and his God; —Christian Evangelist.

HOW MUCH DOES A MAN NEED?

The great Russian Tolstoi once told a story that had special meaning to the countrymen of his day when this question was one that stirred their souls. It has special meaning now to us when we are tempted to judge all men and all things with material estimates.

Pakhom, a Russian peasant, was not rich, but he had enough to make him happy, and he had been happy with his little. But one day he visited a richer relative who had more than he had, and became envious and dissatisfied. He now felt his few acres were not enough and he craved more. He took all his savings, sold half of his bees and his cattle, hired out his children and borrowed all he could to buy more land. He sowed his land and prospered and he was happy for a time, until a visitor came.

He was told people were moving out to the fertile Volga Valley, where land was rich and fertile acres could be had for the asking. So Pakhom sold his horse and his farm and went to the Volga Valley, where he staked all the free land he could have and bought all additional acres his money could buy. Here he prospered beyond his dreams and thought he was happy once more, until another visitor came.

He listened to a rumor that of a magic land among the Bashkirs where whole kingdoms could be bought for a song. He was fascinated with the dream and sold all his land and traveled many miles to the land of the Bashkirs. They received him gladly and offered him all the land he wanted and such fertile land he never saw. The price was one thousand ruples per day; that is, all the land he could circle by walking a day and come back to his starting point by sundown would be his for one thousand ruples. But there was one condition—he must forfeit the money and land if he failed to get back to the point at sundown.

Pakhom left them at the starting point and set out at sunrise, walking over the finest land he had ever seen. Straight on he walked into the rising sun while it climbed higher. It was nearly noon when he turned to the right after setting up a post, but the land was too fertile for him to stop sooner. He walked in that line fast and hard over the finest land his eyes had ever seen, feeling, as the hours went on, he ought to stop and turn back to the goal, but the land was too rich to leave any of it out of his line. At last he set up his line-post and started back to the goal where the Bashkirs were waiting to receive him at sundown.

He was tired and his limbs were aching. His breath was short and his mouth was dry, but he must hurry on to reach the goal by sunset. The sun seemed to be outrunning him. He could see the waiting Bashkirs waiting for him in the lengthening rays of the sun. His tongue now was hanging out and his legs were tottering under him. He was there, but the sun was almost down. He put forth one last desperate effort, but he began to totter. With all of his remaining strength he plunged forward with outstretching hands to touch the goal post as the sun was going down. He fell and his fingers touched the feet of the Bashkirs. One gasp and he was still. They turned him over, the blood was running from his mouth and nose. He was dead.

The Bashkirs put the money in their pockets, and with hoes dug a hole in the rich land three feet wide, four feet deep and six feet long and put him in it. Then they covered him with fertile soil and left him—with all the land a man really needs.—Richmond Christian Advocate.

Christian Orphanage

Dear Friends:

The Sunday School monthly offerings are one of the strong arms of support on which the Christian Orphanage leans.

They are the main support through the summer months. If every Sunday School would realize that it is really responsible for the support of the Christian Orphanage and that it is duty-bound to see that the little children are fed and clothed and cared for, and then would make an offering one Sunday in each month to support it, it would help us so much.

The Christian Orphanage is a child of the Christian Denomination, and it was established by the Southern Christian Convention and chartered under the laws of the State of North Carolina to take care for and train for good citizenship little fatherless and motherless children and give them a real home life—a life as near as is possible like other boys and girls with equal opportunities.

Nearly fifteen years ago, when we took charge of the orphanage as its superintendent, there was a little girl in the orphanage—the baby of the institution. The orphanage, by your help, gave her an opportunity, and last week she completed her course as a graduate nurse and is now ready to take her place in the sick room and to nurse the sick back to health again. Your gifts helped her, and now she is ready to give in return service to the sick. This is only one case out of many that we could tell you about, if space would permit.

We want to urge every Sunday School to help by making a monthly contribution toward the support of the Christian Orphanage. The orphanage needs you now as never before. Won't you stand by it with your gifts?

Superintendent.

OBITUARIES.

RAGAN.

L. H. Ragan was born 1874 and departed this life April 30, 1931. He leaves a wife and two children to mourn their loss. He was laid to rest in Oak Level Cemetery. Mr. Ragan was a devout member of the Church and stood for that which was right in Church and community.

Resolved: 1. That the Church and Sunday School has lost a faithful member and we extend to the bereaved family our deepest sympathy.

2. That a copy of these resolutions be spread on the minutes, a copy sent the family, and one to The Christian Sun.

MRS. W. A. MASSEY,
J. L. BROWN,
C. A. MOORE,

CABLE.

Miss Catharine Cable, daughter of John and Sarah Cable, was born October 22, 1850, and departed this life on April 19, 1931, in her 81st year. She is survived by two nephews and three nieces J. W. Cable, of Greensboro, and Claud Cable, of Elon College, N. C.; Mrs. E. M. Boone, of Gibsonville, N. C.; Mrs. J. C. Huffines and Miss Florence Cable, of near Elon College. The last two are the ones with whom she made her home.

She lived a quiet, kindly, Christian life and was everybody's friend. She was a member of the Shallow Ford Christian Church, where she was buried. Flowers and a large audience attested the sincere esteem of loved ones and many friends.

The last rites were conducted by Dr. J. O. Atkinson, Revs. R. A. Whitten, her pastor, and J. W. Patton. Dissolution is not death: it is only transition. Peace to her memory, rest to her soul. We shall meet again.

J. W. PATTON.

STEWART.

The community was shocked and saddened at the death of little Harvey Eugene Stewart, the three-year-old son of Bro. and Sister J. H. Stewart, when he was accidentally killed when an automobile driven by his cousin backed over him. The accident was unavoidable, and great sympathy goes out to all the relatives, as was evidenced by the large congregation, not much over half of which could be seated in the Church, and one of the most beautiful flower tributes I have ever seen. May the Lord comfort the sad with the sweet thought that this darling child is beyond the reach of accidents now and is just as safe as the everlasting power and love of God can make it.

Funeral services were in charge of the writer at the Enigma Christian Church, assisted by Rev. A. H. Hammond, pastor of the Enigma Baptist Church. Interment was made in the local cemetery.

W. C. CARPENTER.

BOYD.

Mrs. Josephine McDowell Boyd was born April 20, 1848, and died May 19, 1931, at the ripe age of 83 years and 1 month. In early life she professed faith in Christ and united with the Missionary Baptist Church. On December 8, 1869, she united in marriage with John Hubbard Boyd, of Pleasant Grove Christian Church, and transferred her membership to the Christian Church with her husband. To this marriage were born eight children—Otis Scott, Belle (Franklin), Charlotte Catherine, John Emmett, Maude Josephine (Talbert), Minnie Penick (Tune), Lizzie Young, Carrie Hubbard (Dees), and Lourine—three of whom preceded their mother to the home above.

Sister Boyd lived a consistent Christian life with that grace, modesty, and Christian spirit that made her life beautiful. She was a peace-maker, lived for others, ministered to the sick, was faithful to her Church and Sunday School, governed her home well, reared her children in the Christian life, and was the very soul of kindness. The high esteem in which she was held was attested by the large number of friends from far and near who attended her funeral, which was conducted ed from her Church by her pastor, May 20, 1931. The floral designs in rich profusion were symbolic of her beautiful life and attested the high esteem in which she was held in the Church and community.

Life's labor done,
Life's blessings all enjoyed,
Serenely to her final rest she passed
While the soft memories of her virtues yet Linger like the twilight hues, when the bright sun is set. W. C. W.

ELON COLLEGE

AN ACCREDITED COLLEGE

of the

CONGREGATIONAL CHRISTIAN CHURCHES OF THE SOUTHEAST

ELON was founded to train Christian leaders for the New South.

ELON has done its task well—one graduate in seven being in the Christian ministry. The other six express Christian leadership in the various professions and vocations. Experience teaches that spiritual leadership must be indigenous.

The South is now a New South ready for an inclusive Church, the type of Church for which Elon has stood for forty years and for which she is prepared to produce capable leadership.

With no Church in the community, save the College Auditorium, ELON has practiced Christian Union for faculty, students, and community for four decades.

Its contribution to Christian Education is nationally known and approved.

Its Christian Education Building, providing laboratory facilities for religious leadership training, is unique and is the first college building of its type in the world.

ELON confines itself to undergraduate liberal arts work with that religious emphasis which befits the Christian College.

In ELON the Congregational-Christian Church has an asset of marvelous hopefulness.

The South needs her Yale, her Oberlin, her Carleton, her Pomona for the intellectual leadership of the United Church. Many regard ELON as strategically located and spiritually endowed to become such a center of illumination and leadership training.

GRIMSLEY.

Thomas Grimsley was born October 4, 1853, and died May 19, 1931, at the age of 77 years, 7 months, and 15 days. Surviving to mourn his death are his widow, three sons, three daughters and eighteen grandchildren. Bro. Grimsley was regarded as a good Christian man, and was highly respected in his community. Jacob Samuel Sellers was born January 7, 1844, and died April 25, 1931, aged 87 years, 3 months, and 18 days. Bro. Sellers was a man of prominence in his community, and held in high esteem by a host of friends. His life was characterized by fair dealing and kindness to all. A few years ago it was my privilege to receive him into the Christian Church at Bethlehem on profession of faith in Christ, and from that time until death came, he was a faithful and interested member of the Church and enjoyed a blessed fellowship with the Lord. He is survived by four sons and two daughters.

Funeral services were held at his late home on April 27, 1931, and interment in the family cemetery nearby. The writer was assisted in the service by Dr. M. L. Weekley.

JUBILEE CONVENTION.—

The Christian Endeavors of North America will meet at San Francisco, July 11th to 16th. International Christian Endeavor conventions are held every two years, with a registered strength of from 10,000 to 16,000 delegates. The 1931 convention will mark the 50th anniversary of the founding of the first Endeavor society, by Dr. and Mrs. Francis E. Clark, in Portland, Maine. Dr. Daniel A. Poling, international president, will deliver the keynote address, and will preside at the principal sessions. Mrs. Francis E. Clark will be present as honorary delegate and speaker.

ADULT EDUCATION.—

Speaking before the annual meeting of the Association for Adult Education, Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler made an effective plea for continuing education all through life. Few, he said, continue to grow after their early twenties, and few indeed have their intellectual and spiritual velocity rising at the age of forty. This condition he pointed out must not go on, for the complexity of our modern problems can be met only by adult training. While he did not apply this to our churches, we who have their interest at heart need to give more thought to the adult side of our religious education program.

AMERICAN TRACT SOCIETY.—

On the occasion of the reelection of Dr. W. H. Matthews, general secretary of the American Tract Society, the other day, it was pointed out that the society's growth had been marked. Since 1922, the society's endowment has doubled, the regular donations multiplied by three and the number of books, hymnals, tracts and pamphlets distributed increased from 2,200,000 to nearly 5,000,000. The people of our churches would do well to make use of these tracts and books for the supply of reading matter for their people rather than allow questionable literature to be placed in their hands by those who peddle such literature on the Sabbath day under the name of Christian work, when in reality it is in the name of most anything else.

WORLD EVANGELISM IN PUERTO RICO.—

As one evidence of the solid development of our churches in Puerto Rico, there is the self-denial offering recently made by the churches of the mission of the Disciples of Christ. The local churches of the Disciples decided to unite with their sister churches on the north in observing holy week as a week of self-denial for world evangelization. Of course the total amount received was not large, but the encouraging feature is that every church gave something and more than fifty per cent of the total membership of the Disciples of Christ in Puerto Rico participated in the offering. If mission churches can do this well in missions, what should be the standard of churches in America and other evangelized countries for support of missions.

RELIGIOUS EDUCATION.—

The School of Religious Education of the Congregational-Christian Churches of the South Eastern Convention of Congregational and Christian Churches is in session at Elon College, and the Standard Courses of Religious Education, approved by the International Council of Religious Education are being offered to those who are in attendance. Too few adults are in attendance at this session of the Summer School. Until we can get our pastors and our Sunday School officers to take these courses and to introduce the teaching of them in the local churches, we can never make the work of the Religious Educational program very effective. There is great value in this work to the cause of Christ if used to prepare the members of the Sunday Schools and local churches for better methods of building character.

OVER-CHURCHING.—

A lovely little town of a few hundred population, situated in the heart of the prosperous vineyard country, midway between Buffalo and Erie, N. Y., is Brocton, having a thriving Methodist church, with an excellent, more than adequate building; also a Baptist church, housing a congregation of earnest, devout folk. These congregations with their pastors are abundantly able to care for the spiritual needs of the Protestant people of the town and surrounding country. But now a tiny handful of disciples known as the Wesleyan Methodist, unable to worship with their fellow followers of Christ, have decided to arise and build—a little chapel of wood, whose chief message to the community will be: "Here we are, look on us, the true disciples! We can live in the same town, buy and sell, trade with our fellow Protestants, but we cannot worship with them." How tragic! Send such money where people need it, and unite Christians in fellowship at home.

AIR-CRAFT DEMONSTRATION.—

The aircraft mobilization over the city of New York was the target for many sermons next day. Dr. Bowie, the fearless pastor of Grace Episcopal church, declared that "the flight over New York of huge squadrons of scouting and bombing airplanes is evidently intended by the war department for what is called increased national defense. The sight of the planes was calculated to provide those instinctive reactions upon which professional soldiers believe that a nation must depend. America is confronted today with a choice between two beliefs, a belief in guns and a belief in God." Rev. C. Everett Wagner of the union Methodist church declared that the imaginary attack upon New York was a fantasy of the military mind designed for the purpose of instilling fear into the hearts of citizens. Bishop Manning defended the maneuvers, but it seems that any Christian or psychologist would know enough about the law of suggestion to know that such maneuvers tend toward war.

RELIGIOUS EDUCATION CAMPS.—

Announcement has been made of the western region camps of the International council of religious education to be held at Geneva Glen, Col. The older girls camp will be held July 7-20 with Roy Burkhart of Chicago, Rev. O. R. Warford of Pueblo, and Miss Kathleen Painter of Denver among the leaders. The older boys' camp will be held August 25th to September 7th with Rev. Lyndon Harper of Independence, Mo., Rev. Donald Howard of Pueblo and Prof. O. W. Warmington of Boston University taking prominent part. The adult camp, August 10-22, is offering training in religious education leadership. The Western states are wide awake to the value of religious education while some of the Eastern states are conservative. People and churches will do well to follow the injunction of Christ who would have us make disciples of all nations teaching them to observe all things whatsoever he commanded them. In this religious education, he said "lo, I am with you always, even unto the end of the world."

NEW HYMN BOOKS.—

For a generation there has been a reform movement in Germany which has finally resulted in the adoption of new hymnals throughout the country. Two things are particularly remarkable about the new hymnal used in the province of Saxony. It contains a number of modern songs, and the tunes are presented in a new rhythmical manner which compares very favorably with the old manner. All new hymnals show decided esthetic improvement. New texts and tunes have been introduced, and the type of printing has been changed. They consist of two main parts, one of songs common in all parts of the country, and the other of songs particular to the locality. In other words, the gradual decline of provincialism and the tendency toward unification is seen even in the hymn book reform in the church music in the rural churches. Jazz should be replaced by the stately tunes that have been tried and proved worthy by the process of trial error, and by the songs that have sound theological teachings in them and not an appeal to the erotic impulse. Worship should be the center of appeal by the hymns used in church.

NOTES-PERSONALS

Rev. and Mrs. W. T. Scott, United Church, Salisbury, N. C., "announce the arrival in their home of James Albert Scott, on June 9, 1931." Congratulations to the happy father and mother.

Rev. S. E. Madren has recently closed an evangelistic meeting at Rocky Ford Church, in Carroll County, Va. The revival drew large congregations, evoked much interest, and resulted in three accessions to the Church.

The Sunday School and Christian Endeavor Convention of the Virginia Valley Conference is in session this week at Bethel, near Harrisonburg, Va., Mr. Roy A. Larrick being president. The program certainly gives promise of a great and good convention.

The First Christian Sunday School Orchestra, of our Richmond Church, gave the last monthly musical concert for the season in the church auditorium on last Sunday evening. This orchestra is under the direction of Ernest G. Carr, who is also the church organist. The program consisted of marches, overtures, classical and sacred numbers.

Rev. Roy D. Coulter reports a splendid day at Salem Chapel on Sunday, June 7th. It was Memorial and Missionary Day in the church, with an audience that filled the house. Rev. S. A. Bennett of Elon College accompanied the pastor and preached at the afternoon service. All the congregation seemed delighted with Prof. Bennett's sermon, and the pastor feels that it was, indeed, a good day at good, old Salem Chapel.

Our deepest sympathy goes out to Revs. G. C. Crutchfield, Lynchburg, and H. E. Crutchfield, Henderson, in the recent loss by death of their dear mother, who was a devoted and faithful member of Pleasant Ridge Christian Church, Guilford County, North Carolina. A loving wife and a devoted mother has gone to her reward, and a household is made sad because of the separation. Our sympathies are extended likewise to the bereaved husband and other members of the family.

Pleasant Cross Church, in Randolph County, whose building was burned some months ago, is pushing ahead with a new and much better building to take the place of the one destroyed. The membership and people of the community are making great sacrifices that they may have a church house in which to worship. Miss Sarah Ellison, R. 1, Asheboro, N. C., is the treasurer, and will greatly appreciate any contribution that any one may see fit to make to help in this needy and worthy enterprise.

We express to our friends, Mr. and Mrs. H. C. Simpson of Greensboro, our thanks for being remembered with the following: "Mr. and Mrs. Henry Clay Simpson request the honor of your presence at the marriage of their daughters, Annie to Mr. Edward Rankin McNeely, and Gladys to Mr. Earl Wright Vickers, on Sunday, the 21st of June, at five-thirty o'clock, First Christian Church, Greensboro, N. C." Miss Annie and Miss Gladys are graduates of Elon College, and have many acquaintances and friends among SUN readers. Mr. Earl W. Vickers is in the employ of the College and lives at Elon at the present. He is a very fortunate and happy man. We congratulate him and the fortunate Mr. McNeely.

Miss Josephine Graham, the secretary of the Union Ridge (N. C.) Woman's Missionary Society, writes: "The Woman's Missionary Society held its regular monthly meeting at the Sunday School hut on Thursday afternoon, June 11th, at three o'clock. There were seventeen members and three visitors present. An hour was spent in discussing the important business of the society. Mrs. J. J. Garrison led the discussion of the monthly lesson, 'What is a Christian,' after which the society adjourned to meet again in July."

Brother W. B. Truitt, Greensboro, N. C., is president of the North Carolina and Virginia S. S. and C. E. Convention, due to meet at Reidsville, June 25th and 26th. A good program is promised and a largely attended convention is anticipated. Rev. R. Lee House, Durham, N. C., is president of the Eastern North Carolina Convention, scheduled to meet at Amelia Church, Johnston County, Tuesday and Wednesday, July 14th and 15th. The Eastern Virginia Convention is scheduled to meet at Oakland Church, Nansemond County, Va., July 21st and 22nd.

We acknowledge with appreciation the following: "Rev. and Mrs. Charles Henry Rowland request the honor of your presence at the marriage of their daughter, Annie Graham, to Rev. William Emil Wiseman, on Saturday, June 20, 1931, at four o'clock in the afternoon, First Christian Church, Greensboro, N. C." Miss Graham Rowland is well known to SUN readers, having spent a year in Home Missions work at Fort Apache, Arizona, and the past year as the director of Religious Education in our Burlington Christian Church. She has a host of friends and admirers who would join us in wishing her a most happy venture into the field of matrimony. The happy man is a Methodist minister, now located in Texas. He has our congratulations.

The Mission Secretary had the privilege of occupying the pulpit of Rev. J. H. Dollar, Reidsville, N. C., 11:00 A. M., Sunday, June 7th. Brother Dollar was in the midst of his self-denial week and gathering the fruits of that self-denial for Missions. One of the most promising and wide-awake Sunday Schools one finds anywhere is the First Church, Reidsville, one of the largest numerically in that city, a regular bee-hive of youth and activity. The pastor is working along right lines. A favorite and a companion to the young life of his church, he gives to that young life the same degree of interest, care and consideration that he gives to the adults of his church. This will tell in the future. The teaching of the pastor and his pleas for self-denial for the sake of the Lord that His kingdom may be built up in the earth make a deep impression upon the congregation and will tell in the future of this growing church.

Rev. R. A. Whitten is the happy pastor of New Lebanon Church, Rockingham County, Va. An active Sunday School as well as a loyal and large membership greet him and inspire him as he speaks to them from the pulpit and leads them in spiritual and social activities. The Mission Secretary rejoiced in visiting this good church again and in speaking to the Sunday School and congregation at 3:00 P. M., Sunday, June 7th. This congregation has the missionary spirit, and the pastor assures us that it would go over the top in reaching its quota for Missions—one-third as much for missions as is the amount of the pastor's salary. Each and all of our churches could, with help and no hurt to themselves reach this goal through proper sacrificial and self-denial service. It is always a joy to this writer to visit New Lebanon, a church built under the leadership of the late lamented Rev. L. I. Cox, whose memory is still dear to the community. And this writer recalls the glad day on which he assisted Brother Cox, the then pastor, in dedicating this house of worship.

The following news item carried in a local paper will prove of interest to Elonites who were in school there several years ago: "Miss Mabel Michael, of Gibsonville and Brown Summit, became the bride of Clarence Pickett Thompson, of Graham, Wednesday morning, June 3, 1931, at 10:30 o'clock, in Reidsville at the home of Rev. and Mrs. R. A. Whitten. Rev. Mr. Whitten officiated, using the double ring ceremony. The bride is the eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. D. E. Michael of Brown Summit. She is a graduate of Elon College, class of 1928, and for three years has been a member of the faculty of the Gibsonville school. Mr. Thompson, the son of F. F. Thompson, of Graham, is also a graduate of Elon College and is an instructor in the Altamahaw school. After the service Mr. and Mrs. Thompson left for a motor trip through the Shenandoah valley to Washington, D. C. After June 11th, they will be at Chapel Hill, where they will attend the summer session at the University of North Carolina."

The Congregationalist and Herald of Gospel Liberty, under the department of "Our Awakening World," edited by John R. Scotford, carries this highly gratifying reference to "our own" Pattie Coghill: "Do we know Pattie Lee Coghill? We sure do. She arrives any time from five in the morning until midnight and spends an hour or a week in our midst, during which she has a grand orgy of straightening out her affairs, and a great sharing of experiences which lasts through lengthy meals and into late hours. I first met her several years ago in Student Summer Service. We were working among Christian Churches organizing a week-end conference for young people. Everyone said, 'get Miss Coghill; she is just the one.' We wrote, and wondered what sort of a person would appear. We expected a short, round-faced, stout woman of middle age. We were delighted to have her prove to be young, tall, well-built, attractive, with a happy smile and cordial spirit. She is good fun, but well poised. The young people like her. How she can rush from one place to another, teach in Interdenominational Training Schools, serve the local church, do official correspondence, plan, and think, is a mystery to me."

Rev. F. C. Lester, president of the Board of Religious Education, and Miss Jewel Truitt, the secretary, were visitors at Elon on Wednesday evening, June 10th, and after calling together and organizing the first session of the Elon Summer School, left on the morning of June 11th for the Congregational-Christian Council, Seattle, Wash. Rev. H. S. Hardcastle, Suffolk, Va., was left in charge as dean of the school, and at this writing, he is carrying on that work efficiently and quite successfully. Good work is being done in the school, and there are young people present who are deeply interested in topics of vital interest to the church that are being taught and discussed. The great pity is that the time cannot be found and established for this summer school which would meet the convenience of all in the Convention who would like to attend. A great idea is back of this school and good work is being done in it. It has possibilities of unlimited power and achievement. Hundreds of our young people as well as of our ministers and adults, desiring to know more about religious organizations and activities should be brought together for a summer school on the campus and in the buildings of our beautiful, restful and inviting Elon College.

CONGREGATIONAL NEWS

REV. E. C. GILLETTE, Editor; REV. F. P. ENSMINGER, and REV. M. J. SWEET, Associates.

UNION CHURCH, CHATTANOOGA, is being enlarged and improved while being rebuilt. Dr. Marston S. Freeman was the chief speaker at the laying of the corner stone.

DR. FREEMAN is to attend the Seattle Council as a delegate from the Tennessee Conference. Dr. C. Rexford Raymond is a delegate and also a member of the Business Committee of the Council.

MISS MILDRED TAYLOR, who is doing social and religious work at Pine Knot, Kentucky, is receiving fine response from the local people. Sunday audiences are good-sized. Socials are held in the basement of Summer Chapel.

MIAMI FIRST CHURCH reports that under the leadership of Rev. Helen F. Lanham, who is associate minister, continuing the work during the summer months, seventeen new members have been added during the last six weeks, some of them being associate members.

REV. C. ARTHUR LINCOLN of Daytona Beach, who fell and broke his ankle, is slowly recovering, but it will still be some weeks before he is fully over the accident. An Intermediate Society of Christian Endeavor has been organized in the church and also a young people's choir of about thirty members.

STUDENT SUMMER SERVICE WORKERS from Piedmont College, Miss Ina Adams and Miss Rosie Gill, have begun their work for the summer at Union Hill Church at Pearson. They went directly from examinations to work. This is their first big job—and they are equal to it. Other workers will be announced soon.

MISS ANNIE R. CAMPBELL, Georgia Extension Worker, will grace the Florida Young People's Conference at Camp Imrt. Alle by her presence, giving a course in "Living People's Methods and Materials." Georgia is proud to have the privilege of trying to pay Florida for the many kind courtesies shown. Among them, the last being, when Miss Pattie Lee Coghill took part in the services at Pearson, Union Hill Church. Miss Campbell takes with her two of Georgia's young people, Miss Dora Overstreet and Miss Annie Giles.

BIRMINGHAM, ALA., the central city of the South, which extends from Texas to Virginia, is about to have a sensation in the institution of a dry daily newspaper, which is to be known as The Birmingham Independent. It is supported by "dry" capital from the South and North, and is preparing to maintain itself at a loss for five years while fighting the prohibition battle. It expects to be able to win the necessary advertising support only gradually in the face of the opposition of the "wet" press. The paper will be welcomed all over Alabama. It will have standard news service.

GROUPING PLAN GROWS IN SOUTH GEORGIA. The splendid success of Rev. Theodore L. Levertt, as pastor in the Macedonia Larger Parish, comprising four churches, Macedonia, Sardis, Liberty and New Trinity, is aiding other churches to realize how good and how necessary it is to call a minister who may be a pastor, giving all his time to the churches being served. To that end committees from Union Hill, Antioch and Friendship Congregational Churches met with a committee from the Ambrose Christian Church Wednesday night, June 3d, in Nichols, Georgia, and talked things over and planned for further action. This is exceeding good news. Many of these churches realize that their greater hope is to group for united work, with an intensive program back of which is a pastor, to see that things come to pass. New Light Church, Vanceville, Georgia, has already voted for such a union, while Popular Arbor and Enigma are waiting for their next business meeting or conference to act.

CALLED TO ACTION.

Six young men from various universities, colleges and seminaries have been assigned to the Carolinas for June, July and August. They will serve, with such necessary changes as conditions may compel, as follows: Floyd M. Price will serve Friendship Congregational Church, near Baxley, and Antioch Church, near Bristol, Ga., during June. In August he will serve the two churches at Deorun, Ga., New Light and Poplar Arbor. Mr. Price comes from Vanderbilt University, and is well equipped for Student Summer Service work.

Mr. David Shepherd, also from Vanderbilt, will report to Whitehall Church, Waycross, Ga., June 1st, for one month. He will then give two weeks to Union Hill Church at Pearson, Ga. The first two weeks of July he will serve at Center Church, Atlanta, Ga. After the Blue Ridge Conference he is assigned to Duncan's Creek and the Larger Macedonia Parish for August.

Mr. Arnold Slater, from Vanderbilt, who has been in Student Summer Service work before, will go June 1st to Society Hill, then to Walker's Chapel and Pleasant Hill, both near Roberta, Ga., for a month. July and part of August will find him at Woodbury and Crest, and he will close his summer at Cochran, Ga.

Yale Seminary furnishes us with Mr. Theron A. Zimmeron, who will report on June 15th at County Line, Lovejoy Church. From here he will go to LaGrange and from there to Columbus, Ga., to finish his work.

John Howard Smith, from Elon College, will be stationed in North Carolina under the direction of Miss Priscilla Chase for June. His work for July and August will be announced later, but it will be in the Carolinas.

Kendrick Grobel, Chicago Seminary, is assigned to Asheville, reporting there June 17th, to Rev. J. Brainerd Thrall, pastor. He will be there for one month at least, perhaps longer, attending the Blue Ridge M. E. M. Conference later in the summer.

There is a very important work mapped out for each of these men, and it is expected that the churches will reap important and advancing results. They will always be in close touch with the people and work in harmony with the pastors of churches. It should be said, perhaps, that there may be a shift of one of these workers to assist Mr. Stanley in the Barnesville larger parish for a part of August, in addition to the work of Mr. Slater at Woodbury, Ga.

RESOLUTIONS OF APPRECIATION.

In view of the fact that the five year experimental period of the Vanderbilt University Rural Church School has come to an end, and the future enterprise is somewhat uncertain, the Congregational Advisory Board of the Southeast wishes to go on record in the following way:

1.—Resolved that we express the conviction that this Rural Church School is one of the most significant movements of American Educational life and that we believe its discontinuance would be nothing less than a national calamity:

2.—Resolved that we feel that this Rural Church School is of inestimable value to a region which contains about two-thirds of rural America, two-thirds of rural churches and rural ministers, and that it should be continued:

3.—Resolved that we place on record our appreciation of the unparalleled generosity of the Vanderbilt University in bringing men of small salaries and deficient education of our own and other denominations to this school, and of the benefits they have received:

4.—Resolved that in view of the fact that a new policy of financing and conduct of the Rural Church School must be devised and followed if the school is to be continued, we wish to assure Vanderbilt University of our willingness to co-operate with the other denominations in lessening the cost of maintenance by assisting in providing members of the faculty, and "scholarship" aid necessary to bring our ministers to the school:

5.—Resolved that a copy be sent to Chancellor Kirkland of Vanderbilt University.

CONGREGATIONAL ADVISORY BOARD.

METHODS CORNER

BY REV. ELISHA A. KING, D. D.

Miami Beach, Fla.

Christian fellowship under the auspices of the Church is greatly to be desired. One way is to have "Fellowship Suppers" with just as many members of the church and congregation participating as possible. This is not to make money. The expenses may be pooled and the total divided among the families present. Here at Miami Beach we are very fond of "Pot Luck Suppers" at which each family, or individual, if he has no family, brings what it pleases without announcing beforehand what it will bring. It is surprising how satisfying this arrangement is, but after several years of experience it is found best to have someone make suggestions. In the course of time, however, certain people bring the same thing each time. The host at whose house the supper is held, provides the drinks and of course makes something for the supper. If held at the church, a committee would have charge. There is a lots of fun connected with it, much curiosity, and a whole evening of sociability.

Our Sunday School teachers and officers meet this way each month at the parsonage. We also have had "Progressive Dinners" where each separate course was served at a different house. The cost of this was pooled. It is a very pleasant thing to do, and people get acquainted in going and coming and tarrying at the various homes. The home where the desert is served usually provides some entertainment for the rest of the evening.

We have found such social gatherings of great value in our church program. At Plymouth Church, Seattle, we used to have a regular church supper every Thursday night for the members of the choir and for members of the church who desired to come to the supper and remain for prayer meeting. Occasionally we had our devotional meeting about the tables. I have visited many churches on prayer meeting night and have found the people seated about a table eating their evening meal. While sitting at the tables the meeting was held and carried on beautifully. It was Jesus' method, when you come to think of it. He talked a great deal at meals. The fact is He was the world's greatest table talker. Some of the best things He ever said were said while eating.

PRINCIPLES OF THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

(1) The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.

(2) Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.

(3) The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.

(4) Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship and of Church membership.

(5) The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by, all.

THE PURPOSE OF THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

The purpose of this Church is to cultivate a spirit of union among the followers of our Lord Jesus Christ of every persuasion, and to secure, if possible, the associate efforts of all true religious teachers in pointing the wicked to "the Lamb of God who taketh away the sin of the world."

The peculiar doctrines and tenets which have confused and distracted the Christian world are remanded to private judgment, and hence cease to be matters for debate, only in so far as may be necessary to prevent a sectarian influence from entering the Church.

This Church requires no compromise of faith on the part of any child of God in order to communion or fellowship; here, denominational distinctions cease to exist, and Christian love binds the brotherhood together.

The purpose of this Church will be consummated in the conversion of the world and the union of all Christians.

MISSIONS, A SPIRITUAL TASK.

Missions differ from all other enterprises of the Church in one particular. The Church alone does missionary work. The Church is the only spiritual body on earth. It is the Body of Christ, and of that Body Christ is the Head. And this is the only institution or organization that sends out and supports missionaries or builds churches at home and abroad. This is a spiritual body undertaking a spiritual task. Fraternal orders, benevolent societies, even a benevolent State, as fruits of the gospel, engage in benevolent and charitable undertakings. These fraternal orders, benevolent societies and a friendly State will aid the Church, even far surpass the Church numerically in caring for the orphan and the widow, the infirm, the decrepit and the needy. This is the fruit and the flower of the gospel. None of these, however, engage in the task of building churches, sending out and supporting preachers and teachers, to carry the gospel message into the unchurched and remote districts of the homeland, or into the fields afar. The Church of the living God, the spiritual body of our Lord, is the only institution dedicated and consecrated to the sole task of giving the gospel of our Lord to a world in need.

This is the task assigned to and undertaken by the Church alone. If the Church doesn't do the missionary work—the work of winning souls at home and abroad—it will go undone. In this our Lord has conferred upon His Church and His followers a double blessing:

First. He has given His followers the power of personal approach to the unsaved person across the street, or out on the highway. When an individual, with a desire to carry the message of His Lord to an unreached person close by, goes and carries that message and wins that soul to Christ, that is Evangelism. Winning a soul to Christ through personal contact and appeal is Evangelism.

Second. Another blessing of equal joy and gladness is that of winning souls to Christ by the consecration of purse and possession. This, because it is afar off and we have to send our offerings that the message may be delivered to those in fields afar—that we call Missions. Winning a soul to Christ through the consecration of personal effort and contact, is Evangelism; winning a soul to Christ through consecration of purse, of offering, of prayer and of faith, that we call Missions. Evangelism is winning a soul close by; Missions is winning a soul afar off. God has graciously conferred this double blessing upon those in the Church whom He hath purchased through the blood of His Son and graciously given to them a passion like unto His own; that of soul-saving nearby and afar off, that of making the saving message of our Lord known to those nearby and to those far away. Soul winning is a spiritual task. Evangelism is a spiritual task. Missions is a spiritual task.

God and not man instituted this task, but God has graciously called man into fellowship and service with Him, that through man, the gift of self and the gift of substance through Evangelism and through Missions, He might build up on earth the kingdom of heaven. The Church glows with spiritual fervor during the revival when souls through personal Evangelism are being born into the kingdom. And the Church likewise glows with spiritual fervor when it is brought to a sense of its blessings through its missionary activity in trying to win the wide world to our Lord.

There are in what we call the non-Christian world now nearly 30,000 missionaries; those sent out by our offerings and our prayers to tell to a world in darkness about the Light that can shine in the dark places. There are more than 150,000 native evangelists in the non-Christian world seeking to win people of their own nations to our Christ. There are 858 hospitals, there are 32 schools for the blind and 361 orphanages out there in non-Christian lands. How came even one of all these messengers of mercy and fruits of the gospel and of love out there? A church engaged in its spiritual task of making known its Lord sent out missionaries, and in this sending, this missionary activity, these things have taken place. The Church of the living God is responsible for every one of them, responsible because our Lord Christ called His Church, a spiritual body, to engage in the missionary task. Unless the Church does the missionary work, it will never be done, for in the missionary work, in the work of evangelization, soul-winning, soul-saving, church building, the Church stands alone. Truly is the missionary enterprise a spiritual adventure in the name and for the sake of our Lord, whose Body is the Church and of which Christ is the Head.

ANOTHER VALLEY FORGE.

Despair often brings people to their knees. Human insufficiency often turns to divine sufficiency. Defeat is not the worst calamity that can befall a people. To yield to that defeat, and embrace it as final, is the straw that breaks the camel's back and sends one down to rise no more. There is always hope for a people who, in spite of gathering gloom, still trust God and turn to Him for succor and for relief. George Washington, on his knees at Valley Forge, has been pictured on canvass and in song. Hope born of an unfailing courage carried the leader of the continental armies to a quest of God, and made him an humble suppliant for wisdom from God, for a way whose path he could not find alone. A few days ago President Hoover in public address declared: "The American people are going through another Valley Forge at this time. To each and every one of us it is an hour of unusual stress and trial. You have each one of you special cause of anxiety, so have I. If "special cause for anxiety" is the only attitude the present depressed condition has brought to us, we have not yet reached our Valley Forge. That we will reach only when we shall carry our cause of anxiety to Him who alone is sufficient. It was a praying President, and a leader of armies, who made Valley Forge historical; not because the people were despondent at Valley Forge, and were suffering from sad want and lack on every hand, but because their leader prayed to God, and God led their leader out and on. That made Valley Forge both historical and sacred.

We have had economic depressions before. We are having one now. The present will only pass into history and be recorded as one of many without particular event or significance on the calendar, unless out of economic depression we shall derive moral and spiritual expression and achievement. If the present economic condition will serve to drive the American people to their knees as Valley Forge carried Washington and the continental armies to their knees, then we shall have another historical event, and the glory of the Lord will shine forth into many a darkened region, and make glad millions of hearts, despite their lack and want of material things. Well did the Psalmist say, "The Lord is my Shepherd, I shall not want." As long as we make Him our Shepherd and follow Him, we shall not want any good thing.

BAPTISTS, PROHIBITION AND POLITICS.

The Southern Baptist Convention in annual session at Birmingham, recently, proclaimed to the wide-world, so far as print and publicity are concerned, where they stood and how they stood on Prohibition. That at least is worth something, because they did not "pussy-foot" and were not "mealy-mouthed" about it. Their "resolutions" rang out in clear tones, and the great body of thousands voted its approval with acclaim and applause. They resolved that "we declare our intention and purpose not to support for president of the United States, Senator, representative, governor or other officer of high and responsible position, any candidate who is hostile to or does not openly and frankly support our present prohibition laws, but to seek the defeat of such candidate no matter what party label he may bear." Whether one approves or disapproves, this leaves no one in doubt as to their position. It tells the world where they stand, and henceforth those who run may read so far as Southern Baptists in convention assembled are concerned. Whether one agrees or disagrees with the position taken, one is compelled to admit the straight-forwardness of the thing, and the certainty of the declaration.

GANDHI AND CONVERSIONS.

Possibly no man living is more in the public eye at present than Mahatma Gandhi of India. It is declared that millions of India would die for him. They acclaim him as a true prophet, a seer and a sage. Many Christian pulpits and religious papers have heralded him as being the man most Christ-like in our modern time. In self-denial, in refusing to be allured by the world, in a determination to rise above the things of time and sense and make them secondary, the Mahatma is quite Christ-like. But when this is said about him, all is said that can be said in comparison. He is reported as declaring that "proselyting" of every kind should be abandoned. He is further quoted as declaring, "We need no conversions spiritually." Mr. Gandhi believes that all men should stay in the religion of their fathers and that in which they were brought up. If ever a Buddhist, then a Buddhist always. If ever a Hindu, then a Hindu always. If ever a Mohammedan, then a Mohammedan always. Moreover, Mr. Gandhi sets example of this and declares himself a genuine Hindu, and so well satisfied with his religion that he has no disposition or desire to change his religion and become a Christian.

In this the Mahatma differs as much from the Christ as night differs from day. Christ went about proselyting; that is, winning men and women from a worse to a better way, leading them from darkness into light, calling them, "Ye scribes, pharisees, hypocrites," to come out from the principles and practices, which had made them what they were, and heed the gospel of righteous deeds and holy activities. He made no compromise with the ways of the world and wickedness about Him, and if proselyting means, as the dictionary says it does, winning one from a heathen to the Christian way, then He practiced proselyting with vigor and determination. Whoever says the world does not need spiritual conversion differs from the Christ who said "Ye must be born again."

QUICK.

Quick is the "key-word" of this age. Motion is quick. Decisions are quick. Remedies are quick. Isaiah in writing of Jesus describes Him of "quick understanding in the fear of the Lord." (Isaiah 11:3.) God ordained Him to be the judge of the "quick and dead." (Acts 10:42.) "The word of God is quick, and powerful, sharper than a twoedged sword, piercing even to the dividing asunder of soul and spirit, and of the joints and marrow, and is a discerner of the thoughts and intents of the heart." (Hebrews 4:12.) The wiser men are the quicker they are. Slow people will get behind in this age.

Men in business have to answer questions on short time, have to decide questions on short time, and that means that men must be posted and ready or they will make mistakes. That is one cause of failure; quick decisions are made without adequate knowledge. It is too late to get up data after decisions have been made. Smart traders prey upon the ignorance of men, secure their subscriptions, sell them investments with bright prospects for big profits and, later, the investor finds that he has been deceived.

Two things are necessary for best results in this quick age. First, thorough education along the line in which the life is to move. If in the market, his knowledge of the market must be up to date, and clear in the field of operations. Prices may change overnight, and the slow man may go to bed rich and wake up poor. His vision must be clear and embrace more than the latest reports.

Still greater than thorough education is real spiritual experience. God can enable his devoted child to see the right path and His help is quick. Men depend too much on the judgment and opinion of other men, and not enough on the Spirit of God. "When he, the Spirit of truth is come, he will guide you into all truth." (John 16:13.)

There are two sources of truth, the one is from man through education; and the other is from God through His word and His spirit. These are the two sources of wisdom; and the best is that which comes from God.

THE CHURCH OF GOD.

(An address delivered by Rev. A. D. Woodworth, D. D., at the dedication of the Church at Okuzawa, Japan, October 19, 1930.)

The greatest event of the world was that of the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ into it. The truth which He taught transcends every other truth, since through Him, and Him alone, the way has been opened up by which we may receive the forgiveness of our sins, and may become the sons of God and heirs of eternal glory. Thinking men everywhere admit that there are no problems affecting humankind which the teachings of our Lord do not solve. There is hardly a religious paper, hardly a sermon which does not emphasize the supremacy of our Lord and His gospel as the panacea of the world's ills. As Peter says before the Sanhedrin, "Neither is there salvation in any other, for there is none other name under heaven given among men whereby we must be saved."

For two thousand years Christian men and women have felt deeply these facts, and in consequence have been zealous in preaching the gospel and in extending its influence to the ends of the earth. Companies of believers have been formed for mutual encouragement and helpfulness, and for their convenience Church buildings have been erected, some of them of great size and magnificence. And so the building for whose dedication we are met together today, though a modest structure, is intended to meet the spiritual needs of this rapidly growing suburb of our great city. In so far as the architect and the carpenters are concerned, they have done their best. This little Church for the accommodation of a congregation, a kindergarten and Sunday School, and the pastor's home, is the answer to prayer. The result, we hope, will stimulate the pastor's faith, and not only the faith of the pastor and his little flock, but the faith of Christians elsewhere. In a way, they have seen great things for the Lord undertaken and great things accomplished.

So far, we have come under the guidance of our Lord. But the work for which this building has been erected is but the beginning of greater things which we expect to see. This house will be an altar of prayer, and here the gospel as given in the inspired word will be faithfully preached.

What does it all stand for? Naturally it stands as a lighthouse for the sailor buffeted by the storms of life and seeking a safe harbor. It is a hospital in which the sin-sick may find spiritual healing. It is a school in which those who are spiritually ignorant may sit at the feet of the Lord, imbibe His spirit and daily become more and more like Him.

But the Church of which this building is a symbol, has other work to do. The world is full of social injustice and the avarice which heaps up wealth by exploiting the poor and weak. What can the Church do to help the victims of poverty and greed? An army of not less than 20,000 women a year are initiated into lives of shame. Must not the Church cry aloud and spare not in their defense? It is said that the Japanese spend 1,500,000,000 yen a year for drink, and 700,000,000 yen for licentious pleasures. We know that the Church is at grips with these evils which in the past have overthrown great nations. Surely the greatest enemies of Japan are not outside her borders, but inside her gates, and they are the popular vices. It is said that in Japan there are a million people who correspond in a way to the untouchables of India. Can the Church produce a spirit such as Jesus showed to the woman of Samaria at Jacob's well? "For there is no respect of persons with God." The ancients represented evil as a sea monster with nine heads, of which, if one head were cut off, two grew out in its place. The Church is arrayed against this Hydra, and of necessity must be a warrior Church, "terrible as an army with banners," fighting against the rulers of darkness of this world and against spiritual wickedness in high places.

But what has the Church already done? In the times of our Lord, at least one-half of the human race were slaves. Who struck off these shackles but our Lord working in the hearts of His followers? The histories tell us how ancient women were but the puppets of men, trampled in the mire for their pleasure. What has lifted woman from her low place and made her not only the equal of men, but in all work for the uplift of mankind made her a queen? What but the influence of the gospel stopped the human butcheries which made a Roman holiday? Whose voice has been loudest and strongest against the curse of war? What voice has been strongest in the far-flung battle line against intemperance? Who first taught the brotherhood of man, the Fatherhood of God, and the equal privileges for all men according to the Golden Rule? Who is smiting the sweatshop, the exploitation of children and the poor? What is the Church doing in all lands in which twenty-five thousand men and women have gone out to hold up the ideal of our Lord? Already we know that golden harvests have been reaped as a result of their sowing.

What the Church is now doing for a sin-cursed world makes it the supreme organization of the world. What shall we say of the uplift and inspiration it gives to the hearts of men in the weary struggle of life? How it takes away the fear of death? How in it we see the highest fruition of our hopes in the new heaven and new earth where God will dwell with His children and will supply every need and wipe all tears away from their eyes? So the building which we dedicate today stands for all the glories and riches of our Lord Jesus Christ; stands for infinite love, stands for God's unspeakable Gift; stands for the things which eye hath not seen nor ear heard—things that have not entered into the heart of man.

Jesus has said that the gates of hell shall not prevail against His Church, meaning that the omnipotent God is in it and that it will put down all rule and all authority and power. The Queen of Sheba was dismayed when she saw the glories of Solomon, and said the half had never been told her. In like manner, when we have piled words together to express the splendors of the Church which God calls His inheritance in the saints, words fail. The Lord loved His Church, and for it He gave His precious blood, that He might present it to Himself a glorious Church, perfect in beauty, having no spot or wrinkle or any such thing, that it should be holy and without blemish.

This is the instrument through which His truth and His spirit flow into the hearts of men with regenerating power, changing darkness to light and making sinful men the saints of God.

It is not surprising that from the Church have sprung the greatest paintings of the world, the finest literature, the psalms—the greatest song-book of the world, and our great modern hymns which have done more to mold the thoughts of men than all theological books.—Rev. A. D. Woodworth, D. D., in Missionary Herald.

Of the entire population of North Carolina, 70.5 per cent are white, and practically all of the white population are native, there being only three-tenths of one per cent foreign born. Likewise, of the native white population, nearly all are of native parentage, there being only six-tenths of one per cent of foreign or mixed parentage. Persons born in England formed 13.7 per cent of the 8,788 persons comprising the foreign-born white population of North Carolina. More than one-half of the foreign-born white population have been naturalized.

SUFFOLK LETTER.

B. O. Hill, son and co-partner with his father, I. O. Hill, who has been engaged in the undertaking business in Suffolk for forty years, with his helpers and two outside friends, carried eleven preachers and fourteen laymen on an outing down the Nansemond River on June 12th. It was a fine day, and fishing was engaged in on the river and out in James River. The boats landed at Newport News at 1:30 P. M., and the twenty-five men enjoyed a lucious sea-food dinner at Phillips' Sea-food Restaurant. All was the hospitality of the Hills.

There were three boats, owned and operated as follows: Boat No. 1, J. A. Parker, carried Revs. W. H. Corbitt, Baptist, of Holland; E. C. Dean, Baptist, of Suffolk; and laymen, J. A. Parker, W. J. Rhodes, Z. Turner, and J. F. Brantley. That crew of 6 caught 45 fish. Boat No. 2, B. O. Hill's, carried Revs. H. J. Goodwin, Baptist of Suffolk; N. G. Newman, Christian of Holland, I. W. Johnson, Christian, and W. W. Staley, Christian, of Suffolk; and, laymen, John B. Pinner, Baird O. Hill, Blackwell Cross, M. M. Osborn, George Matthews, and F. H. Debnam. That boat of 10 caught 100 fish. Boat No. 3, W. H. Burchett, carried Rev. C. E. Pleasants, Methodist, of Suffolk, Revs. W. M. Jay, Christian of Holland, J. R. Taylor, Baptist of Whaleyville, Carl B. Craig, Presbyterian of Suffolk, L. L. Lasiter, Christian, of Suffolk; and laymen, J. C. West, W. H. Burchett, G. B. Dixon, J. Babrick. That crew of 9 caught 131 fish. The total catch of fish for the day was 276. The fishing was carried on down the river and up the river that afternoon. The trip, the dinner, and the bait were all free, as Baird Hill paid the bills. His associates, and the two extra boats of Parker and Burchett, shared with Hill in the expense of the trip.

It may seem strange to report a fishing trip in THE CHRISTIAN SUN, but it was a religious group of eleven preachers and fourteen laymen, and a day of real recreation for tired men. Revs. H. E. Comer, H. S. Hardcastle and S. C. Venable, Methodist, Christian and Presbyterian, and also members of the Ministerial Association of Suffolk and Nansemond County, were out of the city, and their absence was regretted by us and, no doubt, by them.

The first disciples called by Jesus were fishermen. Peter, Andrew, James and John, were fishers, and Jesus made them "fishers of men." (Matt. 4:22.) From that day until this day, ministers have loved to fish; and it is unusually kind of Baird Hill to give the members of the Ministerial Association and others an annual all-day outing in a fishing trip and a good dinner down the Nansemond River to Newport News. The scenery down the Nansemond is equal to any in this country. One thing is demonstrated by such hospitality and such associates, and that is the real unity of the ministers of different denominations. Had you been a stranger on that trip, you could not have told that there were different denominations in that happy company of ministers and laymen. W. W. STALEY.

ELON LETTER.

We have often heard a fond father say, "I did not have a chance at an education when I was a boy, but I am going to give my boy the best education to be had." And he meant it. The unfortunate, or fortunate, fact is that an education cannot be given. If it could, the majority of us would be educated. As it is, however, fathers and mothers can only send their boys and girls to college, or, better yet, make it possible for them to go to college, and trust to them and to the institution to do the rest.

And the rest is not easy. The average freshman, in an unfamiliar environment, surrounded by strangers, faced by the necessity of adjustment to new surroundings, confronted by a multiplicity of duties, social scholastic, and religious, often "fails to see the wood for the trees." It is not to be wondered at that he makes mistakes, does not put first things first, "gets off on the wrong foot," and ultimately fails. The fact that so many do seize the opportunities presented and profit by them is gratifying proof of the fundamental soundness and sincerity of our modern youth.

Elon was among the first of Southern Colleges to provide an orientation period for the incoming freshmen. They assemble at the College at least three days before registration day for upper classes. These days are spent in visiting the college plant, inspecting class-rooms, libraries, laboratories, etc., in listening to talks by faculty members on subjects of vital importance to students, in securing information concerning courses and texts, in making new acquaintances among the faculty and class-mates, in recreation—in short, in getting oriented to the surroundings.

We are hoping to make the orientation period of the approaching year the best yet. In addition to the activities before mentioned, we shall organize the students into groups, each under the supervision of capable teachers, who will lead them in the consideration and discussion of such subjects as the opportunities, the problems, and the responsibilities of College life.

A committee consisting of faculty members and deans has been appointed to study the problems and submit plans for the orientation period. We are hoping that the plans may be so wisely operated and so well presented that our freshmen may enter upon the work of the year with a breadth of vision and a determination to achieve, that will make the year the most fruitful one in our history. J. W. BARNEY.

RELIGION OR CHRISTIANITY, WHICH?

We live at a time in which we hear much about the world's great need for religion. The world, today, is religious, and so has it been ever since man began to worship. No matter what man worshipped, from Adam to the present day, whether it was an idol, the sun, the moon, the stars, his ancestors, or anything else, that was his religion. Man is, and always will be incurably religious, but not incurably Christian.

The great need of the world today is not more religion, as some seem to think, but it needs Jesus Christ, the Son of the true and living God. It needs Christ because our civilization is approaching a mighty, new advancement, or approaching a serious and tragic collapse. As we look around us, we can see that Christ and His teachings have been and still are being neglected.

It was by the power, mercy and strength of God that our civilization developed and rose to its present position; not by the power of religion.

All that we have, or ever will have, came and will come from God, yet we neglect Him. Divorce increases; murder, suicide and lawlessness of all kinds still have their headway. Our jails and penitentiaries are still being filled each year. God is less and less in our thoughts. What can remedy such a condition as this? Nothing can do it but the acceptance of Christ and Him only. What we need today is the vital realization that salvation comes by Jesus Christ and Him crucified, and not by religion.

We are living in a crucial time, and we should stop and think. Preachers should preach more Christ and less religion. Christ alone can bring the lowly sinner from the muck and mire of sin and save his soul. Religion has never saved a soul, and it cannot.

In the eighth chapter of the Gospel according to John, twelfth verse, Jesus says, "I am the Light of the world: he that followeth me shall not walk in darkness, but shall have the light of life." He did not say that religion was the light of the world, and that he that followed it should not walk in darkness. He said "I am the Light of the world." The need of the world today is not religion, but the acceptance of Jesus Christ and Him Crucified. J. RAY DICKENS.

MINISTERIAL ASSOCIATION PICNIC.

The annual Preachers' Picnic of the Eastern Virginia Ministerial Association took place at Ocean View on Friday, June 5th. After the arrival of the brethren with their wives and children, friends and sweethearts, one of the party, likely Dr. W. W. Staley or Dr. L. E. Smith, said, "I go a fishing." And soon the others said, "We go also with thee." The weather was fine, the fish were biting, and the sport was good.

A call from shore to the boats launched yonder was sent out, that lunch was ready and that they had fished long enough. Finally they came in and found that their good wives had spread the dinner, whereupon the feast was enjoyed. After dinner, a short business meeting was called by the president of the association, Rev. J. E. McCauley. During the session of business, there seemed to be a weary look upon the faces of certain brethren. They were restless, they were sleepy, until one, Rev. "Red" Poythress declared that he wanted to play some "good old golf," whereupon a number of challenges were made. Then to the Ocean View Golf Club went three of the brethren. It took Dr. Smith and J. W. Fix to show Brother Poythress that he was not the only golfer among the clergy of the Eastern Virginia Conference.

The day ended and every member of the party declared the fun, food and fellowship were most delightful and enjoyable.

REV. G. D. HUNT'S LETTER.

Dear Brother Editor:

We had a splendid service at Roanoke Christian Church yesterday and last night. Four members were received to Fellowship at the eleven o'clock service. Sunday school was good and C. E. was fine at the evening hour. Sunday School voted to reinstate their Orphanage and Missionary offering. We are soon to have some Steroptican pictures for the entertainment of our young people.

Our church voted to hold their annual revival beginning the fourth Sunday in June, and closing the first Sunday night in July, provided we can make the necessary arrangements.

Our little church here is doing some good work now. It is our purpose to relieve our indebtedness as fast as we can, and then undertake greater things for the kingdom.

We have been under a great strain financially for some time and have thus been greatly hindered in our church program. We are still under the same depression, but by the Grace of God, and heroic efforts on our part, we will come through. We have a loyal little band of poor people, but with all hearts and hands united, with Jesus leading, victory is ours. Please pray for us.

G. D. HUNT, Pastor.

EDUCATION—OR SOPHISTICATION?

Trooping into the school-rooms of myriads of institutions today come crowds of eager youth. "What are you seeking?" we ask. "Education," they reply; "what have you to offer?" Here is our answer:

The finest equipped science laboratories known to the world now await the curiosity of growing minds. Splendid school plants rear their heads over all this broad country. Gone is the little one-teacher, red school-house on the hill. Educational methods and technique have grown amazingly during the past quarter-century. The professional equipment of the average teacher is three times that of thirty years ago. Curricula have been enlarged until it is practically impossible to mention a subject which is not taught in some public school. Dental clinics, optical laboratories, fresh-air rooms, and gigantic athletic equipment are common attributes of the modern school system.

What can we offer youth? We can train their minds to think. We can impart scientific principles with great economy of effort. We can prepare them to make more money than any generation has ever made. We can eliminate their physical defects. We can train their bodies to resist inroads of disease. We can teach them ideals of sanitation. We can teach them a host of things which will, undoubtedly, be of immeasurable benefit to them in years to come.

To impart these things to our youth, the American people are spending a colossal sum of money each year. Ask your local city officials what per cent of the total revenue from taxes each year is spent directly or indirectly on the educational institutions of your locality. Their answer will probably surprise you. The American people want education, and they are willing to pay for it. They are paying for it today as never before, because more people are wanting more education. Our high schools are crowded, our colleges have almost doubled their enrollment during the past decade. We even go so far as to say that people must receive a certain amount of education, and the tendency is to increase the age limits of the compulsory education laws. Education has become a big business, using mass-production methods. Isn't it time for the thinking people of this country, and, peculiarly, the thinking people of Southern Methodism, to stop and ask themselves just what education should mean? When we send our children to school, what do we want them to get?

If we receive no other benefit from this discussion, may we not carry away with us a new conception of education and its meaning. Education is not merely the acquirement of knowledge, no matter how meticulous the learning may be; it is not the training of the ability to carry on a trade, no matter how skillful the learner may grow to be; it is not the mastery of scientific principles alone. Education, in its finest sense, means the training of an individual so that he may get the most out of life for himself, and give the most of his life to the creation of the happiness of others. That man is best educated who is best prepared to emerge a victor over the trials and difficulties that shall be his, and in winning that victory to do the most for his fellows. Ponder that definition of education for a while. Can we accept it? If we can, its implications are such that we cannot avoid them.

There are two ways of making a piece of furniture. A piece of soggy field pine may be taken, lacquered, and so painted as to imitate the finest mahogany. Or, we may take the genuine mahogany and polish it until it glows with life. The two pieces of furniture look the same to the casual eye, but there is a vast difference between them. In all seriousness, I say to fellow Church members that today's public education is lacquering and is not polishing our children.

Americans have been so afraid religion would become entangled with politics that we have allowed religion to be taken out of education. If we accept the above definition of education, there certainly can be no real education without religion. What we are offering today is sophistication, and not education. In some States in this country it is actually against the law for the Bible to be read in the public schools. In practically all schools, the religious part of the training offered consists of a fifteen or thirty-minute period each day when the Bible is perfunctorily read and our Lord's Prayer hurriedly repeated. We are turning out minds keen as the buzz-saw, bodies as powerful as the steam turbine which furnishes the motive power in a saw-mill, and are turning them loose to face life without the governing and directing force which can only come from a sincere and definite knowledge of Jesus Christ and His message to the world.

I would that these words might be emblazoned over the entrance to every public and private school in America: "For what shall it profit a man if he gain the whole world and lose his own soul?" Sophistication may bring our children pleasure, but it can never bring them happiness. Sophistication may make our children rich in material, powerful in knowledge, but it can never make them more than blind babes, groping in a hopeless, dismal fog when they face those problems which shall either make or mar their lives. L. D. Haskew, in Nashville Christian Advocate.

MISSIONARY MEETING.

The Monticello Woman's Missionary Society held its regular monthly meeting at the Christian Church, May 8th. A very interesting program, under the direction of Mrs. C. J. Comer, was rendered. The theme was "Love." Devotionals were conducted by the leader. In the absence of the president, Mrs. Michael presided. Several interesting papers were read by the members. Mrs. M. C. Faucette gave a report of the Missionary Rally, which was held at the Palm Street Christian Church, Greensboro, N. C. Refreshments were served by Mrs. T. F. Faucette and Miss Myrtle Rudd, and were enjoyed by all.

MISSIONS

REV. J. O. ATKINSON, D. D., Secretary.

A PRAYER.

Father Almighty, we beseech Thee defend Thy Church against the spirit of anti-Christ. Deliver it from the effect of evil influences. So invaded are the appointed times for worship, so perverted their purpose and program, that souls hungering for bread too often find only a stone, cold, hard, set, without power or property to feed and warm. Rid Thy sanctuary, O God, of every alien influence and preserve to its offices the light and strength that effectually combat what the world not only attractively presents, but so diligently seeks to impose and instil. In Thy most holy name we pray. Amen. L.

THE LIVING GOSPEL.

The power of the living Gospel in an individual life has been a real inspiration to me during the past few days, and I should like to share that experience with my friends.

Yesterday a group of us were having tea with Mrs. Hubbard, when Pastor Sun came in. None of us had seen him since the death of his son in Tingchow a little more than a week ago, and I think some of us dreaded the meeting just a little, for our sympathy for the Suns in their bereavement is very deep, and we foreigners, some of us at least, frequently seem tactless and unfeeling when we mean to be most helpful and sympathetic. What could we say to comfort? But Pastor Sun at once put us at ease. His face, usually so jolly, was thin and aged and lined with sorrow, but he had a confident poise and peace that showed his glimpse into "the valley of the shadow" had indeed been without fear, and that he had been comforted. Quietly, and without a trace of bitterness, he told of his son's last hours. This son was the last of seven children, most of whom had died after flowering into youth. Moreover, he was the last of the line, as Mr. Sun has no brothers. An unusually fine lad, with every advantage of education and a Christian home, just entering upon a useful career, married to a splendid girl, and the father of one little daughter—how could they let him go.

"All of us were with Hsi Fu that last day," said Pastor Sun, "and at three o'clock he said that he couldn't see us. When he heard someone weeping in another room, he asked who it was, and on being told that it was his mother, asked for her to return. Then he asked each of us to come near where he could touch us, and after that to kneel and pray. As I prayed, I could hear him murmur an amen after each petition, and at the close of my prayer he himself prayed. I could hear but faintly, 'I beseech thee, O God,' and at the end of his prayer, there came clear and strong—'Amen.' These were his last words. He went quietly and without pain into the world beyond. After we arose from our knees, we looked at his face, and it shown more beautifully than ever in life."

The father's face glowed with the light of peace as he told us, and as I wiped the tears from my eyes, I was thankful for Pastor Sun and for his triumphant faith. He went on to tell us of the little granddaughter, just two years old, who bows her head and peeps through her hands during grace, who says her own amen at evening prayers, and insists that her mother and grandparents dance with her. As we smiled through our tears, we rejoiced for the child in our midst. We are hoping that the little one to come may be a boy to bear his father's name, and carry on the family.

This morning, after the usual church service, Pastor Sun went to the pulpit and again quietly told the congregation of his son's last days. He told us how he had been comforted by Hsi Fu's faith and trust, for several times he had said that his heart was entirely at peace. Hsi Fu told his father that he could hear the voices of his friends and relatives praying for him, even these friends in Paoingfu, and he wished to thank them for their love and prayers.

Pastor Sun is an excellent preacher, but I'm sure he will never preach a better sermon than his calm words of yesterday, when he revealed in his own life the Power of a Living Gospel and Triumphant Faith.—Mary Stambaugh Robinson, in The Missionary Herald.

MRS. GARMAN WRITES FROM JAPAN.

12 Hachiyama, Shibuya,
Tokyo, May 3, 1931.

Mrs. J. A. Williams,
Franklin, Va.

My dear Mrs. Williams:

In remembering from time to time what I was doing "just a year ago," as the first of May came around, I was reminded of the lovely trip I made to the Southern Christian Convention and the happy time I had there—the new friends I made and the pleasure I had in hearing of the fine work that the women of the South are doing. I can only hope that my trip and visit did our beloved work half as much good as it did me.

I haven't forgotten my promise to write, even though I am so long in getting to it. I think of you very often indeed and wonder how the union goes—whether you are being able to meet your apportionments, and wish I might see and talk to you again.

We got back to Tokyo the end of November, having greatly enjoyed our part in the annual meeting of the American Board at Madison, Wis., the latter part of October. It was a pleasure to meet Dr. Atkinson there and to see him for a wee bit at our own Board meeting just previously. What a wonderfully fine man he is! We all received such a cordial welcome at Madison and were made to feel very much a part of the meeting. The same thing happened here in Japan, and it has been interesting to note how the union has brought new strength to both branches of the Japanese church. So far as we can see now, the results have been universally good—even better than we had expected.

For several months after our return, I was not well—had a bad cough all winter, and it was not until April that it was discovered that the trouble came from enlarged turbinate bones in my nose. I had some treatments from a specialist, and am feeling better now than at any time since last November. The winter was the coldest in 25 years in Tokyo. The spring has been lovely, and we have so enjoyed watching trees, shrubs and flowers, which we have planted here at various times in the past six years, leafing and flowering. We do so enjoy our home—and for that, too, we have the women of the South to thank. It seems pretty big and empty at times, with all three children in America, but hardly a week goes by but what we have guests staying for from one to three or four nights. Week before last, I had five extra beds going. A committee meeting brought Mr. Fry, Mr. McKnight and Esther, Miss Stacy, to town, and Dr. Fairchild of the American Board—he is secretary, you know, for China and Japan, and we like him so much—was also staying here. Just now, Mr. Mann and his little son are having part of their meals with us, while his wife is in the hospital for an operation. The Manns are of our mission—have only been out for a year and a half, and he is in the language school.

The evangelistic campaign in which all denominations are uniting, and which Dr. Kagawa is leading, goes steadily and surely forward. There is nothing spectacular about it, but each month sees new gains. Last year many meetings were held in cities; this year most are being held in smaller towns and in the strategic places in the week's duration are being held in many places, and are being appreciated by those who attend.

Since returning to Japan, or rather since the first of the year, Mr. Garman has become manager for the Christian Literature Society of Japan, and gives about three-fourths of his time to it. The creating of Christian literature is a very essential part of the whole work of the Church, and Mr. Garman says he realizes more and more every day how vital and important it is. He still carries on his newspaper evangelistic work with the aid of a secretary. Recently from one insertion of an article about Christianity in one of Tokyo's largest newspapers, he received 133 requests for further information. One insertion cost $17.50, but we think it paid. We advertise in other papers as well, and most of the mail that comes to the house is for the "Koonkwan" (newspaper evangelistic work).

Please remember me kindly to as many friends as lies in your power.

With very best wishes, I am,

Yours in His Service,
KATHERINE W. GARMAN.

THE BURIAL OF MOSES.

By MRS. ELLA BRADDY.

By Nebo's lonely mountain,
On this side Jordan's wave,
In a vale in the land of Moab,
There lies a lonely grave;
And no man knows that sepulchre,
And no man saw it e'er,
For the angels of God upturn'd the sod
And laid the dead man there.

That was the grandest funeral
That ever passed on earth,
But no man heard the tramping
Or saw the train go forth.
Noiselessly as the daylight
Comes back when night is done,
And the crimson streak on ocean's cheek
Grows into the great sun.

Noiselessly as the spring-time,
Her crown of verdure weaves,
And all the trees on all the hills
Open their thousands leaves.
So, without sound of music,
Or voices of them that wept,
Silently down from the mountain's crown
The great procession swept.

Perchance the bald-head eagle,
On gray Beth-peor's height,
Out of his lonely eyrie
Look'd on the wondrous sight.
Perchance the lion, stalking,
Still shuns that hallow'd spot,
For beast and bird have seen and heard
That which man knoweth not.

But when the warrior dieth,
His comrades in the war,
With arms reversed and muffled drum,
Follow his funeral car.
They show the banners taken,
They tell his battles won;
And after him lead his masterless steed,
While peals the minute gun.

Amid the noblest of the land,
We lay the sage to rest,
And give the bard an honor'd place,
With costly marble dress'd,
In the great minster transept
Where lights like glories fall,
And the sweet choir sings and the organ rings
Along the emblazon'd wall.

This was the truest warrior
That ever buckled sword;
Th's the most gifted poet
That ever breathed a word;
And never earth's philosopher
Traced with his pen,
On the deathless page, truths half so sage
As he wrote down for men.

And had he not high honor?

The hillside for a pall,
To lie in state while angels wait
With stars for tapers tall;
And the dark rock pines, like tossing plumes,
Over his bier to wave,
And God's own hand in that lonely land
To lay him in the grave!

In that strange grave without a name,
Whence his uncoffin'd clay
Shall break again—O wondrous thought!
Before the judgment day,
And stand, with glory wrapp'd around,
On the hills he never trod
And speak of the strife that won our life
With the incarnate Son of God.

Heaven isn't reached at a single bound,
But we build the ladder by which we rise
From the lowly earth to the vaulted skies,
And we mount to the summit round by round.
I count this thing to be grandly true:
That a noble deed is a step toward God,
Lifting the soul from the common sod
To a pure air and a broader view.

We rise by things that are under our feet—
By what we have mastered of good and gain;
By the pride deposed and the passion slain,
And the vanquished ills that we hourly meet.
We hope, we aspire, we resolve, we trust
When the morning calls us to life and light;
But our hearts grow weary, and ere the night
Our lives are trailing the sordid dust.

O lonely grave in Moab's land!
O dark Beth-peor's hill!
Speak to these curious hearts of ours,
And teach them to be still.
God hath His mysteries of grace—
Ways that we cannot tell;
He hides them deep like the hidden sleep
Of him we loved so well.

NOT ONE MONTH LEFT.

MISSION PERIOD! MARCH, APRIL, MAY, AND JUNE!

AND ALL these months are gone, save a part of June. Some Churches have done their best. They have given, to the glory of God and for the salvation of souls, out of their need. The Missionary Offering to them meant self-denial, but it meant joy.

Then other Churches have given something. "Times are hard," and so instead of cutting off one necessity or comfort from the home, the Lord's offering was reduced, and His cause must suffer!!

Then there are Churches in which no offering has as yet been taken. God's work must wait and suffer rather than self-denial of any need or comfort or luxury shall be made for His sake!

The call still comes! The need is great. God and not man instituted missionary work, and He invites all His followers to join in that blessed task.

If your Church has not taken the Annual Missionary Offering, one Sunday of June is the time to take it.

The Kingdom waits, and calls for your decision.

HERE AND THERE.

The Rosemont Christian Sunday School observed its Children's Program on Sunday, June 7th, with a splendid program by the children of the various departments of the Sunday School. All of the departments met together in the main Sunday School auditorium for the program. It was a great day for the boys and girls, and for the proud parents. Rosemont's new educational plant is helping in making the Sunday School a real school for its boys and girls, and its boys and girls promise many such wonderful programs in return for the money and hope invested in them.

The Spring Hill Young People's Society presented a program on "Music" as a feature of their regular monthly meeting on last Sunday. Miss Jewel Truitt was a visitor and spoke on the topic, "The Ministry of Music." The story of the hymn, "I would be True," was told by Mr. James Cooper. Mr. G. Chapman White read the poem, "When My Master Plays." Miss Evelyn Richardson rendered beautifully a piano solo "Whispering Hope." This most inspiring group of young people is headed by Mr. Howard Atkins, president, a recent graduate of the Waverly High School. This society embraces in its membership almost every young person in the church community, whether they are members of that particular church or not. Christian youth is, in deed and in truth, in favor of practical church union, and it does not hesitate to practice it. As a result, whole communities profit thereby.

Mr. Alfred Barrett, son of Rev. and Mrs. D. P. Barrett, of Puerto Rico, spoke at the Woman's Missionary Society of the Suffolk Christian Church, on Monday evening, June 8th. Puerto Rico is a very wonderful place to live, according to Alfred, and his several years there gives some basis upon which to speak with authority. Alfred enters the University of North Carolina in September. Here's a "Hearty welcome to the States; we hope you will like to live here, too."

A CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR LEADER.

Mrs. W. B. Williams of Newport News, Va., is known throughout Virginia as an enthusiastic Christian Endeavor leader. Mrs. Williams has served as City Union president, is a leader in State work, and is at the present time Christian Endeavor Secretary for the Eastern Virginia Sunday School and Christian Endeavor Convention of the Christian Church. Mrs. Williams writes:

"At the present time I broadcast over station WHG each Sunday on the City Union "Thirty Golden Minutes Program," discussing the Christian Endeavor topic for that day. This is one of the most interesting things I do now, for you would be surprised at the number of people who tell me how much good that little three or four minute talk does them, and if I can do one person some good, touch at least one heart, I feel certain that the time I spend preparing the talk is well spent.

"When I was re-elected secretary of Christian Endeavor for our Sunday School and Christian Endeavor Convention last year I came away from that convention knowing that we had a splendid group of young people in our conference, knowing that they only wanted something definite to do for their Master and for Christian Endeavor. So I was determined to give them an outline of work to go by, which would include the activities of our own denomination. Consequently, I attended the sessions of the Eastern Virginia Christian Conference and learned the things which were to be stressed in our churches this year. Then with the aid of the "Virginia State program of work for our own societies, multi-graphed it and sent it to all Young People's Christian Endeavor Societies in our conference. In this program, I tried to keep before the young people the value of their own consecration, through the regular monthly consecration meetings and pre-prayer service. I also tried to emphasize the missionary spirit of our Endeavorers.

"This was a very interesting bit of work, especially since its mailing I have had requests for it from leaders in other conferences. Also, I have had requests from various societies for suggestions in planning their Christian Endeavor prayer meetings, particularly the consecration meetings. These requests have been gladly granted. Very often I receive letters from Christian Endeavorers telling me of the progress of their society."

NOTICE.

The Sunday School and Christian Endeavor Convention of the North Carolina and Virginia Conference will be held June 25th and 26th, at the Reidsville Christian Church. Rev. J. H. Dollar, the pastor, is working overtime to insure a good time for everybody who comes.

A program full of inspiration and snap is being arranged to cover every department of the Sunday School and the Christian Endeavor, and including missions, the orphanage and the college. The best features of the program have been scattered, so that if one misses the first, last, or intermediate parts, he will miss some of the best.

A special feature will be the evening program, strictly in charge of young people. No one who attends should fail to be on hand for this part.

The convention will be called to order sharply at 10 A. M., June 25th and will close by 3:30 P. M., June 26th. Homes will be provided for those who stay over during Thursday night. Those who drive will not have far to go, as Reidsville is central, and good roads radiate in every direction.

W. B. TRUITT.

If all unkind and unjust words were arrows, like needles and pins; and if, instead of piercing the ear and the heart, they flew against the bodies of those to whom they were directed, the children in some men's families would be like pincushions stuck so completely full of sharp and painful weapons.—Henry Ward Beecher.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR NOTES.

SUNDAY, JUNE 28, 1931.

TOPIC: "My Attitude toward Other Races in This Country."

SCRIPTURE: Galatians 3: 26-29.

Plans for the Meeting.

I. (1) Do children of different races make any differences because of racial characteristics?

(2) At what ages do children become conscious of race differences?

What do you think are the reasons for this consciousness?

II. Debate: "Resolved, That the Caucasian race is intellectually superior to all other races."

III. Visit some institution or settlement of negroes or people of some other race before the meeting for June 28th. Observe the things they do. How different do you really find them? What makes these differences?

IV. The Commission on Interracial Co-operation, composed of some of the leading white people and some of the most outstanding negroes of the South has been carrying on some interesting work for the past few years. Some real progress has been made in the field of co-operation between the two races. Literature about the work of this commission may be obtained by writing the commission at 409 Palmer Building, Atlanta, Ga.

V. Arrange for the Christian Endeavor group to meet at some home for a radio program when negroes are on the program. The reading of some of Paul Lawrence Dunbar's poems, and a talk on "Opportunities Accepted by Negroes," with the singing of some negro spirituals, should complete a good program about the negro.

Daily Readings.

June 22, Luke 10:30-35; June 23, Mark 7: 24-30; June 24, John 4:1-14; June 25, Acts 10: 28, 34, 35; June 26, Romans 10:12; June 27, Revelations 7:9-17.

It isn't always by great deeds of sacrifice, by great gifts, that the spirit and meaning of friendship may be measured. Friendship, curiously enough, is made up of a series of little things; little words, little deeds, little actions. Friendship, in fact, is like a bit of mosaic. Each piece that goes to form the design of the mosaic may seem small and unimportant in itself, but when those pieces are put together, they evolve into a pattern of miraculous beauty. . . . It is the kind word said at the right time. It is the friendly hand that rests for a moment on your own, when you are feeling lost and forsaken! These small things make real the meaning of friendship—Margaret E. Sangster.

Here is an item worth thinking over in a quiet moment: "There are one hundred and twenty-two passages in the Gospels that contain references to the Kingdom of God or the Kingdom of Heaven; fifty-five occur in Matthew, nineteen in Mark, forty-four in Luke and four in John." The question arising in the mind of the reader is, What am I doing to seek first and then help build up on earth this Kingdom of God, in which kingdom the Christ and the early apostles were so deeply interested. Speaking of the Kingdom, this declaration is made: "It has ever been true that he who looks after God's Kingdom first and considers his own interest last has found God's word faithful, even as our Lord Jesus said, 'Seek first the kingdom of God and his righteousness, and all these things shall be added unto you.'"

Sunday School Lesson

By REV. H. S. HARDCASTLE.

REVIEW: JESUS, THE WORLD'S SAVIOUR, SUFFERING AND SOVEREIGNTY.

LESSON XIII—JUNE 28, 1931.

GOLDEN TEXT: "God so loved the world that He gave His only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth on Him should not perish, but have eternal life."—John 3:16.

LESSON: 1 Cor. 15:10-20.

The lessons this quarter have covered the last half of the gospel according to Luke. In this review lesson, the best that can be done is to emphasize some important truth of the respective lessons of the quarter. Those who have studied these lessons from week to week ought to have a greater fund of information about the life and teachings of Jesus, a wider outlook on life, a deeper sympathy with his fellow-men, a more vital faith in God, and a deeper consecration to Christ and the kingdom of God.

I. HUMILITY.

Jesus took that which was held in disdain by the Roman world and made it what is now recognized as one of the crowning virtues of life—humility. True greatness involves true humility, a recognition that one's highest and best powers have been entrusted to him by God, a willingness to lay aside preferment and false pride, and a disposition to serve, even in the most lowly circumstances. It is to be noted in passing that humility is the only virtue to which Jesus called attention in His own life. "For I am meek and lowly in heart." Jesus apparently put a premium on humility.

II. FORGIVENESS.

There are many lessons in the immortal story of the prodigal son, but at the heart of it there is the assurance of forgiveness. When the father saw the son while he was a great way off, and when he ran and met him and received him and re-established him in the home—the point of it is that God so receives those who turn to Him in true penitence. And more. That God's heart yearns for them even before they turn to Him.

III. GREED.

Dives apparently was dominated by greed. His love of money hardened him and blinded him to the needs of humanity right at his own door. Such a spirit put between him and the truly righteous an impassable gulf, which only accentuated his misery. Let every man beware lest his love of gain smother his finer qualities of life and especially blight his sympathy and his interest in his fellow-men.

IV. PRAYER.

Prayer in its true sense is fellowship with God. It demands persistence for its highest realization. It also demands the spirit of humility for its finest possibilities.

V. SALVATION.

Salvation, in the final analysis, is in being in the right relation to God through Jesus Christ. Zacchaeus found salvation in turning from his old manner of life and in adopting a new manner of life in keeping with the ideals and spirit of Jesus. Friendliness was an important factor in the winning of Zacchaeus, as it is an important factor in the winning of anybody.

VI. RESPONSIBILITY.

God has entrusted to every one of us certain gifts and capacities. What we have does not belong to us; it is simply held in stewardship. We must give an account of our stewardship. The great word in stewardship is faithfulness. "Good and faithful servant."

RELIGIOUS BOOKS

Reviewed by

W. A. HARPER, BOOK EDITOR.

(Any book reviewed in this Department may be had of The Christian Sun at the publisher's price.)

THE WORD WE PREACH. By W. H. Rogers. Judson; $1.50; pp. 287.

Dr. Rogers is pastor of the Hinson Memorial Baptist Church, Portland, Oregon. In this volume he has gathered fourteen sermons by the outstanding leaders of the Modern Baptist pulpit of the conservative type, and to them has added two sermons of his own, giving us a total of sixteen sermons. The utterances of these representative men picture the comfort and inspiration of religion in a satisfying way. One misses the reforming note, but then one cannot expect everything in a single volume.

THE MASTER'S SECRET OF POWER. By Van R. Gibson. J. J. Little & Ives Co.; $1; pp. 76.

This book does not explain away our Lord's miracles of healing. It rather undertakes to understand and appreciate them. At the end of one chapter are found affirmations that tend to strengthen faith and deepen spiritual insight. The book will appear as foolishness to the worldly wise, but spiritual power to not a few.

VII. ROYALTY.

Christ is King of kings and Lord of Lords. When He entered Jerusalem He publicly announced His Messiahship and offered Himself to the Jewish nation. As a King, He is to be obeyed. But the basis of His kingdom is not force, but right and love.

VIII. IN REMEMBRANCE.

"This do in remembrance of me." It is fatal for any life to forget Jesus or to leave Him out of life. The simple sacrament which Jesus instituted in memory of Him is one means of keeping Him alive in memory. It should remind us of His life, His teaching, His suffering, His death, His resurrection, and His coming.

IX. GETHSEMANE.

Should Jesus follow His own desires, or should He follow what He knew to be the will of God? That was the issue at stake in Gethsemane. The fate of humanity hung in the balance. But Jesus won the victory. Here, as always, He did the Father's will.

X. THE CROSS.

The cross tells us of the awfulness of sin, of the depth of divine love, of the extent of divine forgiveness, of the power of vicarious love, of the ultimate triumph of righteousness. Here again Jesus took that which was a symbol of shame and disgrace and transformed it until it stands for the finest and best in life.

XI. THE LIVING CHRIST.

The message of Easter is that we have a Christ who is alive. In the universe there is some one who cares for us, who is near us, who can help us, who loves us, who is everywhere accessible to us.

XII. REGARD FOR OTHERS.

Those who are Christians, and those who are not, have no right to do as they please, unless they please to do right. Personal liberty must give way to social responsibility. Things which perhaps we could do with impunity, we cannot always do for the sake of others. We are not to put a stumbling-block in the way of others. We that are strong ought to bear the burdens of the weak and not to please ourselves.

FAMILY ALTAR

CONDUCTED BY H. E. ROUNTREE
One of our Chaplains in the U. S. Navy.

"If thou wilt make the Almighty thy treasure . . . then shalt thou delight thyself in the Almighty . . . and thou shalt make thy prayer unto Him and He will hear thee."—Job 22: 25-27.

MONDAY.

NONE LIKE HIM.

"Come unto me, all ye that labor and are heavy laden, and I will give thee rest."—Matt. 11:28.

Search the world over to see if there is any like Jesus. Among the ancients, Greeks, Romans, Hindoos, Arabians, Persians, among all the great and good men of the ages; yea, among the angels, princes of heaven—there is none like Him. He only can and will save us.

What does He do for us? "Himself took our infirmities, and bear our sicknesses." "And He healed them." "He forgiveth all thine iniquities." "He satisfieth thy mouth with good things." None, however poor and needy, wretched or wicked, but what shall receive of Him. "Him that cometh unto me, I will in no wise cast out."

Prayer.—Dear Lord, draw us all to Thee. Heal us and save us, so shall we serve Thee and give Thee praise. Amen.

TUESDAY.

LIFE'S DOUBLE GUARD.

"A good man, out of the good treasure of the heart, bringeth forth good things."—Matt. 12: 33-37.

If truth, charity, goodness and purity dwells in one's heart, these of necessity cause one to speak good things. An unregenerate heart cannot speak holiness.

However, even if one has the Holy Ghost in his soul, Christ's light in his understanding, His purity in his heart, His peace in his conscience, there is danger which one needs to guard against. Christ said, "Avoid the very appearance of evil." Evil associations take their toll out of one, be he ever so pure. Vile speech registers in the subconscious self and will mar the life by sticking, and, in unguarded moments, will speak out. Like Paul, when we would do good, evil is present with us. Evil is always struggling to come to the surface, and the devil rejoices in seeing God's child so victimized. The sins of unchastity, anger, covetousness, impatience, etc., often press upon us, stir us, and will flow over, if allowed to do so. We may mean ever so well, but the damage we may do others when sin "snows us under" is incomprehensible. So important was this that the Lord told us to guard "every idle word."

Strive earnestly, therefore, to benefit others by what we say. See to it that we have the "new heart" created after God in righteousness.

Prayer.—Merciful God, help us to speak words of truth and charity, to honor Thee in our neighbor. Keep us from evil and from evil speech. May iniquity nor wicked words ever find their way in our souls. Amen.

WEDNESDAY.

THE GLORY OF THE NEW.

"If any man be in Christ, he is a new creature; old things are passed away; behold, all things are become new."—2 Cor. 5:7.

The sacred language of Israel expresses this idea thus: "Lebanon shall be turned into a fruitful field." There is another expression of the same idea, apostolic, "The creature itself shall be delivered from the bondage of corruption into the glorious liberty of the child of God." Isn't it wondrous that the grace of God transforms the heart and makes everything new! Our ears are opened, our eyes are anointed that we see, life is quickened, the Lord Himself is with us, and joy in the Lord and the things of the Lord is increased.

Prayer.—Dear Lord, our Father, have mercy on us and give us Thy Spirit. Do let us experience over and over again Thy transforming power. Make us obedient, so that Thou mayest reveal to us more and more the mysteries and the delights of Thy grace and sanctify us through Thy truth. Amen.

THURSDAY.

POLISHING UP THE LENSES.

"If we walk in the light as He is in the light, we have fellowship one with another, and the blood of Jesus Christ, His Son cleanseth us from all sin."—1 John 1:7.

Human wisdom never could have revealed to us the realities of Christian faith and the glories awaiting the faithful. That conception of eternal love, mercy and power which destroys wrath and fills heaven with saved beings, how could they emanate elsewhere than from the heart of God? But God has revealed it to His believing children, who only are prepared to understand. For these, a few rules are followed.

1. Read the Word of God with an open and consecrated mind.

2. Pray without ceasing.

3. Obey the Word with an honest heart.

To do this means to receive the light in the soul and behold the glory which is given us in Christ.

Prayer.—Holy Father, illumine our hearts. In the name of Jesus, we ask it. Amen.

FRIDAY.

WARNING TO THE KINGDOM.

"Him who knew no sin, God hath made to be sin for us."—2 cor. 5:21.

The healing of Peter's wife's mother is the fulfillment of a prophecy found in the 53rd chapter of Isaiah.

One of the marvelous revelations of God's love in Jesus Christ is His presence in every experience. When He healed the sick, He made their sickness His own, suffering it with them. Listen to Him sigh when confronted by the deaf-mute. See Him weep at the grave of Lazarus. This warms our soul and sets our affections on Him. In this warmth we have perfecting health.

We may feel the burning fever, the torments of evil, the buffets of Satan, and suffer many afflictions; in Jesus, these things serve to humble, purge and refine our souls into the kingdom of our Heavenly Father.

Furthermore, we are that much like Christ, and our experiences may fit us to be ambassadors to others and able to speak words in season to them that are weary.

Prayer.—Our Father, give us true faith, make us zealous for our salvation in Christ. May the sense of distresses that come without Him impel us to come to Him. Amen.

SATURDAY.

SHUTTING UP OR OPENING UP?

"I cried unto the Lord."—Psa. 142.

No one should shut up his sorrow in his own breast. It helps much to pour it out to a true and sympathetic friend. It helps more to pour it out in the ears of God. The tendency to shut up within ourselves is prompted by the devil. He would not have us go to the Lord. He would tempt us to be stubborn.

David was in great sorrow and distress. He came to feel that no man cared for his soul. So did Christ, who felt that even the Father had forsaken Him. But David did not forget his refuge. As he looked to God, he said, "Bring my soul into prison, that I may praise Thy name . . . for Thou shalt deal bountifully with me." There is nothing that so decidedly promotes one's peace as this spirit.

Prayer.—O Lord, help us by Thy Holy Spirit. Make our souls to praise Thy name. Help us to see and to have faith, so that we can praise Thee Amen.

SUNDAY.

BLESSINGS IN SEEING THESE THINGS.

"Blessed are the eyes which see these things that ye see."—Luke 10:23.

The young lawyer was one who "could not see it." So it was also in the case of the priest and Levite who couldn't see on the other side of the road where the traveler lay dying. These men had their opportunity and, though face to face with Christ Himself or fresh from the temple with inspiration to Christian duty, they did not do what they could to get to heaven. What they did insured their own damnation.

God's word to us today is the same as it was then: "This do," "This do," "This do." Are we taking advantage of our opportunities to do what it takes to make a path to glory?

We are not to believe that heaven is promised as a return for good deeds. We are to see that, as Christians, good deeds are our bounden duty and that loving God is loving man in a living way. We have our righteousness and hope in the merits of the blood of Christ, but we have our delights in doing good. "Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and thy neighbor as thyself." Often afflictions lead us into the path of God, and often the afflicted are put in our path in order that we may find God. If we pass these things by, like the young lawyer and the levite, heaven will be shut off from us.

Prayer.—Lord Jesus, give us, to this end, Thy Holy Spirit. Amen.

THE COLLEGE.

At the age of seventeen I wrote my first article for THE CHRISTIAN SUN on "The College." It was poorly written and in school-boy style. It was a plea to stand by Dr. Long in his canvass for the College. Among other things, I said that it would be an advertisement for the Christian Church, that it would provide an educated ministry and laity, which the denomination did not have in 1883.

I visualized our denominational college seven years before Elon was born, but Elon, under the presidency of Dr. William Allen Harper, went far beyond my boyhood dreams. I am glad to have been a co-worker with him. I pleaded for loyal support to the institution, regardless of where it was located. I think I emphasized a great truth when I said that the laymen were expected to endow and support institutions of this kind. That holds good today.

Notwithstanding that we have lost, by resignation, our unequaled president in the South for a Christian College, let us support the institution with our gifts, prayers and patronage. Its past record of achievement demands this and more.

THE ALCHEMY OF HIS PRESENCE.

By REV. FRANKLIN W. STEPHENSON, D. D.

In The Methodist-Protestant Recorder.
"Except."—John 20: 25.

We understand how Thomas felt. He was being called upon to believe what seemed to him impossible and unbelievable. Jesus was dead, and he knew it, and for anyone to assert that he had risen from the dead and was alive, well—there was something wrong somewhere. He did not contradict or argue the matter, but he did not believe what they reported. It was asking too much of his practical, not to say sceptical mind.

He did make one concession, namely, "Give me the evidence and then I'll believe." They may have seen the Master but he doubted it, and something more than their words was necessary to change his mind. He too must see Him, and more, the wounds made by the cruel nails and the heartless sword. Was this an unreasonable demand? Was he right in making it when the Lord himself was involved? Should not the word of these intimate friends have been enough? Why did he not recall Jesus' own words, repeated so many times when they were travel-companions during the last two or three years? Where was his faith? There may be satisfactory answers to these questions, but we will not attempt to find them now. Of this we are sure: Thomas was like the rest of us. He not only wanted positive proof, but of course he sometimes failed to do what he ought to have done. As Paul states it, "For the good that I would, I do not." (Romans 7: 19.)

Thomas' sincerity is unquestioned. Honest to the core, he not only wanted indisputable evidence and insisted upon having it, but he felt deeply that he was entitled to it. But better still, when it was furnished he did not hesitate. There was no disposition to quibble, question, debate or discount it. The conditions he had set up might be criticized as unnecessary and even unreasonable, but his subsequent action was all that could be desired. We tremble because of his boldness, but we love him for his integrity and consistency.

How fully Thomas would have entered into the trend of things today. It is an age dominantly and insistently scientific. It is forever asking questions, giving utterance to doubt, putting everything to the test and constantly demanding proof. What are the facts? Is it so? What is the truth? What are the interpretations to be placed upon accepted facts or truth? What is the nature of the evidence offered?

It is an age of doubt. Everything is being examined, studied, investigated, tested. This method is not destructive or merely curious, but an honest attempt to learn if accepted practices, customs, beliefs, organizations, or ideals are in harmony with other known facts, and if they are of a character or quality to be genuinely useful or beneficial. Are they making a real contribution to human happiness and welfare?

This procedure when applied to matters of religion, has sometimes been opposed and even resented by Christian people on the ground that such things are too sacred to be touched by the profane hands of the curious and unbelieving. All agree, no doubt, that it is not only right but a duty to object to methods that are unfair, which overlook essential facts or publish conclusions erroneous or false. To fail to do so is to be guilty of indifference if not disloyalty. Silence under such circumstances will be taken for acquiescence, or it may open the door to a charge of ignorance, superstition or cowardice. Those who make a business of distorting the facts, misrepresenting them, or only stating half a truth should be exposed without mercy. Fear of the dishonest questioner, critic or doubter is justified. Positive opposition is imperative.

But why should we fear the honest questioner, the sincere investigator, the conscientious and fair-minded searcher after the truth? Of what are we afraid? If Christianity is true, if it is based upon the facts of history, reason and experience, as we firmly and confidently believe, what is there to fear? The fact of the matter is we ought to welcome all such, for do they not belong to the tribe of Thomas? Is not their confession and conversion desirable? The method is not so important as the result. Our faith will bear investigating. Let all who will dig deep into the past of Christianity, into history, into the teachings of the Church, into the experiences of the past and present disciples, and if they are of the mind of Thomas, there is certain to be one result, the glad and complete confession, "My Lord and my God."

Mr. D. was one of the most sceptical and profane men in the community. He was the unemotional type, taking no step without careful deliberation, especially when matters of religion were concerned. The big meeting was on, but he stayed away, until one day, as much through curiosity as anything else, he went. The preaching was not especially appealing, but the music gripped him. Then some of his neighbors, in whom he had the utmost confidence, were active Christian workers. But they did not let their enthusiasm unbalance their judgment. Our friend was occasionally approached, but he held them off. Suddenly he began to ask questions, direct, penetrating. Evidently he was after some fact, some tangible proof, if such there were, which would dispel his doubts, satisfy his mind and compel surrender. It came at last, none knew how, but whatever it was he did the consistent thing and took his stand as a Christian man. Nothing could have been more deliberate or less demonstrative. No tears, no shouting, no special outward manifestation. But the miracle of grace had been wrought. Into his soul the Master had come and the alchemy of his presence had turned the lead into gold.

When a child Mr. Branch had been under the influence of a group of religious extremists. As he grew older he could not accept their teachings, and all other faiths seemed empty and vain. But he had a very high regard for a certain pastor in his community, who one day frankly challenged him to put the truths of the Gospel to the test. He was startled, afraid to try it and afraid not to. But the reasonableness of it appealed to him. Not long after he, too, stood face to face with the Master and almost unconsciously made the same exultant confession as had Thomas.

The story of the son of one of America's great Unitarians is familiar. He held his father in the highest esteem, but the religion he preached seemed to lack something. But not until he passed through a great struggle, going down to the very abyss of doubt and despair was he able to grasp the hand outstretched and learn the unique character and Sonship of Christ. Johann Neader, the great Christian historian, was a Jew but his investigations and studies led him at the age of fifty-six to renounce Judaism and to accept Christ. The reading and study of Lew Wallace, found necessary before writing his great novel, Ben Hur, brought him to the feet of the Master. "I am the truth." "And ye shall know the truth, and the truth shall make you free."

Sometimes the absence of an essential element prevents the desired results. Crops fail because

Christian Orphanage

Dear Friends:

The whooping-cough is the order of the day at the Christian Orphanage at this writing. We really do have it. We noticed one little fellow whoop six times before he got control of himself. We have not, in all of our experience, found anything that will relieve it. We had a talk with a doctor of national reputation sometime ago and he had no suggestion to offer that would help us very much. We cannot help but feel for the child who has this dreadful disease. While some of our children have it worse than others, still no serious consequences have arisen. The weaker children, physically, seem to be affected worse than the others. It is so long drawn out, it almost wears out the children and the house mother, too. Nine weeks for each child, think of it! Three weeks upgrade, three weeks on the level and three weeks in the decline. The three weeks on the level peak, when they are at their worst is when the house mother has her trouble. One informed me the other day that she was up eighteen times the night before, giving aid to the children who had whooping-cough—a work of love and sacrifice. A mother to a helpless child in its distress, what could be more beautiful? What service could be rendered that would be more beautiful? A helpless, motherless child, sick and sorely afflicted with no loving mother to come to its rescue and hold its little head while it coughs and whoops and struggles and gasps for breath.

You, by your gifts, through your Church, Sunday School, or personally, make it possible for kind hands to take the place of the mother whose hands are cold and still and whose touch cannot longer be felt. One hundred and five little children are in the Christian Orphanage today. How much have you contributed this year to help them? Ask yourself this question: "Have I, by my contributions, helped to render aid to those little sick children at the orphanage?"

the soil lacks something. A certain receptacle holds hydrogen and oxygen in the exact proportion to form water, but not till the electric spark is furnished will the transformation take place. Every housewife has learned that unless it has a certain ingredient "the cake will not rise." An engine may be filled with gas vapor, but unless the spark is applied there will be no power and the car will not go. Not until the earth is bathed in the warm sunshine will life burst forth.

Jesus was the one thing Thomas needed. He was the element essential to complete and empower his life. Then as always the Master's coming made a difference. The world is not the same and never can be since Jesus came into its life. He comes not only with power to gladden but to cleanse, renew, alter and save. Saul becomes Paul, the sinner becomes a saint, the slave becomes free, the savage becomes a brother, the nations of war become nations of peace, and the desert blooms as a rose.

If these things are not taking place today who is to blame? Has the Master changed or what has happened. If there is injustice, hatred and suspicion, unemployment, sectarianism, emphasis upon material rather than upon human and spiritual values; if there is greed, lawlessness and crime, scepticism, cynicism and immorality; is it not because the world is unaware of the healing presence of the Man of Galilee? They do not feel it because he is not permitted to dwell in all his fulness and power in the lives of his disciples. Because we are not living daily in his presence the rest of the world is unconscious of him. When he has his way with us he will have his way with the world. Then, and only then will the miracle be wrought and the baser elements of the souls of men be transformed by the alchemy of his presence into the pure gold of Christ-likeness.

MISSIONARY DOXOLOGY.

 Praise Him who leads the mission host,
 Praise Father, Son, and Holy Ghost.

Praise Him for consecrated gold,
 For all His arms of love enfold,
 Praise Him who came to save the lost,
 Praise Father, Son, and Holy Ghost.

The GEM TESTAMENT has been steadily growing in popular favor ever since its first appearance.

In size, 3¾x4½ inches, it is not much larger than the Vest Pocket. It is also the only Testament of its size with large bold type and pronouncing text.

The edition on India paper is ideal, and we know of no better gift at the price than one in the finer bindings.

OBITUARIES.

KING.

Mr. Tom King, a well-known farmer near Fancy Gap, Va., brought an end to his life April 17, 1931. He had been in declining health since January 25, 1931, and was out of heart about his condition. He made the statement before his death that he was not going to get well and that he was ready to go. Mr. King appeared to be of right mind up to the hour he died, and what influenced him to such a calamity is more than any one knows.

Mr. King leaves to mourn his tragic death a wife, three daughters, one brother, one sister, and a number of other relatives and friends. He was fifty-six years old. He will be missed in the community.

The funeral service was conducted at the home April 18th by the writer, assisted by Messrs. Stockner and Cruise, two Baptist ministers. The burial took place in the King Cemetery, not far from Rocky Ford Church.

S. E. MADREN.

MILTEER.

Mrs. Martha Elizabeth Milteer died at her home, Gates, N. C., May 26, 1931, aged 65 years and 6 days. She was the daughter of the late Isaac W. and Anne Porter Everett, of Holy Neck community, in Nansemond County, Va., where most of her life was spent. The funeral was conducted at the home by the writer and the body interred in Holy Neck Cemetery. The large gathering of friends and the many beautiful floral designs bore testimony to their esteem for the dead and their sympathy for the living.

Mrs. Milteer had been a faithful wife and mother, and a quiet and humble Christian. She had been a member of Holy Neck Church since childhood. She leaves a husband, C. B. Milteer, two sons, Isaac and Charles, of Norfolk; one daughter, Mrs. Arthur Holland, of Holland, R. F. D. 2, and three grandchildren. May the God of all peace comfort and keep her loved ones.

CROCKER.

The following resolutions of respect and sympathy were adopted by the Baracca Class of Suffolk Christian Church, Suffolk, Va.:

Whereas, on the 26th day of March, 1931, in response to the divine summons, B. D. Crocker departed this life; and,

Whereas, for a great number of years he was an active member of the Baracca Class of the Suffolk Christian Church; that he always performed whatever duties he had to perform in a cheerful, courteous and efficient manner, and has exemplified consistently those rare traits which made him a friend of all those who came in contact with him; now, therefore, be it resolved:

That, as members of the Baracca Class of the Suffolk Christian Church, we express by this resolution our appreciation of the long and able service which he has so faithfully rendered; of his friendly companionship, his gentle and genial disposition, his courteous and cordial manner, his unselfish and untiring efforts in the performance of helpful ministries to his fellow-men; of all those qualities possessed by him in abundant measure, which are the attributes of a gentleman in the truest and highest sense of the word—qualities of mind and heart that were not the result of studied effort, but were the natural endowments of the beneficent Providence.

That, while we deeply deplore the death of our friend and comrade and sadly miss his cheerful fellowship, his kindly eye and smiling countenance, yet his life was a benediction and his memory will linger with us like the fragrance of flowers; that of him it may be truly said: "To live in hearts we leave behind, is not to die."

That we extend to his bereaved family our deepest sympathy.

That a copy of this resolution be sent his bereaved family, a copy given the secretary of this class for his records, and also a copy be sent to the press.

ELON COLLEGE

AN ACCREDITED COLLEGE

of the

CONGREGATIONAL CHRISTIAN CHURCHES OF THE SOUTHEAST

ELON was founded to train Christian leaders for the New South.

ELON has done its task well—one graduate in seven being in the Christian ministry. The other six express Christian leadership in the various professions and vocations. Experience teaches that spiritual leadership must be indigenous.

The South is now a New South ready for an inclusive Church, the type of Church for which Elon has stood for forty years and for which she is prepared to produce capable leadership.

With no Church in the community, save the College Auditorium, ELON has practiced Christian Union for faculty, students, and community for four decades.

Its contribution to Christian Education is nationally known and approved.

Its Christian Education Building, providing laboratory facilities for religious leadership training, is unique and is the first college building of its type in the world.

ELON confines itself to undergraduate liberal arts work with that religious emphasis which befits the Christian College.

In ELON the Congregational-Christian Church has an asset of marvelous hopefulness.

The South needs her Yale, her Oberlin, her Carleton, her Pomona for the intellectual leadership of the United Church. Many regard ELON as strategically located and spiritually endowed to become such a center of illumination and leadership training.

FARMER.

Mrs. Elizabeth Ida Estelle Farmer, oldest daughter of Obediah and Emma Farmer, was born June 28, 1858, and died May 30, 1931, at the mature age of 72 years, 11 months, and 2 days. In early life she professed faith in Christ and united with the Methodist Church, and was transferred to Pleasant Grove Christian Church later in childhood with her parents. She lived a quiet Christian life devoted in faithful service to her home, her family and her Church.

In October, 1888, she was married to Sandy Joe Farmer, who preceded her to the life beyond. To this union were born four children—Morgan Scott, who died in infancy; Roy Elvin, who faithfully cared for his mother during her life and is an active member of Pleasant Grove Church; Frank Albert, who is a leading physician in Roanoke, Va.; and Hunter Obediah, who is a substantial citizen and faithful member of Pleasant Grove Christian Church.

The large number of people attending the funeral services conducted by her pastor, assisted by Rev. T. S. Wilson, of the Presbyterian Church, and Rev. J. W. Patton, a former pastor of the deceased, attest the high esteem in which Sister Farmer was held by the community. The floral designs were beautiful and symbolic of the filial love and friendship of those who provided them.

"Ah, but we'll keep thy grave green with love's fountains,
And close in our hearts a grave greener far for thee,
With grief that shall last, Mother, as long as the mountains,
As deep and as unchanged as the sob of the sea."
W. C. W.

BOYD.

Mrs. Virginia Newton Boyd was born March 18, 1859, and died April 22, 1931, age 72 years, 1 month and 4 days. Sister Boyd early in life united with Buffalo Baptist Church and was a sincere Christian. She was twice married—in 1884 to Henry Jones, who lived only two years; in 1907 she married Deacon P. A. Boyd, of Hebron Christian Church. The deceased is survived by one brother, R. L. Newton, and one sister, Mrs. W. H. Williamson.

TENNESSEE REFUSES TO RESCIND.—

By a vote of 58 to 14 the Tennessee House of Representatives refused to repeal the State law forbidding the teaching of the hypothesis of evolution in schools supported by State funds. The usual cry will go up about "academic freedom," but it is not a defensible objection. There are too many holes and breaks in the hypothesis to give evolution the right of way in the lower schools of our country.

"STIRRING NEWS."—

Under the terms of the will of the late Harvey G. Woodward, of Birmingham, Alabama, a fund of $7,500,000 is provided for the foundation of schools for boys, to be called "The Woodward Schools," which will admit Caucasian boys, aged 12 to 18, who will remain in school until they are 25 years old. The schools will be located in Alabama, and several other Southern States. This is a great foundation and will mean much for the education of Southern youths.

CHURCH ANNIVERSARY.—

Our First Congregational Church, Omaha, Nebraska, celebrated its 75th anniversary last month, with Rev. Chester B. Emerson, of Detroit, as guest preacher. Rev. Frank G. Smith has led the work of this church for twelve years, and during his ministry 1,500 members have been received into membership. With strong, growing churches in the larger cities, with such an increase in membership, and with alert leadership and a well-educated ministry, our churches can render great service in furthering the Kingdom of God on earth and hastening the return of our Lord to reign in the hearts of all people.

OUR WASHINGTON CHURCH.—

Rev. Allen A. Stockdale was installed as minister of our First Congregational Church, Washington, D. C., succeeding Dr. Jason Noble Pierce, on May 12th. Dr. Stockdale's earlier pastorates were at Union Church, Boston, and at our First Church, Toledo; in these two fields he spent twenty-four years. A special ministry at Rogers Park, Chicago, preceded his call to Washington. Those of our constituency who live in Washington, and those who may visit the city, will receive a hearty welcome to this church at any time. All members of the Christian Church in the city should identify themselves with one of the local churches in active membership.

MODERN SCIENCE.—

Prof. Arthur Compton, of the University of Chicago, Nobel prize winner, addressing a dinner of the American Physical Society at Washington, D. C., last month, advocated the view that Greek science failed in its great fight with the philosophers, Plato and Aristotle, because it started out

"by promising to help men to live better, and did not succeed." "Is our science any more likely to last than the science of the ancient Greeks?" he asked. The answer will depend upon the extent to which science shall include the Christian religion and all its implications in the development of character. "Theology as an empirical science," including its application to human conduct, will go further than Greek science ever went.

TO HONOR POET-PREACHER.—

A movement has been set on foot to raise $5,000.00 to endow the Harry Webb Farrington Library, in Baxter Seminary, Baxter, Tenn., as a memorial to Mr. Farrington, poet-teacher, recently deceased. Dr. S. Parkes Cadman, the many-sided, versatile, scholarly member of the Congregational-Christian Church, is honorary chairman, and Edwin Markham chairman, of the memorial organization. Such distinguished honor for a distinguished minister of the gospel only tends to magnify the office of the ministry and to stimulate those who are devoting their energies to the spread of the gospel, not for honor but for service, to do greater things for the Kingdom. Most men are stimulated by worthy appreciation for those who have lived a life of devotion to a worthy cause.

COMMUNITY CHURCH FOR FILIPINOS.—

With Dr. Ernest Graham Guthrie, head of the Congregational Churches in Chicago, officiating, a Filipino Community Church, managed by youthful native islanders, has formally opened its doors for ministration to the 5,000 Filipinos of the city. The church was made possible through the combined efforts of the Chicago Federation of Churches, the Filipino Federation of America, and active leaders of the Filipino colony. The church is located at 837 N. LaSalle Street, in the heart of Manila-town. Rev. Jose G. Desco, an alumnus of Oberlin and Garrett, is pastor. This is good missionary work in taking care of our foreign-born population, in America. From this church many missionaries might be induced to return to the Philippine Islands with the gospel of Jesus Christ.

YALE DIVINITY SCHOOL.—

Dean L. A. Weigle, of Yale Divinity School, announces a revision of the curriculum of the school, as a result of two years' study of problems and current needs. "We are seeking to bring the curriculum closer to present-day living and to help students to see more clearly the relation which their studies sustain to the problems of the vocation which they plan to enter," says Dean Weigle. The school is now breaking away from the old departmental divisions of faculty and courses, and the curriculum has been reshaped in terms of nine comprehensive fields of study. Each of these fields covers problems drawn from the several traditional departments. The school trains men for the ministry, and also for missionary, religious education, community service, college service, etc.; the new curriculum, therefore, contains no list of general requirements to be enforced upon all students alike, but provides for six distinct vocational groups.

CHINA'S CHIEF NEED.—

Dr. Z. T. Koo, of the national committee of the Y. M. C. A. in China, says that the chief need of China today, in order that its people may again become creative, is not scientific or material development, but contact with God. "When a people loses its contact with the vital personality of God, a God greater than anything the human mind can conceive," Doctor Koo declares, "that people soon begins to lose its vision; and when a people loses its vision, its creative capacity steadily dies out." He says that there was a time when the Chinese were discoverers and pioneers in art, literature, philosophy, government and science, but for the past thousand years they have lived merely on their past. Creative intelligence does not come from the past, but from keeping the past and looking to the future. Christ did not repudiate the traditions of the past, but had a tremendous insight into the future and would urge us to look for the coming Kingdom.

ALL-WORLD GANDHI FELLOWSHIP.—

An all-world Gandhi fellowship is being formed to cultivate the vital principles of the great Indian: "ahimsa," non-violence; "satyagraha," love-force, soul-force, truth-force; and study their application in the conflicting circumstances of daily experience. In the list of the committee of 100 having the plan in charge are found the names of such leaders as Dr. John Haynes Holmes, who is president; Dr. Peter Ainslie, Dr. Will Durant, Rabbi W. H. Fineshriber, Dr. J. T. Sunderland, and Rabbi S. S. Wise. The fellowship is enlisting members and is also organizing an All-World Committee of 1,000. Its official organ, the magazine "Dharma," will spread abroad the messages of the fellowship. The director of the organization is Mr. Kedar Nath Das Gupta. He has planned for the summer of this year an "appreciation tour of Europe." A group of members and friends are to visit England during Gandhi's proposed visit to London for a round table conference. Other countries, it is said, will also be visited. Membership in the fellowship involves an initiation fee of $1, and a yearly contribution which is voluntary in amount. Applications for membership should be addressed to the secretary, 105 E. 22d Street, New York. Those interested in Indian missions will benefit by such membership.

NOTES-PERSONALS

Dr. Edwin C. Gillette, Associate Editor of THE SUN, who has been quite ill recently, has gone to Clifton Springs, New York. Dr. Gillette is accompanied by Mrs. Gillette, and his stay will be indefinite.

Dr. L. E. Smith, president of our Southern Convention, and the other delegates from his district left on Sunday afternoon for Seattle, Washington, to attend the National meeting. We wish Church a most successful meeting.

The Richmond Sunday School will hold its annual picnic to Buckroe Beach on the 10th of July. Those planning to go are anticipating a good time. On the evening of June 26th the Sunday School Orchestra is giving a concert at West Point, Va.

In this issue of THE SUN we are running a letter from Dr. Frank E. Jenkins, under the caption, "Southern Union College Letter." In this letter he makes announcement that the name of Piedmont, Jr., formerly Bethlehem College has been changed to the above name. Beginning next week, we will run a series of four ads, in which he tells our readers of the college.

Ocean View Church and Sunday School had splendid services and showed good reports for May. The average morning attendance was about fifty, and the evening considerably over one hundred. Five new members were received during the month and an offering of $50.00 for Missions was taken. The average Sunday School attendance was 132, and the average offering at Sunday School was $8.95. Brother Warren is happy in his pastorate, and his people seem equally happy in co-operating with him in the great and good work.

Our heartiest congratulations to our delightful friend, Miss Margaret Frances Richards of our Winchester, Virginia, Church. At the recent great session of the Virginia State Convention of Endeavorers, Miss Margaret was unanimously chosen president. It is an honor well deserved, and it will be worn with dignity and merit. Trained in a splendid Christian Endeavor Society in our Winchester Church, she has the soul of a genuine Endeavorer and will make good and carry enthusiasm into the State work and organization.

A well-informed layman, speaking out of observation and experience of years, said in our hearing recently, "The trouble with a certain Sunday School is that neither its superintendent, its teachers, nor its delegates attend their annual convention or other meetings, where information and inspiration are given from the outside." As a result the local school fails to get suggestions that would help its progress and growth. In these conventions much information is given, and means and methods are discussed which every superintendent and every teacher should have. On this account, every school should be represented in its Sunday School Convention.

Dr. J. Edward Kirby, United Church, Raleigh, under date of June 15th, writes: "We had fine services yesterday, following which the people presented Mrs. Kirby and me a large silver tray in recognition of our wedding anniversary. This token of good fellowship is much appreciated. My address for July and August will be Pilgrim, Michigan, c/o Congregational Assembly." Dr. Kirby is much interested with Rev. J. H. Lee in repairing the house of worship at Six Forks in Wake County, at which a Sunday school now in good progress was recently started, and movement is on foot to re-cover and further repair the house of worship at that place.

Let our temper be under the rule of the love of Jesus. He cannot alone curb it—He can make us gentle and patient. Let the vow, that not an unkind word of others shall ever be heard from our lips, be laid trustingly at His feet. Let the gentleness that refuses to take offense, that is always ready to excuse, to think and hope the best, mark our intercourse with all. Let our life be one of self-sacrifice, always studying the welfare of others, finding our highest joy in blessing others. And let us, in studying the divine art of doing good, yield ourselves as obedient learners to the guidance of the Holy Spirit. By His grace, the most commonplace life can be transfigured with the brightness of a heavenly beauty, as the infinite love of a divine nature shines out through our frail humanity.—Andrew Murray.

The Woman's Missionary Rallies in the Valley Virginia Conference last week were largely attended, the programs were appropriately rendered and the exercises were inspiring. Whistler's Chapel did itself proud in entertaining the Rally on June 16th, serving a dinner sufficient for an annual conference delegation, and bringing a house full of interested people for the program of the day. The rally on the 17th, at Concord, was a delight also, with a very large attendance, a good dinner, and delightful fellowship under the efficient leadership of Mrs. A. W. Andes. The Mission Secretary was not permitted, because of previous engagement, to be in the rallies on the 20th and 21st. The women in the Valley are becoming more and more interested in the work of missions, and their gatherings are largely attended and the spirit is delightful. The leadership is developing and is marked, and the women are doing a great work in that conference.

GREAT DAY AT EURES.

Eures Christian Church, Gates County, N. C., celebrated its annual "Memorial Day and Home-Coming Services" on May 31, 1931. Every one enjoyed a delicious lunch, served on the Church grounds. The day was unsettled, but the Church could not accommodate the crowd for either service. A most interesting program was enjoyed by every one. At the morning service, Rev. E. B. White, the pastor, spoke on "The Story of the Eternal City." Among those participating during the afternoon were Rev. H. C. Ewing, of the Methodist Church; Rev. Staley McGregor, Baptist; Superintendent J. S. Moore, of the county schools, and Attorney A. P. Goodwin. Special music was furnished by visitors.

Gates County, in which Eures Christian Church is located, has seven townships, all of which were represented. Many visitors helped in the great day of celebration and enjoyment. The regular services of our Church are held each fourth Sunday afternoon at 3:30 o'clock. Friends are cordially invited to attend these services.

(Miss) LOUISE EURE.

CHRISTIAN CHAPEL.

The congregation which assembled at Christian Chapel last Sunday was sorry to learn of the illness of the pastor, Rev. J. E. Franks, but services were conducted by Rev. J. H. Lee, of Caraleigh Christian Church. Mr. Nowell, who accompanied Bro. Lee led a few songs to the full satisfaction of the choir.

Brother Lee used for his reading the 19th Chapter of the Acts, and explained in a most simple manner how people in those days, as well as now, get first and second hand information relating to God's work. He showed how Zacharias received second hand information about God when he went up in the tree to observe His passing by, but when God asked him to come down, this was first hand information direct, and there could be no mistake about such information.

Brother Lee called attention to the fact that it is possible that a great many of us fail to be guided by our own consciousness of true knowledge, and simply take the traditional theories of others instead, and that the conscience will prove our error.

The idea is to know by actual experience, and try to imitate some one else, and it takes those who have the actual experience with Jesus to get spiritual information of the first hand.

His sermon was very instructive as well as constructive, and all enjoyed the service. We will be glad to have Brother Lee at any time.

THE CHURCH STILL COUNTS.

Here is something of what the church did last year: The philanthropic gifts by all classes in the United States reached the huge total of $2,330,000,000, according to a survey made by the New York Trust Company. Also, mention is made of that remarkable organization and work among the Young Men's Christian Association, that has extended its permanent equipment from $100,000,000 in 1920 to well over $160,000,000 in 1926; while in four years the membership of the American Red Cross mounted from $8,720,674 to $10,588,201. Gifts for the benefit of education increased from $15,000,000 in 1900 to $126,000,000 in 1926. There are 179 American foundations established for the common good, with a combined endowment aggregating one billion dollars.

When a man loses his patience with the church, let him consider these figures. When a man gets an egoistic complex and wants to berate those who believe in Jesus Christ and His program for modern life, let him consider what the church is doing, what her influence is creating. Out of the church flows a great stream of benevolence for the benefit of mankind, so wide, so deep, so crystalline, so golden, as to throw a light across the ages that should support the faith of humanity in the goodness of God and the everlasting mercy of His eternal justice.—Western Christian Advocate.

WE ARE A "PROBLEM," TOO.

Thirty-five Dutch-speaking students from the Pretoria University spent six hours recently visiting the Bantu Men's Social Center in Johannesburg, South Africa, as well as the slums, the mine compounds, welfare centers and dance halls. They ended up their tour with addresses to, and by, the natives, as well as a debate. The National Rotary Conference of the fifty-fifth district has asked Rev. Ray E. Phillips and his associates to arrange a similar tour for 250 delegates this month. "We are thoroughly convinced that personal acquaintance with the other man of color is the only way we can hope to work out these complicated questions of inter-racial relationships," declared Mr. Phillips. "When we stand off and talk about the native or the negro as a 'problem,' we do not get along very fast. We are the 'problem,' as much as he, and it is only when we meet face to face and make him feel that we are human and discover humanity in him that the complex questions assume the status of simple brotherly relationships."

CONGREGATIONAL NEWS

REV. E. C. GILLETTE, Editor; REV. F. P. ENSMINGER, and REV. M. J. SWEET, Associates.

AT EVARTS, KENTUCKY, our people are again in a storm area. This time the agitation is industrial. These faithful church folk deserve some peace.

FLORIDA DELEGATES to the National Council at Seattle, Washington, are Dr. and Mrs. J. Delman Kuykendall of Cocanut Grove; Dr. Elisha A. King of Miami Beach, and Mr. E. P. Branch of Melbourne.

W. PALM BEACH, FLORIDA. Rev. Frank Atkinson has accepted a call to the pastorate of the Union Congregational Church, to begin services August 1st. Mr. Atkinson comes to this church after a successful pastorate of six years in First Church, Houston, Texas, during which time a beautiful new church was built and dedicated.

MISS DORA BRACKIN finds that the first visit to a field that needs inspiration and organization is only an introduction. At Coldwater Church, near Andalusia, in south Alabama twenty to twenty-five women and girls met her each afternoon for three days for the study of the Bible and of worship and of Sunday School organization. They insisted on organizing a Sunday School and a group for the study of a Bible from a text book, and will have recreational features in connection with their meetings. At Liberty Church some graded literature was introduced in the Sunday School. Here there are twenty-seven young people in the Sunday School class. In several other churches work has been developed by Miss Brackin, who is herself a member of a church in this South Alabama Association.

FELLOWSHIP SUNDAY AT MACEDONIA.

The Macedonia Church celebrated its "First Fifth Sunday" on May 31st, which was a happy day. It was not only that the services of the day were inspiring, but they were the fulfillment of a cherished plan, and full of promise for the future. It was the first Parish Fellowship Sunday of a new and widespread parish, and delegations from the churches of the parish gathered for an all day of spiritual help and social companionship.

The churches of Macedonia, Liberty, Sardis and New Trinity, began last March their new grouping, with Rev. T. L. Leverett as pastor. None of the churches are strong, they are far scattered, ninety miles from east to west, and forty-four from north to south; and they need the strength that comes by closing up the ranks from time to time and knowing that they are touching shoulders with other workers. Each of the four Sundays of the month has its appointment at one of the four churches, but when a month comes that is generous with an extra Sunday, the fifth Sunday is to be Fellowship Sunday, celebrating with an all day meeting. The first of these union gatherings was held at Macedonia and was a great success. A large delegation from Sardis brought singing and readings that gave variety to the program, and a carload came all the way from Liberty (130 miles round trip). The spirit of Christian fellowship was delightful, and when it came to the dinner hour, the tempting profusion made it hard to believe that it is hard times.

Former preachers of some of the churches, Professor Percy of Piedmont, and Rev. A. G. Swarts, brought brief messages of greeting. Rev. Henry B. Mobray, moderator of the Georgia Conference, gave the address of the morning. It was a challenging and heartening summons to service, enumerating as present objectives for Congregationalists, first, a warless world; second, carrying prohibition through to a success; third, missions; and fourth, maintaining hope and good cheer through the present depression.

The afternoon session came to a climax with a fine sermon by Dr. E. H. Willisford of Atlanta on "The Indispensable Christ" following which the pastor spoke briefly, asking the churches of the parish to take with him as his slogan, their watchword, that which Paul gives as his life purpose, "That We May Know Christ."

SOUTHERN PINES.

The Church of Wide Fellowship, at Southern Pines, N. C., of which Rev. Elmer Willis Serl is minister, has just closed its seasonal program of activities with a community appeal to both tourists and residents. The regular work of the church will however continue as usual throughout the entire summer, for this church has built up a strong parish including in the summer one of the largest and most efficient Church Vacation Schools in the country.

During the thirteen years of the present pastorate, there has been developed a community church spirit, in connection with which all have found a welcome and an opportunity irrespective of denominational connection in their northern homes or permanent environs in Southern Pines. The tourist season has witnessed an increasing attendance at the Sunday morning worship service, and the music of the vested choir and the sermon have made a significant appeal. A special interest for thirteen years has been the Sunday evening Platform Hour, at which nationally known speakers and musical features have been presented. These have drawn audiences which have often taxed the capacity of the church auditorium and adjoining chapel, and have been productive of much good. Among these special features have been the visits of the A. Capella Choir of Guilford College, Dr. Brewer Eddy, Dr. A. Eugene Bartlett, Mr. Arthur Pillsbury, Mr. Edward Thomlinson, Mr. Sidney Landon, Mr. Lothrop Stoddard, Dr. Mary Harris Armor and Rev. Ernest W. Riggs.

Other church activities have included plays, pageants, social hours, and the Ladies' Society has made nearly $3,000 for various church needs. One of the most helpful ministries of the church, which attracts not only local, but wide outside attention, is the Church Garden, which has been compared with the Garden of Bethesda by the Sea, Palm Beach; and the Garden of Central Union Church, Honolulu.

COUNTRY LIFE ACADEMY.

As they graduate from everywhere, let us not forget Country Life Academy at Star, N. C.

Under a new vision for larger service, which grew out of the experience of the past year, a larger program than ever is the order for the next year. At the annual meeting of the Board of Trustees, during the second session, the following new Trustees were elected: Mr. S. C. Heindel, Elon College, N. C., Mr. Clay E. Rutledge, Mr. Fred F. Myrick, Greensboro, who was also elected to serve as attorney for the Academy, Miss Ira Taylor, Southern Pines, Mrs. C. H. Rowland, Greensboro, and Prof. C. G. Taylor, Raleigh.

Prof. L. E. Cook was elected treasurer and Mr. Jefferson Canoy assistant treasurer. The executive committee was completed with the addition of Mrs. C. H. Rowland and the election of Prof. E. W. Boshart chairman and Rev. M. J. Sweet as executive secretary. Prof. E. W. Boshart was also elected vice-chairman of the Board of Trustees, of which Dr. W. Knighton Bloom is the chairman. The executive committee was authorized to revise the constitution, bringing it up to date.

Another advance step was the election of Mr. G. D. Colclough, Elon College financial secretary, to become the Dean and Principal of the Academy. This assures a strong executive department, and the work will gain tremendously in efficiency and power. Mrs. Colclough has also been chosen to be at the head of the Home Economics department, and Mrs. Canoy will act as Academy nurse. All in all, this is a strong progressive movement and should result in superior work.

METHODS CORNER

By REV. ELISHA A. KING, D. D.

Miami Beach, Fla.

A few weeks ago I wrote a few words about pastoral calling. Since then I have found a quotation in the Congregationalist and Herald of Gospel Liberty copied from a church calendar published by Dr. Hugh Elmer Brown of Evanston, Ill. It is so good, I wish to share it with you. Here it is:

"I am behind in my pastoral calling. An exceptional volume of illness in the parish, frequency of funerals and denominational duties outside the parish, have taken an unusual toll of my time. But I want you to know that my heart is in the right place and that I will appear on your doorstep, sooner or later.

"I take pastoral calling seriously and happily. I plan to make at least one visit to every home in the parish each year—a matter of 600 calls. I plan to go frequently to those who are sick or in trouble, and that means several calls each week. And then I plan to visit just as rapidly as I can all newcomers in the parish, and that is a long list.

"As a matter of fact, pastoral calling in a parish of this size is like a farmer's work—never finished. It goes on forever. One has the uncomfortable sense constantly of being behind, of never being able to catch up. The afternoons are too short, the evenings are too few, and the men are not at home except in the evening, and fully fifty per cent of one's calls find nobody at home.

"Some pastors have given it up as an impossible and futile business, and speak slightly of "ringing doorbells." I cannot understand their point of view. How can a man be the pastor of a parish if he does not know the people? How can he know the people if he does not have a chance, now and then, to sit down and visit with them?

"A great weakness in our parish, as in thousands of others, is that the members themselves do so little visitation. Times have changed, of course, and metropolitan life renders obsolete many village habits of social mingling. The telephone, the innumerable clubs, community and church gatherings provide contacts unprecedented, but church members remain too much unacquainted with each other."

The last part of this exhortation is very significant. Church people do not visit enough in the name of the church. They are inclined to leave "calling" to the pastor. If you have forgotten my previous comments, look up this paper for April 16th.

PRINCIPLES OF THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

- (1) The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
- (2) Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.
- (3) The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
- (4) Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship and of Church membership.
- (5) The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by, all.

THE PURPOSE OF THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

The purpose of this Church is to cultivate a spirit of union among the followers of our Lord Jesus Christ of every persuasion, and to secure, if possible, the associate efforts of all true religious teachers in pointing the wicked to "the Lamb of God who taketh away the sin of the world."

The peculiar doctrines and tenets which have confused and distracted the Christian world are remanded to private judgment, and hence cease to be matters for debate, only in so far as may be necessary to prevent a sectarian influence from entering the Church.

This Church requires no compromise of faith on the part of any child of God in order to communion or fellowship; here, denominational distinctions cease to exist, and Christian love binds the brotherhood together.

The purpose of this Church will be consummated in the conversion of the world and the union of all Christians.

SUNDAY SCHOOL AND CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR CONVENTION.

The Virginia Valley Convention met with our Bethel Church, at Elkton, Va., June 18th to 19th. No convention has more enthusiastic and efficient officers than this one. Bro. Roy A. Larrick, of Winchester, is a live wire in Sunday School and Christian Endeavor work, and he keeps a convention going from the time the gavel falls at each session, and on the minute, till the benediction is said at the close. Bro. J. E. Foster, vice-president, is always ready for service, and delivered before the convention a very interesting and practical address. Brother R. Roy Hosaflook, Linville, is the faithful recording secretary, and carries every detail of the convention in his mind and at finger tips as well as on his records. Brother R. O. Rothgeb, Luray, Va., is the treasurer, and not only collects, but aids in increasing the amount collected, and presents a report of which any officer should be proud.

Rev. A. W. Andes is the pastor of Bethel, and made everybody feel welcome. The Mission Secretary saw the spot on which this beautiful church is now located before any house of worship was there. And he saw the old church a mile or more from the highway out in the woods. The change has wrought wonders, and Bethel has been and is a veritable house of God and a place of prayer and of power in that community. It has simply re-made a community, and in the church building itself, its upkeep and beauty, the entire community takes a pardonable pride. The first day's attendance was enormous, filling to overflowing the splendid house of entertainment and worship, and the reports from the Sunday Schools and Christian Endeavor Societies, were more than up to the average, and showed that the schools and societies of the convention had had a good year of constructive service. The various departmental reports were interesting; that on Missions, by Miss Verdie Showalter, revealing the fact that practically every Sunday School in the convention was missionary in spirit and in activity, and made a monthly offering to missions. That on the Cradle Roll, by Mrs. J. Warner Stearn, showed the necessity, as well as the enlargement of, the Cradle Roll Department the past year. There were many addresses during the first day; among them the Mission Secretary was permitted to speak to the delegates and people assembled on "Missions, a Spiritual Task." Three laymen of the convention, in the afternoon, gave talks on practical problems before the schools and societies.

Rev. R. L. Williamson, Winchester, Va., delivered the annual address, taking as his topic, "Partners with God." In this splendid address, the speaker showed how we may and should be partners with God in plan, purpose, and power. If we line up with God, He will furnish the plan, He will supply the purpose, and He will give the power.

Devotional services in the afternoon of the first day consisted of a program of music, Scripture reading, and exercises by the young people under the direction of Mrs. A. W. Andes. This was a thrilling half hour for the entire convention and revealed what young people can and will do when given a chance. Count on the young people to give enthusiasm and thrill to a convention when properly led. At 8:00 o'clock P. M., Dr. M. L. Weekley, pastor of several churches of the convention, delivered a most timely sermon.

The second and final day of the convention was one of deep devotion, inspiring songs, delightful fellowship and addresses of point, pith and power. Rev. B. J. Earp began the day with devotional services from hymn writers, followed by Brother E. S. Morris for the department of organized classes in report, indicating the value and power of the organized class in Sunday School. "How to Stop the Leaks in the Bible School," was the topic of a splendid address by Brother J. E. Foster, and the Secretary of Missions closed the morning service with an address, "The Author and Finisher of Missions."

The last afternoon was given to consideration of Christian Endeavor, awarding of Certificates of Credit, miscellaneous business and reports of committees. Miss Matthews, of Winchester District, leader of Christian Endeavor, stirred the audience with an appealing address on "The Possibilities and Power of Christian Endeavor in a Church." Miss Margaret Frances Richards, of our Winchester Church, recently elected State President of Christian Endeavor, made a telling appeal for new organizations in the convention, emphasizing the weight and worth of Christian Endeavor, not only in the Church, but in the community.

Of all the good conventions held, many who attended felt that none had been better than this one, both in attendance, in work done, and in good fellowship. The convention adjourned to meet in next annual session with Timber Ridge Church, in West Virginia. It was, indeed, good to be in such a group of people deeply interested in reaching the youth and training them for Christian citizenship and service.

GOD AND THE CENSUS.

Mr. Robert N. McLean, author of "That Mexican," and other books, has written now a real book. The title is "God and the Census." The author contends that we leave God out of our reckonings and ratings of values. The world has been following this procedure a long time. There was once a census in Bethlehem of Judea. "People had come from all over the district, each to his own town, to be counted and to be taxed. And in Bethlehem of Judea it is possible that the most important person in the whole town was not counted at all. When those who call themselves His followers begin to count Him in their own lives, then He will be counted throughout the life of the world." The world is topsy-turvy, and even Christians are at sea, because we have put the material and the economic above the moral and the spiritual. Mr. McLean says "we have broadened the realm of the secular, we have narrowed the realm of the sacred"; we look at the sacred and scarcely count its values. We are not going deep enough in our attitudes and activities, and one is reminded of E. Stanley Jones' declaration: "We cannot go further until we go deeper." We are skimming the surface and counting temporal pursuits and possessions as primary and above all. We are forgetting that the invisible is more abiding than the visible, and that the eternal is more weighty than the temporal.

We have given away to superficial forces and yielded our souls to the tide of the material and physical currents of the day.

The author puts his finger on the spot when he declares: "Today we fly, and we talk around the earth in the fraction of a second, like gods magnifying our voices and sending them vibrating through space. And all the while as we have broadened the realm of the secular, we have narrowed the realm of the sacred. Our filing-cabinet type of philosophy has made God seem very remote. Day by day, as He has come to mean less to us, so we have felt less and less the responsibility of sharing Him with others. If we felt any missionary zeal at all, it has been a zeal to give people our tractors and our serums, which we understand so well, rather than our God, Whom we understand so little."

We have got to come to a new and deeper sense of the power, personality and presence of God. We must put Him in the census, because He counts most of all. This is the business of the Church, to stand for spiritual realities which, according to this author, means getting God counted in the community.

The volume is packed full of information that inspires the reader to thinking along spiritual lines and creates within the reader a desire to go deeper and share the fellowship of our Lord in helping, often through difficulties, to make God count in our lives and in the world.

Should any SUN reader desire the volume, it can be had in cloth for $1.00 or in paper for 60c, by addressing Missionary Education Movement, 150 5th Ave., New York City. It is worth many times the price to any one who will read it.

PROMISE OF ABUNDANCE.

Nature seems to be doing her best to overcome mental depression "from hard-times." On all sides there are signs of abundance. When have we had such a spring? Out of the lap of winter, spring leaped, full-fledged, with the glory and gladness of growth and color and life. Tender plants sprang up over night, and the signs of abundant life were seen on every hand.

Have we ever had such gardens, of vegetables, of verdure, of flowers, and now with such abundance of young and growing fruit?

This writer has just been through Piedmont Carolina and the Shenandoah Valley of Virginia. Such promising fields of wheat, oats, barley, clover and corn, has he seldom, if ever seen. A friend led us into a wheat-field of thirty acres

EDUCATIONAL DIVIDENDS.

By MRS. R. S. RAINY.

now in full head, beginning to tint with golden yellow. It was only one of many such fields. "How many bushels per acre do you expect to realize from this thirty acre field?" "At least thirty bushels to the acre, or nine hundred bushels from the thirty acres," was the quick and glad reply. Just across the way spreading acres of oats, "certainly not less than thirty, more than likely forty bushels, to the acre." And a mowing machine drawn by two fat, sleek steed was cutting a wide swath at each round in alfalfa more than knee high to the horses, and close by, in another field of twenty acres, mowing timothy, thick and thirty inches high. The parched earth of a year ago seems to have stored up latent fertility and reserved its strength for great yields of any and everything planted.

On every hand there are marks of abundant harvest, plentiful crops, luscious fruits. In the homes of the people, there is talk of hard-times, business depression, economic ruin, but on their tables abundant food and everything that goes to supply the food for the appetite and body of man. Go to the churches for all-day services in Alabama and Georgia, in North Carolina and Virginia, to our own knowledge, and see the tables at the noon hour loaded with such abundance of savory food as the need and heart of man require. After all, the people are not perishing, and God is good.

There is much to be grateful for and much to call out our sacrificial offering and service to Almighty God. The triumphs and the victories recorded in the Bible came out of, and followed hard upon, trials, famines and tribulations. We can make it so today. God has not forsaken us. We may have forsaken Him in the day of prosperity. In the day of adversity He is calling us and is testing us to see whether we are worthy and capable and willing to enjoy the blessings, the bounties and the benefits, that He bestows upon us with such a lavish hand. Let us learn to deny ourselves for the sake of our Lord, to be grateful for the blessings that He is so abundantly bestowing and promising. J. O. A.

THE SEATTLE CONVENTION.

SUN readers and Christians everywhere turn their thoughts and minds to Seattle, Washington, this week. Possibly for the last time in history, the National Council of Congregational Churches and the General Convention of Christian Churches, will meet as separate bodies. They have met this week in Seattle to carry out in form and feature and fact mandates of the two bodies meeting separately as distinct entities two years ago. Now they are meeting in adjacent buildings only for separate business sessions to complete and perfect the united, merged organization, so that the two may be done away and become one. A constitution is to be adopted. The departments not already merged are to be merged, and a new program for the newly merged body, is to be made and adopted at Seattle this week. Not only are the members of the two churches looking on, but the Christian world, as well, to see what shall come out of this experience at union on the part of two great denominations. The New York Times and other national dailies have announced to the world in front page headlines that a great church event is taking place at Seattle, and an epoch in church history is about to be created.

THE SUN will give to its readers, as early as available, the name adopted by the National Assembly and the chief issues growing out of the great event now engaging the attention of the Christian world at Seattle. J. O. A.

"The spirit of missions is the Spirit of the Master."

The subject which I have chosen for this occasion is "Educational Dividends." In finance, we hear a great deal about dividends—anyone who has money to invest always considers the amount of interest that his investment will pay. We hear of stock dividends and bank dividends—in fact all kinds of interest returns on investments. "When a man invests his money in taxes, he wants to know just what tangible results he is to get. He pays for an efficient government, police protection, courts of Justice, armored battle ships, the salaries of government officials, good roads and, last but not least, schools. Every cent that is invested in all except the schools pays in tangible results."

A man can see a superdreadnaught and be proud of it; he can look up to a fleet of airplanes and know where his money has gone; he can settle a case in court and feel that his taxes have been well spent; he can look upon a "ribbon of concrete winding over a purple moor" and be proud that his is the opportunity to enjoy these things that no nation has ever enjoyed before. He can raise his voice to the heavens and thank the Lord of the Universe that his is the land of the free, where all opportunities are equal, and any man may be what he is willing to put forth the effort to be. In the midst of this rejoicing over the great privileges, too, many people fail to give honor where honor is due. The vast majority of tax payers begrudge every cent they invest in schools, and believe that the smallest return is made on their investment. We all know that the results of education are intangible, and for that reason there is no argument that can be visualized as a fleet of airships or a good road.

We are living in a practical age, when practical problems confront us and practical demands are made upon us. The question most often asked us today is not what do you know, but what can you do? From this fact we see that the schools must prepare their graduates to answer the last question as well as the first. This necessitates the expenditure of a great deal more money. This may be the only real answer—tangible argument—that we have for the taxpayer who begrudges the money he puts in schools. The high school graduate faces the problems of economic independence and the necessity of earning a living. The college graduate, having spent four years in perfecting what he knows, may be just where he was when he began his college career, as far as his economic independence and earning capacities are concerned. His answer to the question of "what can you do?" is vague. A few years ago, if he couldn't do anything else, he could teach, but now he has to have special training for that. It is hard to answer the arguments of a business man, when he wants to know why the student can only vaguely answer "what can you do?" The man who knows his business, knows that he does not invest not having any idea what the return will be. Yet that student has invested much money and several of the earning years of his life in this thing called education, and he is economically dependent.

What is it after all that makes one nation more prosperous and wealthier than another nation? What is conducive to the accumulation of wealth—that is the wealth of a community and the prosperity of a group of people?

There are three things that enter into the wealth of any community—(1) Natural resources; (2) Racial heritage of the people; and (3) Mental training or development—the thing we call education.

The first two elements are largely static for the space of a generation, but the last one can be changed in twenty-five years. During the past generation there has been very little change in the natural resources and the kind of people who live in America, but there has been much more prosperity. We find that the State that has the largest educational investment is the most prosperous. Mr. Hoover has suggested universal education as a solution to the economic ills of the day.

Dr. Phillips Thomas, noted electrical wizzard, says that within a few years there will be no place for the untrained man. Only the educated will have jobs. Can we now ask whether an education is an economic necessity? We must remember that Dr. Thomas is only one of many farseeing men who have made similar statements. Walter Hines Page once said that the material wealth of a Nation is in direct proportion to the number of trained minds. We realize in the light of future welfare that we will have to continue our educational program, and give the children of the land a chance to be economically independent.

We may look upon an education from three standpoints—(1) The materialistic; (2) the political, and (3) the pursuit of happiness. The public often thinks that additions to the course of study which make up the enriched curriculum of the modern school is the result of the desire of school people to add frills and furbelows to the old course of study. They never take into consideration the fact that the schools are dealing with many different types of children, while a few years ago we dealt with only those who wanted to enter college. In order to meet the needs of these various types it is necessary to have a varied course of study. We owe just as much to the mechanically minded child as we do to the child who is interested in an academic education. In nearly every community in America the expenditures for the operation of the schools and the money invested in capital outlay have reached proportions that make the school the biggest single business and professional enterprise in the community. Since this is true it is becoming more and more necessary for the schools to justify their need for additional revenue on the basis of the economic necessity for larger educational expenditures. Can we justify these enormous expenditures for education by saying that an education is an economic necessity? Any attempt to justify the education of an individual as a means of increasing his earning power is a hazardous business, because there are too many individuals without formal education who have achieved financial success and too many highly educated men who have been miserable failures at the game of finance. While it is always dangerous to pick out individuals as evidence of the effect of the schools on the earning capacity, "there are available statistics indicating that there is a direct relation between earning power and mental development, represented by education." These show conclusively that the earning power of a group of people graduated from high school is considerably higher than that of a similar group who quit school in the elementary grades.

But—this is not conclusive evidence that the physical, mental and moral characteristics of the group who finished high school would not have enabled them, without this training, to have gone just as far as they did.

Education is not intended to produce millionaires. If we take a list of all the prominent business men we know, we will likely learn that the majority of them do not have a formal education. Since this is the case, we will consider the community as a whole—the prosperity of the mass of the people—to see if there has been any

SUFFOLK LETTER.

Pathetic sights come into view as one travels through the country in these days of good roads and automobiles. Houses, once occupied, abandoned and going to wreck; lands, once cultivated, growing up in weeds and bushes; dead trees once living members of fruitful orchards; barns falling down, and yards covered with vines, weeds and shrubs. And then one meets men in town complaining of being out of work and do not know what to do. Look again, and you see farms owned by men who let their land out to tenants, or cultivate chiefly "money crops" and complain that farming does not pay. Questions arise in the mind as to what remedy would meet the situation and change present conditions.

This nation was founded and built up on the land and country people. It was not made in a shop, but on a farm. All the great nations that went on the rocks were ruled by great cities. Ninevah and Babylon are examples. What this country needs is a return to the country by millions in rented houses and out of work in the cities. The land should be owned and occupied by men who live on their own land, and cultivate small acreage for home supplies.

There are three objects in successful farming.

1. To make a Living. This is done by producing what the family needs for daily support.

2. To make a Farm; that is to improve the land, the buildings, the stock, the equipment. In such work as this, as much capacity is required as is in the improvement in the manufacturing world.

3. To make Some Money: produce corn, peanuts, cotton, fruits, poultry, sheep, cattle, hogs, anything that the market demands.

There are many ways, according to soil and the climate, that market values can be produced and money received to meet the financial demands of the family. But when all the land is cultivated in corn, wheat, cotton, tobacco, peanuts, overproduction is the result, and business slumps and unemployment, unpaid rents and bills, and loss of credit, follow. Besides this, when one raises money crops only, sells after harvest, and gets his year's earnings in money, he cannot keep it. The only thing that saves the man who receives salary or wages is that he gets his pay by the week or month.

Another benefit of country life is the unity and stability of the home. When the home is in a house to itself, the family is together and more united than when it is surrounded by houses and families so close that they get out into groups and lose the ties that bind the members of the family in the country together. Night shuts the family in the home together more in the country than in the city. This does not mean that all people should live in the country, but that cities and country would both be better off and more prosperous, if more people lived in the country. The proof of this is found in the fact that the leaders in business, professions, and the churches, come from the country. The country is the place to produce people, and the city is the place to market them. Present conditions have broken the balance between the country and the city.

ELON LETTER.

The writer has enjoyed during the past week the privilege of a visit to the western part of the State and Appalachian State Teachers College in Boone, N. C. He has returned from the visit with a new conception of the college and the mountains and those who dwell among them. Appalachian State Teachers College is the materialization of the dream of two brothers, Drs. D. D. and B. B. Dougherty. Its evolution can be traced from the humble frame building, still standing, in which Wautauga Academy was begun in 1899, through yet larger frame and brick edifices representing the home of the growing school, to the present magnificent plant consisting of eight modern brick buildings having a value of around one million dollars.

The student body for the present summer session numbers over eight hundred, one of the largest summer schools in the South. The college is ideally located. Boone furnishes all of the conveniences necessary for the student body without the distraction of the larger city, and the climate is unsurpassed. The speaker at chapel chose as his scripture selection for the first assembly of the summer session "I will look to the hills from whence cometh my help"—quite an appropriate selection for a school so situated.

Around the school and town lie the towering Blue Ridge Mountains, clothed in waving fields of grain, or velvety grass, or other crops of the farms in various stages of cultivation. Truly the title, "The Garden of Gods" would not be inappropriate for this section of the Old North State.

The term "mountaineer" no longer carries with it the idea of ignorance or the lack of culture, as we pass along the paved highways and look upon the beautiful homes and splendid consolidated schools found in this section. The friend who accompanied us pointed out here and there, homes from which boys and girls had gone to various colleges in our State and from thence out into broader fields of usefulness in life. One township, not far from Boone, boasts of having forty-three college graduates among its residents. All of these are not teachers or preachers, but all are cultured, useful members of the community.

Truly North Carolina has reason to be proud of Appalachian State Teachers College, its mountain homes, and people. J. W. BARNEY.

SOUTHERN UNION COLLEGE.

This college, chartered as Bethlehem College, June 2, 1922, was renamed Piedmont Junior, May 18, 1928.

By vote of the Trustees, June 3, 1931, it returned to the original plan of a four years college, with the new name, printed above, as a permanent Memorial of our great Congregational-Christian merger; and to be a living prophecy of multiplying unions of Christian forces yet to come.

A strong Faculty, three times as large as that of the closing year, holding high scholastic degrees, has been engaged. Its members received their training in twenty-five universities and colleges, located in twelve states, from California to Massachusetts and from Illinois to Florida.

The Administration Building is being completed and furnished for office and recitation purposes, with its library and reading room and its fine, large auditorium ready for use.

The Campus has been graded and will be beautified as rapidly as nature can do its work of supplying lawn and flowers. Playground facilities have been added.

Its Woman's Dormitory has been newly decorated, furnished and thoroughly equipped for all the dormitory needs of the lady teachers and young lady students. The Wadley Hotel has been secured to supply the dormitory needs of the men teachers and the young men students. It is being thoroughly renovated, redecored, supplied with running hot and cold water, an abundance of baths, steam heated, and provided with adequate kitchen and dining facilities, at a cost of about $6,000.

The Library has been enlarged by several thousand books of high grade. The Chemistry and Biology Laboratories have been further equipped and a Home Economics department provided.

The class entering this fall will have an opportunity of finishing its four years' course in this college; and the recent Sophomore class can continue its Junior studies this year.

Southern Union College aspires to be the "Oberlin of the South," like that college whose great missionary service has not only pervaded every part of this Nation, but has also reached to the ends of the earth.

Our permanent slogan will be "Scholarship High, Expense Low, Character Supreme."

WINCHESTER, VA.

Sunday, May 7th, was a great day for our people. This year it was our "turn" to furnish the minister to preach the Baccalaureate Sermon to the graduating class of Handley High School. We were fortunate in securing for this service Rev. Roy C. Helfenstein, D. D. He kindly consented to preach in our church at the morning service, using as his subject: "A God that Helps." He brought to his hearers a most able, inspiring and comforting message.

His subject in the evening at Handley was, "A New World in the Making," or "What about Tomorrow?" No words of mine would do justice to this great message, so I forbear attempting a report of the sermon. In a masterly way Dr. Helfenstein emphasized the thought that the young people of today hold in their hands the destiny of tomorrow, and that working together with God they can create a better world.

Dr. Helfenstein, who, as SUN readers know, is the busy pastor of People's Church, Dover, Delaware, one of the greatest of our denomination. In consenting to turn aside from his busy parish and come to us, he not only rendered a great service to the school and to the local church, but also made an important contribution to the denomination. R. L. WILLIAMSON.

ROANOKE, ALA.

I have just returned from Richland and Red Hill, Ga. We had a fine service at both churches yesterday and last night. I spent from Thursday until Monday in the town and country, visiting members of both congregations.

We had a pleasant time and enjoyed the fine fellowship. I visited some fifteen or twenty families, but did not get to every home. I will endeavor to do so at an early date.

I had the pleasure of visiting Mrs. Sallie Bostwick, who is a daughter of the Rev. Dr. Jubilee Smith, deceased. She is very much interested in the dear old Christian Church and gave me quite a bit of information concerning her father and grandfather, both of whom were preachers. The annual home-coming day at Red Hill, which had been set for the First Sunday in July, has been postponed, and our revival here and that at Richland will be held later.

Our meeting for Roanoke was to have been held in June, but will not be held until August. We are in the midst of a severe drouth in our section and the surrounding country, but we had a light rain here today.

More later.

G. D. HUNT.

OUR WASHINGTON WINDOW.

By DR. W. KNIGHTON BLOOM.

On Tuesday, May 12th, Dr. Allen A. Stockdale was installed as minister of the First Congregational Church, Washington, D. C., in succession to Dr. Jason Noble Pierce, minister from 1920 to 1930. Ten years at Union Church, Boston, and fourteen at First Church, Toledo, Dr. Stockdale comes to the Old First of Washington following a brief special ministry at Rogers Park, Chicago, with the background of a strong personal ministry in three great cities and facing a challenging service in the nation's capital amid conditions that include a large and devoted membership in the church ranks and the growing opportunity of a spiritual ministry to the throngs that daily pass the historic corner at 10th and G Streets, where for 66 years Congregationalism has stood for inspiration and uplift in teaching, preaching and serving.

The Ecclesiastical Council called together the representatives of nineteen churches and thirteen individuals and the response was large numerically and strong in personnel. Dr. Bartlett B. James read the letter missive and Rev. Walter Spooner, superintendent of the Middle Atlantic Conference, was elected as moderator, and Rev. Harvey W. Goddard as scribe. The statement made by Dr. Stockdale was presented in an earnest, happy and inspirational manner, and called forth on the part of the council a discussion rather than a period of examination. It opened up a rich outlook of thought and expression, strengthening faith in the Eternal, confidence in the Church, and a desire to live in a larger way the life of discipleship. Some of the points emphasized by Dr. Stockdale dealt with God as the source of satisfying life and the need in our day of a recognition of the awareness of God. Conscious of the prevailing doubt of our day, we should also be conscious of the new voices that help us speak of God today without hesitation regarding the ultimate reality of the spiritual, and lead with awe and reverence to the fact "In the beginning God."

Dr. Stockdale went on to say that "Jesus is the intelligible and complete revelation of God's mind and will for the world. Prayer is reasonable and consistent with an age of science. The Church is necessary, tangible and real. It is perpetual and universal, and so essential to the life of God among men, that when periods of low standards of spiritual efficiency are registered in the Church, the life of the world goes wrong. The Church, when set to her true objective, released to her highest and holiest activities, is the greatest mental, moral and spiritual force in the lives of men. A sincere leader in the Church of today faces a challenging task. The demands of public life; the calls for executive action; the privileges of pastoral contacts; the maintenance of a well prepared, inspired, intellectually sound, interesting, physically fit and radiant pulpit call for the utmost consideration. The true prophet in the pulpit today will deal courageously with the fear and love of God, man as a moral being, conscience as a basis of personality, the Christian life as a social obligation, and the Church as a world necessity."

At the close of the statement and discussion, the Council unanimously went on record, without going into separate session, as heartily and unanimously approving the proceedings, and voted for the installation of the minister thus called and approved.

Following the afternoon session, a fellowship dinner was held, at which representatives of the Washington churches gave greetings and the installation service took part in the church auditorium with the vested choir assisting in the worship parts. The invocation was given by Rev. R. W. Brooks of Lincoln Memorial Church; Rev. George L. Farnham of Cleveland Park Church led in the responsive services; the enunciation of the hymns was by Revs. William H. King and Arthur F. Elmes; Dr. J. Percival Huget preached the sermon; the prayer of installation was by Dean D. Butler Pratt of Howard University; the charge to the church was given by Dr. Frederick L. Flagley; the charge to the minister by Dr. Charles C. Merrill; the hand of fellowship extended by Rev. Russell J. Clinchy of Mt. Pleasant Church, and the benediction was pronounced by Dr. Allen A. Stockdale.

The message of the installation sermon was given by Dr. Huget in his best and most characteristic way, surcharged with challenging optimism. It was based on Jeremiah 32:15 and Hebrews 11:1; and the prophet's regnant faith in the ultimate triumph of God's redeeming purposes for Israel was effectively used to illustrate the faith and hope which lure men on and up to God, without thought or expectation of material gain, and yet which are the very substance and evidence of their spiritual life. A man may be measured by the greatness of his dreams. A civilization may be evaluated by the same test.

Out of great faiths and hopes, involving struggle and sacrifice, come the noblest achievements and the enduring satisfactions of life. The modern church needs the faith that adventures in obedience to the conviction that our highest hopes and most spiritual experiences are rooted in the eternal purposes of God for us.

Most earnestly and expectantly First Church and the Washington fellowship of churches, and the entire Southeast welcome Dr. Stockdale, and look forward to a leadership on his part that will be helpful to the Congregational and Christian fellowships of the United Church.

"What can I give Him,
Poor as I am?
If I were a shepherd,
I would bring Him a lamb;
If I were a wise man,
I would do my part.
Yet, what I can, I give Him—
I give my heart.

—Rossetti.

Jesus said, "Go, ye." We who cannot go in person, must go in prayer and purse.

MISSIONS

REV. J. O. ATKINSON, D. D., Secretary.

A PRAYER.

Father Almighty, we beseech Thee defend Thy Church against the spirit of anti-Christ. Deliver it from the effect of evil influences. So invaded are the appointed times for worship, so perverted their purpose and program, that souls hungering for bread too often find only a stone, cold, hard, set, without power or property to feed and warm. Rid Thy sanctuary, O God, of every alien influence and preserve to its offices the light and strength that effectually combat what the world not only attractively presents, but so diligently seeks to impose and instil. In Thy most holy name we pray. Amen. L.

SPIRITUAL VALUES OUT OF DEPRESSION.

A friend of Missions recently said: I am interested in Christian Stewardship as the only road I can see to a new economic order. Much of the wealth of America is in the hands of church members, and certainly enough of it is in these hands to accomplish any purpose for God's Kingdom to which our hearts are set. "There is nothing more certain than that the Kingdom of God can never come on this earth until the conscience of the Church has been stirred on this matter of property and income. Never has there been a time when membership in a church dedicated to the establishment of the Kingdom of God among men has involved greater responsibilities or been fraught with more difficulties both of thought and action."

Do we really believe that Materialism has been an encroaching danger to the Church and to most of us Christian people in the last decade? If so, many of us will learn through difficulties and uncertainty of these past few months the great need of anchoring our spirits more firmly in our faith in Christ. Pastors are undoubtedly sounding a deep spiritual note to their people in such days. The conversation of earnest groups must often turn to the deeper spiritual issues of life. Surely a million Christian homes in this land have been helped to spiritualize their purpose and to make changes in their proposed expenditure, and almost certainly these homes will "honor the Lord with their substance," recognizing the principles of obedient stewardship.

We should thank God on our knees if months like these bring to our hearts "the hunger and thirst" that only Christ can satisfy. The Church will be enriched, deepened, and made alive, if our budgets are planned from a new point of view that includes a higher degree of unselfish desire to serve the Kingdom.

MEDITATIONS OF A RETIRED VETERAN.

(Dr. A. D. Woodworth, now past the three-score-and-ten-year limit for missionaries on the field, refuses to give up, grow old, or "get out." Born with a sense of humor which has carried him smiling through many a hard scene and otherwise dark day, his outlook on life and events is yet fine and fresh, with the vigor of youth. I have named his timely personal letter to "J. O. A." the "Meditations of a Retired Veteran" to give it dignity and pass it on to our readers.—Ed.)

Yes, we are among the retired veterans, soldiers of the cross. But through the good offices of Boston and yourself, we are still pursuing, though sometimes faint and weary. I have just started a class of twenty-five young men in the beginning Greek. Along with the Greek, I think I am putting a good deal of Woodworth in them for their present, and, as I hope, their eternal good. I meet about 450 out of the 1,200 boys in the Ababu middle school, and by precept and example am trying to lead them in the right way. Then I have five Bible classes besides. So if keeping busy is one of the ways to frustrate the devil, I think he is having a sorry time of it here.

To add to my activities, Mrs. Woodworth was run down by a motor truck in Yokohama a month ago, but now she has come home, to my great comfort. She is not well by any means, but is able to cook some of the victuals, as she doesn't always have an appetite for the things which her man-cook (myself) prepares for her. One time she got sick in Sendai and I cooked some apples in an iron pan. As soon as she tasted them she got well and came downstairs and did all the cooking herself! So there may be some virtue in having a man-cook around, after all. She had three ribs broken and was so nearly crushed that if the truck had moved a foot farther she could not have survived. Fortunately, she was very near her doctor, who is also a very good surgeon. She was carried to his office, where she received first aid and then sent to the hospital, where everything possible was done for her comfort and recovery. She is now able to be up and does a few things about the house, but soon tires and goes back to bed again. But we are very thankful that the accident was no worse.

As a retired missionary, and not required to work, whatever I do is purely voluntary. But I am doing the same work I was doing before the retirement. I am returning to the board $54 a month by my teaching and the work I am doing in the M. E. theological school, which if done by one of their own missionaries would cost them at least $1,200 a year. I guess I am clannish because I would much prefer to do the work in one of our own schools. But still, after all, it is for the glory of the Lord, and I ought to be satisfied.

I trust you have recovered from your breakdown, or whatever it was. You ought to be like me, with a lazy streak so big that nobody seems to be able to overwork me. Recently the "doc" gave me a physical examination and said I would pass for life insurance. I have no pains or aches, have a good digestion, and enjoy riding my bike as much as I did forty years ago.

Good by, and all the blessings of the Lord be on you and on all the things to which you set your hands.

Sincerely, your brother,

Tokyo, Japan.

A. D. WOODWORTH.

"Prayer and missions are as inseparable as faith and works."

WITNESSING FOR CHRIST.

BY REV. R. A. WHITTEN.

"And they took knowledge of them that they had been with Jesus."—Acts 4:13.

They found in them a mighty power
To heal the lame, the halt, the blind;
To move the heart of God in prayer,
And help the lost their way to find.

They found in them a courage bold,
To own the cause for which Christ died,
And which for them, in case they told,
Might prove their death when they were tried.

They found in them a faith sublime
In Christ their Saviour and their Friend,
Revealed as man, and God divine,
One who would lead them to the end.

They found in them His Spirit true,
In helping others on their way;
In songs and prayer, and service, too,
With willing hands from day to day.

They found in them Christ's servants brave,
Through whom the world can see Him now,
The Saviour who alone can save,
Tongues must confess and knees must bow.

They found their selfish hearts made new,
In which the Holy Spirit dwelt,
And made five thousand happy, too,
Because Christ's love they also felt.

Lord, help me, like these men, to stand
Firm and secure from worldly care;
When I am tempted, lend Thy hand,
Let Thy rich grace sustain me there.

Help me reflect my flickering light,
That Thine own likeness well may mark
Through my weak torch; Thine own so bright,
Shine through the gloom, dispel the dark.

That when I leave this world of sin,
The friends I've known may all agree
That I was surely known of Him,
And He to them made known by me.

NOT ONE MONTH LEFT.

MISSION PERIOD! MARCH, APRIL, MAY, AND JUNE!

AND ALL these months are gone, save a part of June. Some Churches have done their best. They have given, to the glory of God and for the salvation of souls, out of their need. The Missionary Offering to them meant self-denial, but it meant joy.

Then other Churches have given something. "Times are hard," and so instead of cutting off one necessity or comfort from the home, the Lord's offering was reduced, and His cause must suffer!!

Then there are Churches in which no offering has as yet been taken. God's work must wait and suffer rather than self-denial of any need or comfort or luxury shall be made for His sake!

The call still comes! The need is great. God and not man instituted missionary work, and He invites all His followers to join in that blessed task.

If your Church has not taken the Annual Missionary Offering, one Sunday of June is the time to take it.

The Kingdom waits, and calls for your decision.

MY CHURCH.

(A study of the Development of the Church, by the Senior Department of Waverly Christian Church, reported by a committee composed of Miss Theresa Maul and Iris Dewell.)

During the past quarter, the Senior girls and boys of the Waverly Christian Sunday School have had a general study of "My Church" and its development. The department was divided into four working units, each to develop a chapter in the discussion of "My Church." Each class period the pupils brought in the information they had collected during the past week, to be placed in a notebook. The groups named in order and the statements about each are as follows:

I.—History of the Church of Christ.

Concerning the history of the Church, we sought to find references of the Church in the New Testament and when and why the Church began. They felt the need to know the early leaders of the Church, and what the early Church undertook to do. They desired to compare the government of the early Church with that of today.

The growth of the Church, as told in the Acts of the Apostles, tells why we have the New Testament and the fathers of the Church. We compared the early Church in the following: Divisions, programs, and membership.

II.—My Denomination.

It was of much interest to study the origin of our own denomination. Though in our own opinions, our denomination seemed small, we find ourselves very proud of its wide accomplishments. Our denomination has taken a wide leadership in religious publications, co-education, religious liberty and Christian union. The study of the missionary fields, colleges and the orphanage brought much interest to the classes.

III.—My Local Church.

It is of much interest to study about our local church, or the Waverly Christian Church. We found when and why it was organized, the leaders of the church, the places of worship, and other facts about the church. By studying our own church we can find its weaknesses, development and needs. It is to those early leaders of our church that we owe much gratitude for the work that we can accomplish at the present time. The leaders of our church are trying to have the program both educational and spiritual. Some of the organizations that are beneficial to the church and the community are: Ladies' Aid Society, Christian Endeavor, Boys' Scouts, and the Missionary Societies. In the study of our church we found the duties of each officer and what the organization is supposed to do. We have found opportunities to assist with the program of our church and to be of service in the community.

IV.—The Missionary Program of My Church.

It is of value to us to become familiar with the sources of information and missionary work that may be secured through our own church. The source from which we sought this, and other information, has given us new fields for study and work. Our missionary giving is sent into many fields and the work that is accomplished by our missionaries is far beyond our imagination.

Though incomplete, our study of "My Church" has been very interesting, and much valuable information has been secured.

Our interest in this study gave us the desire to visit the site of the first Christian Church; and on the afternoon of June 8th, the Senior boys and girls went to the marker which is located near Surry Court House, Virginia, and cleaned the grounds. We enjoyed a delightful picnic supper after we had finished our work.

WAVERLY YOUNG PEOPLE.

Some time ago the members of the Christian Endeavor presented to the Junior-Intermediate Department of the Sunday School a large picture of Christ in the Temple, by Hopmann.

The closing worship services of the Sunday School are conducted by different departments. The Senior and Young People's Departments have the opening and closing services two Sundays each month, and the Beginners one Sunday and the Junior-Intermediate another Sunday. This has proven very helpful and of interest to everyone in the Sunday School.

The Senior Department, boys and girls, had a combined class meeting and social last Tuesday night. Their study and work together has created interest among the class, which was shown in the attendance of the social event.

The Ladies' Young Peoples Class taught by Mr. Marvin Gray is having regular monthly meetings and doing much for the beauty and benefit of their class and Sunday School.

In the absence of the pastor, Rev. F. C. Lester, the evening service, June 14th, was conducted by the young people. A young boy of the Church lead the service, and two of the young people debated. The subject was: Resolved, That it is more difficult to live a Christian life now than ever before. Miss Susie Mae Brittle and Mr. Rodman Lily gave very interesting and impressive talks on the subject.

The service showed the willingness of young people to do whatever they can for the church services.

IMPORTANT NOTICE.

The Sunday School and Christian Endeavor Convention of the Eastern Virginia Conference meets at Oakland Christian Church, July 21st to 22d.

It is hoped that either superintendents or teachers of all Beginners' Departments will arrange to be present on July 21st. Let's get together and talk over the work. If you have a plan or scheme that you have found helpful, pass it on.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR NOTES.

July 5, 1931.

"WHAT IS CHRISTIAN PATRIOTISM."

Prelude.—The music to some patriotic hymn.

Call to worship.—"Righteousness exalteth a nation; but sin is a reproach to any people.

Hymn.—Three or more verses of one used as a prelude.

Prayer.—A prayer of thanksgiving for everything that comes out of our past history to bless us today. It should seek to pledge each one to be true to this heritage by living nobly as a citizen in the sight of God.

Introductory talk by the leader.—A suggested subject might be, "What Does It Mean to be Patriotic?" or "What is the Highest Type of Patriotism?"

Discussion.—If necessary, call on members for their opinions.

Hymn.—"America."

Reading.—"America. First":

Not merely in matters material, but in things of the spirit. Not merely in science, inventions, motors and skyscrapers, but also in ideals, principles, character. Not merely in the calm assumption of rights, but in the glad assumption of duties.

Not flaunting her strength as a giant, but bending in helpfulness over a sick and wounded world like a Good Samaritan. Not in splendid isolation, but in courageous co-operation. Not in pride, arrogance, and disdain of other races and peoples, but in sympathy and understanding. Not in treading again the old, worn, bloody pathway which ends inevitably in chaos and disaster, but in blazing a new trail along which, please God, other nations will follow into a New Jerusalem where wars shall be no more.

Some day some nation must take that path—unless we are to lapse again into utter barbarism—and that honor I covet for my beloved America.

And so, in this spirit and with these hopes, I say with all my heart and soul, "America First!"

—G. Ashton Oldham.

Hymn.—Selected.

Benediction.—

"Lord of the nations! thus to Thee
Our country, we commend;
Be Thou her refuge and her trust,
Her everlasting friend." Amen.

Helps on the Topic.

Introductory.—Through thousands of years of bitter struggle the race of mankind has been learning the fine art of co-operation. We note that in certain ages of the past some peoples have learned this art in such measure as to become strong for a time, only to fail to practice the art and pass into oblivion. This very important co-operative spirit that has built nations and has enabled them to live together has ever been accompanied by the spirit of sacrifice. Foundations of our schools, churches and government were secured by many generations of unselfish leaders. The true patriot is one who recognizes that the gifts coming to us every day are the product of the heroic living of the past, and who is loyally committed to the task of conserving, enlarging and perpetuating these gifts.

Our whole future is dependent upon the stability of other nations and their good will toward the United States. The demand is for capable engineers in government, who are motivated by the same ideals as those who were influential in giving us our highest national ideals. The challenge is for each one to become a world patriot, which will help to bring in the rule of peace and good will.

Sunday School Lesson

By REV. H. S. HARDCASTLE.

THE GIFT OF THE HOLY SPIRIT.

LESSON I.—JULY 5, 1931.

GOLDEN TEXT: "Ye shall receive power, when the Holy Spirit is come upon you; and ye shall be my witnesses both in Jerusalem, and in all Judea and Samaria, and unto the uttermost part of the earth."—Acts 1:8.

LESSON: Acts 1:6-14; 2:1-47.

Luke wrote his gospel to tell what "Jesus began both to do and to teach." We have just completed six months' study of that gospel. Now we are to spend six months in a study of the Acts of the Apostles, which was also written by Luke, to tell what the Spirit of Jesus began to do through the apostles and the early Church. To those who approach these lessons with an open mind and a sincere heart and an honest purpose, there await many inspiring and fruitful hours. One can follow without difficulty the footsteps of the living God in this matchless historical work.

"Wilt thou at this time restore the kingdom to Israel?" The disciples could not get away from the idea that Jesus was going to set up an earthly kingdom in which they would have prominent places. The reply of Jesus was significant: "It is not for you to know the times or the seasons, which the Father hath put in his own power. But ye shall receive power after that the Holy Spirit is come upon you." They were thinking of an earthly kingdom; He would remind them of the need of spiritual power to establish His Kingdom of God. Jesus knew full well the humanly impossible task that lay before them. It was only as they yielded themselves to the Spirit of God, and allowed the Spirit to work through them, that they could make any impression on the world. This message of Jesus needs to be dinned into our ears and impressed upon our hearts today. Organization, wealth, numbers, methods, programs—all have their place; but it is not by might nor power, but by my Spirit, saith the Lord. What the Church of today needs above all else is another Pentecost, another baptism of the Spirit of the Living God upon it.

"Ye shall be witnesses." In our sense of the term it means one who testifies, one who tells what he sees and knows. It is significant, however, that the word comes from a Greek word from which we also get our word "martyr." The business of the Church is to witness for Christ; not to speculate or to argue, but to witness, to bear testimony to His living presence and His saving power.

"In Jerusalem, and in all Judea, and in Samaria, and unto the uttermost part of the earth." They were to begin right where they were, at home in Jerusalem. That was the most difficult place, but it was the place to begin. But if they were to begin there, they were not to stop there. They were to widen the sphere of their activity and their influence. Judea, Samaria—they were to go to foreigners, even to those whom they hated—and unto the uttermost part of the earth. The gospel was for all, or it was for none. Those who do not believe in foreign missions, by just so much lack being Christian. The gospel of Jesus is for the whole world and it is adequate for the whole world.

The promise of power was fulfilled on Pentecost. Pentecost thus becomes the birthday of the Church. The Spirit of Christ became active and empowered the apostles to begin their work of witnessing. There are so many vital truths in

A BOOK ABOUT THE ENGLISH BIBLE. By J. H. Penniman. University of Pennsylvania Press; $2; pp. 444.

The provost of the University of Pennsylvania has given us a readable and sympathetic and understandable interpretation of the Bible as literature. The twenty-one chapters constituting the volume give the biblical sources, background, literary form, and a history of the manuscripts and the several versions. For those who would know the Book as is and how we got it, here is the reverent scholar's workmanship meeting those essential needs. It sells so cheaply because a great university press has published it without the profit motive.

this second chapter of Acts that they can be only briefly touched upon.

"They were all with one accord in one place." They did not all think alike, but there was harmony of spirit and purpose. They were united in loyalty to Jesus Christ and in purpose to serve Him and in obedience to Him. These are prerequisites for the Spirit.

"A sound from heaven"—it was not an earthly, human power. It was from heaven—it was from the realm of the spiritual, which though unseen is real and potent. It was "as of a rushing wind"—there was power and "it filled all the house"—there was evidence that it was abundant and ample.

"And there appeared unto them cloven tongues like as of fire, and it sat upon each of them." The fact that they appeared as tongues was symbolical of the universal aspect of Christianity, and the sign and promise that the gospel should be preached and understood by all peoples. Every language was sacred to the Spirit. Fire is the symbol of cleansing and purity—the Spirit burns the dross and leaves the gold. It sat upon each of them—the Spirit is no respecter of persons, but wherever He finds humble, sincere, obedient hearts, He enters in.

"And they were all filled with the Holy Spirit, and began to speak with other tongues—the visitors to Jerusalem from all parts of the world heard and recognized their own languages. The gospel, as has been intimated above, is for all people, and it can be made known to them in terms that they can understand.

There are several interesting and significant aspects of the coming of the Spirit which will simply be enumerated, and which lend themselves to a practical treatment.

1. The Spirit was not confined to any particularly sacred place like the Temple—it came while they were in a house.

2. It was not confined to one sex—there were men and women in the group into which the Spirit came.

3. It was not confined to any one sacred language—every man heard it in his own tongue.

4. It was not confined to any one culture—Jews, Greeks, and Romans were involved.

5. It was not confined to any particular age—young and old shared it alike.

6. It was not confined to any special privilege—others shared it with the apostles, and with the mother of Jesus.

FOOD ON ICE.

"Behold the birds of the heaven, that . . . your Heavenly Father feedeth them."—Matt. 6:25-34.

In New Hampshire, as I write, they have been having an ice-and-sleet storm of such severity that it covered the ground and all the trees, so that the wild birds could not possibly get their usual food. They were in danger of starvation.

Often ice storms of the spirit occur which so cover religious truths with doubt and scepticism that souls find it very difficult to feed upon them. This happens often to individuals, sometimes to entire communities, sometimes the calamity sweeps over an entire nation. By all means and at all times, Churches and separate Christians must maintain a warm spiritual atmosphere. Icy doubts find it hard to form in such an atmosphere.

Some persons think it intellectual to maintain a spiritual temperature at zero. "Cold intellectuality" has become a proverbial phrase. But true mental power is always warm, ardent, while real genius works at a white-heat. Ice and sleet are not suitable furnishings of the mind.

Prayer.—Thy zeal, O Christ! Thy fire, O Holy Spirit of the living God! Warm us with Thy love. Fire us with Thy fervor. Melt us with Thy ardor. Feed us with the food that is convenient for us. Amen.

TUESDAY.

THE SECOND SENTRY.

"Jehovah thy God, He it is that doth go with thee, He will not fail thee, nor forsake thee."—Deut. 31:1-8.

Ralph C. Norton, director of the Belgian Gospel Mission, was once talking with the Queen of Belgium when he told her how a soldier in her army obtained faith in God. He had read of God, but could not believe in Him because he could not see Him. One night, when on dangerous sentry duty, his thoughts turned again to God. As he thought, he had a feeling that some one was behind him, but did not dare turn his head to see. At last, turning his head just a little, he saw his king! It was the King of Belgium, standing sentry duty with him, that he might share in every experience of his soldiers. Thus the king stood behind him, motionless, for two hours; and during those two hours, as the soldier meditated and prayed, he learned the great truth that thus his God was ever near him, living his life with Him, though unseen.

The knowledge of this has given faith and courage to God's children all through the centuries. They have been sure that God was going with them, that He would never fail them nor forsake them. The King of kings, the Lord of lords was standing sentry duty behind them, their Comrade in all perils, all weariness, all strife.

Prayer.—Infinite Friend, we trust in Thee. We cannot understand Thy love for us, Thou so great and pure, we so small and sinful. But we realize the marvel, while we wonder at it, and we praise Thy holy name. Amen.

WEDNESDAY.

LOVE AND CANDY.

"David . . . gave thanks before his God, as he did aforetime."—Dan. 6:4-10.

Daniel was in sore trouble. He was in danger of the lions, and he knew it; but he could not cease praying to his God. Yet one would think that in this dire emergency his prayer would all be of petition; but no, he "gave thanks before his God, as he did aforetime." And the Lord honored his faith, though He allowed him to be thrown to the lions.

Mark Guy Pearse once bade his people not to measure God's love to them by their income. Fathers and mothers do not want their children to gauge their affection by the amount of candy they give them and the number of holidays they grant them. Our circumstances do not show God's attitude toward us. Lot, whom God did not approve, lost his all; but so did Job, whom God did approve. Abraham and Dives both were rich; Lazarus was a beggar, but Paul and Christ Himself also were poor. No; the amount of candy our Father gives us is no test of His love.

What then is the proof of love? Why, the pains that are taken for one's higher interests, for one's true and lasting betterment, for one's abiding satisfaction and pleasure. Not candy, but character. Not holidays, but holiness. Not things, but soul.

Prayer.—Jesus, Lover of our soul, we see Thy love in Thy cross. We find its evidence not in temporary gifts, but in the gift of Thyself, forever and ever. And for that unspeakable Gift we praise Thee forever and ever. Amen.

THURSDAY.

BONDS, NOT BONDAGE.

"Paul, a servant (margin, "bondservant") of Jesus Christ."—Rom. 1:1-7.

Paul, the apostle of freedom, delighted to call himself a slave. He was no slave of Nero; he was a Roman citizen, born free, and ready to assert his freedom on any emergency. But he was the slave of Jesus Christ, and proud of that servitude.

"In grace," once said Spurgeon, "you can be under bonds, yet not in bondage. I am in the bonds of wedlock, but I feel no bondage; on the contrary, it is a joy to be so bound. The bond of grace is a marriage bond, uniting us to Him whom we love above all, even the altogether lovely Bridegroom of our souls."

In these days, when there is so much silly talk about "personal liberty," let us remember that there is never any personal liberty to do wrong or to promote evil. The only liberty worth a moment's care is freedom to honor God and promote the kingdom of heaven.

Prayer.—We wear Thy choice as badges of office, O Thou our King! We stretch out our feet for Thy fetters, and find them to be wings. Thy bonds are no bondage, our Saviour; they are our enfranchisement. Amen.

FRIDAY.

FREE AND NOT FREE.

"I shall walk at liberty; for I have sought Thy precepts."—Psa. 119:41-48.

There is a noble passage in the writings of William McKinley in which the martyred President uses these prophetic words: "Liberty to make our own laws does not give us license to break them. Liberty is responsibility, and responsibility is duty; and that duty is to preserve the exceptional liberty we enjoy within the law and for the law and by the law."

Those words might well have been written for these days of lawlessness. They are true, however, for all times and all persons. The psalmist knew himself to be at liberty only when he was obedient to God's laws. The Christian knows that only Christ's truth, and the observance of it, can make him free. No more arrant nonsense is talked today than the ceaseless chatter about a "personal liberty" which means only personal license to get drunk and make others drunk. No one is free to do wrong; every one is free to do the right.

Prayer.—Make us free, O Christ, with Thy great enfranchisement. May we seek no other liberty than freedom to follow Thee. In Thy name. Amen.

SATURDAY.

PROVE GOD.

"Prove me now herewith."—Mal. 3:7-12.

Malachi was writing about God's requirement of tithe-paying. He reports God as bidding His people put Him to the test. Let them put generous giving to God's causes to the proof, and see if He will not abundantly reward them.

The good old fashion of setting aside for religious uses one-tenth of our incomes is well worth testing. As a Lutheran clergyman says, "God can always make nine-tenths go farther than man can make ten-tenths." Give Him the tenth, and what remains will prove more than you had before.

I have read many hundreds of letters giving private and unsolicited testimony to the delightfulness of the plan, and of all the thousands who, within my own knowledge, have tried it, I do not know of one who has gone back to the old way of haphazard, unbusiness-like, and stressful giving.

Prayer.—Our Father in heaven, who givest us all things richly to enjoy, may we be as liberal toward Thee as Thou art toward us. May we put Thee to the test Thou dost offer. We accept Thy challenge. We know Thou wilt not fail of the proof. Amen.

SUNDAY.

THE LONG LEASE.

"Woman, why weepest thou?"—John 20: 11-18.

All the accounts of the first Easter Sunday—just nineteen centuries ago—are lovely, but the most beautiful of all is John's story of Christ's appearance to Mary Magdalene. "Woman, why weepest thou?" the angels had asked; and she soon discovered that she had indeed no reason for weeping, but for joy instead.

Dr. Jowett once illuminated our thoughts of death by speaking of the lease of a dwelling-house. If we have a short lease, we are likely to become careless about the condition of the house; but if we have a long lease we make needed repairs, we add to the house, we look to its future.

Christ's resurrection gives us a long lease of life, yes, a perpetual lease. This perpetual lease rids us of sorrow, for it sets before us ample time for recovery from grief and entrance into all joy. What if some rooms are empty now? They will be gloriously filled. This perpetual lease bids us make all repairs, get rid of sin and doubt and failure, keep the house of our soul in beautiful order. What is there that we may not do in this house of the soul in which we are to abide forever?

Prayer.—O risen Lord, our Saviour from death and the fear of death, why do we ever weep? Why go we mourning as those who are to be evicted from life? It is Thy life in which we live, Thy endless and victorious life. We rejoice in it and in Thee. Amen.

REV. JOSEPH W. FIX, Preacher.

THE TEN LEPERS.

By REV. JOS. W. FIX, B. D.

"Where are the nine?"—Luke 17:17.

One of the most dreadful diseases ever known to medical science is Leprosy. It being such a deep-seated malady makes it very difficult to study and to cure. Leprosy begins with bright red spots upon the surface of the skin and spreads rapidly. As it moves over the body, it turns the flesh white, and soon the flesh is decayed, even to the bone. Throughout the Old Testament, and even in the New, the leper was called "unclean"; and when a stranger approached the place where he abode, he was required to give a warning signal by crying aloud, "Unclean, unclean!"

Lepers were set off from the rest of society, from the synagogue and worship and attendance upon all public gatherings. Be it further remembered that the disease of leprosy was regarded by the Jews as a sign that the victim was sinful, and the affliction brought upon him was one of the penalties due him. Now if it be true that they looked upon the leper as a man in sin, then it is most logical to believe that since Jesus came to "heal the sick and cleanse the leper," He would not disregard such men and women thus afflicted with this dreadful disease.

"And it came to pass when the time was come that he should be received up, he steadfastly set his face toward Jerusalem, and sent messengers before him, and they entered into a village of the Samaritans, to make ready for him."—Luke 9:51-52.

Now Jesus said, "I must needs go through Samaria,"—John 4:4, and as he journeyed, he entered into a certain Samaritan village and "there met him ten men that were lepers, which stood afar off; and they lifted up their voices and said, Jesus, Master, have mercy on us."—Luke 17:11-13. Now Jesus came to save the lost. His meat and drink was to help suffering humanity and thus fulfill the law and will of God. "For the Son of Man came not to destroy men's lives, but to save them."—Luke 9:56.

And even though Jesus was weary from his long journey, he never hesitated, but immediately sought to minister unto the unfortunate lepers of the Samaritan village. And Jesus said unto them, "Go show yourselves unto the priest." Now according to the laws of the Levites, a leper should be brought before Aaron, the priest, or one of his sons, in the day of cleansing. (Lev. 14:2.) And since Jesus came to fulfill the law, he hesitated not to obey it even as did the early prophets. "Go show yourselves unto the priest."

And as they went, they became clean. Their leprosy departed. A miracle happened. Of a sudden they became conscious that they were no longer the outcasts of a few moments ago. They knew for a certainty that the leprosy had left them. They could say as one who was caused to see after years of blindness, "Whereas I was blind, now I can see." Indeed, the healing powers of Jesus are supreme. He is all He claimed to be—a Great Physician—"a friend that sticketh closer than a brother."—Prov. 18:24. Truly he "went about healing all manner of disease and sickness among the people."—Matt. 4:23.

I.—The Gratitude of the One.

"And one of them when he was healed, turned back and with a loud voice glorified God and fell on his face and gave thanks to God." Now this man was a Samaritan, and as a rule the Samaritans and Jews did not mix, yet here was one of an outcast race, who turns to a Jew to give thanks. In like manner, here was a Jew who wrought healing both on Jews and on Samaritan. Of the ten lepers cured, we find that only the Samaritan showed sufficient gratitude to come back to Him who had blessed him and unto Him, give thanks. And this was the only man of the ten who did return to express his gratitude to Him who wrought the cure, yet the others were equally benefitted and blessed. But this Samaritan gave thanks. He came back—for his first thought was on Jesus, and His promise, which had now been fulfilled. He exclaimed with a loud voice his praise. God wants us to shout, He wants us to sing, He implores us to make a joyful noise in testimony of His goodness. He has no other voice but our voice to witness His mighty works. And this man fell upon his face in humbleness. He must have felt very meager in the presence of Him who was almighty. But he came to Him and made it known that he was grateful for the blessings that had made him a new man and a clean man.

And while Jesus rejoiced with Him in his joy, there was a note of sorrow in His voice. Something was lacking, someone was not there who should have been present. Who was it? It was the other man who had been blessed, yea the nine. And Jesus asked the one who had returned concerning the ungrateful Jews. Here is what He said, "Were there not ten cleansed? but where are the nine?"—Luke 17:17. The words of this text exhort us to stop and consider the tragedy of ingratitude.

II.—The Ingratitude of the Nine.

"Where are the nine?" These words asked Jesus out of a heart filled with love, even for those who had forsaken Him. Nevertheless, He was just as interested in the nine as He was in the one. All men are precious in His sight. His benefits are designed to help and bless all. His blood was shed from Calvary for the remission of the sins of the whole world. He makes His sun to shine on the unjust as well as on the just. But why don't they come to Him and give expression or recognition for blessings received.

In answer to the Master's question, the Samaritan might have endeavored to explain that the nine men took for granted that Jesus would know that they were appreciative of His blessing. Many of us do that even today. But not so, Jesus wants the flock of His pasture to come unto Him and, as the Samaritan, bow down before Him and give thanks.

He might have answered that the nine were so anxious to get home to their families that they forgot to give thanks. They were intensely interested in continuing on to the priest, there to be released from the leper colony. They went to the man rather than to God. These nine were like those mentioned in Luke 14, who when given the privilege of participating in a great feast, made excuses, saying, "I have married a wife and cannot come," or I have a yoke of oxen I must try, or I must go and bury the dead. These and numerous other excuses of like nature fall from the lips of those who do not take the time to come and give thanks for blessings received from the Creator and revealed by the Son of Man.

"Where are the nine?" Some of them say that there is no need to recognize God or any form of organized Christianity. They contend that they can get along satisfactorily without His help. To that end they remain good men, they continue to live moral lives, and in their dealings with their fellow men they are honest; but the tragedy of their neglect of God and His Church remains unexplained. They are the benefactors of the good influence of the church in their communities and in the world. They are blessed by the (Continued on page 14.)

Christian Orphanage

Dear Friends:

It is sometimes the case that people do not understand. If some visitor was looking over our buildings at the Christian Orphanage and was shown in the packing room and saw fifty or seventy-five dresses for the girls hanging there, all arranged by ages, probably they would think that we would not need any dresses for a long time to come. We had a new matron one time who had been on the job a few days only, and the work was new to her and a few dresses looked big in her eyes too. A lady, with some of her friends, from a distant city, came to visit the orphanage one day, and the new matron showed them over the building, and when they were ready to go, they asked what was needed. She said, "Send us anything but dresses, we have so many dresses we don't know what to do with them." She had not been on the job long enough to know what was needed. A few dresses ahead excited her, and the ladies did not send us any dresses. It was many months before we happened to find out about this conversation that caused these good women to stop sending dresses. At that time we probably had seventy-five or one hundred dresses in the dress cabinet, but what of that? We had fifty-five girls to wear them, and that was not two dresses for each girl.

We are always in need in this work. Fifty-five girls to wear dresses—it takes dresses! We try to teach cleanliness, and as we have our own water supply, we teach the girls to wear clean dresses and look tidy. The dresses are usually made of washable material, and with careful washing they do not fade. We never get too many dresses, and always have some child they will fit. A young lady who has been teaching for several years, came to see us some weeks ago and brought us sixteen nice second hand dresses. They were in excellent condition, and pretty, and by making some alterations, they will fit our girls and the dresses will look as good as new. Sheets are another need. Sheets, with constant use, will wear out. They are used all the time. Sheets for one hundred and five children are a quick item with us. We never get too many dresses or sheets.

Church and her promotion of everything that goes to make for a righteous world. These men, represented by the nine, enjoy the blessings of hospitals, schools, child labor laws, prohibition, the universal spirit of brotherhood, and all the social welfares, but seldom do they stop to consider that the Church and her influence stands largely responsible for these. Where are the nine? Why do they not come and worship me?

Indeed, He seems more concerned about the nine than about the one who came back? Yet, remember, he said, "Those who are well need not a physician, but those who are sick." He came to seek the lost, and "He spake a parable, saying, What man of you having a hundred sheep, if he lose one of them, doth not leave the ninety and nine and go after the lost until he find it."

In closing, let us be aware of the fact that the mission of the Church is to go out in search of the lost. We, as members of this Divine Institution, are to follow our Great Shepherd and seek the lost. We are to find the nine. We are to tell them of what Jesus offers and what He expects of them. Instead of condemning them for not coming to Him, as did the Samaritan, we are to entreat them to come in, even as did the father who, when the prodigal son returned, went out and entreated his elder son to come in.

We are to remind those who have neglected Him, that a man or a woman would not go away from the host and not give thanks for the dinner or the social event of the evening; neither should we be guilty of neglecting Him. Rather, in the words of Paul to the Ephesians, let us exhort men to "give thanks to God in all things," and with the Psalmist to "forget not all His benefits."

A minister friend of mine was walking home one night from church with his little daughter. As they journeyed along in silence, the little girl said, "Daddy, I'm going to count the stars," and he listened to her as she counted, "210, 211, 212," and on and on. Finally she exclaimed, "Oh, Daddy, I didn't know there were so many of them till I started to count them." Sometimes, when I am discouraged, I say, as did my friend's little girl, "God, I'm going to count Thy blessings," and I soon discover that they are so numerous I cannot count them. Then I say, "Bless the Lord, Oh, my soul, and forget not all his benefits; who forgiveth all thine iniquities; who healeth all thy diseases; who redeemeth thy life from destruction; who crowneth thee with loving kindness and tender mercies; who satisfieth thy mouth with good things." And then I sing in the midst of the nine who have forgotten to give an account unto Him of His blessings:

"Count your many blessings,
Name them one by one;
Count your many blessings,
See what God hath done."

The JEWEL is the latest and most attractive Pocket Testament made.

The TYPE is black, bold and larger than that in the famous Vest Pocket edition, and the book itself is smaller. It is printed exclusively on the famous Holman India paper, noted for its opaque quality and unusual tensile strength. One advantage of this India paper is that the leaves do not cling together.

The size, 2½x4½ inches, is so small that the book practically fits the palm of the hand.

EDUCATIONAL DIVIDENDS.

increase in the earning power or the accumulated wealth of the people which may in a way be considered dividends on the investment that the State has made in the last twenty-five years. Of course, the war made the United States much wealthier than it was before, but even the war cannot explain all of the wealth that the country has acquired. Why is it that Massachusetts, with a scarcity of natural resources, has the highest per capita wealth in the nation. Education is the explanation. Now, America's ability to educate all of the children is being questioned; men of the older school of thought believe that to do this will bankrupt the nation, but we believe that education is democracy's surest means of survival. Education is our only salvation and is all that will save us from political evils and preserve for us the land of the free with the government by the people, for the people and of the people.

Ignorance breeds crime, poverty and disease. Crime takes its toll in life and property. Poverty must be fed by society. Disease saps the health of the individual and robs the State of wealth. Education produces wealth, advances civilization and creates happiness. Sam Houston said, "The benefits of education and of useful knowledge generally diffused through a community, are essential to the preservation of a free government." If the schools do not furnish this education that he is speaking of, there will be crime, poverty and disease; but if we can carry on the work so well begun, we can do away with these three menaces to human welfare. We can give the education that will train both the intellect and the moral nature of the individual. Thus the schools face the task, in spite of criticisms, of making the future of this nation. They will advance civilization, they will preserve the free government, they will stand as the nation's bulwark against political demagoguery, if the nation will continue to lend her undivided support, but if she does not, she will be signing her political death warrant. Thomas Jefferson, the greatest exponent of democracy who ever lived, said, "There can be no real democracy without an enlightened citizenry."

The general public does not realize that much of the increased cost of education is the direct result of the demand of the public, that the schools perform many functions and carry on many activities that twenty-five years ago were unheard of. Many of these new duties are the result of the failure of the home and the church to give the children of today the training they did years ago. The home and the church are not entirely responsible for their failure. It is a result of the organization of society of the twentieth century. One cause for the slackening of the home training is the many outside attractions and distractions—the same may be said of the church. In the vast majority of churches the work of religious education is still in the hands of the volunteers, whose conscience forces them to try to perform duties that they are neither fitted nor trained for. The schools have taken up a new kind of education—character education—ethical education—some of you may even say religious education—whatever and however it is to be called, it is something new in the field of secondary education and it is gaining a great deal of head way. This has been discussed for years, but it is just beginning to mean something for the average teacher and the average school in the South. I recently heard a high school senior make this statement in a mantle oration: "One of the traditions of this school is good sportsmanship, which is the ability to recognize and allow to prevail the rights of others. Sportsmanship is a word peculiar to the Anglo-Saxon language. No other nation has it in its vocabulary. We, the Senior class, believe in good sportsmanship and when we leave these hallowed walls we expect to carry this idea of fair play into the business world and into the political arena." If you analyze this statement you will find that it carries a wealth of meaning for the educator. This boy at once had caught the spirit of democracy and of the Golden Rule. We can't measure this spirit in dollars and cents but we do realize it in stability of government and business integrity. Where did this boy learn this?—in school. The boy who made the statement was an indifferent student, requiring extra tutoring to pass French. He did love history and read widely in that subject. He always played on the football team and had a chance in other student activities to develop his qualities of leadership. Under less favorable conditions this boy could have been made either a gangster or a bootleg king. It is hard for us to show this to the taxpayer. The surgeon can show you his patient's scar, but the teacher is not so fortunate.

ELON COLLEGE

AN ACCREDITED COLLEGE

of the

CONGREGATIONAL CHRISTIAN CHURCHES OF THE SOUTHEAST

ELON was founded to train Christian leaders for the New South.

ELON has done its task well—one graduate in seven being in the Christian ministry. The other six express Christian leadership in the various professions and vocations. Experience teaches that spiritual leadership must be indigenous.

The South is now a New South ready for an inclusive Church, the type of Church for which Elon has stood for forty years and for which she is prepared to produce capable leadership.

With no Church in the community, save the College Auditorium, ELON has practiced Christian Union for faculty, students, and community for four decades.

Its contribution to Christian Education is nationally known and approved.

Its Christian Education Building, providing laboratory facilities for religious leadership training, is unique and is the first college building of its type in the world.

ELON confines itself to undergraduate liberal arts work with that religious emphasis which befits the Christian College.

In ELON the Congregational-Christian Church has an asset of marvelous hopefulness.

The South needs her Yale, her Oberlin, her Carleton, her Pomona for the intellectual leadership of the United Church. Many regard ELON as strategically located and spiritually endowed to become such a center of illumination and leadership training.

MARRIAGES

HOOVER—SEABRIGHT.

First Christian Church, Winchester, Va., was the scene of a pretty wedding on May 20th, when Miss Anna Amelia Seabright became the wife of Mr. Orville Leonard Hoover. Mrs. Hoover is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. H. W. Seabright. From early childhood she has been an active worker in the church, holding a number of important positions, and filling them well. Mr. Hoover, the son of Mr. and Mrs. T. E. Hoover, since coming to the city several years ago, has been actively identified with the church, being at present assistant superintendent of the Sunday school, and teacher of a class of boys.

The numerous "showers" given them prior to the wedding give evidence of the esteem in which they are held by our own people and the numerous friends besides. The writer joins the many friends in wishing for them the Father's blessing through a long and happy life.

Funeral services were conducted by the writer at the graveside in Union Christian Church cemetery. The floral offering was beautiful. R. H. COBLE.

HOLMES.

Mrs. Louisa, the widow of the late C. F. Holmes, died on May 24, 1931. Mrs. Holmes was one of our most faithful and devoted members of Pope's Chapel Christian Church. It was on the fourth Sunday morning while preparing to go to the memorial services that her spirit went back to God who gave it. She was seventy-three years of age. She is survived by the children, C. C., Hubert, Miss Corinna, and Mrs. Thorn Strother; three sisters, Miss Emma Jones, Mrs. A. M. House and Mrs. Corinna Ray; and one brother, W. J. Jones.

The funeral services were conducted at Pope's Chapel, Monday afternoon, May 25th, by the writer assisted by Rev. Gillespie of the Baptist Church, Creedmore, and interment was made in the cemetery by the side of her husband. May the spirit of God comfort the bereaved ones. E. M. CARTER.

Mrs. Annie Rogers Poythress, wife of A. H. Poythress, formerly of this country, died in Delhi, Ontario, Canada, on May 23, 1931, aged 32 years, 7 months and 6 days.

She leaves to mourn their loss a fond husband; two children, Jennie, aged 10, and Ralph, aged 8; a loving mother and father, one sister, Mrs. Ella Hickson, three brothers, Tom, Gennie and Joe Rogers, and a host of friends. May God's comforting spirit solace the hearts of the bereaved and sanctify this affliction to their eternal good.

Mrs. Poythress was laid to rest in the family cemetery beneath flowers of love and amid hearts that wept but souls that hoped. The funeral services were conducted by Rev. C. L. Spencer, pastor of Union Chapel Methodist Church of which she had been a member for nearly 20 years.

Mrs. Poythress was a good woman, and was loved by all who knew her. No one loved her better than the writer, but we bow in submission to His will, realizing that our loss is her eternal gain.

MILLIONS IN SCHOOL.—

The latest review of the Office of Education, a bureau of the United States government, shows 28,104,000 students in elementary schools and high schools. This represents one-fourth of the country's population. Elementary schools had 21,370,000 pupils. More than 4,000,000 were students in public high schools. Private and parochial institutions reported 2,704,000 pupils.

WOMEN'S PEACE UNION.—

Looking forward to the disarmament conference to be held in Geneva next October, the radical Women's Peace Union is urging the slogan, "Total disarmament now." It is planned to have a conspicuous headquarters in Geneva with this slogan displayed night and day, from August 1st, on through the conference. They invite all pacifists throughout the world to meet this demand of the coming conference. Such a movement will stimulate thought to the consideration of the paganism of war and will tend toward perpetual peace.

RELIGIOUS TEACHING IN CITY SCHOOLS.—

Bible courses with credit are to be offered in two of the city schools of New York, beginning this fall. This marks the successful outcome of a long fight which has been waged by the Greater New York Inter-faith Committee, a committee made up of clergy and laity of the Catholic, Protestant and Jewish faiths. The classes will meet after regular school hours and will be financed by the organization mentioned above. The board of education also approved recently the introduction of military training in one of the city schools. We hope that the authorities are not thinking of these two measures as two ways of reaching the same end. They are contradictory tendencies.

CHURCH UNITY GAINS.—

One issue before the seventy-third assembly of the United Presbyterian Church, held in Youngstown, Ohio, May 27th to June 2nd, was church unity. After heated discussion, led by a small group, the report of the committee on union was adopted by an overwhelming vote. The decision carried with it the direction of the committee to prepare a basis of organic union, complete in all its details, to be submitted to the next assembly, provided such action is taken by one of the other members of the Presbyterian family. The recent assembly criticised the Federal Council for its recent pronouncements on birth control, and their financial support of the council was cut to one-third.

SPAIN AND CATHOLICISM.—

A news dispatch reported in The Monitor says of the recent political upheavals in Spain: "The decree separating Church and State in Spain affects 66 cathedrals, 20,250 parishes, 17,186 chapels and sanctuaries, 12,000 monks, and 53,000 nuns.

The nation hitherto expended nearly £3,000,000 annually in support of the Catholic Church clergy, and buildings. Catholicism has been the State religion for five centuries, the king being styled "the eldest son of the Holy Roman Church."

"Spanish priests even are more influential than the Irish. Nearly 10,000 are engaged in teaching the upper class and middle class youth."

WAR DEBT LIFTED.—

It is said that if effective steps are taken to lift the load represented by the $5,000,000,000 spent annually for armament, from the backs of the people of the world, then the United States should be prepared to discuss further readjustments of reparations and debts. "The ultimate plan," said Mr. Levinson, "should provide for a reasonable but adequate bond issue by Germany, from the proceeds of which the United States government should receive a fair cash settlement of all its claims, and thus all allied and interallied debts would be eliminated." Mr. Levinson has been awarded the Rosenberger prize for 1931 by the University of Chicago, in recognition of his "important contribution to the improvement of international relations."

MISSIONARY FOUNDED MANY LIBRARIES.—

Miss Mary Elizabeth Wood, at the ripe age of 70, recently died at Hankow, China. She had been a missionary in China 31 years. She is best known for her successful efforts in the establishing of public and private libraries in China. She founded, and was at the head of, Boone library and the library school of Central China College. Miss Wood went to Washington in 1926 and personally interviewed every member of the senate and house of representatives in a successful campaign to have a certain portion of the American Boxer Indemnity funds allocated for the establishment and maintenance of libraries in China. This was a great and benevolent work that will have far-reaching influence in creating the best spiritual attitude for the American missionary.

INTERDENOMINATIONAL STUDENT ISSUE.—

A new alignment of Christian workers has appeared for work among the more than 100,000 university students in the city of Tokyo, Japan. It is genuinely surprising to learn that there are 22 institutions of university grade in this metropolitan center, and as many or more colleges and academies. The churches realize today that if communism and materialism are to be successfully combated at all, it must be by a spiritual power with a social emphasis. It is this gospel of Christian socialism which those working with students are seeking to interpret to them. The new committee on student work is made up of both Japanese and missionaries, and embraces Methodists, Episcopalians, Presbyterians, Congregationalists and Baptists. A united program of worship, social service, and forum activities has been planned, together with the production of a type of Christian literature suitable for student use.

MACINTOSH DECISION.—

Dr. Graham Taylor, a regular contributor to the Chicago Daily News, in a recent contribution discusses the Macintosh decision. He cites opinions collected from 19,427 clergymen, in which 12,076 held that the churches should go on record as refusing to sanction or support any future war, 10,427 of them further stating their present purpose not to participate as armed combatants in any future war, as proof of the Supreme Court's minority opinion that "the reservation of that supreme obligation—the obligation of the individual to obey the dictates of conscience—as a matter of principle, would unquestionably be made by many of our conscientious and lawabiding citizens." Dr. Taylor indicates that his purpose in discussing the decision is "to raise the question whether congress should recognize the will to peace to be gaining on the will to war, as a means of national defense, and whether conscientious objectors should not be specifically exempted from bearing arms."

DR. MYERS AND CHILDREN.—

For thirty years, during the summer, Dr. Johnston Myers, of Chicago, has been sending great bus-loads of children, who would have no other vacation, to the parks every day except Saturday and Sunday, in charge of kind, competent caretakers. They are given plenty of milk and sandwiches, and their play is supervised. In all the years there has not been one child lost or injured. Chicago's parks are lovely, and to be taken to these parks daily all summer is much better, surely than a week in the country. Such humanitarianism towards the children of the great cities would render many a child happy and contribute to his health and possibly save the lives of many. The spirit of Jesus Christ has always been for the well-being of childhood, whether it came through the regular channels of the Church or not. Such a splendid spirit should inspire other wealthy people to show kindness toward the childhood of America. Send something to the Orphanage and make these children happy, and you will realize the meaning of the words of Christ when he said, "It is more blessed to give than to receive."

NOTES-PERSONALS

Rev. J. L. Wise, pastor, writes: "We closed our revival meeting at Pleasant Ridge Church June 7th. Rev. L. A. Wall assisted in the meetings in which the Church was much revived and sixteen souls were saved."

We have just learned with regret that Dr. C. H. Rowland, First Church, Greensboro, has been ordered by his physician to hold up for a time and seek relaxation, rest and recuperation. He is to leave shortly to try to find somewhere rest and a real vacation.

Rev. W. W. Staley, D. D., Suffolk, Va., Dr. L. E. Smith, Norfolk, Va., Rev. F. C. Lester and Miss Jewel Truitt, Waverly, Va., Dr. and Mrs. W. A. Harper, Elon College, N. C., are of those from the south in attendance at the Seattle Convention. Report is that others also of our number are in attendance, but of this we are not authentically advised. A great Convention is in progress.

The past week the Presbyterians of Orange Presbytery have been the welcome guests of Elon College, holding their annual summer "School of Religion" here. Some 50 young people and many able teachers and preachers have been in attendance. We trust our good Presbyterian friends have been as happy in the buildings and on the campus as we of the college and community have been to have them.

A good brother layman, sending a new subscriber to the CHRISTIAN SUN, from a member of his church, writes: "It was all just easy to secure this new subscriber to THE SUN, and I am quite sure that many others could be gotten as subscribers if we would only put forth a little effort to get them." All of which is true. THE SUN cannot afford to keep an agent in the field because of the cost of travel expense and a rather widely distributed constituency, but if just one person in each church would now and then ask a neighbor or a friend to subscribe, great good would be accomplished and many subscribers would be added to THE SUN's list.

Ex-President Coolidge announced to the world recently that all of us should take a vacation and get away for a season from duties and drudgery of the day. It really seems that if we do not willingly take that advice many are driven to it. Our good Dr. G. O. Lankford, Burlington Church, is arranging, by advice of physician, to get away for a season and regain possession of his strength for the heavy responsibilities that rest upon him as a busy pastor. Very few in the congregation realize the responsibility and anxiety that a faithful pastor carries through the days. And even these pastors do not realize the same till they are forced to it by physicians, diagnosis and advice. Here is hoping that Dr. Lankford, after a brief period away, from the people who love him, will return to them in full strength and prepared in body and mind for his arduous tasks and duties.

The Sunday School Convention of the Western N. C. Conference is scheduled to meet Tuesday, July 14th. Brother Geo. T. Gunter, Asheboro, N. C., is the president. The Eastern N. C. Convention is scheduled to meet on the same day, with sessions to continue through two days, with the Church, Amelia, in Johnston county. Rev. R. Lee House, Duke University, Durham, N. C., is president. Every Sunday School and Christian Endeavor should be represented in its annual Convention, and certainly misses that which it needs unless it is represented. Best methods are discussed in these Conventions and many very needy and valuable suggestions are given. No Sunday school should be left out of its Convention. The Eastern Virginia Convention is to meet at Oakland Church, Nansemond county, Va., Tuesday and Wednesday, July 21 and 22. Mr. Jesse F. West, president, Waverly, Va.

WE SHALL NOT QUIT!

When we saw the heading of the article written by our Missionary Secretary entitled "Shall We Quit", every nerve in our body tingled for expression. In every branch of Christian work there are always some who are ready to say "We might as well quit" whenever discouragements or disappointments come.

Oh, you who have enlisted in this warfare against sin under the leadership of the One who paid the supreme sacrifice that He might lead you on to certain victory how dare you say, "Let's Quit." You who, for the sake of country, would rise up in your mighty and go out to battle with no thought of self; how can you, when Christ calls for the sake of His Kingdom which shall have no end, ever to say "Let's quit." You who, for the sake of a down trodden people, would cross the ocean to lift the yoke of oppression, can you stand back when the cause of Missions calls for volunteer offerings in a crisis? The brave war nurse, Edith Cavel, who said just before she gave her life for her country, "Patriotism is not enough," knew that there is a higher devotion. No, patriotism is not enough; there must be devotion to God which shows forth in the love to our fellow men, in the sacrifice of all that we have life and are that His Kingdom may be extended to the uttermost parts of the earth. That men may know that the Christ who died on Calvary died that all might have life and have it more abundantly. Our Lord shed His blood, Missionaries have shed their blood that the Missionary work might be established. Shall we hold back refusing to do our part, not willing to sacrifice a little time and effort or do without a few luxuries that the gospel of Jesus Christ may be sent to those who know Him not? Shall we sit in our easy chairs around our comfortable firesides and read, with tears in our eyes, of the heroism of those who crossed the seas and desert sands to preach the gospel of Jesus Christ to those who are more down trodden and oppressed under the thralldom of heathenism than ever any people have been under a despot's rule? Shall we quit? No! We have enlisted in this holy war and we will not quit until He has put His enemies under His feet. Rise, Christian warriors, admit no defeat but go ever onward in the Missionary work at home and abroad, spreading the gospel of peace knowing that there is no defeat with Christ as leader. The torch has been given you to hold by former generations, hold it high and keep it glowing that when you can no longer hold it the coming generation will not grasp a smoldering ember but a glowing torch. W.

TO OUR MINISTERS—A PLEA!

Dear Brethren:

I am writing to request that you help us give publicity to the fact that the work of the college is going right ahead, and that there will be no let-up in any plans and arrangements to efficiently care for the instruction and administration of the college for the coming year. Some confusion has resulted in the minds of some members of our constituency due to the fact that no president has yet been elected to succeed Dr. W. A. Harper. The Board of Trustees have set up an organization that will carry on the work of the college until a new president is elected and takes charge. A finance committee of the trustees is at work on the financial matters of the college, and the executive committee is keeping in close touch with the administrative work of the college. Prof. J. W. Barney has been elected as chairman of the faculty and will handle all faculty matters. The campaign for students for next year is going forward under my direction and the supervision of the executive committee, and all matters are being taken care of just as they have in the past.

Dr. Harper's resignation, after serving as president so many years, of course, necessitated many re-adjustments, and we are asking every friend of the college to help make it clear, by public utterance and in any other way possible, that the work of the college will go right on in spite of the fact that no president has been elected as yet.

Applications from new students are coming in as well as could be expected, and the majority of last year's student body will return and continue their work. However, we will need the support of every friend of the college, and anything you can do to set our people straight, or to help us secure new students, will be highly appreciated. Send me the names and addresses of any prospective students in your community, and we will assist you in every way we can to sign them up for our college.

Thanking you for your co-operation,

Yours sincerely,

C. M. CANNON,
Registrar.

A RUN ON THE BANK.

We have read of a bank in Brooklyn that withstood a two-day run on its reserves amounting to two millions of dollars that grew out of a false report that it was unsound. A man who tried to secure a loan amounting to sixteen thousand dollars on a ten thousand dollar investment became angry, and started the report to get even. When the true state of affairs was learned and investors had returned their deposits it is said the loss of interest amounted to more than twenty thousand dollars.

We desire to see the banking system of the country sound and doing a fair business, of course, but we are even more concerned over the welfare of God's cause and the spiritual life of the Church. These tongues of ours! What a fire they can kindle in a short time, so Saint James tells in those solemn words: "The tongue is a fire . . . it defileth the whole body and setteth on fire the cause of nature; and it is set on fire of hell." A good cause is never made better by vicious language, by any kind of evil-speaking in fact, and a bad cause is made worse by it. We shall please the heavenly Father much better if we learn to bridle our tongues and establish a good reputation for fair and truthful and kind speech.—Wesleyan Methodist.

NOTICE.

The Eastern North Carolina Sunday School and Christian Endeavor Convention will convene July 14th and 15th, with the Amelia Christian Church, near Clayton, N. C. Report blanks have been sent out to each Sunday School and C. E. Society, and we are asking that the reports be filled out and mailed to the secretary immediately. The president hopes to make the 1931 session the best yet held, and in order to do this, he must have the co-operation of every school and society. All ministers are urged to be present at this convention. The convention needs their presence and inspiration to make it a success. Meet at Amelia with a good report from your church on July 14th.

MRS. R. J. NEWTON,
Secretary.

CONGREGATIONAL NEWS

REV. E. C. GILLETTE, Editor; REV. F. P. ENSMINGER, and REV. M. J. SWEET, Associates.

AT ASHEVILLE, Mr. Kendrick Grobel is on the job. Here he will remain till about July 15th, when he is billed to go to Blue Ridge M. E. M. Conference, July 29th to August 7th.

THE WORK AT COLUMBIA, S. C. is going on splendidly this summer. Mr. J. Howard Smith is scheduled to go there immediately following the Blue Ridge Conference, for the rest of August.

D. W. SHEPHERD is hard at work at Whitehall Church, Waycross, Ga. His present task is "the Sunday School," and well it may always be. He is also to make a general survey of the whole community.

SALISBURY UNITED, Rev. W. T. Scott, pastor, sent three young people to Elon College Young People's Conference, and sent eight to the Christian Endeavor Convention June 26th. This church also expects Miss Josephine Valjato about July 13th, to aid in conducting a Vacation Bible School. Their Sunday picnic, held at a near-by lake, was a real success.

UNION AT LAGRANGE ASSURED. The First Christian and the First Congregational Churches there have each definitely and unanimously voted to make another United Congregational Church, by uniting. Now they are engaged in preparing a constitution and by-laws for their guidance in business, and before long good news of far reaching interest will come from LaGrange.

J. HOWARD SMITH in association with Miss Priscilla Chase and others, has been doing fine work at Raleigh, Caroleigh and Chapel Hill. "Interest increased daily" he says. That is exactly what we expected—all along the line. In one or two places where better things might be expected, there was not so much interest taken by the parents as might be expected. However, this is summer time and it is not always easy to respond to our higher calling with enthusiasm. Mr. Smith will begin work in Salisbury about July 6th.

S. S. S. NEWS is interesting: Here are bits from the Carolinas and Georgia: Theron A. Zimmerman of Ohio is doing a strong piece of constructive advance movements at Union Tabernacle Church, Atlanta. He has opened a Teachers Training Class made up mostly of young people. Seventeen were present the first night. He works in close contact with the pastor, Rev. W. B. Graham and the large Chorus Choir of the church.

Floyd Price, recently ordained at Vanderbilt, is fitting in to the situation splendidly at Friendship Church, Baxley. He reports having found a fine spirit of hospitality and cooperation. He is doing much calling and some preaching.

FORT MYERS, FLORIDA. The Community Congregational Church, the Rev. O. T. Anderson, pastor, has let the contract for the erection of the first unit of a new church, the part now erected to be used as an educational building after the second unit is built at a later date. The building is to be constructed of hollow tile and will be of Spanish architecture. The church has recently purchased four lots in Edison Park, having a frontage of three hundred and ninety feet on a beautiful circle in front of the Edison and Ford homes. Mrs. Thomas A. Edison is a regular attendant during the six months of the year she and Mr. Edison live in Fort Myers.

VACATION BIBLE SCHOOLS have been held in Bon Air and Browntown, Tennessee. To date there has been an attendance of about 150 boys and girls in these schools, and it is necessary to conduct four schools at the same time in different places, in order to get them in before the district schools begin again. A training conference held earlier in the spring helped prepare many of the leaders for this kind of work. Three able and experienced leaders made that training possible, Mrs. Floyd Zimmerman, Miss Clara Brown and Miss Marguerite Davison. Rev. E. E. White, pastor of Pleasant Hill Church, is responsible for this good work.

TRI-STATE ASSOCIATION.

On June 16th, a group of Christian and Congregational church members met in Ashland, Ky., and formed the Tri-State Congregational-Christian Fellowship Association. The purpose of this organization is to promote church union and fellowship in general, and especially to promote the union of the Congregational and Christian forces in Kentucky and the adjoining states. The headquarters for this organization are Ashland, Kentucky. Address: David B. Harrell, 816 17 Street.

The following temporary officers were elected: Rev. U. E. Robinson, Chairman, Ashland, Ky., Route 1; David D Harrell, Secretary.

COMMENCEMENT AT PIEDMONT COLLEGE.

From its beginning on Friday evening, May 29th, to the close of the recessional on Tuesday noon, the thirty-fourth commencement at Piedmont was a happy and festive time.

The weather was propitious and through all the days, the visitors were greeted by the brilliant sunshine and gentle breezes of northeast Georgia at its best.

On Friday evening was held the reception and exhibition of the Home Economics Department in the Home Economics rooms. Here the culinary art found expression in appetizing breads, cakes and pies; while the sewing classes were represented by suits, dresses, pajamas and negligees. Woven rugs were on exhibition, and examples of basketry, the latter being of especial interest because the basket work is made of the wild honeysuckle, which grows in abundance in the vicinity of the college. Piedmont is particularly fortunate in having at the head of its department of Home Economics a woman who gives the subject a practical interpretation.

Saturday was Alumni Day, with the Alumni dinner at one o'clock, followed by an unusually interesting program of after-dinner speeches which revealed a steadily increasing enthusiasm for their Alma Mater on the part of the members of the association. This enthusiasm found practical expression at the business meeting in the late afternoon, when the association voted to assume a definite part in the financing of the college debt.

In the evening the music department presented some of its students in a most enjoyable concert.

At the Baccalaureate service on Sunday, the academic procession was used. Dr. Henry C. Newell, the president of the college, preached the sermon, using for his subject, "Nehushtan."

On Sunday evening a most beautiful sacred concert was given by the Glee Club.

A significant feature was the dramatic entertainment on Monday, at which three one-act plays were presented, which had been written by two students and the professor of the class in play-writing.

On commencement day the academic procession was again used. The Commencement address was delivered by the Rev. Harry Thomas Stock, of Boston, his topic being "The Educated Adult." The subject was a particularly happy one for an audience of both young people and adults, and its manner of presentation made an appeal to both.

Degrees were conferred on twenty-seven seniors, while twenty-six will receive degrees in August, after completion of summer-school work. Summer school plays an important part at Piedmont in aiding students to complete their course in a shorter time than the required four years.

After the conferring of degrees upon the seniors, the honorary degree of Doctor of Divinity was conferred upon Rev. Harry Thomas Stock, the commencement speaker.

Dr. Stock is well known as Secretary of Young People's work of the Congregational Education Society. He is the author of several books on Religious Education, in which field he is a recognized authority.

METHODS CORNER

By REV. ELISHA A. KING, D. D.

Miami Beach, Fla.

It is of very great importance to get our young people to commit themselves to the Christian life. It is probably true that we can bring influence to bear upon youth that will almost compel them to act. For example an evangelist can work up enthusiasm and atmosphere enough to get a whole Sunday School to sign cards of decision. But they do not always express the individual conviction of youth. We have attempted many different methods, but the following is about the best we have ever used.

A minister friend of mine in Washington state originated this card, or at least adapted it to use in his Sunday School. In turn I have adapted it to use in two churches of which I have been pastor. I present it here just as we now use it hoping that it may be used in many churches. You can get it printed at any print shop, and you are at liberty to use it as it is or change it in any way you please.

A Confession of Faith for Young People.

I want to be like Jesus

Advancing in wisdom and in stature and in favor with God and man and I take Him to be my Friend and Savior.

I am sorry for my sins.

I believe that He is able to forgive me and to help me to overcome whenever I am tempted.

I will try to honor my Savior by being ready

To obey my Parents

To speak the truth

To be kind to every one

To be cruel to no creature

To love my Country

And to stand up for the Right

I will try

To be helpful in my home

To be faithful in my school

To be true and pure in all I do.

I will try

To say such words as Jesus would have me say

To read such books as Jesus would have me read

To do such things as Jesus would have me do.

Praying that I may be given strength day by day to keep this pledge of love to Him I have signed it with my own hand.

PRINCIPLES OF THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

(1) The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.

(2) Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.

(3) The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.

(4) Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship and of Church membership.

(5) The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by, all.

THE PURPOSE OF THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

The purpose of this Church is to cultivate a spirit of union among the followers of our Lord Jesus Christ of every persuasion, and to secure, if possible, the associate efforts of all true religious teachers in pointing the wicked to "the Lamb of God who taketh away the sin of the world."

The peculiar doctrines and tenets which have confused and distracted the Christian world are remanded to private judgment, and hence cease to be matters for debate, only in so far as may be necessary to prevent a sectarian influence from entering the Church.

This Church requires no compromise of faith on the part of any child of God in order to communion or fellowship; here, denominational distinctions cease to exist, and Christian love binds the brotherhood together.

The purpose of this Church will be consummated in the conversion of the world and the union of all Christians.

THE CONVENTION AT REIDSVILLE.

President W. B. Truitt of the North Carolina and Virginia Sunday School and Christian Endeavor Convention knows how to put on a program, and has the spirit to sustain interest in the program from start to finish. When he began as president of this body four years ago, it was negligible in attendance and in interest. In four years' time he has unified the various factors constituting the body, and brought together for spiritual counsel and edification, as well as for moral achievement and inspiration, a great and good body of people.

He dreamed, before this convention met, in terms of two hundred delegates, and his dream more than came true, the enrolled delegation going thirty or more beyond that number. First of all, he made the local schools believe they would get something by sending delegates to the convention, and then he proved to those delegates after they got there that all he had promised, and more, was on hand. The spirit of the man molded and made the convention, and everybody was happy and the results were glorious. He has a splendid secretary in the person of Miss Ruth York, who is as interested in her part of the work and program as the president is in his. And Mrs. Floyd Dunn, the treasurer, was as anxious to receive and report the dues and funds coming in as each speaker was that he or she might make a contribution to the sessions.

Rev. J. H. Dollar, the host of the convention, on the part of the entertaining church, not only showed that everybody was welcome by kindly greeting and cordiality, but by his leadership in song made a distinct contribution to the spirit of the occasion.

Prof. S. A. Bennett, of the Chair of Religious Education, Elon College, brought to the convention a mature and invaluable address on "The Sunday School as the Church's School." In this Prof. Bennett tried to show that which Miss Priscilla Chase later declared, that "the Sunday School is nothing more or less than the church at school." The speaker maintained that all Christians at least are learners, or should be, and that the Church itself needed to go to school to learn more of the Book of God, the will and the way of God through studying and teaching. Recently a great preacher said to a certain teacher: "You cannot teach for preaching." And the teacher replied, "No, and you cannot preach for teaching." There is a distinction, and the Church needs to go to school. The Sunday School supplies opportunity for this school-going.

Mrs. Grace Stewart, assistant to the pastor of First Church, Greensboro, made a valuable report on the Children's Division, and demonstrated practically, "The Teaching Materials for Teachers of Children." She brought to the convention much of the material she used in her own department as a teacher, and through this made suggestions that were valuable. She was followed by a very practical and worthwhile address by Miss Priscilla Chase on "The Vacation Church School." Some of the results of these schools were noted, and are quite marvellous, and the speaker showed that there was a real need for such Vacation Church Schools, and that all Sunday Schools could have them if they would. Since such great values grow out of the Church school, it is singular that more schools do not put them on.

Miss Mabel Smith presented the report for the Young People's Division and made valuable suggestions, while Rev. J. L. Neese delivered an inspirational address from the heart, "Forward for the Sake of Youth." Brother Neese contended that the only forward step that youth could take would be that toward Christ, and the way of life that the Christ laid down. All other steps are backward, and if youth would go forward safely and surely, it must go toward the Christ.

The round-table discussion brought out many points of deep interest and practical value.

At night the young people put on a program which THE SUN's editor did not have the privilege of witnessing, but he was advised that it was exceedingly interesting and very valuable to the large audience that attended.

Miss Chase, on the second day of the convention, gave a valuable address on "Worship in the Sunday School," and called upon the delegates and officers present to try in their Sunday Schools, for at least a brief session at each session, to "practice the presence of God." We have too much jazz music in the Sunday School and too many easy and unplanned items and incidents of the school. If we would really worship, we must seek to bring into the worship of the school a sense of the presence of God and a realization that above all else, God is to be honored, while a spirit of reverence and humility is that through which He is to be approached and found.

Mrs. C. H. Rowland made the report on Missions, recommending that every school in the convention take the once-a-month offering for missions, and since the goal of $2,000 was not reached the past year, that all schools seek to increase their offering through the once-a-month. The Mission Secretary made an address at the close of the morning session on "Missions, a Spiritual Task," which task every Sunday School should undertake.

In the afternoon of the final day, the most thrilling and delightful feature of the convention occurred. After Mrs. J. W. Patton had made a report as departmental secretary of the Orphanage, a group of children from the Orphanage put on a most delightful program. The superintendent of the Orphanage stated that all of the Sunday Schools of the convention, save four, were making the once-a-month offering to the Orphanage and that two of these, through their delegates, had promised during the convention to see to it that their schools fall in line, and that he hoped to make the schools in the convention 100 per cent for the Orphanage before the conference year was out.

Dean A. L. Hook, of the Elon College faculty, made a very interesting report on "Elon College," showing something of the number of pupils from the Sunday School Convention, and the number that should be, at Elon College, and made an appeal that the schools be more loyal to the College.

The convention was very practical, and certainly gave to the delegates many points of helpfulness to carry to their schools, and if these suggestions are made and followed, the schools will certainly make progress during the coming year.

Reidsville entertained the convention in splendid fashion, and everybody was delighted with the hospitality, the good fellowship and the fine spirit of the meetings.

Next year the convention is to meet on Thursday after the third Sunday in June, at Union Church, Union Ridge, N. C. Rev. S. A. Bennett was elected corresponding secretary to assist the president in the work of correspondence, program building and keeping the work of the convention before the schools.

THE SEATTLE CONVENTION.

So far (June 27th P. M.) only brief associated press reports have come through from Seattle giving information as to proceedings of the first meeting of the General Convention and the Congregational Council as one assembly. The following of interest was carried by the associated press dailies of June 26th:

"Formal action which merged two major church bodies of the United States, the Congregationalist and the Christian, with a combined membership of more than a million, was taken at a joint convention here (at Seattle) late today.

"A new constitution providing for the union was approved at separate assemblies.

"At the outset the united body will have the Congregational moderator and the Christian president as co-moderator. The majority of the Christian churches involved are located in the states of the Mississippi valley and the southeast. Churchmen said the merger was the largest ever to have taken place between denominations entirely distinct in origin and history. The churches affected total 6,670 in this country, with a communicant membership of 1,050,000 and a constituency, including adherents, of about 3,000,000.

"The foreign missions of the two groups already have been merged under the American board of commissioners for foreign missions. The missions are in 16 foreign countries, where 850 American missionaries and more than 6,000 nationals are employed.

"Those who led the negotiations for the union, said they believed it was the beginning of a new trend in church life and will be followed by other mergers. They expressed hope other denominations will join with them to form a group large enough to warrant the use of the name, the United Church of Christ in America."

However, the reports on the second day stated there had been a hitch in the matter of adopting the name, as to whether it should be "United Church of Christ," or "Congregational-Christian Church." The name will apply immediately, of course, to the national body.

The associated press on the morning of the 27th carried this item:

"The union of the Congregational and Christian denominations, begun yesterday, struck a snag in the selection of a name for the united body. The Christian body was said by delegates to favor the name 'Congregational Christian,' while others said the 'United Church of Christ' had the approval of many in both groups.

"Dr. Fred B. Smith, New York City, ranking Congregational moderator, read a message from President Hoover which said 'the merger of these two important church bodies is an interesting and promising development.'

"Officers of the Christian Church in the United States and Canada announced today that they will not elect a president, who is to be co-executive of the combined group until next fall. Rev. Frank G. Coffin, who now holds that office, is ill at Columbus, Ohio. Rev. Carl H. Patton, Los Angeles, was elected moderator of the Congregational council yesterday, and will serve as co-executive of the merged churches."

Through the years of our existence as a Christian Church, we have pled for church union, and in fact when our church ancestors adopted the name "Christian," it was not their purpose to exclude any, but to include all churches who would come together as a common brotherhood in trying to exalt the name of Christ and to make Him known as the world's only Saviour and Redeemer. From its early history, the Congregational Church has stood on a broad basis of Christian union and pled before the world for a united Christian front against divided Protestantism. If these two churches cannot come together and work together as one, since their origin, polity and purpose are so much akin and so similar in history and achievement, we do not see how there is hope for any others.

THE SONG OF SUMMER.

Summer-time is, indeed, good, and if our ears are open, and our hearts are listening, we can hear its sweet, swelling song. With the beginning of summer, nature brings out all of its stringed and winged instruments and begins to play. Song is not confined to the happy hum of the honey bee, not to the celestial carols of thrush, robin or mocking bird. If one will listen, one can hear the silent song of the rose-bush, as it greets the morning sun with a new-born flower and fragrance; in the rippling of the green and full grown leaves of lawn and woodland, and in the melodious murmur of the rippling brooklet. They tell us that the history of all arts can be traced to earthly origin, save one art, and that is the art of music. Evidently music was born in heaven, and because heaven cannot contain all of the melody, rhythm and rapture of God, the earth takes it up in the overflow and chants it to us even while we walk the happy, or the weary, way of the day's work.

Summer is new yet, but if CHRISTIAN SUN readers have not heard the music of God as it is singing with such marked and marvelous melody in rose-bush, tree-top, throat of bird and hum of bee, they had better stop now and listen, and let the heart drink in the very sweetest sounds that the ear ever catches or the mind ever grasps. The pipe-organ was discovered and made for the eye and hand of a person who had music in his heart, and who, one day seeing a reed broken off the stem, heard the sound of wind as it blew across the broken reed and realized that in this hollow thing that nature had created and by the aid of the air there were possibilities not only of sound but of melody, and sweet music, and the man proved his theory by practice, and from a series of reeds of varying lengths and sizes made the first pipe-organ, one of the outstanding musical instruments of the world. So all musical instruments have been developed from that which nature suggested and supplied, and when the musical voice now is mastered and gives it sweetest melody, we say, "That person sings like a mocking bird."

Nature sings its strength and power, as well as its song and beauty, into the heart and nature of man. This writer was in Chicago, in a great assembly awhile ago addressed by a noted orator, who said: "Somewhere out yonder in the country, far removed from the clash and clatter and clang of this great city, is a farmer lad living close to nature and listening to the voice of God. Nature will sing its songs into the heart of that lad and God will speak to the soul of him, and a few years from now he will be a great man of Chicago, one who will direct its destinies and shape its policies for good and truth and virtue." There is much in what this man was saying. Nature has a message for every boy and girl, every man and woman, who tarry to catch that message and interpret it as it comes.

Summer is singing. Let us not get so busy and absorbed in its material aspects that we cannot turn our listening ear to catch its melody, and an open eye to see its beauty, and a grateful soul to get its song. A long time ago one said, and said truly, "Stand still and know that I am God." Stand still today for a moment and catch the tune of the summer song, and let it give the soul its message of Him who is over all, and above all. The summer song is now in the singing, and God is graciously seeking to put melody into the mind and heart of all His children

OUR MINISTERS AND OUR COLLEGE.

Mr. C. M. Cannon, Registrar of Elon College, has written to the ministers of the Southern Convention a letter of worth and significance. In this letter the request is made that the ministers give publicity to the fact that the work of the college goes on apace, and that the organization set up by the trustees in recent annual session is functioning in all its details, and that until a president is elected, there need be no fear that any part of the administrative or managerial work will be omitted or overlooked.

Practically all the ministers in our pulpits of the convention were educated at Elon, or their sons and daughters were, and thus they are the beneficiaries of the institution and owe it a debt they can never pay. Loyalty demands, and love for the Church invites, all our ministers to stand by the college in its hour of great need, and do all within their power to make the institution greater than it has ever been. The only way to reflect honor on those who have administered to the institution in the past is for us to see to it that greater and better things shall be done for the institution, that her usefulness may not be crippled but increased, and its worth may not be diminished but multiplied. Every pulpit should carry the message that Mr. Cannon gives in another column, and should impress upon our people the need of patronizing our own institution and of showing to them that our own Elon is worth their patronage and support and can give them that which they cannot get elsewhere.

Reports from the Registrar's office are very favorable, indeed, even in a time of depression, and these reports can be made better, and will be, if our ministers and other loyal souls in the pew, will do their part in the next few weeks in making proper and sincere plea for our own Elon College.

THE FAMILY.

The family of God consists of the Father, the Son, and the Holy Spirit. These three are one in place and interest. The three make it possible for the earthly family to be one in place and in spirit. The Trinity makes it possible for the interest of the whole family to be the same at certain times in life. This family interest, and spirit would fill our church pews and add to the treasure of our churches.

The writer was asked some time ago to give a talk on how to get people to church and Sunday School. He was frank to admit that he did not know but the thought of the family idea has come to him since. If the family pew were revived and the whole family become one in its proper relation to the other and God, what a difference it would make. Think of the whole family being in one pew on the Lord's day, in the same pew, worshipping the same God, and interested in the same thing! Would not this be divine? Would it help in attendance at the various services? It would certainly unite the family as to time, place, and spirit for Christian service at least.

In addition to creating a Christian interest in the individual family and uniting it as to purpose, it would also enlarge the church family. The church should be a real Christian family. Its numbers are to be increased as new souls are added to the kingdom and unite with the local church. Thus the blood family becomes a part of the spiritual family and the spiritual family becomes one with the Father in time, place, and interest. If the church is to solve the problem of filling the available space in the church and church school, it must unite the family and let them fill the family pew week after week. The writer feels that this would help to solve the church and domestic problems. It would certainly add to the religious interest of the family.

WHY WE GO BANKRUPT.

We are just in receipt of Arthur A. Everts' little pamphlet, entitled "Broke and the Way Out," and have read it with renewed interest and intention. In our judgment, it ought to be in the hands of every Church member and our preachers should be required to pass a periodical examination on its contents often enough to insure their acquaintance with the arguments presented.

Aside from any scriptural authority, the tithing principle is the only sensible method of financing the Church. Moreover, it is the least expensive way for its members. As things stand at present, we spend the greater part of the money which we give to the Lord in the payment of solicitors whom we employ to extract our own funds from us. The Washington city Church is a shining illustration in point. Nearly all our college-endowment campaigns illustrate the same type of foolishness.

If we made it a matter of principle to tithe without being solicited, all our money would go for the purpose for which it was intended. Our missionary societies should not be required to maintain promotional departments at all. Their only expense should be the item of distribution. Under the present system, or lack of system, as much money is usually spent raising the funds which the society needs for its work, as is employed in actual missionary effort. Some of our readers will recall an enterprise which was said to have collected a million dollars from our Churches and to have spent the entire million trying to raise another million.

We are constantly wasting time, money and energy because we are not willing to do the Lord's work in the right way. If our preachers would study this whole question thoroughly and then indoctrinate our people with it, the day of big campaigns would be over in our brotherhood, because there would be no need for them. It is useless to squeal on account of high-pressure promotion in these matters when we are not willing to do the thing which is required to avoid it. Brother Everts points the way out, and the only way, which will ever solve the problem.—Christian-Evangelist (Disciples).

ROANOKE, ALA.

We had a nice day at Roanoke on June 21st. Sunday School was fine and a good service at 11 a. m. Christian Endeavor was good, with Bro. Melvin Pope in charge of the program. Attendance was splendid.

The Evening service was given for the benefit of the children along Missionary lines with the assistance of Rev. Staley Hunt. We presented the Stereopticon slides showing the missionary progress in the Island of Porto Rico. This was very interesting. Wish all our Sunday Schools could have the exhibit. It is so instructive and shows so many phases of progress along the line. We propose carrying the pictures to as many of our schools as we possibly can. I am indebted to Dr. Ensminger for the use of the machine and pictures. We purpose holding our meeting here the third week in August. The Lowell Christian Church is in the midst of a gracious Revival at this time. Rev. W. G. Meacham is Pastor, and Rev. C. W. Hanson is the Evangelist. They are having fine services. Roanoke is being well blessed with Revivals this summer. Meetings have been held with the First Baptist and Lowell Methodist Churches, with good results. Now the Christians at Lowell, and the first Sunday in July the First Methodist Church will have a two weeks meeting. Beginning the third Sunday in July the Diciples Church will hold one week.

We are trusting that many souls will be blessed during these revival seasons. It should be easier for men to find Christ in these times of refreshing from the Lord, and I pray that many may find Him. Some say that the day of the old-time revival is past, but when we see people coming to the "mercy seat," it revives our faith in the religion of our fathers and our mothers. God speed the day of salvation. We must have a revival, or we will have a revolution.

G. D. HUNT.

SOUTHERN UNION COLLEGE.

A few years ago there was a stenographer in a railroad office in Chicago, who, because of his unusual speed, accuracy and general skill, was receiving a yearly salary of $2,500.00. But he decided to give up his position and go to college.

He came to Georgia and entered Piedmont College. He took a high stand in scholarship and in all college affairs. At the end of four years he returned to Chicago with his degree of Bachelor of Arts, and was gladly reinstated in his former office. Now he is at the head of a room full of men whose work he is directing. Besides his greatly increased salary, he has the cultural pleasures, social consideration and greater general influence of a man of recognized college education. Did it pay?

About the time of his graduation from college, another young man of my acquaintance, the son of a minister of the Gospel, graduated from a Georgia high school. He had been well reared in his home, stood well in scholarship in high school, and was of excellent character. He thought he wanted a college education and planned for it. But his financial resources were very meager, and to raise money for his college education he became a barber, expecting it to be temporary only. He became a good barber, and soon was earning so much each week that he did not have the courage to drop it and enter the struggle for four years in college. The other day I asked him if he intended to go to college.

"No, I have given it up!" was his reply. He has a good, honest, paying job in a blind alley, leading to no road with an upward grade. He will walk in this blind alley, a barber for life, earning less and less as he grows older. Old men are not much in demand as barbers.

The first young man found himself on a high class road, but it had no further up-grade. He had reached the height of his profession, and although not in a blind alley, he realized he was on a blind road. He left the road with no further up-grade, and now finds himself on one that reaches into the clouds. How high he can climb is a question only of how long he shall live in health and strength.

The second young man is satisfied to travel along his blind alley, with a useful occupation, and the financial, social and general consideration of a good barber.

HOLLAND, VA.

Sunday, June 14th was a good day for the Holland Christian Church, especially in the Sunday School. Supt. E. L. Daughtry had named a program committee to provide a combined service celebrating Childrens Day, Flag Day, Father's Day and June Rally Day. Mrs. J. R. Darden, Mrs. Sumner Rawles and Mrs. E. T. Rawles constituted the committee and did a splendid piece of work in training the children for this service. The program took the place of the preaching service and the messages, so well spoken by the children, in recitation and song were thoroughly enjoyed by all. The school has been steadily advancing in interest and attendance and is being served by a splendid corps of officers and teachers. The goal was set for 200 in attendance and the records show 202 present with a number of the classes having 100 per cent attendance. The pastor appreciates fully the splendid co-operation given in the work here and we look and pray for still greater blessings. To God be the praise.

BECOMING LIKE THE MASTER.

BY MISS MINNIE LOHR.

Have you ever wished that your life might be like the life of Jesus? Have you not sometimes prayed, "Make me just like unto Thee, oh, blessed Lord"? That is one prayer He begins to answer at once. But when the answer begins to come, we will think He is giving just the opposite from that which we have asked. The refining process has to come first. Most of us have a great deal of dross in our natures, and that has to be consumed. We have to pass through the refining fire before we can in any measure become like Him.

We love our Saviour because of His tenderness, His kindness, and His great sympathy for others in the hour of trial and sorrow, and we ask to be made like Him in that, forgetting He was a "Man of sorrows and acquainted with grief." Then when He sends some great sorrow into our lives, that we, too, may learn the sympathy He feels for others, we are too blind to see it is a direct answer to our prayers, and sometimes we complain of the way our Lord has dealt with us. If there is any one, or anything, we think of oftener, or think more of than we do of our Lord, that will have to be taken away or given up before we can be like Him. Jesus and His Father were one. Nothing stood between; and He asks and he must have the first place in our thoughts, our hearts and our lives. He may have to break our wills to make us like unto Him. It means "Thy will be done" in our lives, just as He was entirely submissive to the Father's will. But when the Master became entirely submissive that last night, in that hour of terrible agony, a great and wonderful quietness and peace took possession of Him—a quietness, a calmness so great the world has marveled at it ever since. It is the peace He gives to all whose wills are brought into submission to the Father's.

He makes us feel our guilt, that we may have compassion for others. He lets trials come, that we may learn to be patient. He shows us the cross; for all who wish to become like the Master must take up the cross. Jesus gave fair warning that no one could follow Him and evade the cross. But the strange thing about it all—the thing the world can never understand—is that instead of its being a life filled with gloom or sadness, it is a life of deep, rich joy and happiness; it is a life of tranquility; it is a life free from anxiety, because we have Jesus, who is our joy and strength, with us through it all to meet it with us. It is much better than that—we can put it all over on Him and let Him meet it for us.

We can never know our Lord and Master as He is unless we let Him lead us through some hard places. It is after we have once tested His love and power we cannot let Him go. When He has fastened upon us His look of love; when we have felt His hand staying us up, that our feet might not slip; when we have once known what it is to have His hand work for us, saving us from some calamity; when we have once known what it is to have Him deliver us in the hour of temptation, we cannot choose but follow. When once we have known what it is to feel the joy and security of the Master's presence; when once we have known what it is to "sit in heavenly places in Christ Jesus," we are willing to become unlike others that we may become like Him. As we follow on, He becomes more than life to us—He becomes our life.

It is a life no one but a follower of the Lord can understand. No one else can understand how we become rich when we give everything away to the Master. No one else can understand how we just begin to live when we die to the world. No one else can understand why we hate the things we once loved, and love the things we once hated. No one else can understand how we are strongest when we are the weakest. But it is true. "His strength is made perfect in weakness," and we "can do all things through Christ, who strengtheneth us." When we feel our weakness and helplessness, that is His opportunity.

It is true that when we die to self and the world, and we open our lives to Him, we enter upon the life of "the glorious liberty of the children of God." It is true when we give our all into His keeping, holding it in trust for Him, He gives us a hundred-fold now, and the assurance of heavenly riches in the world to come.

It is true when we have followed Him thus far, we have no desire, only to follow on, for as we think back over the way in which our Lord has led us, we cannot, we would not go back. We want to follow on to the end. Each trial has only brought Him nearer; it has only made Him dearer. We will go on with Thee, blessed Master, anywhere, but we cannot go back, for Thou hast drawn too near to us; Thou hast led us thus far, our fellowship with Thee has been so sweet, so strengthening, so comforting, we want to follow Thee all the way, pressing more closely to Thy side, day by day, until that day when "we shall be like Him, for we shall see Him as He is."

EDUCATIONAL DIVIDENDS.

By MRS. R. S. RAINEY.

(Alumni Address, delivered before the Elon College Alumni Association at the 1931 Commencement, and printed in The Sun at the request of fellow alumni.)

(Concluded from last issue.)

We may look upon an education from three standpoints—the materialistic one (I have discussed the monetary gain); the political one—the preservation of a free government and the saving of the democracy—or from a third standpoint the ethical side of an education—the pursuit of happiness. What one quality does the human race strive for as they do for happiness? We think so much of happiness that our whole religion is based on the idea of future happiness—freedom from crime, ignorance, worry, trouble, sickness and disease. The only thing that can bring a lasting happiness is an educational investment. Daniel Webster said "If we work upon marble, it will perish; if we work upon brass, time will efface it; if we rear temples, they will crumble into the dust; but if we work upon immortal minds, if we imbue them with principles, with the just fear of God and the love of our fellowmen we engrave on those tablets something which will brighten to all eternity." Can we ask for more than everlasting dividends? Where can we invest and get as much except in the training of the youth of the land? When man's wealth has decayed and man himself is dust the investment that he has made in education will go on and on influencing generations yet unborn. There is not a greater influence in the land today than the schools. If we would have a greater nation we must train great citizens. Mark Hopkins once said that if he could get a log with a boy on one end and himself sitting on the other that he could teach that boy all he needed to know—maybe not so many facts as the principles, the ethical education that we speak of so much. Mark Hopkins had found the secret of the teaching profession and he stated it in this simple story. The benefits of education are intangible. An education that teaches a man to enjoy his lot and appreciate the ordinary things of life is the greatest thing that can befall him. If he is contented in the work that he has chosen he is blest. Carlyle says:

"Blessed is he who has found his work;
Let him ask no other blessedness."

The development of leadership, character, appreciation, success and service, the five derivatives of a good college course—lead directly to the third object of education—the pursuit of happiness.

After all what is the important thing in getting an education? Is it books or personalities? We might begin with King Solomon and quote what wise men have said and echoed since that day. "With all of the getting, get understanding." We hear this admonition thundering thru the ages and yet we get only knowledge or a lot of facts and call ourselves educated. We have a diploma and yet we are fools—why? Because with all of our getting we failed to get the only essential thing—understanding. Tennyson says "Knowledge comes, but wisdom lingers." He is again referring us to Solomon's advice. Another has very aptly said, "Education is what you have left after you have forgotten what you went to school to learn." The most valuable thing about an education is intangible. It isn't the facts that we can quote from history, it isn't the number of mathematical theories that we can prove, it isn't the amount of Latin or French that we can read. It is what knowing and hearing these facts has done for us. It can't be put in words—but it means just what Solomon said—understanding—understanding—the greatest dividend that education can ever pay to man.

You who have studied history know that Napoleon is rated as one of the greatest military geniuses of the world. If you have read far enough, you have found that he was just as great in the pursuits of peace. He valued an education above all of his fame and fortune. He further agreed that an education based on the physical alone is incomplete. Everything that a man could gain in a material way he gained, and with all these he got understanding, which prompted him to say, "The only true conquests—those that awaken no regret—are those obtained over ignorance." The most honorable, the most useful pursuits of the nation are those which contribute to the extension of human intellect.

Henry Ford, America's richest man, says that it would pay the government to educate people, even if it had to pay them to go to school. He has made his uncounted millions without the education that he is urging for others, but like Napoleon he has understanding. Andrew Carnegie says that the education of its citizens is the first duty of the State. He like Ford had no education as we think of it. He gave liberally of his means to advance education and scientific research.

As Napoleon sat in exile at St. Helena and thought over his career, he was dissatisfied with all of his military successes and failures, but he said that his works that had led to the advancement of the arts and sciences would live after him. His military conquests were over, but his conquest of ignorance was just begun. His material success vanished in the smoke of Waterloo, but his attack on ignorance grows stronger as the years go by.

There is a story told of an ancient poet, Simonides, who was crossing the Mediterranean on a ship with many rich and influential people. He had no possessions but his knowledge and his talent, while they had supplies of gold and jewels. They asked him why he did not store up gold as they had, and his reply was that thieves could steal the gold, but that no one could take his knowledge. They laughed at him. Later the ship was wrecked by a storm, and many were drowned trying to save their material possessions. The poet got safely to shore with a few others who had salvaged part of their treasures. But thieves swooped upon them and took all they had saved. They went into the city as beggars, but

REV. J. O. ATKINSON, D. D., Secretary.

A PRAYER.

O great defender, God, send thou upon those who administer the church a divine sense of thy light and help. In understanding and faithfulness make the church true to its responsibility for the right use of every resource. By the summer-suspension of worship periods the church, like the little child, is saying "Goodbye, God, we do not need thee July and August," and thus companionate souls are deprived of holy intercourse with each other and of the sweetest Jesus-touch. Father, make Thy light the church's light, we humbly pray, Amen. "L"

"IT COSTS TOO MUCH."

Redeeming a world is expensive business. It costs time, effort, money, life. It cost God his Son, and the Son his life. It cost the apostles the sacrifice of home, comfort, and native land. Listen to the Apostle Paul: "Five times I have been given one less than forty lashes, by the Jews. I have been beaten three times by the Romans, I have been stoned once, I have been shipwrecked three times, a night and a day I have been adrift at sea; with my frequent journeys, in danger from rivers, danger from robbers, danger from my own people, danger from the heathen, danger in the city, danger in the desert, danger at sea, danger from false brothers, through toil and hardship, through many a sleepless night, through hunger and thirst, often without food, and exposed to cold. And besides everything else, the thing that burdens me every day is my anxiety about all the churches."

The other apostles, also, paid a dear price. William A. Brown says concerning them: "When the dead in Christ shall rise first, from what widely scattered lands of the Old World shall the apostles come? Peter was crucified head downward in the Neroian persecution, which also claimed the apostle Paul. Both Paul and Peter met death in Rome, and their dust lies in the land of Italy. Andrew was crucified in Achaia on a cross which ever afterward has borne his name. James was the first among the twelve to suffer martyrdom. He was beheaded by Herod, the king in Jerusalem in Judaea. John had his sepulcher in the city of Ephesus in Asia. Philip met a violent death in Hierapolis in Asia. Nathanael Bartholomew was crucified in Armenia. Thomas was martyred in India. Matthew likewise met death in India. James, the son of Alphaeus met his death in a foreign land. Thaddeus went from Africa to be forever with his Lord. Simon the Canaanite passed to his reward in the land of Egypt. Judas Iscariot was buried in the land of Judaea. . . . Judas Iscariot was a Judæan, and Judas Iscariot alone of all the twelve apostles lies buried in his native land."

It does cost heavily to carry on God's work—but what if it does? Christ knew all that before he gave his command; yet he sent his disciples forth commissioned to the task; and he made allowance for no conditions as to price. But now, honestly, as one compares the cost of religious work with other work, missionary service with other lines of religious service, foreign missionary endeavor with other fields of missionary endeavor, what does he find as to comparative costs? After all, a thing is expensive or cheap, not in the absolute, but in the comparative sense. Education is expensive, but not so expensive as ignorance. It costs to keep well, but not so much as to be sick. To be righteous is costly, but not so costly as sin. What are the costs of foreign missions compared to the cost of similar work elsewhere?

I shall not deal with the cost in life. That is heavy. The foreign missionary who takes up his cross daily and follows Jesus to a foreign land pays in the sacrifice of creature comforts which we at home call necessities; in cultural influences which we in the homeland take as a matter of course; in companionship and in monetary return; and all too often in health; and even in life, because of privation, exposure, or the constant "pull" at one's heart as he ever hears calls unanswered and sees needs unmet. My hat is off to the missionary. He pays a heavy price.—C. M. Yocum, in World Call.

THE VALUE OF MISSION STUDY.

John R. Mott, the great Christian statesman, says: "Those who further the movement at home by their spiritual vitality and enthusiasm give as much force to meet the present world situation as those responsible for its extension at home."

"Awake, Awake, put on thy strength, O Zion!" (Isa. 52: 1.)

If the church is really conscious of belonging to a world community, it will have a program of education as to world conditions and world needs. Provision will be made for developing an outlook and appreciation of other peoples and races.

We must first catch the vision and look upon the field, for vision is always essential if great things are ever accomplished. The sooner we get the vision and follow its gleam, the brighter our own lives and the greater our influence upon others.

The promotion of the reading and thorough study of missions is a great power to awaken conscience and multiply our opportunities for good. No man can study of God's wonderful design for the human race and not be enlarged by the contemplation of such a purpose, forgetting self by becoming occupied with thoughts for the betterment of others.

To understand and fully appreciate the world's great movements and tendencies now at work requires knowledge of more than one Christian Communion, nation or race. One must get the needed information through missionary sermons, addresses, magazines, books and news bulletins. All should be used freely to assist in "brightening our lights."

Knowledge is power and when we have it we may ask God to do through us what He has been doing for those in the mission field, and thus keep our lamps trimmed and burning.

Close studying is indispensable in understanding discussions of missionary problems, and all who desire to render larger service to their fellow-men should not neglect it. From smaller to greater vision enlarges our sympathies, teaches us to pray and hastens us to obey the command, "GO!"

In those communities where missions is studied, one is reminded of nature in springtime—LIFE! Transformations of individuals take place. People change in character and spirit.

One needs only to contrast communities where study is known with those which are ignorant to notice differences and results.

One instance is reported where from one mission study circle alone no fewer than four members were led to volunteer to become missionaries, and James Chalmer of New Guinea, whose first resolution to go to the field was the result of an appeal made by his well informed and faithful Sunday School teacher, is by no means an isolated case in the history of missions.

Knowledge of duty brings action either forward or backward. If we have a "mark," as had Paul, towards which we are traveling, we will place value on the right things trying harder to enter the doors of opportunity our Father has opened to us. No human can shut God's open doors. In heathendom, not doors, but walls are falling down inviting missionary effort.

God reveals to the mind the secret of the telegraph, the telephone and the wireless, that we may speak to each other as we whisper to Him. What a wonderful privilege to enter the gallery of communication and fellowship with the world of mankind.

Infinite possibilities are waiting our coming, glad to be entered upon, discovered and enjoyed.

Let us keep our lights burning in the Homeland by LOOKING to catch the vision and STUDYING to know the situation, ever keeping that hidden joy in our hearts that makes us glad to be alive to the blessed command; "GO, YE into all the WORLD." MRS. J. L. FOSTER.

MISSIONARY SOCIETY ORGANIZED.

The Woman's Missionary Society of Carolina Congregational-Christian Church was organized the 4th Sunday in March, by Mrs. J. W. Patton of Elon College, N. C., and though very young, having just finished the first quarter, it is felt that much good will be accomplished.

The society was organized with thirteen members, and now has twenty-five on roll. The officers are Mrs. E. D. Paylor, president; Mrs. W. A. Glenn, vice-president, and Mrs. J. W. Trollinger, secretary and treasurer. No dues were pledged, but it was agreed to have free-will offerings so that all could come and feel more welcome and unembarrassed.

The society had $4.76 in the treasury for the first quarter, after spending $3.00 for a funeral basket. There were 229 calls made, 4 trays of food carried to the sick, and 20 nice bunches of flowers were given to cheer sick rooms.

The society desires the prayers of all Christian people that it may continue in the work for the Master.

"UNCLE SHAM."

Not long ago a Hindu in India wrote a book entitled "Uncle Sham," in which Uncle Sam was severely criticised. Much of his information he drew from American movies shown in India, and sensational newspaper reports. Rev. Clarence E. Wolsted, of Manamadura, who comments on this, wore Uncle Sam's insignia on his coat collar in 1917-'18. But now he wonders if the missionaries are not serving Uncle Sam just as loyally in the outposts of the world by correcting such false impressions. "Some Americans maintain that the missionary is a dangerous internationalist," he adds; "but the future will decide as to who serves his country best—the ardent militarist who argued at Boston last summer for the nation's defense and at night drank bootleg booze, or the man who quietly works for friendship in lands across the sea." In Yokohama, Mr. Wolsted says, there is an inscription on the walls of a public building which reads: "School children of Japan, remember that in the days of our great need, help was sent from America, England, etc." Such, in the opinion of Mr. Wolsted, is the result of a policy of extending the hand of friendship instead of the clinched fist.

"Giving to missions means sharing Christ with others. How much will you give?"

TESTIMONY OF A GREAT SCHOLAR.

An interesting book, recently from the press of Macmillan, is "The Lord's Prayer," which is a series of addresses by Dr. Frederick Rittlemyer, of Berlin. Dr. Rittlemyer, who is one of Germany's consecrated Christian scholars, says:

"Our civilization has become Godless. This is a hard thing to say, yet it must be said. What is to be taken into consideration is not so much whether here and there an individual still believes in God, but pre-eminently whether God is a living factor in our lives. Man today, when he sees a loaf of bread, is much more likely to think of the most approved methods of agriculture or the newest type of fertilizer than to think of the living thought of God.

"We resemble a group of stone masons bestowing much skill and labor upon the construction of a country residence which they will never occupy themselves. Another, and a future humanity will be the owners and dwell there while we go blind with the dust in our eyes from the stones in the building."—Ex.

ADVENTURES IN YOUTH FELLOWSHIP

"Youth at Work in the Church."

JEWEL TRUITT, Editor, Waverly, Virginia.

THE SUMMER SCHOOL AT WADLEY.

The Summer School of Leadership Training held at Wadley, Alabama, each summer, under the auspices of the Board of Christian Education, will meet this year August 9th to 14th. It is the custom at this school for Sunday School and Church workers, to issue credits for the work that is done, which are recognized by the leading Protestant Churches.

During 1931, the faculty of the Summer School will be composed of Miss Jewel Truitt, dean, and teacher of the course in Young People's Materials and Methods; Miss Annie Campbell, who will teach a course for teachers of children in the Sunday School; Miss Dora Bracken, who will teach a course in Worship for Young People, and who will have charge of the Vesper Services each evening; Rev. G. Staley Hunt, who will teach the course in The Life of Christ; and Miss Marguerite Davison, who will teach a course in Recreation and Play.

The Summer School is held on the college campus. The registration fee is one dollar. Board is furnished in the college dining hall for five dollars for the week. Churches may, if it is necessary, arrange for their delegates boarding expense by sending vegetables and fowls to the school dietician, who will accept them for board. This plan has enabled many students to attend Summer School during recent years, and will be followed this year.

Delegates from each Christian and Congregational Church in Georgia and Alabama are expected to meet at Wadley for the Summer School. There will also be delegates from Kentucky and Tennessee.

Each delegate to the Summer School should bring comfortable clothing, tennis raquets and balls (if they have them), bed linen, towels, toilet articles, Bible, notebook and pencils.

The week at Wadley offers much in wholesome work and play. It will mean a great deal to any church which sends delegates, and any delegate who attends is sure to receive lasting inspiration and helpful instruction and information. Send your delegates, and come!

JEWEL TRUITT.

WHAT SHALL WE EXPECT?

When the delegates return from summer conferences, what shall be expected of them? The following are some of the possibilities:

1. A report, both to the church and to the executive committee of the young people's organization. Definite working plans should result from the latter.

2. New ideas applied to Sunday meetings and to mid-week activities.

3. A greater loyalty on the part of the delegates; this will require that the pastor and adult counselors use them in positions of leadership.

4. A willingness to serve as teachers or as substitute teachers in the church school. One church, for several years, has sent a certain number of young people to conferences with the specific expectation that they would take courses that would lead to teaching skill. Their teaching force is constantly recruited and trained by this process.

5. A process of leadership training carried on through the year, by correspondence courses, individual study, community or church training classes or schools. (Write Mr. E. L. Shaver, 14

Beacon Street, Boston, Mass., or Miss Jewel Truitt, Waverly, Va., for advice.)

6. A closer contact with the Secretary of the Board of Religious Education. This should include sending in news notes that may be of general interest, for publication in the Young People's page of THE SUN. These items should be addressed to Miss Truitt, at Waverly, Va. and not direct to the office in Richmond, except that during the first two weeks in July they should be sent to 1536 E. Broad St., Richmond, Va.

7. A closer fellowship between the young people of various churches in the neighborhood. Some district associations are developing a program for the young people of their churches, which includes: at least one week-end conference in the fall or spring, certain objectives of mission study and service, special emphases at the rally season, etc.

NEWS ITEMS.

We always look forward from one year to another to the School of Religious Education at Wadley, Alabama. This year it is later and this fact gives us more time to get ready. Those who have attended are eager to come, and we are endeavoring to make this our very best session. Will you help us?

The dormitory, with its new furniture and other improvements, is so inviting, that alone will make you happy, but the joy and inspiration, both socially and spiritually, are never to be forgotten. Our churches are much in need of trained leadership—just the training that we get here—and we urge every church to begin now making plans to send representatives, food and funds. Let us every one do our best and see what a great school we will have.

EUNICE STEVENS.

The young people of the Monticello community, Brown Summit, N. C., aided the children in a Children's Day Program with the pageant, "A Christian Youth's Quest," recently. In addition to this they are doing a wonderful work in Christian Endeavor. Most of the members being active, makes the society a wide awake one. Meetings are held every Sunday night with the leader in charge. After the introductory talk, various topics are discussed pertaining to the general topic. Often Christian Endeavor leaders or prominent speakers from elsewhere are with us, and at these times the entire program is turned over to them, or they are given a place somewhere else in the meeting. It is our hope to become more active in the work and of greater service to the church.

The Young People's Auxiliary of Mount Olivet Church at Dyke, Virginia, has been concentrating its work in helping to get the church and grounds in shape for revival and conference meetings, which are to be held here during July and August. At the last meeting, it was decided to try to plan a banquet supper in connection with the young people's program during conference week.

Many pastors are troubled, and properly so, because young people do not attend the "church service." But are we correct in seeming to assume that the classes, societies and organized activities for young people are not "the church"? Is the morning worship "the church," or is the departmental Sunday and mid-week work also "the church" in action?

Benediction.—Chorus of "Where He Leads Me I Will Follow."

Thoughts on the Topic.

How far can we follow Jesus?—

Before we are ready to answer this question, we must consider where Jesus would lead us. What was the central purpose in his life that we must accept if we follow him? What was his scale of values? What principles must govern our relationship with our fellow men? What does he demand of those who follow him? Is the real question "How far can we follow Jesus?" or "How far are we willing to follow him?"

A great life purpose—

Jesus' life was dominated by one great central life purpose—"to do the will of him that sent me." Every experience, every motive, every attitude throughout his life was related to that one dynamic drive. When opposition beset him he "set his face steadfastly." He paid the supreme price for loyalty to his Cause on the cross.

Thy kingdom come, Thy will be done—

We must face the truth that the kingdom will not come, unless we as individuals are willing to follow Jesus. The kingdom will not come in our community unless we follow Jesus in our homes, schools and social groups. The kingdom will not come in our nation unless we follow the principles of Jesus at the ballot box and in civic affairs. The kingdom will not come in business and the industrial world unless we practice honesty, justice and brotherhood in our dealings with our fellow man. The kingdom will not come in our international affairs until we replace nationalism with world-mindedness.

Sunday School Lesson

By REV. H. S. HARDCASTLE.

THE PREACHING OF THE APOSTLES.

LESSON II.—JULY 12, 1931

GOLDEN TEXT: "We must obey God rather than men."—Acts 5:29.

LESSON: Acts 3:1-4:31; I Cor. 1:21-25.

The Miracle.

"Now Peter and John went up together into the temple at the hour of prayer." They recognized the need for and the value of worship. Man cannot live by bread alone; he must have that contact with the living God which comes in worship in spirit and truth.

And a certain man lame from his mother's womb—whom they laid daily at the gate of the temple—he was symbolic of a needy humanity which lies always at the door of the church, usually within a stone's throw of every church. A worshipping church ought to be reminded of a needy world.

"Silver and gold have I none; but such as I have, give I unto you; in the name of Jesus Christ of Nazareth rise up and walk." Alas that there are so many, who because they cannot do as much or give as much as they think they would like to, do not give "such as they have." then, too, there is the lesson here that often men need something more than material things. It were far better to help a man get a job than to give him a "hand-me-out."

"And he took him by the right hand, and lifted him up." Here again is a parable of life—the power of the warm, personal touch to lift men up and to help them to walk on higher levels of life and service.

"And they were filled with wonder and amazement at that which had happened unto him." There are all about us, those whose transformation through Christ is a source of wonder and amazement. God has not left himself without witnesses to His amazing power of transforming human life.

The Murmurers.

"The priests, and the captains of the temple, and the Sadducees came upon them, being grieved that they taught the people, and preached through Jesus the resurrection from the dead." Jesus had been hounded to death by these groups, and they were seeing to it that His disciples were kept in their proper places. The priests did not want the apostles to be talking about Jesus as the Messiah, for they had put him to death. Furthermore any progress which His cause might make would imperil their position and their power. This thing must be stopped. The Sadducees, of course, took exception to the teachings of the apostles about the resurrection, for they did not believe either in spirit or in the resurrection. They therefore joined the priests in their determined effort to stop the thing.

"And they laid hands on them, and put them in hold, (in jail or prison) unto the next day." They restored to the old, and to the modern way, of trying to stop truth by resorting to physical force. They had not learned, as they have not learned, that truth cannot permanently be stopped. "Crushed to earth it will rise again. The eternal years are hers"—in some such words the poet expresses it. For example, if the theory of evolution is right, all the legislation which Tennessee or any other state can pass will be of no avail; if it is wrong, it will eventually fall of its own weight. For a long time the Church fought science with its revolutionary doctrine that

THE MINISTER AND FAMILY TROUBLES. By Elizabeth Anthony Dexter and R. C. Dexter. Richard R. Smith, Inc.; $1.25; pp. 97.

This book is unique in its field, being the first case-study of the minister in relation to family problems. The minister has an unusual entrance to people's hearts, and in helping to solve their family troubles is rendering a great service. He should also endeavor to forestall troubles by constructive teaching in his pulpit and in the Church school. This book will prove a real help to ministers in their efforts to aid persons in trouble and save many a home from disruption.

the sun, and not the earth was the center of the universe as men then knew it. But it was a losing fight—decrees and dogmas could not permanently hold back the truth.

Men.

Peter and John represent manhood at its best. It is well to keep in mind that they were called into account by those who were the rulers. They could not forget this same unscrupulous crowd had done their Lord to death. And they knew full well that if they got a chance they would do the same thing to them. But Peter and John did not equivocate or compromise. "Whether it be right in the sight of God to harken unto you more than to God, judge ye. For we cannot but speak the things we have seen and heard." How weak and unworthy much of our profession of faith in Christ is in the light of the stand of these heroic apostles. Here is the stuff from which real disciples are made. No wonder that they saw in this boldness of Peter and John abundant evidence that they had been with Jesus. One feels that at least one of the things which the Church needs in these trying and troublous times is a baptism of this spirit of courage both on pulpit and pew.

IT CHANGED THE HISTORY OF THE WORLD.

Says Basil Matthews, speaking of the setting forth of Barnabas and Saul under the direction of the Holy Spirit to the Gentile world, "Historically, this was the precise hour at which the foreign missionary enterprise actually began. The fact that we are Christians ourselves, dates back to that obedience of these men in that little ship. They took the little tree of Christianity and transplanted it from the cramping flower-pot of Judaism into the soil of humanity of the whole world. It is an apparently tiny act, which, in simple fact, when looked at down the perspective of the centuries, is seen to have changed the history of the world."

CONDUCTED BY H. E. ROUNTREE
One of our Chaplains in the U. S. Navy.

"If thou wilt make the Almighty thy treasure . . . then shalt thou delight thyself in the Almighty . . . and thou shalt make thy prayer unto Him and He will hear thee."—Job 22: 25-27.

MONDAY.

A VERY SIMPLE WAY.

"Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ, and thou shalt be saved, and thy house."—Acts 16:31.

Paul and Silas were thrown into prison in the first European city which they visited. But they were happy just the same. The body bound, but the spirit free.

We are not told of what effect their songs of praise had on their fellow-prisoners. But we are told of what effect it had on the jailer. When he hears their voices and learns of the miracle which had been wrought, and looks the apostle in the face, he becomes aware of the living God. His own sins come to view, and he quakes about as bad as the building did under the quaking of the earth that shook the shackles from the prisoners' bodies. He confesses his sins and acknowledges God and seeks salvation. He did what he was told to do, "believe," and more than this did he do, he invoked their stripes, which he himself had caused and made them comfortable, and was baptized.

It is a glorious gospel, which not only saves but goes the limit to correct a bad past: That is a glorious way. It is a glorious baptism of His Spirit. There is nothing more in the foundation of salvation unto good works.

Prayer.—Lord Jesus, wake us up from our sleep in sin or our lethargy in Christian duty and give us a living desire not only to believe but to make all things right and help others. Amen.

TUESDAY.

THE LORD'S REBUKE TO SATAN.

"And He shewed me Joshua . . . standing before the angel of the Lord, and Satan standing at his right hand to resist him."—Zech. 3:1-5.

Here we have a foreshadowing of the Lord Jesus Christ who is to come to defend His people against Satan; also a replica of our actual experiences, when Satan seems always present to resist all the good that we would do, or any advance toward God.

The faithful and those who would try to turn from all the sins which they have committed and be faithful, try to "Sit together in heavenly places," but Satan is at hand, just like he was with Job, to accuse them. How oft has one attempted honestly to live righteously and do good, and some enemy gathers up all the sins he can find chargeable to that one, and places himself by his side to keep him from standing before his God!

Unhappy we would be, did we not have an Advocate (Jesus) with the Father to "pluck" us from such burnings and to cleanse us from all unrighteousness. How thankful we should be that Christ can say, "The Lord rebuke thee, O Satan! Thou hast no right to accuse this man whom God hath chosen. I, Jesus, have plucked him from the burning. Who shall lay anything to the charge of God's elect?"

Therefore, let us "greatly rejoice in the Lord . . . for He hath clothed us with the garments of salvation and covered us with His robe of righteousness." Let us keep our garments pure, and walk in the way of the Lord!

Prayer.—Help us, O Lord, that we sin not! But when we sin, chasten us and forgive us, and send Thy Spirit to remind us that we have an Advocate with the Father to help us preserve a free and good conscience and obtain victory over the accuser. Amen.

WEDNESDAY.

CONSCIOUSNESS OF SIN.

"Of whom (sinners) I am chief."—1 Tim. 1:15.

It is to be doubted that a great many of us feel like Paul, "I am the chiefest of sinners." Our independence, our desire for comfort and pleasure, the tendency to broaden the highway of holiness in order to include more traffic of those who practice less scruples regarding sin, the problem of bandits, home and highway robberies, the many dissensions and discards, indicate neither humility nor a deep consciousness of sin.

There is only one remedy. It was Paul's remedy. Stand before God and in the light of His countenance. Then we find fault of no one but ourselves. Seeing our faults, in Christ, we find mercy. That he did his wrongs "ignorantly in unbelief" was no excuse to Paul. It was a great sin to him. He obtained mercy and power, and his example stands out a pattern to all other great sinners, that they, too, may know that there is mercy for them. Yea, there is not in the world one sinner who asks for forgiveness and does not receive it.

"As the heaven is high above the earth, so great is His mercy toward them that fear Him."

Prayer.—Dear Lord, in the light of Thy Word, today we feel like saying praise and honor be to Thee forevermore. Amen.

THURSDAY.

CLOTHED FOR THE WEDDING.

"Clothed with brodered work . . . with fine linen and silk, and decked you also with ornaments."—Ezek. 16:10.

It was the custom of Oriental princes, at their own expense, to robe and deck their brides with ornaments for the wedding. We do still.

Our lesson is a figure describing the purification and adornment of every Christian. Though the figure of a bride, as used in the Scriptures, usually refers to His Church in the world, there is a sense in which every Christian is the bride of Christ. "Yea," said He, "I swore unto Thee, and entered into a covenant with Thee . . . and Thou becamest mine."

He adorns His own with charity, humility, patience, mercy, peace, joy, meekness, temperance, righteousness, and all manner of spiritual gifts, that He may present them without spot or wrinkle, holy and without blemish. "Be thou faithful unto death, and I will give thee a crown of life."

Prayer.—Lord, give us Thy grace, care for, guide and keep us, Thou Bridegroom of our souls, until Thou dost conduct us to the wedding-feast of heaven. Amen.

FRIDAY.

"THEREAFTER."

"And one of them, . . . turned back, and . . . glorified God . . . giving Him thanks."—Luke 17:15 & 16.

"Thereafter, you shall go to Him and thank Him." Do we? In this way only may we preserve the purity He has endowed us with. With Jesus only can the one who has been cleansed remain close. The nine who did not return thereafter warn us. The one who did return thereafter encourages us. Come back, and continue to come back to thank Him and glorify Him.

"Bless the Lord, O my soul; and all that is within me, bless His holy name! Bless the Lord, O my soul, and forget not all His benefits; who forgiveth all thine iniquities; who healeth all thy diseases; who redeemeth thy life from destruction; who crowneth thee with lovingkindness and tender mercies!" Happy child of God!

Prayer.—Dear Lord, we would praise Thy name forever for Thy gospel of salvation, for the baptism of the Holy Spirit, for the Holy Communion of our souls with Thine, for the new life in Jesus. Preserve our faith, increase it, and let nothing seduce us from Thee. Amen.

SATURDAY.

WALKING IN THE SPIRIT.

"Walk in the Spirit."—Gal. 5:16-24.

The believer knows that the commandment of love is pure and just. He believes that the Holy Ghost gives him the new life of love in his soul. By walking in such a faith and with the steady and fixed purpose of mind to achieve such a reality, one walks in the Spirit, and by this means he is accounted righteous, saved and free from condemnation.

Thus as we go along each day, we must not forget we are God's souls, and such hideous things as fleshy lusts and worldly seductions are not to lead us astray. These are crucified in Christ, and must be no more followed. On the other hand, the fruit of the Spirit is our portion—love, joy, peace, etc.

Prayer.—Dear Lord, enable the roots of our living to strike deeper every day into Thy love, and bear richer and more abundant fruit in heavenly virtues. Amen.

SUNDAY.

A SOLEMN PRAYER.

"O Lord, I am weak; O Lord, heal me."—Psa. 6.

Often, not always, there is intimate connection between sin and trouble. Whether so connected or not, Jesus has suffered for all our sins, and He has also suffered for all our troubles, knowing our weaknesses and promising to be with us in the sixth trouble and in the seventh, never forsaking us. Yea, never to leave us.

In this psalm and elsewhere in the Scripture, we hear how a great soul fears and trembles in troubles, and, if pious, how he never loses his sense of God.

Here we find that which our souls would often express, and here we learn how to lay our troubles before our God. We do not know how always to sing songs of joy and praise, as David did. But if we wait on the Lord as he did, if we commit our way unto Him, we shall surely sing some day.

Prayer.—Dear Heavenly Father, drive away all false and terrifying accusers, all untoward spirits and powers which threaten our souls and would imprison them from Thee. Be Thou our Comforter, our Faith, our Refuge, our Strength, and in whatever experience teach us to sing songs and praise Thee forever. Amen.

There is no earthly pleasure, no material treasure, that can compare with a mind that refuses to be miserable over the things most people must endure.—Exchange.

THE DEVIL'S THEOLOGY.

By REV. FLOYD D. BALLARD.

"Then was Jesus led up of the Spirit into the wilderness to be tempted of the devil."—Matthew 4: 1.

Shakespeare is responsible for the witticism that the devil can quote Scripture for his purposes. To this oft-repeated saying of England's greatest poet may be added another of like kind—"The devil has a theology ready-made." It is reasonable, attractive, appealing. If one were asked the substance of that theology, he could hardly do better than say that its leading idea is, "Whatever is natural is right."

The root of all evil or temptation is the appeal that every man in his heart follow his natural impulses and desires. This is the plain scriptural teaching concerning temptation. When the serpent in the garden tempted the woman to eat of the forbidden fruit, he appealed to her natural desires. (Genesis 3:1-6.) The principle on which the tempter acted in Job's great trial was, "All that a man hath will he give for his life,"—that is, it is natural for one to save his life and health at any cost. (Job 2: 4.) When Jesus was tempted in the wilderness, each of the three temptations was an appeal to the natural desires—the desire for food, the desire for popularity, the desire for success. (Matthew 4: 1-11.) James shows his insight into the strategy of evil when he says, "Every man is tempted when he is drawn away of his own lust (desire)."

As one examines the Scriptures and explores the secret thoughts of his own heart, he discovers that the stock argument of the tempter is that it is good to follow our natural impulses. Whatever is natural is right—this, in a word, is the devil's plausible and destructive theology. This theory of right is like the serpent in the garden, most subtle and deceiving. Many of our up-to-date theories are nothing less than the old argument of the tempter, saying, "The thing is natural; therefore it is right." So our natural impulses are given seats of authority—the desire for pleasure, for success and for comfort, for popularity and hosts of others. If one would know how far he has fallen under this teaching, let him take an inventory of the interests of his heart and ask in what things he follows his natural bent, and in what things he seeks to know the will of God and do it.

The spiritual life is a conquest. Its battle cry is not "Back to nature," as Rousseau so fascinatingly taught more than a century ago, and as a tempter had argued since man was first tempted. Its battle cry is "Upward to God." We do not drift into the kingdom. Rather we must weather the storm and set our sails to adverse winds. Let no one be deceived by the spineless theory of life and religion which says that whatever is natural is right, and which invites one to yield to the line of least resistance. We should understand our hearts well enough to know that our natural impulses are arrayed against the Spirit, and that the issues of the struggle are to overcome the natural and give supremacy to the spiritual. "To be carnally (naturally) minded is death: but to be spiritually minded is life." (Romans 8:6.) "Be not conformed to this world: but be ye transformed by the renewing of your mind." (Romans 12: 2.)

TEMPERANCE IN THE SUNDAY SCHOOL.

It was the Woman's Christian Temperance Union that, by long and persistent years of effort, succeeded in convincing the International Sunday School Board that temperance should be taught in the Sunday School. Miss Willard in person presented her appeal several times; now one lesson per quarter is a temperance lesson. Once a year, "World's Temperance Sunday" is observed wherever the International Sunday School Board has control.

Our part as W. C. T. U. workers today is to place in the hands of the superintendents and teachers in the Sunday Schools, special helps that we can get from our own publishing house. These are all especially prepared and helpful to teachers. There is some temperance teaching in all denominational quarterlies, but the literature that the National W. C. T. U. sends out has a special appeal and attractive setting which demands attention. These the directors of the Sunday School department are sending into all the Sunday Schools that they can reach.

The work of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union is mainly educational, and the earlier the education begins the deeper it will be instilled in the hearts and minds of the youth of our land. Education protects against the wily snares which the wet forces are ever placing before the unsuspecting; it gives a confidence that demands respect, and a boldness that will speak out when the occasion demands, either in defense or challenge.

Christianity, temperance—yes, they go together. Not often is the one found without the other, for only as the Christ reigns in the hearts of men is the real meaning of temperance known. The temperance that prohibits not only for one's self, but for the sake of the weaker brother—this is what the Bible teaches, and the W. C. T. U. follows the teaching of the Book of books. The Woman's Christian Temperance Union puts Christianity first, knowing that temperance will follow in the path of true Christianity. Rendering unto the Christ what is His due will bring law observance, for then men will not seek their own, but every man another's good. The law of Christ fulfills all the laws of man.

So today the temperance lessons co-mingle with the other lessons of the Sunday School Quarterly, showing how the men of Bible times stood true to temperance because they were true to God. May we ever hold up the Christian banner to the youth of our land and teach that temperance and law observance always follow in its train. True liberty is the result of such teaching, for only as we are submissive to the will of God do we know what personal liberty really is. So-called personal liberty is not submission, but defiance to the laws of God and man.

For the sake of little children, the W. C. T. U. educates through the Sunday School, that they may early learn the evils of intemperance and so have a "fairer chance to bridge the span between childhood and manhood."

For the sake of the youth of our land, that they may learn the true values of the higher things of life, so that they can combat the evil influences that are ever thrown around them.

For the sake of citizenship, that law and order may prevail, so that economic conditions may be bettered.

For the sake of our country, that it may be the fair freedom's land that we sing about—a place of refuge, a country of peace. First, last, and all the time, the Woman's Christian Temperance Union educates for the sake of the Christ who came to earth and suffered and died, that all men might have life and have it more abundantly, bidding His followers, as He returned to the glory world, to go into all the world and preach His gospel of love and liberty.—Mrs. W. A. Warner, in Virginia Call.

EDUCATIONAL DIVIDENDS.

the poet went in with his knowledge, that neither storm nor thieves could touch, and soon gained for himself an envied place and great fame. He met his former companions begging and said to them, "I told you that I had the only possession that nothing could take from me"; and they went away sorrowing because they had not what he had. In this story we have a moral that every man should learn.

Not only the individual, but religion and the Church receive a great dividend from education. The Church has been singing the "Old Time Religion" too long. To satisfy ignorance in the pews, many an educated, broad-minded minister has to speak with his tongue in his cheek, while the intelligent members of his congregation play golf. In no other field does ignorance wield as much power as in that of organized religion. One of two things must happen—either the Church must lose out or it must heed Solomon's words. Worn and tattered creeds no longer have a place in the Church of Christ. Ignorance keeps them there. You can tell an untutored man about material things, about improved methods in business, and he will listen. You can tell him about scientific facts—save evolution—and he will not only listen, but learn. But try a new religious interpretation on him if you dare! If you are a preacher, you lose his respect, if a politician, you lose his vote; and if you are a school teacher, you catch Hail Columbia. This fact has had the tendency of late to make the ministry lose caste among the other great professions. Would it be an exaggeration to say that the best minds side-step religion? or that too many people are laughing at the Church?

Now, I am not so impious as to think that Christianity will fail, or that it is in danger of failure; but I do wish to make the point that more learning in the pew, makes for more strength in the pulpit, a wider usefulness of the Church, a more speedy arrival of the Kingdom, and a greater happiness for the human race. "Now education trains for leadership and for service, and is a force for recruiting great men for great causes." I can point to no more noble example of this than our own Dr. Harper. Carlyle said that "an institution is the length and shadow of a man." Certainly the Elon we know and love is the length and shadow of Dr. Harper. No greater privilege could come to me as your Alumni speaker than this opportunity to pay tribute in simple words to the one who has such an abiding place in our affections. I cannot imagine Elon without this devoted servant. He has given the best of himself to her, and the best of Elon is his work. We owe him a debt of gratitude we shall never be able to repay. And you know that behind every great man is a great woman.

I like to remember his kindly, friendly greetings on the campus and his scholarly instruction in the class room. I venture to say that no one ever came under his influence here without going away a better man or woman. Did we need advice, we got it, needed we guidance in our life's work, we received it. Nor did his influence end here. After we left, he was the same kindly, amiable, helpful friend. He rejoiced in our successes, wept at our sorrows, and helped us with our problems.

Remember, dear friends, I am not speaking for the Board of Trustees, on whom so much of the success of the College depends, nor for the Church which has so richly benefitted by his labors. Nor am I speaking for the cause of Christian Education to which he has contributed and will continue to contribute so much. "I speak from the fulness of my heart for that great band of men and women who as students and Alumni at this sacred spot have in their lives felt the influence of this great personality. He is leaving, but our hearts go with him in his new work, and I call on you, fellow Alumni, to pledge anew your loyalty to that for which he labored. This is the best way we can pay him the debt of gratitude we owe."

Each of you know how much your education has meant to you in the pursuit of happiness—happiness in your chosen profession, happiness in your future success, happiness in your ability to appreciate the great and the noble in music, art and science. How much would you take for your investment? Is it not paying you a thousand fold? Will it not continue to pay you as long as you live? Isn't it worthwhile in the lives of your friends and family? Understanding and appreciation go hand in hand to develop character, leadership, success—and only through understanding can we really serve. When we invest in an education, we put our investment where thieves cannot break in and steal, where rust will never dim the treasures and moths never destroy.

An everlasting investment—that we make in education—and we receive dividends that shall never grow less—Educational Dividends!

ELON COLLEGE

AN ACCREDITED COLLEGE

of the

CONGREGATIONAL CHRISTIAN CHURCHES OF THE SOUTHEAST

ELON was founded to train Christian leaders for the New South.

ELON has done its task well—one graduate in seven being in the Christian ministry. The other six express Christian leadership in the various professions and vocations. Experience teaches that spiritual leadership must be indigenous.

The South is now a New South ready for an inclusive Church, the type of Church for which Elon has stood for forty years and for which she is prepared to produce capable leadership.

With no Church in the community, save the College Auditorium, ELON has practiced Christian Union for faculty, students, and community for four decades.

Its contribution to Christian Education is nationally known and approved.

Its Christian Education Building, providing laboratory facilities for religious leadership training, is unique and is the first college building of its type in the world.

ELON confines itself to undergraduate liberal arts work with that religious emphasis which befits the Christian College.

In ELON the Congregational-Christian Church has an asset of marvelous hopefulness.

The South needs her Yale, her Oberlin, her Carleton, her Pomona for the intellectual leadership of the United Church. Many regard ELON as strategically located and spiritually endowed to become such a center of illumination and leadership training.

PREACHING LIFE PROBLEMS.—

Rev. Kirk B. O'Farrell, dean of St. Paul's Cathedral, took for the theme of a Sunday morning sermon recently the career of Ralph Barton, artist, suicide, and man about town. Dr. O'Farrell likened the character of the artist to that of Ibsen's Peer Gynt, and said, "Both Peer Gynt and Barton refused to face fate squarely. They did not realize that life is complete only when we face difficulties. It is joyous only when man overcomes the odds which confront him. Life, to be real, must be looked upon as a dare."

RHODE ISLAND CHURCH.—

Rhode Island Congregationalists held three meetings of importance last month. The young people and the women's missionary society met in the United Church, East Providence, respectively on May 6th and May 28th; the conference, at Riverport, May 12th. "There was no pessimistic note, although our churches are keenly alive to the situation of the people in the financial depression. Appropriately to the problems confronting society, Prof. Harry F. Ward's book, "Which Way Religion?" was reviewed by Dr. A. E. Krom, who has been for thirty years pastor of Beneficent Church, Providence, and vigorously discussed.

CONGREGATIONAL-CHRISTIANS.—

The New Hampshire Congregational Conference, meeting May 15th to 17th, in Exter Church—where Abraham Lincoln worshipped when he visited in 1860 his son, Robert, then in Phillips Academy—changed its name to the Congregational-Christian Conference. Fifteen Christian churches united with it, thus consummating the merger of the two denominations in the State. Since this merger has been completed, the merger of the entire Congregational and the entire Christian Churches has been completed in the general united convention at Seattle, Washington, and the news has gone out to the entire Christian world. "Behold, how good and how pleasant it is for brethren to dwell together in unity." "Come thou with us and we will do thee good."

A "SPIRITUAL" WORLD.—

Sir Oliver Lodge, now nearing his 80th year, is quoted as predicting that the next revolutionary development of science will be the discovery of a new world. "It will be a spiritual world which interacts with the material world, and yet is not of it," he says. "The universe is much bigger and more complex than we thought, and we are slowly awakening to the discovery of a new world to which our senses give us hardly a clew." Other scientists in the field of Physics, such as Milliken, and many of the world's noted chemists, are convinced that with materialism and with a mechanistic conception of the universe we have not reached ultimate reality. Many of them are coming to the conclusion that spirit and personality must be accounted for in reality, which the theologian calls God.

STRUGGLING WITH DIVORCE.—

The bishops in convocation in England have been considering the practice of their church in dealing with divorce. The Lambeth conference re-affirmed the general principle that "the marriage of one whose former partner is still living should not be celebrated according to the rites of the church." Lambeth left things as they were; but it seems as if the time had come to frame more definite rules. Some, but not all, bishops hold that there should be a civil form of marriage, leaving those who desire the church's blessing of their union to seek it afterwards. There are many difficulties in distinguishing the "innocent" from the "guilty," and in denying to the "guilty" only the blessing of the church. The Canterbury convocation has appointed a committee to investigate the difficulties which arise in the practical handling of these matters. The York convocation will take similar action. It may be taken as certain, however, that the bishops, whatever their recommendations, will not depart from the general principle affirmed at Lambeth in 1930.

CHRISTIAN CRUSADERS.—

A new movement, known as "The National Christian Crusaders," in Australia, a non-political and wholly religious movement, is making great strides and is stirring up great interest and attracting large numbers of people. The pledge of the movement contains the resolve "To put God first in life, seek His wisdom and to fulfill His will; to swear allegiance to king and country, to obey the laws and to uphold the sanctity of the constitution and the honor and integrity of the commonwealth; to place duty to country before any claims of self; to live simply, to act conscientiously, to work hard, to abjure all extravagance and luxury; to help those in need, to pray daily, to honor God publicly and to serve and sacrifice willingly for the country's good." This is indeed a fine program if they can realize their ideal.

RELIGIOUS EDUCATION.—

Christian, Presbyterian and Baptist Churches of the community of Pleasant Grove Christian Church, Halifax County, Virginia, are holding a joint school of religious education with seven instructors. The school has been in session for one week with a good attendance and great interest, and will continue for the second week. The purpose of the churches participating in the school is to continue the work of religious education in this community in annual sessions of the school, and extend the usefulness of the movement to serve other churches. Courses in Bible study, the Teaching Work of the Church, Training Young People in Worship, etc., are taught, and the prospect is that the Sunday Schools and churches will derive immediate help from those who take the courses of study, for they will stimulate the mature leaders of the churches to carry on the educational courses during the year to prepare better teachers and leaders in worship.

"OPEN" SUNDAY DEFEATED.—

In the session of the Pennsylvania legislature that recently closed at Harrisburg, the Philadelphia Sabbath Association and the Lord's Day Alliance, under Dr. W. B. Forney and Dr. T. T. Mutcher, did gratifying work in the preservation of their present Sunday laws. To liberalize Sunday in that state, 29 bills were introduced. The Denning "local option" bill passed by the lower house 106 to 98, was by the senate law and order committee indefinitely postponed by an unrecorded ratio of 4 to 1. Back of the moving picture and baseball interests in this fight was the prime leader, W. W. Roper, Philadelphia councilman and former Princeton football coach. Fortunately Governor Pinchot and state chairman Edward Martin, of the Republican committee, used their strong influence and helped to save the day.

MISSIONS IN INDIA.—

The echoes of the controversy on the place of missionary work in a self-governing India, raised by the now well-known statement of Mr. Gandhi, have not yet died out. In reply to an Indian-Christian correspondent, Mr. Gandhi has explained his position further. From this explanation it should now be evident to all fair minded people that Mr. Gandhi was not proposing to send out of India all missionaries or stop all Christian work, as some made out. Here is part of his latest statement on the subject: "The attack against me has surprised me not a little; especially because the views I have now enunciated have been held by me since 1916, and were deliberately expressed in a carefully written address read before a purely missionary audience in Madras, and since repeated on many a Christian platform. . . . The missionaries know that in spite of my outspoken criticism of their methods, they have in India and among non-Christians no warmer friend than I, and I suggest to my critics that there must be something wrong about their method, or, if they prefer, themselves, when they will not brook sincere expression of an opinion different from theirs."

NOTES-PERSONALS

Mrs. D. P. Barrett, who came some weeks ago from Porto Rico to Lakeview Hospital, Suffolk, for a surgical operation, is reported much improved and on the road to speedy recovery.

In addition to the list given last week of those attending the Congregational-Christian Council at Seattle, Washington, are Dr. and Mrs. J. E. Rawls and daughter of Suffolk, Va., and Rev. A. P. Hurst of Elon College.

The Presbyterians of the Orange Presbytery in North Carolina, have had charge of West Dormitory, the Christian Education Building, and the campus of Elon College the past two weeks in their School of Methods and Religious Activities. It was indeed a well behaved group of fine looking young men and young women. They report a pleasant stay at Elon and a very successful session of their school. Here is hoping they will make this an annual and permanent affair, as it is a joy to have such groups and schools at Elon.

At the quarterly conference of the First Church at Richmond, Dr. C. C. Ryan, the present pastor, refused to allow his name to be presented as pastor for the year beginning October 1st. Expressions of regret were made at his decision, which he said was final. Dr. Ryan has been with the Richmond church for six or seven years, and his many friends will hate to see him leave. Under his administration the new Religious Education building has been added, which makes this one of the most complete plants in the denomination.

"SHE'S TOO OLD."

Some time ago, a man called my attention to a certain lady teacher that I am very well acquainted with, and said "She is too old to teach." Why, that woman, said I, is one of the greatest learners I ever knew, a student of the most studious, and I would hail with gladness the coming of more such teachers into our school-rooms. To my mind, it is such a tragedy sometimes to discount age as it is youth. I believe in a person's ability to teach just as long as he is a good learner. It is true that the person who is expecting to teach on in his old age, on his reserve, will lose out, but the one who is daily refreshing his mind with the altruistic thoughts of his age will make a safe teacher even in old age.

Benjamin Kidd wrote a book, "The Science of Power," almost at the very end of his life, in which he pleaded for an education which would cause the higher faculties to capture the imagination and dominate the will of each succeeding generation. He knew full well that each generation is indicative of the one to come. He was living for the future, as all great persons do. It is true that previous study is indispensable in helping to expedite today's thinking, but it is not all-sufficient for the future. It was my privilege to hear Dr. Russell H. Crowell twice when he was in his eighties, once in the auditorium of the John B. Stetson University, Deland, Fla., and later in the First Congregationalist Church, in Washington, D. C., and so far as I could detect, he spoke just as fluently as he did the first time I heard him, in 1898. He was a close student all his life, having entered the ministry in his thirty-ninth year and in the face of much criticism from his relatives and friends. He was told that he was too old to enter a new profession. He became one of the greatest ministers of his age, and all because he kept on keeping on.

MISSIONARY MEETING.

The Woman's Missionary Society of the Monticello Christian church held its regular meeting June 19, 1931, with several active members present. Mrs. W. F. Burton, our president, was with us. Business, old and new, was discussed. The program was taken from the little booklet entitled "Yesterday and Today in Porto Rico."

Imaginary visitors told us of the Island, the scenery and the conditions in Porto Rico.

The program was under the leadership of Mrs. T. F. Faucette. Devotionals were read by the leader, taken from the book of Luke. Some very interesting talks and readings were given by the members. Refreshments were served by Mrs. Burton and Miss Russel McKinney.

We love our Missionary Society and look forward to it meeting each month.

METHODS CORNER

BY REV. ELISHA A. KING, D. D.
Miami Beach, Fla.

Sometimes something worth while comes of a special "day" at church. We have already a lot of "days," such as Children's Day, Mothers' Day, etc., etc., but "Family Day" proves useful once a year at least. In former times, families went to church together and sat together. Perhaps they do now somewhere, but I do not know of any church where that is true. Nevertheless it is valuable to encourage attendance by families.

On "Family Day" families are urged to go to church together and sit together for that one day, whether they are in the habit of doing it or not. The program would stress the Home and Children and the value of Home fellowship. Some of the songs that could be sung are, "Brighten the Corner Where You Are," "Home, Sweet Home," and such titles. The sermons might be "Memories of the Old Home," "What I Owe to My Father or Mother," and themes of that kind. It is not so much a matter of suggesting themes, hymns, etc., as it is a matter of getting churches to do something like this.

One of the most beautiful and appreciated services the church can render is the Ministry of Flowers. Most churches make an effort to have plenty of flowers in the church on Sundays. If they do not they ought to. Sometimes it does not get done because no one takes the duty on himself or herself; but it helps to make the church beautiful, and we can better worship in "the beauty of holiness."

After services the flowers may be taken to sick people. A card bearing the words, "Best wishes from Church," giving the name of the minister, or, if preferred, the name of the chairman of the flower committee. Such thoughtfulness to the sick or the aged, carries joy and healing gladness to the one who receives the flowers. And it might also be suggested that flowers from funerals be placed in the hands of someone, perhaps the minister, to see that they find their way to the sick at home or in the hospital. Here at Miami Beach, we do a great deal along this line and in this way to show our interest in people, and help them to recovery. Many fine families have been won to the church this way. It is only a small service, but it proves great in the long run.

CONGREGATIONAL NEWS

REV. E. C. GILLETTE, Editor; REV. F. P. ENSMINGER, and REV. M. J. SWEET, Associates.

REV. GEORGE D. OWEN, pastor of the Union Congregational church of Ormond, Fla., accompanied by Mrs. Owen, left recently for Northfield, Massachusetts, where they will enjoy a vacation of several weeks.

A REGULAR MEETING of the Comrades of Chattanooga district was scheduled for Daisy, Tenn., June 13-14. Owing to the death of a little child in one of the families of the entertaining group, it was considered wise to postpone the meeting until fall.

ANOTHER GREAT HOME-COMING. This, too, was at Fredonia. It was held on Sunday, June 21st, and five hundred people were present. The pastor preached the sermon and the great and popular quartet of Thomaston furnished special music.

REV. AND MRS. O. H. DENNEY, who, for the past season, have been assisting Rev. Don. G. Henshaw at Coral Gables, are now located in St. Petersburg, Florida, working with the First Congregational church under the leadership of Rev. Kerrison Juniper, D. D.

MIDDLE ASSOCIATION will be held in July this year. It needs a complete reorganization. And besides, there are number of Christian churches which will want to be a part of it. It therefore seems wise to postpone the whole thing till the State Convention meets, set aside a full period for "The Local Association" and let Middle Georgia organize. Others may do what they want to

THE FRIENDS of Rev. Edwin C. Gillette, Superintendent for Florida under the Congregational Church Extension Boards, will regret to learn of the death of his mother, Mrs. H. J. Gillette of Hartford, Connecticut, and just eleven days later the death of his sister, who was the widow of Rev. John Luther Kilbon of Brooklyn, N. Y. Dr. Gillette is at Clifton Springs recuperating from a recent illness.

MISS PATTIE LEE COGHILL, Assistant for Church School and Young People's Work for Florida, under the Congregational Church Extension Boards, after a very successful work in Florida churches, has gone to Kentucky, where she will serve churches in that area for the next two months. Miss Coghill expects to spend the month of September in Henderson, N. C., enjoying a much needed vacation.

"The BEST CHAPLAIN I have ever been associated with in eighteen years' experience," said Post Chaplain John deBartonlaben of our pastor-at-large, Rev. Milo J. Sweet, at the close of his active duty training June 23rd, at Ft. Oglethorpe. "There are few things that could be more inspiring than the opportunity of genuine Christian endeavor and ministry to the eight hundred virile young men to whom he was called to give of his best for two weeks."

MIAMI, FLORIDA. The assistant pastor of this church, Rev. Helen F. Lanham, reports having received twenty-four adults and one child into membership since the second Sunday in May. They are having sacred concerts Sunday evenings, including the famous Morris Goldman with his violin. In September, Percy Long, of radio fame, will conduct the evening concert, bringing forty men's voices with him. This church is also offering fresh vegetables and fruit free to the needy people of Miami.

INTERLACHEN, FLORIDA. This church has given Rev. C. DeW. Brower a hearty call to return for a third year's pastorate. The Sunday School united with the Methodist in a two week's Daily Vacation Bible School recently. The attendance was larger than expected. Each day a half hour devotional service was followed by group teaching, then busy work, recreation, and a closing half hour of Bible work and singing. On the evening of the last day parents and friends were invited and the groups gave exhibition of their work. The interest was maintained throughout the weeks.

THE NORTH TENNESSEE DISTRICT held its first Young People's Week and Conference at Robbins, June 6-7. A fine group of young people from Robbins, Deer Lodge and Pine Knot, Kentucky, met for two busy days. Their leaders were Rev. and Mrs. Day, Rev. Lucy T. Ayres, Miss Mildred Taylor, Miss Dorothy French, Miss Marguerite Davison and Mr. Lawrence Roberts. All parts of the lovely Barton's Chapel were used for the various meetings and pretty spots nearby were the scenes of recreation, picnics and Worship services. The young people enjoyed their fellowship and announced that they wished to have another meeting of the same kind next year.

FORT MYERS, FLA. Rev. O. T. Anderson, the pastor, reports progress in the building of the first unit of the new church. The work is being pushed forward and in all likelihood will be completed by September first. There is a fine spirit in the church, and keen anticipation among the members toward the realization of a long cherished dream. Through July and August the church is joining in union services in the City Park, the ministers of the participating churches taking their turn at preaching. Mr. Anderson rejected a proffered nomination as president of the Rotary Club but was elected vice president. He was also re-elected for a third term president of the Lee County Welfare Federation, the organization designed to spend the city and county funds for relief work.

OUR STATE MEETING. "Where will it be held?" That is the question all are asking. Answer. "At the Fredonia Church, near Barnesville, of course." They asked us to come. They urge us to come. They are preparing to give us the greatest welcome we ever had. And every church in Georgia is expected to send at least one delegate and as many more as they can. The committee on program is already fishing for big men for the program. The date of this annual meeting is not fixed definitely yet, but it will probably be near the last of October. The Christian Churches of Georgia will share in this meeting which will mark, it is believed, the organization of "The United Congregational and Christian Conference of Georgia." Of course the exact name cannot be chosen until we meet at Fredonia.

LAGRANGE CHURCHES unanimously vote to unite. They have been trying to get together for a year. Various things have prevented definite action. A few weeks ago they determined to find out a reasonable method of procedure and did so. The result is perfect and unanimous agreement. They are now seeking the best constitution and by-laws they can find for the united group. When this is made and adopted by each, they will come together and adopt it as a single body and then be ready to organize under it and to seek a pastor to lead them in their new program. In all this the two National Boards of the churches concerned are vitally interested and pleased in the action taken and the progress made. It will fall to both of these Boards to further befriend these churches in their new relationship. There may be legal technicalities to be met before the union can be actually completed but that seems to be a minor matter.

FREDONIA, BETHANY, MEANSVILLE to the front: Each has adopted the full apportionment for 1931 missions with the twenty per cent increase. And they definitely plan by vote of the church to pay in two payments, one in June, the last in December. It may be expected that these churches will "paid in full" by December 15th, the time set for all of the Georgia and Carolina churches to complete the 1931 payments. What a Christmas they will have—all missions paid—no last minute appeals and rushes to get the last dollar—no confusion in their annual reports. Other churches are expecting to do this very same thing but we have not heard that they have by vote of the church at a business session or conference actually voted to do so. But, say, why not do this? Wish we could hear from every pastor where this is being done. Send this good news from the Carolinas and Georgia to the pastor-at-large. Rev. L. L. Stanley is the progressive pastor of the above named churches. Strength to his arm. And then another thing concerning these churches, with that of Woodbury added, the Missionary Societies of each church meet in joint session once each year. This strengthens fellowship and encourages loyalty to the great causes. Their last meeting was held with Bethany Church, The Rock, during May. There were forty women present. Is there another parish of four churches that can beat this record? Give us the news.

FLORIDA CONGREGATIONAL YOUNG PEOPLE'S CONFERENCE.

This Conference came to a close June 19th, after ten days of inspiration and achievement. There were more churches represented and a larger number of delegates this year than ever before. It was the opinion of all that this was the finest Conference ever held. Among those responsible for the success of the Conference were Mr. C. A. Hoyt of Jacksonville, who was Dean; Miss F. Adele Masterson of Tampa, Associate Dean and Camp Mother; Rev. H. Samuel Fritsch, D. D., Miss Martha Race, Jacksonville; Miss Annie G. Campbell, Waycross, Ga; Miss Daisy Atterbury, Winter Park; Rev. Thomas H. Derrick, Orange City; Mr. John Rae Chapman, Boston, Mass., who were teachers. Other leaders were Rev. Frederick Held, Jupiter, Athletic Director; Miss Clea J. Carson, Jacksonville, Musical Director; Mrs. Warren Fitch and Mrs. L. E. Burman, Jacksonville, in charge of dining hall and kitchen; Mr. Charles A. Hoyt, Jr., Bugler; Mrs. Chas. A. Hoyt, in charge of camp store; Miss Betty Lou Beverly, St. Petersburg, Camp Nurse; Miss Pattie Lee Coghill, Registrar and Mrs. Roy Baseman, Assistant Registrar. The Camp boasts of a fine eight piece orchestra. There were also made moving pictures of the camp life and services which will be shown during the conference of 1932. Eddie Dubois of Miami Beach was selected as typifying the Spirit of Immokalee; Charles Hoyt of Jacksonville, as representing the Physical side, Daniel Carleton of Miami Beach, as the Spiritual, Ada Milligan of Key West as the Social and Jerry Jacobs of Lake Worth the Mental side of the Four-Fold Life. Some of the churches have already started a fund to send 1932 delegates to the Florida Congregational Young People's Conference.

PRINCIPLES OF THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

- (1) The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
- (2) Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.
- (3) The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
- (4) Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship and of Church membership.
- (5) The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by, all.

THE PURPOSE OF THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

The purpose of this Church is to cultivate a spirit of union among the followers of our Lord Jesus Christ of every persuasion, and to secure, if possible, the associate efforts of all true religious teachers in pointing the wicked to "the Lamb of God who taketh away the sin of the world."

The peculiar doctrines and tenets which have confused and distracted the Christian world are remanded to private judgment, and hence cease to be matters for debate, only in so far as may be necessary to prevent a sectarian influence from entering the Church.

This Church requires no compromise of faith on the part of any child of God in order to communion or fellowship; here, denominational distinctions cease to exist, and Christian love binds the brotherhood together.

The purpose of this Church will be consummated in the conversion of the world and the union of all Christians.

THE UNKNOWN FARMER.

In almost every land there is a monument to the "unknown soldier." In our own land one of the most beautiful and costly memorials is that erected to the unknown soldier. Also in literature and in song the virtues of patriotism and the prowess of the unknown soldier are extolled and glorified. It was the business of the unknown soldier to kill and to be killed. He possibly did both, hence the glory given him.

Did one ever see a monument erected to the unknown farmer? Brief also are the books and few the songs devoted to his heroism and achievements. Awhile ago 1,300 farmers met at a banquet. This was an event, and metropolitan dailies gave it headlines. It was news. It isn't often the farmer meets in that number at a banquet. The toastmaster introduced the first speaker, who, in this instance, happened to be a woman, and she is reported to have gone on and said something as follows:

"The unknown farmer lives and dies a life of service for others, unheralded and unsung. Legion is his name. He lives in your country and mine. He dwells on the plains of the Texas Panhandle and in the farthest recesses of the Kentucky mountains. This unknown farmer doesn't amount to much. He doesn't make a great deal of noise. He is seldom acclaimed in the headlines. Public speeches are a bit out of his line. He flies no red flags. He lives unobtrusively. At elections he votes his convictions. He is one of the general average. No monument has ever been erected to this unknown farmer. He really does not figure very big. All he does is to feed the world."

Yes, all that the unknown farmer does is to feed the world. That is a gigantic task and one essential to human life and civilization. The Yearbook of the League of Nations puts the population of the world down at 1,952,675,000. It is estimated that one billion people live on the land and make their living primarily from the land. This is the major portion of the world's population and constitutes the unknown farmer.

Charles M. McConnell, taking this for his central theme, has written a marvellous book on "The Rural Billion." The book is dedicated to "the unknown farmer," and its pages are a revaluation of the life, the labors, the oppression, and yet the achievements of the unknown farmer. Before one has read many pages, one is aware that the unknown farmer, who is making such an essential contribution to the life of the human race, fails to share in most of those things that go to make up the life and happiness of individuals. The author quotes appropriately Edwin Markham to this effect:

"O masters, lords and rulers in all lands,
How will the future reckon with this man?
How answer his brute question in that hour,
When whirlwinds of rebellion shake all shores?"

The unknown farmer lives on the soil, and is thus close to nature and to nature's God. Yet he realizes that he is not getting his share in the distribution of human products, and because he is unknown, he is exploited by capitalists, defeated in his pursuits by those whom he seeks to feed and to favor, and is thwarted in his designs by those whom his benevolent occupation would help. A long time ago a company of monks, the Benedictine monks, adopted this as their motto: "Cruce et aratro"—by the power of the cross and the plow. As the plow feeds the body of man on the bread necessary to sustain it, the Cross feeds the soul of man on the bread of life. So it is ordained that while the farmer is unknown, he has a right to know the gospel, and the light of that gospel that shines on the dark pathway of plodding humanity. In non-Christian lands, especially, the peasant farmer, the plodding man, the unknown farmer in millions is neglected, condemned to serve out his day in heartless servitude and then be forgotten. Mr. McConnell says that the greatest task before Christians today, and the most tremendous strain upon it is that of giving to the unknown farmer, who plods his weary way in all lands day by day, the bread of life which, if a man eat he shall never hunger.

This is a wonderful book McConnell has written, and CHRISTIAN SUN readers can get a real thrill as well as invaluable information by a perusal of it. It is put out by the Friendship Press, 150 Fifth Avenue, New York, and can be had in paper for sixty cents the copy. We advise every one who reads this line and wishes something worthwhile to think about to order and read a copy of this book. Touch elbows and experiences with some of the one billion unknown sons of the soil who subdue the earth, and take from it the bread that sustains the world. J. O. A.

THE BIBLE, THE HOME, THE CHURCH.

Some people are hard to interest in the church or the Sunday School. Some children do not like to attend church or Sunday School. They are not exceptions to the practice of many grown people. This lack of interest may be changed into a strong desire for all the activities of the church in a short while, if there is a change in the home life.

The writer has observed that there is a difference in a community where the Bible is studied regularly and where it is not. If people read the Bible each day of the week, they are likely to go where it is discussed on Sunday. They like it because they are interested in it. The child who has been taught the Sunday School lesson at home during the week will not be content until he has had a chance to go and recite that lesson. The adult who has read the Bible during the week will not be satisfied to be absent from church and Sunday School the following Sunday.

People who read the Bible habitually at home are usually the ones you can depend upon to be at church and to bear its burdens. These people go because they want to know more about what it teaches. It is the opinion of the writer, that if there was more study of God's word at home, there would be an added interest in all of the work of the church. The Bible is what the Christian Church is founded upon. It is the guide for the church. It is the food for the soul. J. E. M.

THE MERGER.

From the meager reports coming from the Seattle Convention one gathers that an epoch-making religious body is in the making. Evidently Christians and Congregationalists have made up their minds to unite in their organized efforts for righteousness and kingdom-building. On July 1st, the Associated Press carried the following:

"The merger of the Congregational and Christian Churches of the United States and Canada was completed at their joint convention here today with the election of executive officers.

"Dr. Charles Emerson Burton, New York, was elected general secretary, Dr. Frederick Fagely, New York, associate secretary, Dr. Warren H. Denison, Dayton, Ohio, assistant secretary and William T. Boulton, New York, treasurer. All but Denison were Congregational Church officers, while he was formerly general secretary of the Christian Church.

"The second biennial convention of the United Church, as organized here, will be in Cleveland, Ohio. Cleveland was the unanimous choice of the delegates today. The convention which brought 3,000 visitors here opened last Thursday and will close Friday.

"The Rev. William Horace Day, Bridgeport, Conn., was elected president of the home board. Vice-presidents are Dr. George E. Haynes, New York; Mrs. B. L. Newman, Philadelphia, and Rev. L. E. Smith, Norfolk, Va." J. O. A.

"AND NOW ABIDETH."

The human heart loves that which abides. The soul can only reverence and adore that which is permanent, and passeth not away. Paul in writing to the Corinthians said: "And now abideth." He was talking of things eternal—faith, hope, love. These are eternal. They abide. Strike either down, take either from the heart, and there is void and a sad lack. Faith is that which enables one to lay hold on the eternal verities.

Hope, too, is a factor of eternity. Strike down hope, and life itself is dark, the way is weary, and the path ends. Hope is that out of which comfort and courage come, these being the children of time, hope being the mother in eternity.

Love is divine. It was not born on earth. It came out of heaven. It isn't of human origin, for it began in God. Love lifts and brings light from afar, because it is divine and eternal. Love gives strength to the faltering hand, faith to the wavering mind, hope to the despairing heart, and of all things that abide, love is the greatest. "Now abideth." That's why the human heart cultivates and clings to these virtues. They are of God and are eternal. They abide, and in them we go from weakness to strength, from darkness to light, from defeat to conquest. That soul is on the road to victory that diligently preserves and cultivates the graces and virtues which abide—faith, hope, love.

THE NEW PAGANISM AND THE REVIVAL.

In many circles it has become the fashion to attack organized religion. A new paganism is astir in the world, and there are folks who would welcome the news that at last the Churches are declining in membership and tottering toward oblivion.

It is not only the Churches; Jesus Himself is, here and there, the object of attack. The liberals of yesterday were content to write books and pamphlets on "Jesus or Christianity," contrasting the elaborate creeds of the Christian Churches and the blundering deeds of their members with the simple teachings and life of Him whom they call Master. But the iconoclasts of today tell us that Jesus is hopelessly out of date. A professor in one of our women's colleges, writing on "The Twilight of Christianity," refers to Jesus as "an obscure Palestinian peasant" whose teachings, "in so far as we know of them . . . are not only archaic, but even destructive of any advanced civilization."

But the present is not the first time that there has been open and widespread opposition to the Christian Churches. The fact is that the Yale Divinity School, like Andover, Princeton, and other theological seminaries, had its inception in an evangelical revival of religion in the early years of the nineteenth century, and that this revival was preceded by a period of skepticism, infidelity, and antagonism to Christianity.

In the closing years of the eighteenth century, the moral and religious life of America touched a low ebb. At Princeton, in 1782, there were but two students who professed to be Christians; at Bowdoin, in 1810, there was one. A revival at Yale had swelled the membership of the college Church in 1783; but seventeen years later there were but five student members. When Lyman Beecher entered Yale as a student, he found that most of the senior class were infidels, and called one another Voltaire, Rousseau, d'Alembert, etc.

But in that same year, a new president came to Yale College—Timothy Dwight, grandson of Jonathan Edwards. A resolute opponent of the current deism and infidelity, he met the situation with good humor, sound judgment, human sympathy, and the intellectual resources of a great teacher. And in time, he won the battle. In 1802, the college experienced a revival of religion. One-third of the student body professed conversion; and one-half of these became ministers. Three times again before President Dwight's death—in 1808, 1812, and 1815—like movements of religious quickening were experienced at Yale.

What happened at Yale, happened at other colleges. At Williams, in 1806, a group of five students, driven by a thunderstorm to seek shelter under a haystack, talked and prayed together concerning "the moral darkness of Asia" and resolved to go as missionaries to the peoples of that continent. In due time, they addressed a plea to the Churches of Massachusetts to send them; and their plea was answered by the organization of the American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions.

What happened in the colleges happened everywhere, in cities and towns and villages, in settled countryside and in camp-meetings upon the frontier. People turned to God again. Under the leadership of Francis Asbury, Methodism became a powerful counter-agent to the vogue of infidelity, and sent its tireless circuit-riders, like shuttles weaving some vast web, throughout the length and breadth of the country. Methodists, Presbyterians, and Baptists united in the sacramental meetings which brought about the great revival in Kentucky. Alexander Campbell and Barton W. Stone moved men mightily by their plea for a simple apostolic Christianity. In New England, from 1797 on, the Congregational Churches experienced the revival of religious life which is generally known as the evangelical awakening.

The evangelical awakening checked the spread of infidelity, gave fresh life to the Churches, and brought about a remarkable increase in their membership. It was responsible for the beginnings of home missionary effort and of the foreign missionary enterprise. It led to the founding of Christian colleges and academies and to the establishment of theological seminaries for the training of ministers. It stimulated the organization of philanthropic societies, initiated the Sunday School movement in this country, and gave impulse to the beginnings of religious journalism.

The time in which we are now living is in some respects strangely like those closing years of the eighteenth century which I have described, when skepticism, atheism and infidelity were the vogue. We, too, have been at war; and war has been followed by extravagance and by an appalling prevalence of crime and immorality. Old conventions are shattered; restraints are denounced as unwarranted repressions of individuality; liberty is confounded with lawlessness. Russia, like France in that earlier day, has embarked upon a warfare against Christianity. John Dewey is not unlike Hume in his emphasis upon habit, his despite of metaphysics, his denial of eternal truths, and his limitation of the human mind to the observation and handling of particular facts. Where Tom Paine once pamphleteered against the God of the Christians, we now have Henry L. Mencken. Atheism has again become blatant, and societies devoted to the propaganda of irreligion are striving to make headway.

The foes of Christ have never been more open in their antagonism than today. It is not merely that men are drawn away by pride and lust, by love of comfort, by spiritual dullness and inertia; there are those who deliberately reject Him. His way of life is derided as a code for weaklings and slaves; His revelation of God is ridiculed as a mere phantasy of the imagination. Personal liberty, free expression, is the cry of a jazz age which is fast losing all standards of goodness and beauty and truth.

The new paganism cannot last. I have too much faith in human nature and in the love and power of God to believe that this sort of thing can go on for very long. There are already signs of its breaking up. The disillusionment and the sense of futility which it begets have been poignantly described by Walter Lippmann in his "Preface to Morals," and by Joseph Wood Krutch in "The Modern Temper."

I believe that we are upon the threshold of a great revival of religious faith. The world is beginning to sense its spiritual hunger. Just as the closing years of the eighteenth century, with their barren deism and open infidelity, were followed by the evangelical awakening, the great revival, the Methodist movement, and the fervors of pietism, we may expect that the denials and excesses of present unbelief will lead to a new spiritual awakening. In some respects it will doubtless be like that of the early nineteenth century—it will be quiet, without noise or cataclysmic overturnings, but as pervasive as leaven and as powerful as the rays of the sun. In other respects, it will be different. It will, I think, be less individualistic and more social-minded; less emotional, and better grounded in the understanding of the laws of nature and of life; less given to escape from the world, more eager to remake the world and to build therein the city of God.

Such a revival will not come through the mere reassertion of old authorities or the reiteration of time-worn dogmas. We are living in a different world from that of our fathers. We need, not the forms of the old-time religion, but its spirit. The times demand of us, not the mere transmission of a moral and spiritual heritage, but creative thinking and adventurous action. We must labor and pray for insight and understanding to discern what is right, and for power to do the right in this vastly complex world of our day.

To this end, we must, in all of our thinking and doing, consistently maintain a social point of view, and have courage to explore the possibilities of the social gospel. Let none think, because I mention self-indulgence in drink and sex as vices of present-day paganism, that I am blind to its subtler and more perplexing aspects—to the economic injustice, industrial exploitation, political chicanery, and race barriers which cramp and hinder uncounted multitudes in their quest for the abundant life, impede the growth of genuine democracy, and prevent the realization of human brotherhood. I cite the problems of drink and sex because they are so obvious, so challenging, and so fundamental. There is no hope of developing a conscience sensitive to the subtler evils of social injustice in the minds of men who cannot think straight and live decently in these respects, who are distracted by drink and obsessed by lust. We are hearing today that society has no right to regulate what have hitherto been regarded as personal habits, and that what men and women choose to do with their bodies is solely their own business, and in no sense an interest of society. These are counsels that darken knowledge. It is as a necessary measure of social welfare and in defense of the common good, that society passes laws prohibiting the liquor traffic, and expressing its interest in the integrity of marriage and family life. We must gain, keep, and refuse to surrender, the social point of view in dealing with these as well as the other perplexing problems of our time.

We must, again, in all of our thinking and doing, maintain the educational point of view; God's work demands not less, but more, of human intelligence than the transient interests of the day. In morals and religion, no less than in politics, business, industry and the sciences, the quest of truth demands severe self-discipline, a full measure of honest labor, and complete intellectual integrity. We must seek again to make religion a vital part of the education of our children; we must regain for the cause of Christ the great colleges of this land which were founded in His name; we must make our own faith intelligent; we must accept and use to all good ends the tremendous resources which the sciences and the arts are placing at our disposal.

Finally, we must, in all of our thinking and doing, maintain the evangelistic point of view. We are not our own; we are God's husbandry, God's building. Our lives well up from forces wide and deep as the universe; they are rooted and sustained in ultimate reality. It is the faith of the Christian that the heart of reality stands revealed in Jesus Christ, that God is what Christ showed Him to be. That faith, that gospel, has lifting, saving power. Evangelism is not to be defined in terms of method, but in terms of attitude, spirit and faith. It is a great mistake to limit our thought of evangelism to itinerant revivalists, or even to preachers and preaching. Any method, any movement, any institution that brings the gospel of Jesus Christ to bear in vital, effective, saving power upon the lives of human beings, men, women or children, old or young, is in the true sense of the term evangelistic.

In the power of the Spirit of God, let us meet the paganism of our day with a social gospel that is content to leave no part of life and no child of God outside of the kingdom, with an educational program that enlists in the cause of Christ the whole range of human powers, and with an evangelism wide enough to include the full redemptive purpose of Him who came that men might have life and have it abundantly.—Luther A. Weigle, in Federal Council Bulletin.

SUFFOLK LETTER.

Dr. L. E. Smith, of Norfolk, and I left on June 21st for the National Council of the Congregational Churches and the General Convention of the Christian Church, in Seattle, Washington, which met on Thursday, June 25th, and will close on July 3, 1931. We had a safe and interesting trip through cities, mountains and States. We changed at Cincinnati and Chicago, and were on the way four nights and three and a half days. We reached Seattle at 8 A. M., Thursday, June 25th, the day the Convention met.

We were assigned to the residence of Mr. and Mrs. George Cameron, 4238 12th Avenue, N. E., near the University, and about four miles from Plymouth Congregational Church, where the sessions of both bodies were held. It is a great church with ample rooms for displays of mission, educational, and publication exhibits, and for meetings of various boards, seminars, and offices.

The Christian Convention held daily meetings, with an attendance of ninety, which was considered a goodly number so far away from where they live and do their regular church work. The main subject for discussion by both bodies was the effort to work out the details of the union which was decided at the Piqua, Ohio, Convention.

The approach to the final settlement of differences, and the effort to reach a name and organic relations for united service, was sincerely Christian, and the elimination of denominational interests was praiseworthy. It was an honest effort to reach a common ground free from denominational prejudices. It is hoped that wherein that idea fails at the present, that future agreements will harmonize all differences.

A disappointment and a sad feeling filled the minds and hearts of all the delegates present in the General Convention and the Southern Christian Convention, caused by the illness and absence of Dr. F. G. Coffin, president of the General Convention. In his absence, Vice-President D. B. Atkinson presided over the General Convention.

Besides the president of the Southern Christian Convention, Dr. L. E. Smith, the following were present from the South: Mr. and Mrs. M. J. W. White, Mrs. A. N. Johnson and son, Lloyd Johnson, of Norfolk; Dr. J. E. Rawles, Mrs. J. E. Rawles, Miss Ann Rawles, Jape Rawles, and Dr. Rawles' sister, Mrs. Gattling, and Rev. W. W. Staley, of Suffolk; Rev. F. C. Lester, Miss Jewel Truitt, Miss Stella Lotts, and Miss Boothe, of Waverly. All of the above were from Virginia. Dr. W. A. Harper, Mrs. W. A. Harper, and Dr. A. W. Hurst, of Elon College, N. C.; Dr. S. L. Beougher, Mrs. S. L. Beougher, Dwight L. Beougher, and Mrs. Dwight L. Beougher, of Wadley, Alabama. We felt proud of the attendance of these twenty-two persons from the South, coming more than 3,000 miles to be present at this meeting of two denominational bodies that are seeking to perfect unity between themselves in the hope that it may help to unify other Protestant bodies for the extension of the kingdom at home and abroad; for, there is a widespread feeling that a divided Church can never win the world to Jesus Christ. "United, we stand, divided, we fall."

Victory is often won by surrender, and when a woman marries, she surrenders her name, but she wins a husband and a life companion, if he is not the wrong man. The Christian Church may give up some things dear to loyal hearts, but the hope is that what they lose the Kingdom will gain.

It is the earnest desire and prayer that the future may reconcile all differences, Christianize all attitudes, and actually unite all in the proclamation of the gospel of Jesus Christ, not only on the home field, but in foreign lands, and make education Christian in the Biblical and spiritual sense.

W. W. STALEY.

ROANOKE, ALA.

Dear CHRISTIAN SUN: Please tell your family of readers that yesterday, (June 28th) was a "hot day." I was at Spring Hill Church in Clay County, Ala. Yesterday at 11 a. m. we had a good Sunday School and a fine service followed. Not a large crowd, however, but a quiet, worshipful spirit was manifested by the Audience. I somehow think that the possibility for this little church is great even with the adverse conditions prevailing in the country at this time. They are in the midst of a severe drouth. Farmers are very much disheartened at the present time. Crops and pastures are, in many sections of the state, suffering immensely for rain.

Our summer school of "Christian Education" will be held at the College building in Wadley, Ala., the second week in August. We will have a fine program with a well equipped faculty. Will not each pastor take the matter up with the several churches, and get each Sunday School, C. E. Society or Church to send at least one representative from each church to attend the school. This matter must be advertised persistently from now until the meeting.

Again if any Church or Sunday School or Young People's Society desires to have a Daily Vacation Bible School conducted in their church during the Summer vacation, please get in touch with myself real soon, and we will arrange the work at once. I hope to be able to report next week, something of the cost or expense of the school. I am praying the Lord to open up some way for our young people to show their faith by their works. Surely our churches owe it to our young people to give them a chance. Our country Revivals will soon begin, but cannot every church arrange for their pastor to attend the School of Methods the second week in August. The pastor will need the inspiration and help. Please give them a chance, and insist that they take it. Our pastors are Lord-worked men, and many of them don't even know what a vacation is. Now any church can afford to send their pastor to this school. Show him that you are interested to the extent that you will enjoy it with him by helping him to go. I am pressing this matter because it is an investment for the church. Let all the pastors who are in reach of the school, in Georgia or Alabama, Christians and Congregationalists, please take notice that you are invited.

VALLEY LETTER.

We are now approaching the end of our conference year and are planning for our next conference session. We are to meet this year at Mt. Olivet, Green county, Va., August 5th, 6th, 7th. Mt. Olivet is east of the Blue Ridge, near the post offices of Dyke and March, about seven miles from Stanardsville, and about twenty miles from Charlottesville. Those desiring information about roads, distances, entertainment, etc. write to the pastor, Rev. B. J. Earp, Harrisonburg, Va.

We have recently held our Sunday School and Christian Endeavor Convention at Bethel. We had a splendid convention in every way. It was well attended, and the program was fine. Dr. Atkinson added much to the convention as he always does to any gathering he attends.

Mission rallies were held at Whistler's Chapel, Concord, and St. Peter's. These rallies were well attended, I believe better than our rallies in former years. Dr. Atkinson was present at the first two, and, as might be expected, gave excellent mission addresses.

Revival meetings were held this spring at Newport and Dry Run. Good congregations attended both meetings, some interest was manifested, and we hope much good was done. Five accepted Christ at Dry Run.

Memorial services were held at Leaksville first Sunday in June, and at Timber Ridge third Sunday in June. Large congregations attended these services, many former residents of these communities returning to their old home neighborhood to meet with living friends, and pay a tribute of respect to departed loved ones.

The next few weeks will be busy weeks in our work here. Conference apportionments and other finances of the church are to be brought up, and everything gotten in shape for conference. Even though there is complaint about financial depression the work of the kingdom should not be allowed to suffer. The activities of Satan's kingdom are not slowing down nor waiting for money to get more plentiful. If the church slows down, what can we expect? Let there be no slowing down, but rather a quickening of our pace in the Master's great work.

A. W. ANDES.

Harrisonburg, Va.

DENDRON, VA.

Instead of having a "summer slump," the C. E. Society of the Christian Church is doing a splendid work. The attendance and interest is fine. This has been brought about largely by the fact that the society is using the book "Fifty-two Varieties" secured from the International Society of C. E., Boston, Mass. We are having a different type meeting each Sunday and doing away with the routine programs. The following have been used very successfully:

Campfire Meeting

Automobile Race

Radio Broadcast

Railroad Trip, our four delegates taking us on an imaginary trip to Winchester State Convention.

We feel that this book will be of valuable service to any society that uses it. We are also using the group method, having the society divided into three groups with a leader for each group. The group having the best attendance at each meeting is given a star. We also realize the benefit of socials to a C. E. Society and try to have one each month.

Our young people are not forgetting their missionary task, as we have a well organized Young People's Missionary Society which meets every third Sunday.

The young people of Dendron are leading the older people in unity. They have a choir of about forty members, consisting of the young people from the Baptist, Methodist and Christian Churches, and sing whenever invited at the different preaching services. They are really in earnest, as is shown by their regular attendance at the weekly practice and the good musical programs they have rendered. In the winter these young people come together one night a week for skating, and during the summer months they have hayrides, picnics, etc. These young people are forgetting about denominations and working together for Christ.

DO YOU KNOW HIM?

You have seen him. He is rather tall, gray haired, his beard is long and covers his face. In his walk he holds himself erect. His gait has not slowed up, in spite of the years. Nearly always he wears a dark suit. His overcoat is either hanging over the chair back of his desk, or thrown across his shoulders. His glasses are not worn down on the end of his nose, as perhaps, you expect them to be, but they have a habit of getting lost among the books and papers that clutter up the table.

The windows of the class room are closed whether the days are warm or cool, except for one in the back, which is always open a few inches. There is, in addition to the steam heat of the building, a small electric heater beneath the desk, and on cool days he stops often from his walk to and from across the room to place his feet as near the glow as the wire shield of the heater will permit. The yard stick that he uses often, to point out places on the map, reclines across the books, when not in use.

Unlike some college professors, he does not take up the entire class period propounding questions that do not pertain to the lesson. The students are allowed to ask him questions, and he is quick to answer; long experience and much learning have given him the knowledge at his finger tips.

A learned man, yes, with several degrees from a large University, and as devout a student now as any of his pupils. Some call him "a teacher of the old school." What does it matter? He has, perhaps, forgotten more than the average college professor ever learned. His understanding of human nature and the needs of young people is truly remarkable. Every man or woman fortunate enough to take his courses, went away with love and respect for him in their hearts, and a broader outlook on life.

Students have gone from this institution, (Elon College) to all parts of the world. Some have returned, on visits, to sit again and listen as he kindles the fire in younger souls. They have never failed to get new inspiration and help from words of wisdom that fall from his lips.

An old man, you say? Yes, in so far as men measure years—Seventy some odd—yet as old and as young as the best.

Forty years have passed since he started the first pupils through difficult passages of Greek, Hebrew, Latin and Bible.

The new theories advanced by scientists, do not trouble him. What difference, he says, whether there be other planets, or other souls living on them? The God who made this one is able to create many more.

This man is able to prove to you that God is the Master of all Science, and these mountains that men build for you become mole hills in comparison to some of the wonders that God, through him, can help you discover. They are not on the other side of the ocean, or on other planets. People often look far away for new things, when at their feet lie the mysteries of a universe. They hope to find success and happiness; but in a different way than that provided.

The grass and trees do not grow more beautiful in Palastine, than on the smallest church lawn in this land. The birds sing as sweetly in the old orchard that surrounds your farm, as in the South Sea Islands.

Men travel far, and walk many miles over rugged hills to fall down and worship at a sacred shrine. Does God answer their prayers any oftener? Is He more mindful of their heartaches and discouragements, than He is of that one who goes into the secret chamber of the humblest home in America? Can science explain to your entire satisfaction the smile and sparkle of a baby's eyes, or the blue of a robin's egg? People are in many ways like Martha of the Bible story, they are troubled about many things that have no permanent value, and neglect the better cup.

For forty lively years he has been the thorn in the flesh to those who would instil in the minds of young preachers, this fantastic modernism, that has as its ultimate goal, the passing away of the original framework of the Scriptures. He is Christianity's most daring exponent.

Fragments of his teaching are embodied in the hearts of men and women scattered over the earth, and from sundry pupils and class rooms, can be heard precious words that live and move, and lift again their hearers as they did the speaker, when he drank from this fountain.

Should a stream, with such health, and life-giving waters be prevented from its daily course of irrigation,—just because it has served its purpose well—to form a lake of stagnated water? Without motion, this is what would happen to us all.

Too old to teach, you say? Can a man get too old to learn? Does the water from an old spring cease to be refreshing and sweet—when it kept clean and in use—because of its age? No. Age is the purifier, and constant use is the working off of the dross. Age will make it sweeter, and in the years to come, men who seek a refreshing fountain in a dry land will say: "The good has been spared to the last." A few protected springs like this will stop the thirst of thousands of weary souls, yet to travel this way, that they might not thirst again.

A few men like this could solve the problems of the future generations of the world. God forbid that his kind should ever pass from the college class room.

ROY COULTER.

Make sure that however good you may be, you have faults; that however dull you may be, you can find out what they are; and that however slight they may be, you had better make some effort to quit them. . . . Therefore, see that no day passes in which you do not make yourself a somewhat better creature; and in order to find out what you are now. . . . If you do not dare to do this, find out why you do not dare, and try to get strength of heart enough to look yourself fairly in the face, in mind as well as in body.—Ruskin.

MISSIONS

REV. J. O. ATKINSON, D. D., Secretary.

A PRAYER.

O great defender, God, send thou upon those who administer the church a divine sense of thy light and help. In understanding and faithfulness make the church true to its responsibility for the right use of every resource. By the summer-suspension of worship periods the church, like the little child, is saying "Goodbye, God, we do not need thee July and August," and thus companionate souls are deprived of holy intercourse with each other and of the sweetest Jesus-touch. Father, make Thy light the church's light, we humbly pray, Amen. "L"

A PASTOR DEVELOPS MISSIONARY ZEAL.

A remarkable illustration of the way that missionary zeal may be made to develop under the plan of concrete information about missionaries supported by the church, is found in the history of the Lake Avenue Baptist Church of Rochester, New York, during the twenty-year pastorate of Dr. A. W. Beaven. At the beginning of that period, the church numbered 1,191, at the end, 2,700. Then they were supporting one foreign and no home missionaries. They are now paying the salaries of sixteen foreign missionaries recruited in greater part from their own number. One pair consists of a medical missionary and his wife in India, another an industrial missionary and his wife in India, and there are also two unmarried women in India. In Africa is an evangelist and his wife. In Japan, a Japanese kindergartner, principal of a training school, and four Japanese pastors in the Inland Sea district. In China, a Chinese pastor in West China, who was formerly a member of this church during his student days. In Burma and Assam, two women teachers. In its home-mission work, the church ministers to the Polish and Italian Baptist churches in Rochester; supports a teacher among the Indians, a leader of a Christian center among foreigners in Youngstown, Ohio, and the leader (and his wife) of missions to Mexicans in the Southwest.

This growth has been steadily carried on while the church was struggling with a crushingly heavy church-building project and at the same time lifting a big load for the New World Movement. The more they grew, the more they gave. No backward step was taken because of very heavy building costs. The church has never consisted of rich members.—Helen Barrett Montgomery.

A JAPANESE CHRISTIAN.

(We hear so much of those who oppose, or are indifferent to Christianity in Japan, that we wish Sun readers to read the following sketch of a real Japanese Christian in high life, who, for a quarter of a century, has fought valiantly and successfully the battles for Christ under the blood-stained banner of the Cross. This story, taken from Helen Barrett Montgomery's "The Preaching Value of Missions," is more thrilling than the life of a romantic adventurer, for, indeed, such is Shimada, a knight-errant of the Christ in Japan.—J. O. A.)

This sketch of a Christian Japanese has to do with a reformer who is also a legislator. Saburo Shimada was by birth a Samurai, born of that proud fighting caste in the social life of old Japan. He was liberally educated and, after a term in government service, took up journalism. This brought him to Yokohama and into contact with some of the greatest of our missionary force, Dr. S. R. Brown and Guido Verbeck. Under their tutelage in the English Bible, and their influence as men, he became an open follower of Jesus.

In 1890, Parliament was established, and Shimada was elected to the House of Representatives from Yokohama. For thirty-three years, he retained his seat as a representative of Yokohama. For many years he has been Speaker of the House. "During his long service as a liberal statesman, he has stood firm on a platform of three planks: the people's right to rule, reform at home, and a peace policy abroad."

This policy brought him into conflict with the imperialists, the reactionaries. His life has been threatened, he has held his seat protected by a guard; he has been stabbed while on the floor of Parliament; he has been clubbed again and again—but not once has he given ground. Meanwhile, slowly, but irresistibly, the tide of democracy has been coming in, while the influence of Christianity has ever broadened.

In Japan, as in America, there is crooked politics. Mr. Shimada revealed to the astonished gaze of the Japanese people a story of corruption, sale of offices, protection of vice, that rivaled the revelations of graft in Tammany-ridden New York, Republican-ridden Philadelphia and gangster-ridden Chicago.

This knight of Christ could not keep out of the fight against the evil of impurity—a canker that is eating out the heart of Japan. He headed an organization that is helping by agitation, protest and enlistment, to rouse the heart of young Japan against this hoary evil.

The loveliest feature in the life of this crusader is that through all the years he has been crusading for Christ. For twenty-three years as editor of Mainichi, one of Tokyo's leading dailies, he has flung across the empire his message of love and freedom. He too, has an overmastering conviction that "apart from Christ and his gospel for the individual—his salvation, his personality, his rights, his possibilities—Japan can never reach her high destiny."

NOT EXTRAVAGANCE, BUT EFFICIENCY AND ECONOMY.

Each dollar spent in this missionary business accomplishes ten times as much as a dollar spent at home. Take the case of one suburban town near New York. Each dollar given for the hospital in that town provides one-seventeenth of the expense of one patient. In our foreign-mission hospitals each dollar given by the home church provides the support of ten patients.

In the schools in this same town there are 3,314 pupils; the cost of the schools per annum is $395,000, or $119 per pupil. The grade of these schools does not go above the high school. On the foreign field the total cost of our schools to the home church, including the salaries of all missionary teachers, is approximately $1,500,000. There are 110,653 pupils—an average cost per annum of $13 per pupil as compared with $119—and our foreign schools include colleges, universities, and graduate schools. The business is efficiently and economically done. It challenges any one's closest scrutiny.—Dr. Robert E. Speer.

The Mission Period—March, April, May and June—is over, but we know some churches have taken the offering and have not yet sent it in. Every dollar collected should now be sent in that it may go on its intended God-given errand of saving souls in the name of our Lord.

We are grateful for every dollar sent in.

BLUE LAWS IN JAPAN ???

One thing certain, no one can blame this on the Puritans, Out in Seoul, Korea, three religious education groups, Shintoists, Buddhists, and Christians, have petitioned the Educational Department, as well as other Government departments, to leave Sunday free from Athletic meets, examinations, and other secular pursuits, in order that the day may be used to better advantage for religious education purposes. It is expected that a conference of these three faiths will take place before long, reports Rev. William Woodard of the American Board in Seoul.

THE OVERFLOW OF VITAL RELIGION.

By ASHLEY DAY LEAVITT.

It is common knowledge that to save the tree we must feed its roots. The first sign of threatened decay is oftentimes the withering of the top-most branches of the tree, and the easiest thing to do is to cut off the dying limbs, and to keep doing so, even though the tree is left with less sweep and outreach and fruitage. But an expert will rather adapt a vigorous feeding program for the roots. He will get back the tree at the earliest possible moment to robust vitality. Then will he restore the widespreading branches, delightful shade and abundant life-giving fruit.

So it is with the Tree whose leaves are for the healing of the nation. The superficial observer will ask, "What is happening to our missionary cause?" but the man at the heart of the thing will reply, "That is not the question. This is it: what is happening to the Christian Faith itself in the lives of the people who profess it? True missionary leaders are not concerned to save a pet interest. They are concerned with the meaning of the Christian Faith and with the experience thereof. Given true Christian experience, and the missionary cause will flourish. The most vital, the most satisfying, the most courageous Christian faith and experience always expresses itself in missionary effort. It always has; it ever will. So feed the roots with what they most need."

And right here we can say that one who understands present-day trends in the religious life of our churches can well be hopeful with regard to our great missionary enterprises. To be sure, if we must lay the present problem to the fact that a new skepticism has invaded the Church of Christ as to the worth of Christ to the world, or that selfishness and materialism have captured the rank and file of His nominal followers, it is a dark picture indeed. But if the problem is more largely due to the transition period between old and new certainties; if at present, though not quite sure of our ground, we are nevertheless going on to find new confidence in new measures and new interpretations of value, then we can tighten our belts with courage, and work and wait for a better day.

This halting in the work for a world-wide Kingdom of God must not discourage us. We need not be downhearted because a fine confidence as to what ought to be done and how to do it gives way temporarily to uncertainty and to a paralyzing modesty. We need not fear that our forward movement has been retarded permanently while lines are being adjusted. This does not necessarily mean the decay of religion. In fact, we have good reason to expect better things, now that the supply base is being re-stocked and reserves are gathering.

We can find encouragement in the vast amount of activity today in individual parishes. No survey that I have seen gives sufficient place or importance to this highly significant local industry. Hundreds of churches are busy as they have not been in years, if ever before. There is building, improvement of equipment, multiplication of services in great variety. Much of it seems completely centered in the individual church and its parish. That may be the reason that it has not been correctly appraised. It is seen as a new provincialism in religion, a withdrawal from large social and international concerns. So it seems.

But the mere desire to build impressive edifices, to enjoy elaborate services, or to get ahead in some local competition, does not explain this widespread parish activity that in most cases is very absorbing. It is rather an eager and in some cases an anxious effort to prove that the Christian religion can be a vital force and an inspiring influence in personal and community life. It is an answer to the challenge that modern liberal Christianity has no power.

The people of modern communities are coming to the churches with all the needs made evident by the living conditions of the present day. They are not thinking of old formulae or new doctrine. They are asking that religion be real to them, give them poise, stability, peace and courage—in short give them knowledge and assurance of the real values of life. This effort comes after a blank space in our religious history when these same multitudes, so far as they had any religion, were living on an inheritance that had not been interpreted in terms belonging to the post-war world.

Just this thing is being accomplished in many and many a church. It is just the beginning of the thing, but a necessary beginning. It is good so far as it goes. It has evangelical fervor, the spirit of sacrifice, and is Christ centered. It promises much.

The only weakness about this most conspicuous phase of current Christian activity is that it does not go far enough. Let us not be impatient at this point. Every missionary leader is repeatedly saying that the root of the matter is that the Christian should feel that in his religion he has something worth communicating, so good that he will inevitably want to share it. Somehow or other in the transition period the sure sense of unique value in the Christian religion was weakened for multitudes of Christians. Now they are in the way of getting it again. And they are getting it in a way that will have incalculable significance for world Christian service. What they are getting is an experience of the worth of Christianity, in this very world in which we are living, and in which all men are living. Not the American world, not the Western world, but the wide world with its secularism, its materialism, its greed and corruption, its rivalries and denials of human values.

It has been demonstrated that the cause of world Christianity cannot win the new supporters it so urgently needs by repeating the phrases potent a generation ago. There must be a new Christian experience, not new in substance but new in apprehension, that can be the basis of a new generous impulse for wide sharing. Such a new experience of the unique worth of Christ and His message for the world we live in, is more than started. Multitudes have it. Many have it who in their new enthusiasm are a bit selfish and do not yet see the universal implications of their experience.

This is the right line. It is a real evangelism, a revival of spiritual life in the churches. More power to it, and more patience with it as it gets under way. May more churches be drawn into this intense, confident effort to demonstrate that today Christianity, as in every generation, can be the supremely vital thing in the actual life of men.

It remains to be said that the churches should not overdo this local concentration. It is being overdone. It is natural to overdo it. Many churches are having so wonderful an experience of a revival of real religion in their field that they are afraid of being diverted. Some leaders are responsible for this spiritual self-centeredness. Nothing more short-sighted could be done. If anything is true in the history of Christianity it is true that you cannot build a spiritual life that will keep clean and vigorous without moving as soon as possible from the personal to the social emphasis, from the local to the world-wide. The new vigor of the spiritual life in many churches will surely stagnate if allowed to confine itself at home.

A wise leadership will see that this is done. We have enough to go ahead on in the newly found worth of Christ as physician, guide and inspiration to men in the tests of present day life. The other men living anywhere in the same world are as needy as we. There is sharing still to be done. Every individual Christian experience, every local spiritual development will gain immeasurably by helping to create the wider religious experience. So many Christian men and women of the present generation, having found their way to new appreciations of the meaning of Christ and His message for life, validated again the greatness and the glory of the faith as God's gift to all mankind.—The Missionary Herald.

May the sense of Thy presence with us at every moment of our lives bring to us a great fear and a great joy. Thou art too holy to look upon sin; help us therefore to be pure. Thou art too tender not to pity the weak; be compassionate therefore when we miss the highest good. In Jesus' name.—Amen."

Discussion.—

Hymn.—"Abide with Me," or other suitable hymn.

Benediction.—May the God of grace who hath called you unto himself in Christ, perfect, establish, strengthen you; and to him be the glory forever. Amen.

Thoughts on the Topic.

For nearly two thousand years of Christian history the followers of Jesus have been developing certain doctrines which they have felt to be central in the Christian religion. The conceptions of these doctrines have changed from generation to generation. In our own day we feel we are more practical than those of the past, and we are inclined to ridicule our forefathers for the great emphasis they placed upon doctrine and the little importance they attached to moral living. We even boast that we are free from doctrine and that it makes little difference what we believe as SOCIAL SERVICE IN THE EARLY CHURCH.

LESSON III.—JULY 19, 1931.

GOLDEN TEXT: "He himself said, It is more blessed to give than to receive."—Acts 20:35.

LESSON: Acts 4:32-35; 6:1-7; 9:36-39; ii. Cor. 9:1-15.

The Gospel in Action.

Acts 4:32-35 shows in an effective way the gospel in its personal and social application. The disciples with great power gave witness of the resurrection of the Lord Jesus, that is they emphasized the personal aspects involved in preaching the gospel, and in their unity of mind and heart they expressed the gospel of life. But this was not all. There were those in their midst and of their own number who, because they were poor, or were a long way from home, or were persecuted, were in danger of want. The apostles thought that their religion ought to do something about this condition. Therefore distribution was made unto every man according as he had need.

There is, of course, something to be said on both sides. If the world should take socialism literally and divide up all the wealth of the world equally among all men, things would not stay that way long. There are large numbers of people who are poor because they are what folks call "sorry." If they had their share of this world's goods, they would not keep it long. One wonders for instance what that negro who recently won over two hundred thousand dollars on the Derby races, will do with his money.

But on the other hand something must be wrong with the system that enables five per cent of the people in the United States to control ninety-five per cent of the wealth of the country. It seems that somehow or other the principles of Jesus have not been applied in their social applications. Personal religion must come first; but religion that remains personal does not come up to the ideals of Jesus. He would have his principles and his spirit applied to all the social relationships of life. War, unemployment, prostitution, poverty, disease, international problems, and a host of other modern problems can be solved only as the gospel in its social principles is applied to them.

The Laymen of the Church at Work.

An acute problem arose in the early church. The Greek-speaking Jews felt that they were being discriminated against because their widows were being neglected in the daily ministrations of charity. Something had to be done, and the apostles recognized this fact. But they felt that they were not the ones to do it, for they were already doing something very vital—preaching and praying. They therefore suggested that seven laymen be appointed to look out for the material interests of the church, while they continued to give themselves to prayer and to the ministry of the word. They were laying down a sound principle of action, which should be applied to individual churches. In many cases, the minister is nothing short of an errand boy, doing things which the average layman could just as well do. And it would be better for the minister and the laymen and the church, if the laymen did these things. Many a minister is so eternally busy with the details of administration that he does not have, or does not take, time to read and think and meditate and pray. The minister is to furnish spiritual leadership and impulse to the work of the church, but he cannot do this if he is to be superintendent of the Sunday School, teacher of the class, sexton, errand-boy, and general handy-man for the entire church and its organizations. Many a minister has lost his effectiveness in the ministry because the mass of details has kept him from seeing the larger horizons.

A Woman Full of Good Works.

Dorcas loved her Lord, and because she loved Him she tried to do something for her Lord's people. She could not do much, but such as she could do, she gladly did. She was handy with a needle and the things she made were a means of ministering to others and of serving her Lord. Let it be said here that those who sincerely desire to serve their Lord can find some effective way of doing it.

Ministering Through Our Gifts to Others.

Paul did not seem to make any apology for asking the Corinthians to make an offering to the Jerusalem Christians. He simply reminded them that God had enriched their lives and that they ought to want to share with others these blessings. He also reminded them that as they sowed they should reap. There was to be no grudging spirit, or sense of compulsion other than the compulsion of a grateful and thankful heart. There is a suggestive meaning in the word which we translate "cheerful" in the words, "God loveth a cheerful giver." The Greek word actually means "hilarious." God loves one who can give in such a way that he gets real joy out of the giving. Thanks be unto God for His unspeakable gift. It is more blessed to give than to receive.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

long as we live right. Few would doubt but that there has been undue emphasis upon doctrine in the past. However, it should be remembered that there is a close connection between our beliefs and our conduct. Therefore it is important that each one come to intellectual grips with the great doctrines of the Christian religion.

In the Old Testament we have the term "Father" used some seven times in reference to deity. Generally, however, God was the God of power and might, an austere being to be obeyed through fear. With the coming of Jesus, we have a new conception of His nature. He became the God to be loved because of His love for us, the universal Father. All men were thought of as the children of God.

Since God is the Father of all, it follows that mankind should live as brothers. Jesus gave his life in an attempt to make this the ideal of man.

In the earlier ages religious teachers obscured the historic Jesus by theological speculations, but today there is being awakened an intellectual interest in Jesus. His life is being brought more into our practical living. There are some systems of ethics that approach in a measure that of Jesus, but Jesus remains unique in that his ideals give men the power to realize the ideals of their own lives.

In the day that Jesus lived, the religious leaders thought of sin as disobedience to the observance of the externalities of the Law. Jesus taught a new approach to religion. Men sin when they harbour wrong thoughts that lead to doing evil to fellowman. Sin is anything which keeps us from a complete co-operation with the Father in our personal living and in our efforts to lift our fellows.

FAMILY ALTAR

CONDUCTED BY H. E. ROUNTREE
One of our Chaplains in the U. S. Navy.

"If thou wilt make the Almighty thy treasure . . . then shalt thou delight thyself in the Almighty . . . and thou shalt make thy prayer unto Him and He will hear thee."—Job 22: 25-27.

BY DR. AMOS R. WELLS.

MONDAY.

MR. H. A. A.

"When thou dost alms, let not thy left hand know what thy right hand doeth."—Matt. 6:1-4.

One of the most remarkable of secret-givers is Harvard's "Mr. H. A. A." Known first as "Harvard Anonymous Aquaticus," and lately as "Harvard Alumnus Aquaticus," he has given the university $350,000 for its new swimming-pool, and for two years he has kept in closest communication with Harvard's director of athletics, yet his identity is as much a mystery as ever. All his communications are typewritten, even the signature. He uses all sorts of letter paper, from the cheapest to the most expensive. He shows the most intimate acquaintance with Harvard's athletic affairs, and must have been on the ground often, but no one knows him. Sometimes he is in the far West, sometimes in the East. He has received two medals from the Harvard Athletic Association, one awarded to "Mr. H. A. A.," and the other to "Mr. Anonymous Aquaticus."

The whole affair is an illustration of the fun that comes from the secret doing of good. Mr. H. A. A. is evidently enjoying himself. Any one enjoys himself if he does not let his left hand know the benefits his right hand is bestowing. It is Christ's way, and Christ knows best.

Prayer.—Our Saviour, save us from pride in our giving. Make us humble benefactors. What have we that we did not receive? Why should we be praised for sharing what has come to us as gifts? Teach our two hands to keep their secrets. Amen.

TUESDAY.

GOD'S EARLY RISING.

"Jehovah hath sent to you all His servants, the prophets, rising up early and sending them."—Jer. 25:1-6.

We never think of God as sleeping, but the Old Testament writers did, and they thought of Him as an early riser. That is, they thought of God as alert, eager, busy about His work, and His work was always the blessing of His children.

Over and over, the heroes of the Bible are mentioned as rising early. It was part of their heroism to be no sluggards, no devotees of the bed. They anticipated the sun. They heralded the morning. They ran to their tasks. They were wide-awake.

"The morning hour has gold in its mouth," says the proverb. It has in its mouth much more than gold: it has honor, and wisdom, and power. Prosperity and sloth never go together. Neither do sloth and godliness. Those that are bent on serving God in the world are bent on beginning betimes. The couch makes a poor workshop.

Prayer.—As Thou dost rise up early to send us our blessings, O God, may we rise up early to receive them. As Thou art prompt with Thy toil, O Supreme Worker, may we be alert and eager to begin with Thee. Thou art the God of the morning, Thou Sun of righteousness. May we catch Thy earliest rays. Amen.

WEDNESDAY.

THE IDENTIFICATION PLATE.

"O Jehovah, Thou hast searched me, and known me."—Psa. 139:1-12.

The large department stores find great difficulty in keeping clear the addresses on the parcels they must deliver. Every name is spelled in many different ways. Persons with the same name, and even the same initials, live on the same street. Therefore, a department store in Boston has furnished its 80,000 charge customers with nickel plates, on each of which is stamped the customer's name, address, and charge number. Each clerk has a machine which takes the plate and, with it, prints a stamp on the sales slip, so that there can be no mistake, either in the records or the delivery.

This difficulty, thus solved, leads us to think of God's multifarious dealings with His millions upon missions of children. How accurately He knows us! How perfect is His delivery to us of warnings, of leadings, and of blessings, all fitted precisely to our needs! The more we think of it, the more we marvel at the divine arrangements, the workings of Providence. Verily, we have a wonderful Body!

Prayer.—Our Father in heaven, we trust Thee implicitly. Thou dost make no mistake. Thou knowest us altogether. We place our lives in Thy hands, sure that Thou wilt do for us what is best. May we never fail Thee, as Thou wilt never fail us. Amen.

THURSDAY.

PROPER PROPAGANDA.

"Sing forth the glory of His name; make His praise glorious."—Psa. 66:1-4.

A leading paper now carries the advertisement, "Propagandist. Public speaker with personality and unusual powers of persuasion available"—of such a date. It is a new business; or rather, an old business come out into the light.

Christians should enter that business in a definite and purposeful way, and they are doing it more and more. The same newspaper told about the oratorical contest week to be carried on by the National Loyalty Commission of the Presbyterian Churches. Local meetings will listen to young orators who will advocate law observance. The best speakers will enter Presbyterian contests, and from these contests national winners will go to the Presbyterian General Assembly to receive awards. Here is propaganda for President Hoover's law-enforcement plan, and incidentally for the Presbyterian Church.

Every Christian, in similarly ingenious ways, should be seeking to increase the honor of Christ.

Prayer.—Help us, O Christ, to advance Thy kingdom. Make us ardent advertisers of Thy cause. And to Thy great name shall be all the glory. Amen.

FRIDAY.

THE SCIENCE OF GOODNESS.

"Attend to know understanding."—Prov. 4:1-9.

Dr. Hamilton Holt, the president of Rollins College, Florida, has established a novel department of study, presided over by the famous Southern novelist, Mrs. Corra Harris. It is to be a historical and philosophical study of evil.

This study, Mrs. Harris says, "is usually taught by people mentally corrupt." She would have it taught by people of intelligence and conscience. She would have people good and she would have them know why and how they are good, and understand the causes of evil and how they may be uprooted.

The vices among the young of the present day are the product of ignorance and folly. The boys and girls simply do not know how silly they are in doing such things, and how foolish they appear to the instructed. True education will correct all this.

Prayer.—Great Teacher, we would enter Thy school, knowing it to be the university of all manliness and womanliness. We would free ourselves from the ignorance of folly. We would know the science of goodness. And we come to Thee as the only Teacher. Amen.

SATURDAY.

THE TRANSMUTATION OF EVIL.

"The eyes of the blind shall see out of obscurity and out of darkness."—Isa. 29:17-24.

The radio message, the other day, of Senator Schall, of Minnesota, was inspiring. Twenty-three years ago, when he was just starting out on his career, he became blind. Probably that calamity would have been the ruin of his life if it had not been for the courage of his gallant young wife, who ever since has been eyes to him. He had to recast his entire mental processes. He declares that he would not exchange this development for all the eyes in the world.

Something of this is what Isaiah meant when he said that "the eyes of the blind shall see out of obscurity and out of darkness." There is a power that comes from weakness which is infinitely beyond the strength that never has known failure and blight. The Lord knows what is best for us when He sends pain and distress and disappointment. To the heroic soul, they are the raw materials of glorious success.

Prayer.—Thy leading, O God, never goes in the wrong direction. Thy providence foresees clearly. Grant that we may walk in the ways of Thy appointment forever. Amen.

SUNDAY.

WHEN SEED CATCHES.

"When any one heareth the word of the kingdom, and understandeth it not, then cometh the evil one, and snatcheth away that which hath been sown in his heart."—Matt. 13:18-23.

When a gardener sows grass seed, he watches eagerly to see whether it is going to "catch" or not. If it "catches," it fructifies, it sends its tiny roots down into the soil and its tiny blade up into the air, and soon the bare ground is covered with a carpet of lovely green. But if it does not "catch," the seed is dead and wasted, and the whole process is to be gone over again.

The hearing of sermons and the reading of good books and the perusal of the Bible is often a process of not catching. There is no germination. The ground has been packed hard by the feet of worldly interests. There has been no softening rain or divine grace. The hot sun of passion and greed has baked the soil. It has been impossible for any seed to "catch."

We are likely to find fault with the seed. It is no good, we say. The florist is a fraud. We'll try some other dealer next time. But often there is no next time. For the sowing of grass is not an easy matter, and few realize how much care and practical wisdom are required. We go at it haphazard, any way, any time, any soil. No wonder so many lawns are bare or straggling.

Prayer.—Master Gardener of men's hearts, teach us Thy beautiful art. Instruct us in the ways of wisdom. Lead us to fruitfulness and beauty. Make us to know the way of understanding. For Thy name's sake. Amen.

THE CHRISTIAN SUN'S PULPIT

REV. JOSEPH W. FIX, Preacher.

THE COMMAND OF CHRIST.

By BRO. JNO. G. TRUITT.

"Go ye therefore, and teach all nations, baptising them in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost: teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you: and, lo, I am with you always, even unto the end of the world. Amen."—Matt. 28: 19-20.

The acid test of religion is unselfishness. Selfishness lies like a sharpened axe at the root of Christianity. A person cannot be thoroughly selfish and be a Christian. Christianity moves from self like the fragrance of a rose. No more can a person be a Christian and be at the same time selfish than a rose can be fragrant and yet fail to give off its perfume. A church that is constantly giving all that it can get back to itself alone is dying. And all it can get will not be enough to give it a place in the sun. The church that runs its school simply to teach religion to its pupils might as well close its doors, but the church that teaches its pupils with a purpose back of the teaching akin to the purpose that prepared a small group of disciples to carry out the words of our text is justified in its teaching.

I stood in the presence of a great forest, and was handed a new, sharpened axe. The axe was not giving me in order that I might possess a curio, nor simply to add an axe to my collection of things; but that axe was given me that I might blaze a trail. There was work to be done across the wood, and I held the axe in my hand. But not for long because there was the challenge to break a trail, and I went at it.

Jesus had been doing something to a group of followers. They had seen Him heal bodies, and they were being given power to transform lives; they had seen Him raise the dead, and they were being given power to inspire men and nations; they had seen Jesus die nobly upon the cross, and they were being given power to live mightily for Him in the field of conflict and need; they had seen Him resurrected, and they were being given power to overcome doubt, fear, persecution, fire, sword, stake and scaffold.

A memory, too, had been lodged like a mighty passion of love in their lives. One night Jesus took bread, and brake it, and taught them that thus would His own body be broken for them; then He took the cup and gave thanks, and assured them that His blood was going to be spilled for the remission of sins. He asked them to eat a bit of the bread, and to sip from the cup; and begged of them that as oft as they did it they would do so in remembrance of Him. And what a memory that was! When came the commencement day that closed the marvelous school, and graduated that class of ordinary men, now made extraordinary by their great Teacher, Jesus standing before them said: "Go . . . Teach . . . Baptize."

And the church was off on its mighty course of conversion, blessing, saving, teaching, healing across a sore and needy world. A disciple stood up one day and preached the things he had seen and felt, and three thousand souls were converted. Another tried it, and they bound him and stoned him; but since his Lord had given him power to overcome, as he was dying he cried, "Father, lay not this sin to their charge," and his sermon and life were both ended. But were they ended? There was one young man standing in that group looking upon that upturned face, and listening to that out-turned prayer that never rested after that day until he had preached Christ in Rome itself, and all the regions round about, and for good measure he was directed to write many books of the New Testament.

Jesus had told His followers to do three things in three names. We may remark that the three things are three sides of the same thing, and that the three names are one. "Go . . . Teach . . . Baptize; Father . . . Son . . . Holy Ghost." It has been the Father's to create the possibility of going and to go, it has been the Son's to teach both by precept and example so that He is known as the great Teacher, and it has been the Holy Ghost's to baptize with inspiration and power. What a trinity of goodness was to be made to live in the lives of those hearing that command that day! And how needed still is its complete fulfillment!

In that day out before Calvary, lensed eyes of their Lord was a world, needy, sore, sin-cursed, hardened, and hungry; and in His heart was a passion and a love which would bring them succor and peace. He had said, "Come unto me, all ye that are weary and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest." Standing there in the power and glory of His resurrection He issued His marching orders of the church until this very day. And did those disciples go? Yea, and it took sacrifices, means, time, life, all; they had heard His command, they had witnessed His life, His death and His resurrection, and they would fail him not. Through fear of the Jews, through prisons of the Romans, through dungeons of the earth, through storms at sea, and stonings in cities, here and there they left one beheaded or burned, but they never thought of turning back.

"Teach," and this they did. Whether it be an Ethiopian servant, or a multitude of thousands; whether it be in a prison in Jerusalem, or a dungeon in Rome; whether it be in a rich reception room of a great Cornelius, or the upper deck of a sinking ship; whether it be among the beasts of Ephesus, of the boy Timotheus, they taught the life, death and resurrection of their Lord Jesus. In Jerusalem and in Rome, in Asia and in Europe, like the heralds they were, they taught until the first few persecuted Christians of the first century became the victorious millions of the third century. Christ had given them a message for a purpose and they were fulfilling that purpose.

Furthermore, they were commanded to baptize. And methinks their baptism was far more than a mere rite, but their converts were baptized with the Holy Spirit after they had believed. Did their converts "stick?" Or were they enrolled one Sunday and gone before next? Indeed, their loyalty and fidelity has filled the world with a fragrance it can never forget. Fathers, mothers, children died in dungeons, and at the stake before they would deny their Lord, or surrender their faith. And how their world needed the baptism it was being given!

The promise of the never-ending presence of the Christ with His followers brings us at one sweep up to the present day. Is there need in our advance age for Jesus to look with a bleeding heart, and stretch uplifted hands, and give us such a command today? To ask the question is to answer it in the affirmative. One paragraph from a letter of this month reads: "Several hundred thousand people of various creeds and races have been torn from their homes and sent into exile as the result of the Soviet 'Five Year Plan for the Liquidation of Christianity.' The unfortunate victims are hearded into rough barracks, unsanitary and overcrowded, compelled to labor in swampy forests, or mines, without sufficient clothing in a climate where there is winter for nearly ten months in the year, and with barely enough food to keep body and soul together. The scanty ration of flour is "stretched" with ground bark. Pitiful letters reflect the unutterable distress in such sentences as this: 'They say typhus has broken out in one of the barracks. Thank God! At last the end comes.' If we could turn the world-map as a globe we would see it suffering for the lack of Christ, and the things He has to offer. And what is more, although we know we are far from doing our full duty, we would find heroes and heroines in every quarter of that globe doing their sacrificial best to carry out the command of Christ.

Our people cannot afford to whine or putter about what we are asked to do in carrying out the command of our Christ. Rather let us rejoice in such a Lord, and in such a mission.

THE CHRISTIAN SUN

1536 East Broad Street, - - Richmond, Virginia

Christian Orphanage

Dear Friends:

We want to depart just a little from our usual letter this week and take this space to say something in regard to THE CHRISTIAN SUN. Three years ago the Southern Christian Convention elected the writer circulation manager for THE SUN, and the work was to be done in connection with our duties as Superintendent of the Christian Orphanage, and without salary. For three years we have given lots of work and much time to this work and we trust that we have accomplished something for our church paper.

There are many items of expense that enter into the printing of a church paper. There are the items of correspondence, the postage on the paper, which amounts to nearly $25.00 a month, addressing, mailing and drayage, and the printing of the paper itself. All of these items together amount to nearly $150.00 per week. And in order to pay this we are dependent upon our subscribers paying up their subscriptions.

THE SUN goes into the homes of nearly three thousand weekly to keep them informed as to the activities of your Elon College, your Mission Board, your Christian Orphanage, and all the other activities of the Church. It is very important that we keep THE CHRISTIAN SUN shining and making its weekly visits into the homes of our people.

What is the part we want you to play? What is the help we want you to render? When you read this letter turn to the label on the front page, and if your subscription has expired, please mail us a check for two dollars to renew. Two dollars is a small amount; but if two thousand of our people will mail us a check for two dollars we could pay our bills promptly and save any embarrassment.

Are you willing to stand by the paper that has been such a pleasant visitor in your home for so many years? Let loyalty to your church paper and to our denomination inspire us to come to the rescue of THE SUN at this time when it needs your loyalty and support so badly.

Remember you are not making a donation. You are going to get value received and more. You will receive fifty-one copies for your money. Less than 4 cents a week. We can certainly lay aside that much for our church paper. I appeal to you, my dear friends, with all the earnestness of my heart to mail us a check to renew your subscription. THE SUN needs you now.

CLOUDBURSTS AND GOLD.

Apparent difficulties may lead to good results. A cloudburst in Colorado sent such large streams of water down the hillsides that in many places earth which covered gold and silver ores was washed away. On one hill a landslide almost completely uncovered the vein of a gold mine, so that the owners no longer had to work underground. The troubles that come to us are often used by God to draw us closer to Him and so to reveal His grace in us that we can be a help to others. "Who comforteth us in all our tribulations, that we may be able to comfort them which are in any trouble, by the comfort wherewith we ourselves are comforted of God." (2 Cor. 1:4). —The Bible To-day.

The GEM TESTAMENT has been steadily growing in popular favor ever since its first appearance.

In size, 3 3/8 x 4 1/2 inches, it is not much larger than the Vest Pocket. It is also the only Testament of its size with large bold type and pronouncing text.

The edition on India paper is ideal, and we know of no better gift at the price than one in the finer bindings.

MARRIAGES

ALGER-HOUSDEN.

Mr. Russel Alger and Miss Elyon Housden came to my home May 30, and were united in the holy bonds of wedlock. They hail from the Newport community, and are members of the Newport Christian Church. The groom is the son of Bro. and Sister T. Z. Alger, and the bride is a daughter of Bro. and Sister G. W. Housden, all of whom are members of the Newport Church. These are fine young people, and have the best wishes of their many friends for a happy and useful married life.

BAKER.

George Walter Baker, son of the late Avery and Jane Brame Baker, was born March 11, 1851, and died May 24, 1931, aged 80 years. He was married to Miss Mary Madison, April 6, 1876, and for more than 55 years, this devoted couple had traveled life's pathway together, through storm and sunshine.

Although not a member of the Christian Church, Brother Baker made a distinct contribution to the church at Howard's Chapel, where the family attended, and supported the cause. He was a member of the Friends' Church at Guilford College, uniting there when it was known as "New Garden."

He leaves as a monument to his memory a fine family of Christian children, respected and prominent as citizens. May the blessings of our heavenly Father attend and comfort all sorrowing hearts. Funeral services were at Howard's Chapel in charge of the writer and Rev. M. T. Smathers, May 25th. Burial was in the family burial lot.

CRUTCHFIELD.

The members of the Pleasant Ridge Missionary Society wish to express our deepest regret and sorrow for the passing of one of our most faithful and earnest members, Mrs. Ida Crutchfield, on June 2, 1931. We found her always ready and willing to help in any way when called on.

We greatly miss her cheerful presence in our meetings and may we strive to imitate her example by being more earnest and faithful in God's work.

To her bereaved family we extend our heartfelt sympathy and recommend that a copy of these resolutions be sent to the Christian Sun, a copy to the bereaved family and a copy placed on the minutes of our society.

WELLS.

Mrs. Sarah Elizabeth Wells, daughter of R. H. and Martha Spencer, was born in Halifax County, Va., February 28, 1857, and died at her home in Person County, N. C., on June 17, 1931, aged seventy-four years, three months and seventeen days. On May 2, 1880, she was married to W. H. Wells, who died October 17, 1928. To them were born four sons: Robert Henry, deceased; Stephen H., Clarksburg, W. Va.; Clifton H., of Edgeton, Va., and Fleming Edward, of Semora, N. C.

Sister Wells joined Lebanon Christian Church, Semora, N. C., when young, and was loyal to her church till death. The minister always found a cordial welcome in her home. It was my happy lot to be her pastor for nearly fourteen years. She delighted to talk of her former pastors and their visits in her home. Among them were Long, Holt, Peel, Johnson, White, Wicker, Klapp, Fleming, Foster and Patton. She loved her neighbors and always spoke kindly of them. There was an atmosphere of welcome to all who came to her home.

Besides the three surviving sons, there are ten grandchildren.

The funeral was conducted by the writer from the home on the afternoon of June 19th, and burial was in the family cemetery. A large crowd was present and the floral offering was beautiful.

One who was a real home-maker, a devoted wife, an exemplary mother, a real neighbor and a sincere Christian, has gone to her reward; but the influence of her faithful life remains here to bless and guide others.

ELON COLLEGE

AN ACCREDITED COLLEGE

of the

CONGREGATIONAL CHRISTIAN CHURCHES OF THE SOUTHEAST

ELON was founded to train Christian leaders for the New South.

ELON has done its task well—one graduate in seven being in the Christian ministry. The other six express Christian leadership in the various professions and vocations. Experience teaches that spiritual leadership must be indigenous.

The South is now a New South ready for an inclusive Church, the type of Church for which Elon has stood for forty years and for which she is prepared to produce capable leadership.

With no Church in the community, save the College Auditorium, ELON has practiced Christian Union for faculty, students, and community for four decades.

Its contribution to Christian Education is nationally known and approved.

Its Christian Education Building, providing laboratory facilities for religious leadership training, is unique and is the first college building of its type in the world.

ELON confines itself to undergraduate liberal arts work with that religious emphasis which befits the Christian College.

In ELON the Congregational-Christian Church has an asset of marvelous hopefulness.

The South needs her Yale, her Oberlin, her Carleton, her Pomona for the intellectual leadership of the United Church. Many regard ELON as strategically located and spiritually endowed to become such a center of illumination and leadership training.

CRUTCHFIELD.

Mrs. Ida Beason Crutchfield was born Nov. 7, 1873, died June 2, 1931, age 67 years, 7 months.

On May 28, 1892, she married Mr. W. M. Crutchfield and to them were born nine children: Mrs. A. B. McFarland, Jerry, C. A., B. C., S. W. C., Florence C., Mrs. P. H. Smith, Mrs. S. C. Gardner, and Revs. G. C. and H. E. Crutchfield. There are thirty-two grand children and three great grandchildren.

She attended services the night of June 1st and died the next day at Summerfield where she had gone for treatment by a physician.

About 40 years ago she united with Pleasant Ridge Christian Church, and was a faithful member until death.

She was an active member in the Missionary Society of her church, and the last meeting was held at her home.

She was a good woman and was loved by all who knew her. She will be missed by her pastor and the members of Pleasant Ridge Church. She lives in the children, two of whom are ministers beloved in the Christian church.

The pastor had charge of the funeral, assisted by Revs. Hill, L. A. Nall, J. S. Carden and Drs. C. H. Rowland and W. C. Wicker. God bless the memory of this good woman.

There were several ministers at the funeral, and a large number of sorrowing children and friends.

CRIME DECREASING, BUT NOT MUCH.—

A nation-wide report given out from Washington recently, shows a decrease in all types of crime save murder and aggravated assault, in more than 1,100 cities through the country in May, as reported by the department of justice. The daily average of all crimes reported, decreased from 1,568 to 1,504.

PATTON HEADS CONGREGATIONALISTS.—

Dr. Carl Patton of the First Congregational Church, Los Angeles, Cal., was elected moderator of the National Council of the Congregational Church at Seattle, and he therefore becomes co-moderator of the newly formed Congregational-Christian union, which closed its sessions at Seattle last week. We are all Congregational-Christians now, and have been since the two churches merged. We were in part called Christians and in part called Congregationalists before the merger but now we are named Congregational-Christian churches without changing either the character of our policy or the character of our people.

MISSIONS IN INDIA.—

The East India Association, which renders excellent service by arranging public discussions of Indian and other problems, last week invited the Rev. William Paton to open a discussion at Caxton Hall, London, upon the attitude of Mr. Gandhi and other nationalists to Christian missions under the future constitution of India. Mr. Paton, who is one of the secretaries of the International Missionary Council, speaks with great authority upon Indian problems. He said that in Mr. Gandhi's recent words upon missions there could hardly be read a threat to exclude missionaries from India.

NOONDAY RELIGIOUS SERVICE.—

Station WGN, Chicago, has inaugurated a noonday religious radio service under the direction of the united ministry of Chicago, which is being conducted by various pastors. The directors of these services include Rev. Harold S. Stewart, Rev. Stephen E. Keeler, Dr. Herbert L. Willett, Rev. E. F. Tittle, and Rev. Joshua Oden. Among others co-operating are Dean Shailer Mathews, Dean John Timothy Stone, Dr. F. C. Eisenlen, and Dean Frederick C. Grant. Those who tune in at one o'clock in the afternoon will enjoy a religious program worth while, for all these men are capable of rendering a great service in the execution of their programs.

RELIGIOUS EDUCATION.—

The Presbyterian, the Christian and the Baptist churches of Halifax county, Va., have just closed a Vacation Bible School in which there were one hundred pupils attending. There were eight teachers furnished by the several churches participating in the school, two of these were from the Presbyterian Board of Religious Education at Richmond, Va., four from the Presbyterian church of the community of which Dr. T. S. Wilson has been pastor for fifty years, and two from the Christian church at Pleasant Grove, Va., of which this scribe is pastor. This school will be held annually and from the progress made during the first session, I am sure that great good will result.

GIFT TO SALVATION ARMY.—

Mr. William Wrigley, Jr., who last winter donated the use of a building on Union Avenue, Chicago, to the Salvation Army as a lodge for homeless and jobless men, together with a check for $16,000 for its operation, has given the building outright to the army. Mr. Wrigley states that he is making the gift because he is so well pleased with the use to which the building has been put. Through the winter there were 499,397 registrations at New Start lodge, as the building was called; 1,152,202 meals served, and 411,145 beds provided, all without charge. The total cost of these services was $100,115.26, including the $16,000 from Mr. Wrigley, and $84,115.26 from the governor's emergency relief commission's fund. The spirit of such work as this should inspire others to follow in service to humanity and thus fulfill the spirit of Christ.

SUMMER SCHOOLS.—

Methodist pastors have been to school for two weeks at Southwestern University, enjoying the instruction of such men as Bishop Edwin Holt Hughes of Chicago, Dr. Clovis G. Chappell of Houston, Dr. Paul Vogt of the University of Oklahoma, and Dr. Earl Kernahan of Washington, D. C. A similar school with an equally distinguished faculty is in progress at Southern Methodist University, Dallas, Texas. The Christian University of Dallas is fostering a short term school for its young people's leaders, while Baptists are beginning their young people's assemblies at various points. The Congregational-Christian churches are doing good work for their young people, but there is room for more work for the pastors in the southern conferences. Let us hope that soon there will be provision for an annual pastors' school of two weeks each spring, and that all pastors will enroll as students.

NEW NATIONAL NEWSPAPER.—

Apparently progress is being made in the plans for a daily newspaper which will play down crime, be fair to prohibition, and in general be Christian in its attitude toward the great issues of the day. A letter has just been issued to the ministers of New York City telling them of the coming publication and urging them to secure subscribers among their parishioners. It is pleasing to note in this letter that this paper will be first of all a great newspaper in the sense of giving news. No other kind of paper would have a chance. If this is not done, its subscribers will be in the position of the socialists and the communists, who have to read the capitalist press to get the news. Too many newspapers seek to know what the public wants rather than the true interpretation of the news of the day. The over-emphasis of crime, murder, bloody conflicts, and corruption fills the minds of youth with the wrong conceptions of life and breeds crime rather than brings a better condition of society.

CORNER STONE LAID.—

On Wednesday, June 24th, the corner-stone was laid of the $3,000,000 International House at the University of Chicago, the gift of Mr. John D. Rockefeller, Jr. Six nations were represented by their consuls, and students of many nationalities were present. The invocation was pronounced by Dr. James M. Stifler; President Hutchins set the stone in place; Bruce Dickson, adviser of foreign students, read the list of contents of the corner-stone box; and Dean C. W. Gilkey made the address. Dean Gilkey said, "International understanding is the essential purpose of the house, and international understanding is necessary for the solution of the world problems that are confronting us today." International House will be available to foreign students in all Chicago institutions of higher learning. Living accommodations will be provided for 500 and club facilities for 2,000. A limited number of American students will be admitted. Such beneficence and such a spirit toward all nations will go far to cure the race rancor with which the world has been cursed so long, and will tend toward world peace.

CONFERENCES AT UNION SEMINARY.—

Union Theological Seminary has devoted the last two weeks of this month to summer conferences. These summer sessions at the seminary have become a well established feature, for this is the tenth on church work in city and industrial communities, and the eleventh for ministers and religious workers. The speakers have been outstanding men keenly alive to the problems of the day, such as James G. McDonald, chairman of the foreign policy association, Dr. Coffin, president of the seminary, Norman Thomas, well known socialist leader, and many others of like caliber. And what these leaders have been saying has been significant. The unemployment problem has been to the fore, for Dr. E. T. Divine, chairman of the committee on social ideal of the Federal Council of Churches, has been pointing out the menace and challenge of this depression. Incidentally, he attacked the "yellow dog" contracts as "an unjustifiable perversion, requiring workers to sign away their elementary rights." He was also outspoken on the subject of war, declaring that, "the institutions of religion should never again be used as agencies in the support of warfare."

NOTES-PERSONALS

"Great lives become great by meeting and overcoming great difficulties. Read biography, and you will find this true."

Evangelistic campaigns are now on in many of our churches, and here is hoping all will have just what we call the meeting, a revival. Surely if the Church ever needed reviving that need exists today.

In last week's issue of THE SUN was an article entitled, "The New Paganism and the Revival." This article, found on page five, is worthy of profound study, and is well worth re-reading. It is true history and religion combined.

Rev. J. H. Warren, pastor of our Ocean View Church, makes a splendid report for June, the church attendance ranging from forty at the morning service to one hundred and twenty-seven at the evening service; the Sunday School attendance for the month averaging eighty-three, and the offering at Sunday School averaging $7.50 per Sunday. Some of our older schools may take notice and profit by this young, growing church and school.

Pastor and people of Rosemont Church celebrated last Sunday the fourth anniversary of their starting to raise the funds with which to erect their beautiful and commodious house of worship. This house was dedicated last February, and the people are so happy over their achievement that they celebrate annually the beginning of their great work. Among the speakers last Sunday were Rev. J. F. Morgan, pastor, H. L. Bondurant, treasurer, Albert L. Gwynn, O. F. Smith, W. H. Farmer, Mrs. O. S. Mills, Miss Mary Halstead and others.

Rev. B. J. Howard, 232 McCauley St., Chapel Hill, N. C., hands the editor the following notice: "My services as minister of the United Church, Chapel Hill, will terminate September 1st. Should any church desire my service for next year, I would appreciate some communication between now and August 20th." Brother Howard has been pastor at Chapel Hill for some years and is well known in the Conference and among the churches in rural districts he has served acceptably. It is hoped he will not be left idle, as the ministry needs him in its active service.

Rev. H. C. Hilliard, R. 5, Louisburg, N. C., a member of Mt. Auburn Christian Church, Warren County, N. C., and a graduate of Elon College at the recent commencement, is open for work as a minister and will be glad to correspond with any church or field desiring his services. Brother Hilliard was ordained at the last session of the Eastern North Carolina Conference, made a good record as a student at Elon College, and gives promise of success as a minister. We commend him to any church desiring a young man just beginning, though well qualified by training in education, for the ministry.

Rev. W. T. Scott, writing about United Church, Salisbury, says: "The interest in our work seems to be increasing, especially among the young people. We now have a young people's class of over 20 in the Sunday School, and out of this class we average around 15 present for the Church services on Sunday morning. Our church has been represented this year, for the first time in some years, at the Elon Summer Conference—we have three present, and we had 10 present at the N. C. and Va. Christian S. S. & C. E. Convention—a two-day session. We have just closed an attendance contest in the Sunday School, and we find the effort to be of substantial assistance to our work. We have made an increase of 39 in our enrollment and the average attendance for the past six months has been nearly 75 per cent."

It is deeply deplored in our Christian circles that Rev. F. G. Coffin, D. D., president of the General Convention of the Christian Church for the past sixteen years, than whom no assembly has a finer and a more efficient presiding officer, and who has done so much to bring about union between Congregationalists and Christians, was at the last prevented from attending the Seattle Convention. Dr. Coffin is under the care of a physician, and the condition of his health at the time would not permit his going to the Convention. The prayers of the united brotherhood go up in his behalf, sustained by the deep anxiety, that his health will soon be fully restored. Dr. Coffin's friends and admirers are only limited by those who know him. The people of the Church love him not only for his efficiency and ability as an executive, but because of his fine Christian spirit and deep consecration.

KEEP A SWEET SPIRIT.

Keep a sweet spirit. Do! The world is, to be sure, all out of sorts, and it ought to be turned upside down and emptied out, in all probability; but you can't help it by getting sour at everybody and everything. The man or woman who keeps a sweet spirit, no matter how keenly the wrongs of life are felt, will have vastly more power to correct the evil than those who fall into a sour mood. A sweet spirit, like a scented flower, has a fragrance to cast upon the path of every one who passes by. It has also for itself a rare life of love which every one admires. It has sometimes been charged that old people get sour. Well, it may be that some do, but they are not alone. There are some young persons whose spirit in the church is sour enough to turn the whole congregation into pickle. They take delight in letting the pastor, and the leader, and the superintendent, and especially the deacons know how wrong things are, and how it kills their enjoyment. Why, Lot's wife would be sugar beside some of them. Look into the face of the faithful servant of Christ who has constant communication with Him, and see how the fragrance of summer is there. Don't get out of heart, don't give up the battle; don't lose your courage and faith; and, with all keep your heart pure and sweet.—Religious Telescope.

A TUG OF WAR.

"That a spiritual tug of war has been, and still is, going on in China, as in the whole world, between the Christians and the anti-Christian forces, is a fact that cannot be denied," recently said Dr. C. Y. Cheng, that princely leader of the Church of Christ in China. "Such a tug of war has always been raging, but the present seems to have been more acute and severe. The peace of the Church has been badly disturbed, —its slumber has been aroused. It is not always a bad thing to have one's peace disturbed. It often is a positive blessing when one has been aroused from slumber. When a church is well content with itself, when there are signs of self-complacency, it is a blessing in disguise for the church to be disturbed and aroused. There are two possible results of such an awakening:—one to fall asleep again, and the other to become fully awake and alive to all that is going on around one."

METHODS CORNER

BY REV. ELISHA A. KING, D. D.
Miami Beach, Fla.

A healthy church is always seeking new members. Sometimes they are secured through special evangelistic meetings, but the church ought to be seeking, finding and welcoming new members constantly. Some churches have a very dignified way of receiving members by the use of a ritual. Others simply read the names from the pulpit. Occasionally no public notice is taken of new members. Each church, of course, will use its own method, but joining the church ought to be made a solemn and impressive occasion.

We receive new members by letter from other churches, by re-affirmation of faith, by confession of faith, and we also receive associate members. There are quite a number of people in every community who were once church members but have drifted away from all churches. Suddenly they become interested in church and desire to unite with a local church. For various reasons they cannot get church letters, but being sincere and desiring to re-affirm their church allegiance they join on re-affirmation of faith. Associate members are really tourist members in other cities, but desiring to be closely associated with the church they join without disturbing their membership elsewhere. Sometimes this relationship develops into a real membership.

It is worth while in many churches to have little printed cards in the pews giving opportunity for any attendant to write name and address on the card asking for admission to membership. For example, the card might say, "I hereby make application for membership in this church. I desire to join on Confession of Faith, by Letter, Re-affirmation of faith. (Mark an X at the proper place.) I am at present a member of the Church, located at..... Name, Present Address....., Street and No."

Where this device is used, quite a number of people sign the cards during the year. It also gives the impression that the church really does desire new members.

In the "Corner" for February 26th, I called attention to the Friendly Visitation plan of getting acquainted with new people. This is one of the best ways of supplementing the present method of membership application cards in the pews. The future of the church depends upon new recruits.

CONGREGATIONAL NEWS

REV. E. C. GILLETTE, Editor; REV. F. P. LNSMINGER, and REV. M. J. SWEET, Associates.

SOUTH GEORGIA is again bounding to the front by announcing her association thus early. It will be at Ambrose Christian Church, October 2nd and 3rd.

DR. C. H. ROWLAND, Greensboro, N. C., is ordered by the doctors to take a rest, and an extended one. He is doing well, it is reported, and this page is glad. The pastor at large preached for him in his good church on July 12th.

DR. W. KNIGHTON BLOOM writes that he will be home July 10th. We have missed him greatly. Without his guiding genius it is hard for the Southeast to keep on the right track. A thousand welcomes await our beloved secretary.

NEW PORT RICHEY, FLORIDA. This church is passing through a great crisis on account of the recent closing of the local bank. Rev. Ralph Krout, the pastor, reports, however, that they refuse to be discouraged.

WEDDING BELLS will be ringing about the 24th. Our young pastor at Albemarle, strong, forceful, loyal, announces he is leaving us for Florida, where the orange blossoms bloom, and will bring back a bride, Mrs. George M. Penn. Good for George and good for Albemarle. They will both be at Blue Ridge, so look out!

KEY WEST FLORIDA, Rev. E. Richard Evans, pastor. The Sunday School reports nineteen new members, making a total membership of three hundred and nineteen. The Woman's Organization of this church is having built a large sleeping porch on the back of the parsonage. They are also having the wood-work in the church repainted.

REV. KERRISON JUNIPER, D. D., of St. Petersburg, Florida, for the month of July will supply the First Church of Evanston, Illinois, and for the month of August, the First Church of San Francisco, California. Rev. O. H. Denney has been appointed assistant pastor of the St. Petersburg church for two months. Rev. Walter Metcalf, of Tampa, Fla., will occupy the pulpit the second Sunday of August.

SALISBURY with its alert pastor, "Billy" Scott, is continually bringing new inspiration to the community. This time it is, in detail, a deep secret. But it something about the property holdings. Their Sunday School picnic was an enjoyable celebration. In July Mr. Scott will have a bit of a vacation while our Student Summer Service man, Mr. J. Howard Smith of Elon College, will act as pastor. The usual Vacation Bible School will be carried on during July also.

DR. WITHERSPOON DODGE is a very busy man this summer. At Oglethorpe University he lectures on "The History and Interpretation of the Bible," one hour per day, six days in the week, and on "Comparative Religion," one hour per day, three days in the week. And every dollar thus earned goes into the treasury of the church for church work. He says he does not expect to be out of his pulpit during the summer, but almost wishes he might slip away for a day. He ought to do it.

REV. and MRS C. C. HAMILTON, of Columbus, Georgia, have our deepest sympathy. Mrs. Hamilton, never very well, has been waiting for some weeks for a place in the sanatorium for tubercular patients. Hope rises for her recovery.

At the same time, Mr. Hamilton is sorely perplexed over a condition, about which the doctors are also puzzled. He has just passed through their hands again, this time submitting to x-ray pictures in an effort to find what is wrong. He hopes to have a chance to rest during July and August, and surely in his physical condition he needs it.

DR. JOHN BRITTAN CLARK, the wonderfully beloved pastor at Tryon, North Carolina, is on his well earned vacation, after one of the very best years in his church, made up so largely of tourists. His new book, The Future Life, just out, is finding ready sales and promises to be a big seller. All those who attended the Conference of the Carolinas at Greensboro, over which he presided so gracefully as moderator, can easily catch the sweet, yet virile and scholarly, temper of his book. Would that all our pastors might have one, and loan it to the many who would get comfort and inspiration from its pages.

ASK MACEDONIA if grouping is hustling? Before the month is out, after their great fellowship meeting, they are getting ready for the next, which will be at Liberty Church, August 30th. That pastor is surely on the job, and the churches know a good thing when they see it. Mr. Leverett is asking for a great Young People's service by young people early enough to give the workers a chance to get it up. He is also securing speakers before they are snapped up by others. Such a pastor can do things for the churches worth while. And there are other churches longing for the time to come when they, too, may have a pastor by means of the popular and effective grouping plan, so old and yet so new.

THE GROWING ROBERTA PARISH, composed of Walker's Chapel, Cochran, and Pleasant Hill at Gaillard, with the possibility of adding Crest, of which Crawford Montcrief is pastor, is having a very interesting summer. It is the period of reorganization for so many churches, and Walker's Chapel is taking the lead in that it is the first church to report a complete new constitution of the Sunday School. Our "Student Summer Service" man, Mr. Arnold Slater, assisted in the work and he is to be congratulated on its success. He is now doing a similar work at Pleasant Hill and fine results may be expected. Miss Rosie Gill and Miss Ina Adams are putting on a Vacation Bible School here the first week in July. They, too, have been doing some fine work in other south Georgia churches during June.

NORTH GEORGIA ASSOCIATION meets at Demorest, Ga., July 27 and 28th. A great pre-Blue Ridge meeting it should be, and it is hoped that many S. S. workers of Georgia may find it possible to be present for the 28th, at least. The afternoon of that day will be decidedly for young people. The program will be announced in more detail later, but be assured with Prof. Lisle Percy, of Piedmont College, in charge there will be an appealing and inspiring meeting. Pastors should work hard to bring large delegations from their churches. Among other things the great State Conference program will be pre-viewed and partly prepared for. To this all the Christian Churches are coming by delegates, and the formation of a united conference will without doubt be accomplished. And remember the State meeting will be at Fredonia Church, near Barnesville, in October.

LOST, FIFTEEN POUNDS! by David W. Shepherd, in and around Whitehall Congregational Church, near Waycross, Ga., during his work there. He is a huskie fellow, and this shows he is not afraid of work. Like an old-time Sunday School worker, he welcomes a task for its bigness and greets hard work with fierce joy. But this is only typical. Just take a nice warm, or hot, trip around these Sunday Schools with the pastor at large if you want to see what real hard work is. You would think you would die if you had to do this splendid work this hot weather. Do they complain? Not a bit of it. They "keep a going." Nothing daunts them. But one thing the pastor at large would like to do, that is to remind you not to work too hard—don't lose your health. Losing fifteen pounds! well, if some of you should do that—how much would there be left? Work, but also watch. Take care of yourselves.

WEST TAMPA, FLORIDA. Rev. Carl H. Corwin, pastor, reports having received seven new members on confession of faith and one by letter, during the last quarter, making seventeen in all having received the right hand of fellowship during the first half of the year. Many Cuban families are brought into the church by their children attending the Day Mission School. He states one case that deserves mentioning. Two little children whose father was an infidel, and who would not allow his children to go to Sunday School or church, attended the Mission School, and through prayers and the influence of these little children, the father was brought into the church and expresses himself as being "a new man." The young people have shown enthusiasm in the work of the church, at their own suggestion, cleaning benches and floors and painting and re-decorating the church. At the end of the second quarter the Daily Vacation Bible School made a fine beginning with an attendance of about seventy the first day.

OUR KENTUCKY Young People met for a week-end conference at Stearns, June 20th and 21st. A truck load of young folks from Evarts and Corbin took the long, dusty, rough road to Stearns and arrived promptly Saturday morning ready for the conference, after they had removed many layers of dust. The Pine Knot young people took part in this conference also, and contributed a great deal in spirit. Each delegation led a devotional service and gave a stunt for the pleasure of the group. Discussions were led by Miss Mildred Taylor, on Social Problems, by Miss Dorothy French on Personal Religion, and by Mr. Allen Keedy on Christ in Politics and Business, and Social Problems. Mr. Keedy and Rev. A. O. Stevens gave inspirational addresses. The group of over forty went to Natural Bridge for a picnic and returned to a hill-top nearer Stearns for their Vesper Service, because of heavy clouds threatening. The Sunrise Service and breakfast were held on Sunset Rock, a lovely spot overlooking many miles of hills in all directions. The business sessions were well conducted by the chairman, Mr. Roy Russell, of Corbin, and the secretary, Miss Margaret Humble of Stearns. Officers for the coming year were elected as follows: Mr. Eugene Turner, Evarts, chairman; Miss Mildred Strunk, Pine Knot, secretary. Each group elected a representative to work with the chairman and secretary in working out a program for the next conference, which is to be held in Corbin.

The Rt. Hon. W. E. Gladstone, speaking in the House of Commons, on March 5, 1880, said: "It has been said that greater calamities are inflicted on mankind by intemperance than by the three great historic scourges of war, famine and pestilence combined. That is true for us, and it is the measure of our discredit and disgrace."

PRINCIPLES OF THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

- (1) The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
- (2) Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.
- (3) The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
- (4) Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship and of Church membership.
- (5) The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by, all.

THE PURPOSE OF THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

The purpose of this Church is to cultivate a spirit of union among the followers of our Lord Jesus Christ of every persuasion, and to secure, if possible, the associate efforts of all true religious teachers in pointing the wicked to "the Lamb of God who taketh away the sin of the world."

The peculiar doctrines and tenets which have confused and distracted the Christian world are remanded to private judgment, and hence cease to be matters for debate, only in so far as may be necessary to prevent a sectarian influence from entering the Church.

This Church requires no compromise of faith on the part of any child of God in order to communion or fellowship; here, denominational distinctions cease to exist, and Christian love binds the brotherhood together.

The purpose of this Church will be consummated in the conversion of the world and the union of all Christians.

UNION CONSUMATED.

The editor of The Congregationalist and Herald of Gospel Liberty, Dr. Wm. E. Gilroy, was at the Seattle National Council and General Convention in which the work of union of the Congregational and Christian Churches was consummated nationally. He writes officially and editorially a report, and since many CHRISTIAN SUN readers, who are deeply interested, do not get The Congregationalist and Herald of Gospel Liberty, we are reprinting from that paper the story of the meeting as seen and reported by Dr. Gilroy:

"It was a momentous event when at noon on Saturday, June 27th, in Plymouth Church, Seattle, the General Convention of Christian Churches assembled with the National Council of Congregational Churches, already in session in that auditorium, and Moderator Carl S. Patton, handing the gavel to Acting President D. B. Atkinson, gave to the latter the honor of putting the motion, the adoption of which represented the final act in the organic union of Christians and Congregationalists.

"Both Council and Convention had already adopted the proposed constitution for the new General Council, in their separate sessions, and now in joint session, Dr. Morris H. Turk, minister of the historic Williston Church in Portland, Me., where the Christian Endeavor Society had its birth, and acting for the time as chairman of the Congregational Commission of Interchurch Relations, in the unavoidable absence of Dr. Frank K. Sanders, the chairman, moved that the constitution be adopted and that 'accordingly the said General Council be declared instituted and operative as of this date.'

"There was no staging of anything spectacular, no outward evidence of the momentous thing that was happening in creating the largest union of churches in history, but the great audience spontaneously burst into the singing of Blest be the tie that binds our hearts in Christian love; and that was the most fitting symbol and expression of thankfulness and hope that could have been devised, had more studied preparation been made.

"The adoption of the constitution in the Congregational group, and in the Christian group, also had previously been unanimous, and the same unanimity was in the joint meeting. For legal purposes National Council and Christian Convention will continue to exist, but over all and uniting all will be the new General Council, in which the Congregational and the Christian Churches will hereafter be represented not as separate nor as joint groups, but as a single group, having a common life and purpose and a common national and spiritual unity of fellowship in The General Council of Congregational and Christian Churches.

"The By-Laws relating to the new union, at this time of writing, are yet to come up for action seriatim, but the chief matter has been decided and the goal of prayer and hope in the blending of free churches, with a noble witness and heritage, into a common life and common tasks in witnessing to the freedom of the Christian spirit and in the manifestation of Christianity, in authority and action, as a way of life, is now determined. Let us meet the future and go on as those whose hearts and lives are bound in the blest ties of Christian love! May the fellowship of the Christians bound together in the General Council of Congregational and Christian Churches be, in every respect, and in every achievement of triumph, like to that above!"

THE FIRST SESSION.

Hermon Eldredge, associate editor, The Congregationalist and Herald of Gospel Liberty, writing from Seattle of the National Council and General Convention, has the following in the issue of that paper of July 9th:

"The first session of the National Council and the first session of the General Convention have been held this afternoon and definite progress has been made toward the fuller merger of the two bodies.

"But first we must record the unavoidable absence of Dr. F. G. Coffin, the beloved president of the General Convention of the Christian Church. Dr. Coffin has held this office for seventeen years because of the insistence of his brethren. He had more to do than any one man among us with the inception and promotion of the present Congregational Christian union, and his absence at this time is the occasion of deepest regret to Dr. Coffin and to the two bodies now met to take final action on the merger. Dr. Coffin's illness, while possibly not of an immediately serious nature, still is severe enough to confine him to the White Cross Hospital of Columbus, Ohio, for observation, and to have his physician positively forbid his going to Seattle. The Convention held a devotional service, in which Dr. Coffin was remembered in united prayer, after which it was voted to wire the love and sympathy of the delegation present, together with flowers visibly expressing the same.

"The first sessions were held separately, with approximately 700 delegates in the Council and about seventy-five in the Convention. More are arriving continually on this first day.

"The business of these first sessions was the appointment of committees and the approval of the proposed Constitution of the General Council of Congregational Christian Churches. The entire time of the session was given to the consideration of the proposed constitution, and after careful readings and with minor corrections it was approved and passed on to the joint meeting of the two bodies for final approval, after which the merged bodies will meet as one under the name which may be agreed upon.

"Dr. Carl S. Patton, pastor of First Congregational Church of Los Angeles, Cal., was elected Moderator of the National Council of Congregational Churches, and without doubt Dr. F. G. Coffin will be elected president of the General Convention of the Christian Church, unless he positively refuses to serve on account of his health. The election of these officers fulfills legal requirements. Present indications are that Dr. Patton will be elected Moderator, and Dr. Coffin Associate Moderator, of the new organization, which, it is planned at this writing, will be called the General Council of Congregational Christian Churches. At the session this evening the new moderators will be introduced and the old moderators will give the closing addresses. In the absence of Dr. Coffin, Dr. D. B. Atkinson is presiding at the sessions of the Convention."

THE DEITY OF CHRIST.

One does not have to pick out incidents of Scripture to prove the Deity of Christ. In fact one does not have to depend upon Scripture itself to prove the Deity of Christ. One only has to look up, look around and see what is taking place in the world through and because of the Man, Jesus Christ. If one will do this, and is open-minded, one will be convinced that this is none other than the Incarnate Son of God. No mere man could do what He is doing, no ten thousand men could do what He is doing, though they crucified Him nineteen hundred years ago. He has changed things. He is changing things. He is re-making a world. No man has influenced the thought of the world and is today controlling the thought of the world as is the Christ. Socrates, Plato, Aristotle, three giants of the intellectual world, lived, practiced, taught, over a period of one hundred years. And yet how small their contributions, even in the world's thought, seems today, laid down beside the Man of Galilee, who, reared in a carpenter's shop, taught three years and was then put to death. This three years of teaching of the humble Man of Galilee accomplished more with the minds and the methods and the make-up of men than any three, or thirty men beside Him ever accomplished.

Or take the heroes of blood and battle. Hannibal, Julius Caesar, Napoleon, were giants in warfare and blood letting. And yet the humble Galilean accomplished more in the shedding of His own blood and in His battles for righteousness than any three or thirty warriors that ever drew sword.

Or take the preachers of the world, Luther, Wesley, Jonathan Edwards, giants of heart and strong in all that stirred the soul. And yet the Christ, with His Sermon on the Mount, did more than any three or thirty preachers that ever lived. We do not have to go back two thousand years to find miracles. Look up at the Christ and see what He is doing in the world today, and you see the mightiest miracle of all time. To think that a man, a mere man, even a super-man, could accomplish this, is folly and nonsense. Verily, Jesus of Nazareth, who speaks peace to the troubled soul, is none other than the Incarnate Son of God. Deity moving among men and upon the hearts of men. In Him is the world's safety and security. He is the world's only hope and redeemer. He is the Saviour of all who put their trust and faith in Him. He is God on earth moving among men and stirring them to things divine.

GOD AND MUSIC.

If one will look at the hymns which are of greatest solace and comfort to those who meet for worship on the Sabbath day, it will be found that those hymns were composed a long time ago, for the most part, and that their composers lived in an atmosphere created by firm, fixed faith in God. Much of our modern music, even with us in our Sunday schools and churches, is nothing more or less than jazz set to pious platitudes. It has the hop and lilt, the skip and the jump of jazz. There is not anything reverential in it, except the place in which it is sung.

Sousa, the outstanding composer of band music, declared not long since that the reason we have no great musical composers today is because our age believes so little in God. No man has ever written a great hymn whose faith was not firmly fixed in a personal God. Much of our modern thinking has been of a sort to decrease, and to weaken, our faith, and to take away firm belief in a Supreme Creator of the Universe.

We are hearing much now about humanism. This "sin" would teach us that we do not need to love God in order to love our fellowman, but that if we will love our fellowman and serve him, we may rule God out of the question. The humanists have crowded God off into one corner, or out of existence as a personal being, saying that we are poor men and women at best if we cannot love and serve our fellowman just for the sake of our fellowman. These humanists surely forget that above all else, a man needs a Supreme God and Ruler of the universe, and when faith in God is gone, the best that life has to offer is also gone. A recent writer points out this very significant fact: "Thomas Huxley doubted God a bit but rhapsodized of human love. His grand-son, Aldous Huxley, ridiculed human love too, and writes long, and horribly tiresome, novels to show that love is only a rather nasty physical appetite which rules us, and fools us in the end."

We may expect after awhile, as a product of humanism, ridicule of our fellowman, and loss of faith in mankind. For when men begin to lose faith in God, they begin right then to become bankrupt of all the real assets of life. What the world needs today is to recover its sense of God as personal, as One Who created all and is above all. If we lose this sense entirely, then we may expect the best that science and literature have given us to be lost also. One of the greatest living physicists has put this in a striking paragraph, which we do well to ponder over.

"From my point of view there are two things of immense importance in this world, two ideas or beliefs upon which, in the last analysis, the weal or woe of the race depends, and I am not going to say that belief in the possibilities of scientific progress is the most important. The most important thing in the world is a belief in the reality of moral and spiritual values. It was because we lost that belief that the World War came, and if we do not now find a way to regain and to strengthen that belief, then science is of no value."

Yes, there is something bigger and better than science and our belief in science, viz: The God who made the world of science and an unyielding faith in Him as a Supreme Person as well as a Supreme Power.

PRAYER AND FASTING.

The Bishops of the Methodist Episcopal Church (South) recently set a day for fasting and prayer throughout Methodism, calling upon Methodists to meet in their houses of worship on the day designated, and, without eating on that day, give themselves steadfastly to prayer.

A Men's Bible Class of the Methodist Church in Galveston, Texas, the other day passed a resolution, petitioning the President of the United States to designate a day of prayer because of business depression and unemployment. Thousands of honest men and women, ready and willing to toil and earn an honest living, are without employment, and many of them, while they wait and fast, are praying. We are in a time that calls for appeal to a supreme power for wisdom and guidance. There is no surer way of getting wisdom and finding guidance than through prayer and supplication to Almighty God. "The fear of the Lord is the beginning of wisdom."

Once a man carried a patient to the disciples of Christ, and they could not cure him. Jesus did not rebuke the man for bringing his son to the disciples, but He did rebuke the disciples for not healing the son. When those disciples wanted to know of the Lord why they could not heal the sick one, the Lord replied: "This kind can come forth by nothing, but by prayer and fasting." In that rebuke our Lord revealed the secret of His power. He spent much time in prayer and fasting.

We do not fast in our day, we feast; and we get so crowded with business affairs that we do not take time to spend a day in our churches in prayer.

There never was a more opportune time than now for the people to be called to the houses of worship for fasting and prayer. During this time of economic depression, there should be spiritual expression and renewing. This spiritual renewing can come about by fasting and prayer. Why not our ministers and church leaders agree upon a day and call the whole congregation to the church to spend the day in fasting, prayer, supplication, petition to the God of all grace, of all wisdom and of all life? The church needs spiritual awakening, and we can conceive of no better way to this awakening than by beginning with a day of fasting and prayer.

EDGAR S. ROTHROCK, D. D.

We have learned with sorrow of the death of Dr. Rothrock, for many years the efficient and beloved Superintendent of the Congregational Conference of Ohio. Last winter he came to Florida and took a small church, saying that he would be glad to help out in any way, regardless of the size of church or salary. He came in a fine, brotherly spirit, but it soon developed that the bronchial condition which he had brought with him would not permit his continuance in the work, to the sorrow of all. When he left the State for his home, it was known that he was suffering from a hopeless malady; but we shall always remember the fortitude and the calm Christian courage with which he left us, facing the inevitable.

The crowning achievement of his life of great usefulness was the service he rendered the merger of the Christians and Congregationalists in Ohio. This service is fully recognized, and for it he is beloved and honored. The writer, however, feels that in a quiet and unrecognized way, Dr. Rothrock rendered the merger movement an even greater service. It was at the mid-winter meeting when the question of merger was being discussed by the denominational officers, as it were in "executive session." It was far from a settled question, and there were many doubts and misgivings. The writer remembers vividly the quiet session one night when the superintendents met to discuss the matter with candor and courage. Much, I might almost say everything, depended on the attitude of the superintendents, for upon them would devolve the problems of adjustments in conferences and local fields. In the minds of some there were grave questions, but to most it was largely an academic question, as the Christian denomination was not represented in their States. Finally it came to Dr. Rothrock to express his opinion. The writer, who was eager for the merger, felt that that was a tense moment. As representing the State of Ohio, in which there were the greatest number of churches of both denominations, the attitude of Dr. Rothrock seemed to be almost decisive. If he opposed it, it would have been a killing blow. Dr. Rothrock frankly faced all the difficulties, the labors, the burdens to be assumed, the problems and inevitable embarrassments of readjustments and reorganization; but facing all that it would involve for himself and his organization, he declared himself heartily in favor of the merger.

A small man might have been moved to doubt and opposition in the presence of all the labor and anxieties involved. His broad, tolerant, self-sacrificing spirit seemed to settle the question. There seemed to be no further serious question in the minds of that important group. It appeared to the writer that a great issue had passed its critical moment and that a big-hearted, broad-minded, Christian man, by taking the right attitude and saying the right word, had done the Kingdom of God and the cause of Christian unity a great service.

It is in such quiet moments and such unobtrusive ways that great causes are advanced to their fulfillment. One of the last times the writer saw Dr. Rothrock, it was his pleasure to tell him how his attitude at that critical moment had seemed to him to be noble and Christian and finally convincing. By it a great cause has been immeasurably advanced—perhaps saved. All honor to his great and good spirit. E. C. G.

THE PREACHING VALUE OF MISSIONS.

Mrs. Helen Barrett Montgomery, A. M., LL. D., scholar, author and world traveller, delivered the English lectures on "Missions" before the Newton Seminary in November, 1929, on the subject, "The Preaching Value of Missions." This is an invaluable book to ministers who really wish to grasp the fullness, depth and gripping power of the missionary message. The title of the book is manifest on every page of the book, which pages carry invaluable information and thrilling inspiration to the reader interested in world-wide movements and a world-wide gospel.

The book fully justifies the following declaration in the foreword: "Pastors who are concerned to discover material and suggestion for Missionary preaching will find this book immediately helpful. It is alive with the spirit that animated the Jerusalem Conference. Its central and consuming message is Christ." There were six lectures in the course, each lecture as printed being followed by a page or more of facts and information such as every minister should have. Nothing will indicate the trend and value of the book more than its table of contents:

- I. Have Foreign Missions a Preaching Value?
- II. Missions Central in the Old Testament.
- III. The Spirit of Missions is the Spirit of the New Testament.
- IV. Christian History is Mission History.
- V. The Neglected Field of Mission Biography.
- VI. Methods of Building a Missionary Church. Bibliography.

The book is beautifully bound in blue cloth and sells for $1.00 by the Board of Education of the Northern Baptist Convention, 152 Madison Ave., New York City. How we wish every minister who reads THE CHRISTIAN SUN might have access to this stirring volume by one of the most fascinating and famous writers and authorities on Missions, and one who has long since become famous through more than half a dozen other volumes previously given to the public.

SUFFOLK LETTER.

The great meeting of the National Council of the Congregational Church and the General Convention of the Christian Church was the climax of a spiritual purpose of these two Protestant denominations decided by united vote at Piqua, Ohio, October 25th, 1929. From that date until this meeting in Seattle, Washington, June 25 to July 3, 1931, the two bodies have been thinking and praying that they might become one in the true Biblical spirit of unity. During this period of eight days in Seattle, both bodies held separate meetings, and union meetings, in the hope of finding common ground and a common name to express the unity which both earnestly desired. This was accomplished so far as possible for the present; and details will be worked out in the future. The name of the united body will, no doubt, be the Congregational Christian Church. For the present, the name is the Congregational and Christian Churches. That name, however, does not express unity. So long as the word and is used it implies two instead of one. Real unity eliminates conjunctions.

One thing can be expressed in sincerity, and that is that the spirit of all the meetings was friendly and Christian. Personal contacts and public meetings were all characterized by the sweetest fellowship and the absence of denominational superiority. Outside of verbal expressions necessary to the understanding of each other, one would not have discovered that it was not one denomination. That spirit pervaded the entire meeting; and it was beautiful in attitude and expression.

In addition to the Council and Convention meetings, and their joint sessions, six Seminars were held for six days and final reports of their findings made to the united body. The six seminars were in charge of leaders with frank and interesting discussion of the following topics: 1. "The Gospel and the Individual," leader, Dr. Raymond C. Brooks of Claremont, California; 2. "The Gospel and the Family and Youth," leader, Dr. W. A. Harper, Elon College, N. C.; 3. "Standards for the Ministry," leader, Dr. Oscar E. Maurer, New Haven, Conn; 4. "The Gospel and Community Life," leader, Rev. James Mullenbach, Chicago, Ill.; 5. "The Church and the State," leader, Superintendent William F. Frazier, Burlington, Vermont; 6. "The Gospel and International life," leader, Rev. Albert D. Stauffacher, Claremont, California. These seminars were largely attended and the discussions were very illuminating and educational in a helpful sense. The final reports from these seminars were received by the vast congregation and referred for consideration.

The accredited delegation was about seven hundred and regular visitors carried the congregation to perhaps two thousand.

Meetings were held in Plymouth Congregational Church, with free entertainment for lodging and breakfast. The hospitality of Seattle expressed itself in hotel rooms eight days for $5.00.

SOUTHERN UNION COLLEGE.

THE REASON WHY.

The purpose of Southern Union College is to discover, develop and train leaders and high-class workers for the South, the Nation and the Kingdom of God in the world. Its slogan is "Scholarship high, Expenses low and Character Supreme." Service is its impelling motive. It intends to be thoroughly, uncompromisingly Christian, with no sectarian propaganda.

It is in a field of great educational need and unlimited possibilities. Around it and within easy reach, are more than two hundred consolidated high schools, sending out thousands of graduates each year, only a small per cent of whom are financially able to go to any other college. Yet among them are as many fine minds, with as great educational possibilities, as can be found anywhere in this Nation. These thousands of aspiring American-born Anglo-Saxons are thrilled with the greatest educational revival this country has ever seen, yet they have not a hundredth part of the educational opportunities the North is giving the millions of foreign-born youth or the sons and daughters of the foreign-born who have come to our shores—wise North that thus protects itself!

Do you love your fellow men? Nowhere and in no way can we do more philanthropic good than in helping these thousands of our own youth to a thorough education, with Christian ideals.

Do you love the South? Nowhere and in no way can we render it a greater and better service than to help train these boys and girls for workers and leaders in the development of its vast, and as yet, untouched resources and in filling it not only with efficiency, but also with high Christian ideas and culture.

Do you love your Country? Nowhere and in no way can we help it more. How it needs in every section the trained work and influence of these Native-born Americans whose enthusiastic Americanism is rarely equalled and never transcended between the Atlantic and Pacific Oceans.

Do you love the Kingdom of God? Nowhere and in no way can we more effectually aid in its upbuilding, than to help send into the world's centers of influence these young people, trained for all kinds of Christian service and inspired with lofty, Christian ideas.

Please make yourself acquainted. I earnestly ask you whoever and wherever you are, to make yourself thoroughly acquainted with this Christian educational enterprise for the South, the Nation and the World. If you do this, I am sure we can count on you as its unfailing friends.

FRANK E. JENKINS.

ROANOKE, ALA.

We had a nice service at Roanoke First Church yesterday, July 5th. A fine Sunday School, and an interesting Christian Endeavor meeting last night. Miss Catherine Wood was in charge. No sermon at the evening service. We dismissed for the Revival services at the First Methodist Church. We are hoping and praying for a great meeting.

We are planning for a Daily Vacation Bible School in our church in the very near future. We have a fine band of young people and children, and we are anxious to have a good school, and we are inviting the young people from Lowell, Antioch and Mt. Zion churches to share with us in our school. We should have quite an enrollment.

Our Willing Workers meet this week with Joe Lem Stevens.

Woman's Missionary Society will meet with Mrs. G. W. Veazey.

Classes Nos. 1 and 2 will go on a picnic next Friday afternoon.

Our Ministers' picnic will be held today. We anticipate a good time. I leave next Saturday for Richland, Ga.; from there I go to Verbena, Ala., for a revival meeting with Rev. A. C. Nelson of the Congregational church. Thence, to Pleasant Grove, Chambers Co., Ala., and also to New Hope in the same county, where the Wych Elder Monument will be unveiled July 29th, and all the Elders and their relatives will be there. It will be a great occasion. G. D. HUNT.

DEPRESSION OR DEPENDANCE?

These days of financial depression, with the subsequent unemployment, has brought also a spiritual depression upon many people who are suffering from its effects, and some even are allowing their faith in God to waver. Our Heavenly Father did not send the depression upon us, but He did allow it to come for some purpose. That purpose is either fulfilled or thwarted in our own lives by the way in which we accept it. Do we accept it as a means to draw us closer to God or do we murmur against Him as did the Children of Israel? At times it has seemed that men have felt that they were so wise that they have not needed God, so independent that they left Him out of their reckoning. Can it not be that the present depression is sent to show men their dependance upon God's power to control even in the industrial world? Last year's drouth showed God's control over atmospheric conditions and it had much to do with the depression then and now. The great need of the world is to acknowledge the supremacy of God over all conditions and circumstances of life and to be willing to follow His leadership. Science has to admit that there is a power that cannot be explained and that cannot be left out of their experiments. We, who have been enlightened by the Holy Scriptures, know what that power is and we yield to His leadings in our lives. Oh, the blessedness and the comfort in the thought that God is ever leading us where ever we go and in what ever we do. Yes, sometimes it is through deepest gloom, through trials and troubles that we cannot understand, yet if God is leading we need not fear, for every thing will work together for our good if we but trust and obey. Not murmuring at the chastening which may seem so overwhelming but knowing that underneath are the everlasting arms which will hold us, comfort us and make the rivers of love, joy and peace flow through our souls. How blessed to have such a heavenly Father. Sometimes we hear people say, "I wish I could die and leave all the sin and sorrow behind." But it is not God's plan that we should give up but that we should claim the victory through Jesus Christ who overcame the world and go out to show some one else, who is also going through deep waters, that there is an abiding peace and joy if we only surrender our will to His will.

A Christian was once asked, "Do you ever get the blues?" She answered, "Yes." But no one knows it if you do." The answer came, "I take my worries to the great Burden-bearer." "Oh, but He seems so far away," "Yet He is closer than feeling, nearer than hands and feet."

Can we not realize that truth and show it forth in our lives so that others may be blessed and comforted because of the Christ-life within us?

"He chose you not to bitter tears,
Though dark your life may seem;
He chose you not to foolish fears,
And not to sit and dream;
He chose you in His loving grace,
To action, patience, trust,
To show upon a smiling face
What God can do with dust."

DAVIS' DAY.

Twenty-three years ago the late Bishop Galloway, in a eulogy of Jefferson Davis, President of the Southern Confederacy, said:

"When another hundred years have passed, no intelligent voice will fail to praise him and no patriotic hand will refuse to place a laurel wreath upon his radiant brow."

Less than a quarter of a hundred years have elapsed and no patriotic voice has been raised against the placing of Mr. Davis' statue in the Capitol at Washington. It is amazing to those Americans who are old enough to associate the Southern leader with "a sour apple tree," that a generation has come on the scene which refuses to harbor the animosities of a bygone day. Doubtless Mr. Davis himself, like his greater contemporary, General Lee, contributed to the cultivation of this generous attitude. He survived the war by twenty-four years, but he accepted in full the results of that struggle, painful as they were to him. In 1885, when General Grant lay dying at Mount McGregor, a Northern editor sought to secure a sensational article by asking the Southern chieftain to criticize the military career of the victor of Appomattox. Davis replied:

"Your request cannot be complied with for the following reasons: First, General Grant is dying; second, though he invaded our country with a ruthless hand, it was an open hand and, as far as I know, he abetted neither arson nor pillage, and has since the war, I believe, shown no malignity to the Confederacy, either in the military or civil service. Therefore, instead of seeking to disturb the quiet of his closing hours, I would, if it were in my power, contribute to the peace of his mind and the comfort of his body."

And in the last public address which he delivered, a few months before his death, he said:

"The past is dead, let it bury its dead, its hopes and aspirations; before you lies the future—a future full of golden promise; a future of expanding national glory, before which all the world shall stand amazed. Let me beseech you to lay aside all rancor, all bitter sectional feeling, and to take your place in the ranks of those who will bring about a consummation devoutly to be wished—a reunited country."

That the country is reunited to a remarkable degree is no doubt due to Mr. Davis and those leaders of "the Lost Cause," who proved themselves such good losers. In the Spanish-American War, and in far greater measure in the World War, the sons and grandsons of the Blue and the Gray marched shoulder to shoulder. And in grappling with the problems of peace, the nation is no longer weakened by the old sectionalism. Indeed, the time has come when the North looks hopefully to the patriotism and moral conviction of the South as a bulwark against un-American forces which tend to sweep away the institutions which were founded by great Southerners like Washington, Jefferson, and Marshall, and the great Northerners like the Adamsses, Hamilton, and Jay.—Editorial in the New York Christian Advocate.

GAMBLING AND PRAYING.

A young negro of Boston who is described as among the unemployed, with his clothes held together with a safety pin, and possessed of a total capital of $1.12, has won a prize in the "sweepstakes" in connection with the Derby, giving him $145,000.

If all such lottery luck went to members of the colored race, white enthusiasts would probably quickly develop a righteous wrath against racing lotteries. With things as they are, we do not begrudge the impoverished young negro his quick and easy fortune. Whether it will do him any good or not is another matter.

What does interest us, as affecting people regardless of race or color, is the young negro's attributing of his good luck to prayer. We fear that this conception of prayer as a means of getting things for one's self, and as a means of furthering one's own material condition, is all too common, even among devout people who would abhor participation in a lottery. Prayer and Providence move for too many people in an atmosphere of superstition, rather than in a world of consecration to the holy will of a God of love.—Congregationalist and Herald of Gospel Liberty.

Be less given to speculation than to practice; cultivate faith rather than doubt; peace of heart rather than subtle eniquities.—Geikie.

"You are writing a Gospel,
A chapter each day,
By the deeds that you do,
By the words that you say.
Men read what you write,
Whether faithless or true;
Say, what is the Gospel
According to you?"

MID STONE AND GLOW.

Broad blocks of stone the sidewalk paved
Hot in unshaded summer glare;
Yet from a narrow crack there rose
A periwinkle straight and fair.

Few inches high, but with a flower
White as the snow, with bud beside;
Bravely it grew and gave its grace
However few its beauty spied.

I brought it water, scraped a bit
Of added earth about the stem;
Next day the bud had come to bloom,
In such a spot a garden gem!

Again I gave the floweret drink
Thrilled at such growth mid stone and glow;
Then sensed the secret of the life—
Its root found space and strength below.

—Rev. C. DeW. Brower.

(In a letter recently received in the Jacksonville office, from the author of the above poem, he very beautifully expressed the thought that prompted the composition. "Rooted and grounded in faith, in love, in trust, we can grow and bear fruit, sustained amid the fires of trial and the difficulties along the way.")

MISSIONS

REV. J. O. ATKINSON, D. D., Secretary.

A PRAYER.

O great defender, God, send thou upon those who administer the church a divine sense of thy light and help. In understanding and faithfulness make the church true to its responsibility for the right use of every resource. By the summer-suspension of worship periods the church, like the little child, is saying "Goodbye, God, we do not need thee July and August," and thus companionate souls are deprived of holy intercourse with each other and of the sweetest Jesus-touch. Father, make Thy light the church's light, we humbly pray, Amen. "L"

RIPE FRUIT OF THE SPIRIT.

The pastor cannot begin to educate his people in missionary feeling and missionary giving unless he lays a careful campaign of missionary stewardship. The grace of giving is not native; it is one of the ripest fruits of the spirit. We learn how to give as we learn how to pray—by giving, by praying. The lax support given to foreign missions by many churches is just an outward and visible sign that they have not received from their pastors the spiritual culture that was their due. They are green Christians. A course of sermons on the philosophy of giving might do much; a practical plan of tithing, accompanied by a simple project in which the hearts of all might be interested, would do more. Yet there are thousands of pastors who have no settled plan for training up a church of givers.

In a recent paper given before the World Conference on Church Finance, the Rev. W. Campbell Smith drew a wonderful picture of the church finances in the Apostolic Church, to which he had devoted the earnest study of a lifetime, during which he said among many other things:

"I shall try to group ideas which the Apostolic Church sought to realize in their givings round the principle of Stewardship. That God is the real owner of all that is, is the truth that lies at the basis of many of our Lord's parables, especially of those that deal with the obtaining and the spending of money. From these and other utterances of our Lord, his disciples were taught that their money was not their own to spend as they liked. That the teachers of the early Church understood and inculcated this, may be seen from every page of the New Testament. That the early believers grasped the significance of this may be known from the opening words of the prayer in which the early Syrian Church dedicated its offerings: 'Thou, O Almighty Sovereign, hast created all things for Thy Name's Sake.'"

These early Christians were therefore taught that the means they possessed were really the property of God, and were to be spent so that his Kingdom might come and his will be done. So clearly did they see this that the best of them do not seem to have been greatly troubled by the question of how much they should spend on themselves and how much they should give to the work of God. The apostolic disciples did not carry over—at least in the areas outside the Holy City—either from Judaism or from paganism the principle that a proportion of their means dictated by others must be bestowed upon religious work. The laying down by any authority outside of ourselves of a definite proportion of our means to be presented to God freezes the spontaneity which ought to characterize Christian love. Giving should be the fruit of thinking. "Every one should give," wrote Paul to the Corinthians, "what he has made up his mind to give." (2 Cor. 9:7).

The earnest faithful follower of the Lord will, in view of the sin, ignorance, and the misery of the world, strive to make his direct givings to the Lord's work commensurate with its importance. Christ looks on our givings as the index that indicates the pressure of love within our hearts.—Preaching Value of Missions by Montgomery.

BEREA MISSIONARY SOCIETY CELEBRATES.

On Thursday afternoon, June 18th, our Woman's Missionary Society of Berea (Nansemond) Christian Church held one of the best and most enjoyable meetings that it has been our privilege to attend, and I may add that I have been a member since its beginning.

For several years, it has been our custom to have an anniversary birthday party, and Mrs. John W. Nelms invited us to her home for this celebration. She made a special effort to have as many members present as possible, and also asked the members of the Oakland Society to be with us. And we did have a splendid and fine collection of friends and funds.

After the regular business meeting, Mrs. I. W. Johnson, our beloved pastor's wife, had charge of the program. There were three items, all of which were instructive and entertaining. Mrs. H. P. Harrell gave a brief historical sketch of "The Life and Growth of Our Missionary Society." Next came a Bible contest, and some of us began to squirm a little. But in just a few minutes the answers were read, and we were told to fill them in, or make corrections—and then, Oh my! How proud all of us were of our excellent papers. Here it is; you may see for yourself what the acrostic spells:

- | | |
|--|-----------|
| 1. The mother of King Solomon? | Bathsheba |
| 2. Father of Mahlon and Chilion? | Elimelech |
| 3. Mother of Joseph and Benjamin? | Rachael |
| 4. Jacob's brother? | Esau |
| 5. The husband of Queen Esther? | Ahasuerus |
| 6. Who wrote the first Gospel? | Matthew |
| 7. The son of Abraham and Hagar? | Ishmael |
| 8. The first Christian Martyr? | Stephen |
| 9. Who, with Paul prayed and sang praises to God at midnight? | Silas |
| 10. The husband of Rebecca? | Isaac |
| 11. The son of Boaz and Ruth? | Obed |
| 12. Cupbearer to King Artaxerxes? | Nehemiah |
| 13. Brother of Moses? | Aaron |
| 14. Oldest of Jacob's twelve sons? | Reuben |
| 15. "Remember now thy Creator, in the days of thy youth." | Youth." |
| 16. A child of prayer who lived in the temple with Eli? | Samuel |
| 17. Mount on which Christ's agony and betrayal took place? | Olivet |
| 18. Who, besides Joshua, was the only spy to urge entering Canaan? | Caleb |
| 19. Who said, "Here am I, send me"? | Isaiah |
| 20. Was taken to heaven in a chariot of fire? | Elijah |
| 21. The apostle called "the doubter"? | Thomas |
| 22. Christ said, "Take my yoke upon you and learn of me." | Yoke |

The third, and last, item on the program, was a review of the missionary book, "A Cloud of Witnesses," in which six of our visitors from Oakland, portrayed, in native costumes, the most prominent characters. Mrs. Johnson introduced each speaker in turn, and read appropriate scripture references to their topic. Mrs. Clifton Pruden represented the first Bible woman of China, and emphasized her wonderful personality and great perseverance in spreading the gospel. Mrs. Mary McNeal was the Hindu woman who spent her life and her talent in the work of teaching her Indian sisters how to love, live and learn. Mrs. E. L. Pruden told of Dr. Parn, the great physician of India, who healed souls that were sick and hearts that were broken, as well as body pains and diseases.

Mrs. R. W. Bradshaw took the role of a Japanese welfare worker and we listened with interest and concern as we learned much of the social life of Japan. Miss Mary Lee Godwin was equally as good as the "pastor's wife and home-maker," for in any and every country, the greatest and grandest center of power and civilization is the home. When all the homes of any land are governed and controlled by the love of God, then His kingdom will have come on earth. Mrs. W. C. Moore, in a charming manner, gave us a very vivid picture of a Chinese girl's life from infancy to marriage and motherhood. Her subject was, "The Ever-widening Stream."

Our Berea Society is much indebted to the Oakland Society for this splendid program. The meeting closed with prayer and benediction, after which there was a social hour filled with food and fun. A huge birthday cake with fifteen lighted candles was brought in and placed on the table, and our oldest member, Mrs. B. F. Winner, blew out the candle flames and cut the cake, which was served with delicious ices and confections, prepared by our hostess. There were thirty present.

SECRETARY.

NEWS ITEM.

By MRS. W. M. JAY, Editor.

The following news item comes from the secretary of the Christian Temple society and gives us a splendid idea of the work being done there. Please send in your items soon and let us all hear of your good work. Do not forget that this phase of the work is one of the goals on the standard of excellence and that THE SUN's editor only has room for a certain amount each week. We do not want to rush at the last.

"The Woman's Missionary Society of the Christian Temple, Norfolk, held its last regular meeting of the year on the afternoon of June 17th. From the standpoint of interest this has probably been the most successful year of the organization. The women have met once each month in groups, for a program of information, and once each quarter in business session. "A Cloud of Witnesses," "The West Indies," and our own work, have been the subjects of study.

"All were gratified and happy that when the third quarter closed more than three-fourths of the society's requirements were met."

SELF-CONSECRATION IN GIVING.

But Christian stewardship implies also the giving of ourselves to God. We are his by his creative act, and we are his by his redemptive act. "Ye are not your own," said Paul to the Corinthians, "Ye are bought with a price. Therefore, glorify God with your bodies and your spirits which are his." (I Cor. 6:20.) Christ's saving act so intensifies the obligations implied in our stewardship as to lead us to spend not only our means but also ourselves in his service. Because we are his by nature and by grace, we must use every endeavor to realize the ideal he has for us. And this ideal we find in him who was called to be the great High Priest over the House of God. We are to come to him as unto a living stone, and be built up into a "spiritual house to form a consecrated priesthood for the offering of those spiritual sacrifices which are acceptable to God through Jesus Christ." (1 Peter 2:5, Moffatt.)—The Preaching Value of Missions by Montgomery

I never yet found pride in a noble nature, nor humility in an unworthy mind. Of all trees, I observe that God has chosen the vine, a low plant that creeps upon the helpful wall; of all beasts, the soft and patient lamb; of all fowls, the mild and guileless dove. When God appeared to Moses, it was not in the lofty cedar, nor the spreading palms; but a bush—a humble, slender abject bush—as if He would, by these selections, check the conceited arrogance of man. Nothing produceth love like humility; nothing hate, like pride.—Unknown.

ARE WE GROWING BETTER?

Sometimes we wonder if we are deceiving ourselves by believing that the world is growing better and better every day. It is so easy for us to be optimistic in the face of the most formidable trouble. It is possible for a man to sit and whistle in his tent at night when shaking with fear, hoping to frighten the ghosts away. There are many things in this country making a large contribution to pessimism. The reason they do not do so is that pessimism is out of style. The pessimist is scorned, discredited, and altogether undesired. This is the reason why we will go on with social, economic, and religious conditions, carrying the greatest possible amount of distress without saying a word. Men do not want to hear it. They dislike the pessimist. Old Jeremiah nauseates his audience; therefore, dispose of him if he persists in crying out against the social or religious order.

About nine persons out of ten, possibly ninety-nine out of a hundred, believe that the United States has attained its evil reputation as a lawless nation during the past decade of prohibition. We are shocked by the record of 12,000 murders per year in the United States. In proportion to our population, this number is said to be the greatest in the civilized world. We should be ashamed and chagrined by the humiliating horror of it! But we should not allow those who have selfish interests to serve to lead us to believe that murders would be reduced, and that the bloody stain would be wiped from our national escutcheon by a return of the legalized liquor traffic.

In 1895, when the population of the nation was 71,000,000 and when the legalized traffic flourished, the record stood at 10,500 murders. There were, therefore, almost exactly fifteen murders per 100,000 of the nation's population. The World Almanac for 1930 places our annual murder rate at 12,000, with a population of 120,000,000, or ten murders per 100,000. That is exactly 50 per cent less murders per 100,000 population than in 1895, in those "good old" license days. Otherwise stated, if the murder rate of 1895 prevailed now, there would be 18,000 murders annually, or 6,000 more than the record shows. One may credit this to prohibition or not, but the fact is undisputable.

Again, it is probable that blab and balderdash of propaganda has convicted America that Chicago is becoming a hot-bed of crime and violence. The Chicago Crime Commission reports a steady decrease in crimes of violence, in spite of the fact that the city has gained well over a million in population during the past decade. In 1919, Chicago reported 6,108 burglaries, and in 1926, the last report before me, the number had dwindled to 897. In no year since 1919 has the number reached 6,000; in no year since 1920 has it reached 5,000, and in no year since 1923 has it reached 3,000. In other words, it has steadily decreased, and the record for 1919 was almost seven times that of 1926.

The robberies in Chicago in 1919 totaled 2,912. In 1922 the number was down to 2,007, and never reached 2,000 thereafter, and it stood at 1,298 in 1926.

New York is called the wettest city in America. The World Almanac, published by the New York World, perhaps the wettest newspaper on earth (with one deplorable exception), carries official figures which show that arrests for drunkenness for the first three years of this century (1901, 1902 and 1903) averaged 44,268 annually, while for the last three years for which the record is available (1926, 1927 and 1928), the average was 12,560. If population were taken into consideration, arrests were more than four times greater under license than under prohibition. Credit prohibition or not, the fact remains that the blatant blab of persistent and pernicious propaganda is for the purpose of misinforming and misleading the public into false belief that evil conditions have become intolerable, in the face of the fact that under prohibition the improvement has been almost incredible.

These statements are not very assuring. They may discourage some. They may please others. Let us not forget that, after all, we are not living in a world that will improve itself without the assistance of the strongest resolution on the part of its best citizens.—The Way of Faith.

ANOTHER PROTEST ON AMERICAN FILMS.

Recently a committee of the National Christian Council in Japan visited the police department of Tokio in the interest of better movies and a stricter censorship of imported films. On his own initiative, during the conference, the Chief Censor said, "Our greatest problem is with the films which come from America." He added that many of these are highly detrimental to the morals of the Japanese people, and he hoped that the National Christian Council would take steps to secure the stopping of such undesirable pictures from the United States. Rev. William Woodard of Seoul, Korea, remarked that this man was a non-Christian police magistrate requesting the Christian churches to stop the exportation of films which "Christian" America produces and which the industry in Japan desires to exhibit for the money value.

ADVENTURES IN YOUTH FELLOWSHIP

"Youth at Work in the Church."

JEWEL TRUITT, Editor, Waverly, Virginia.

MISS TRUITT WRITES OF HER TRIP TO THE WEST.

Because trips to the West do not come to every young person whose lot may have been cast in the East and who may, as I have always done, heard the West "a-calling," I'm going to try to tell you a little about our trip to Seattle, Washington. Three of our party left Waverly, Va. on the morning of June 10th, spent the afternoon and night at Elon College, N. C., and left for Roanoke, Va. on June 11th to meet the fourth member of our party. That first afternoon's ride, after we were really on our way, is an unforgettable one. We were going West, though we could not fully believe it until we had traveled several days.

Charleston, W. Va., Portsmouth, Ohio, and Marshall, Ill., were "feeding places." June 13th, we drove 510 miles, arriving in Kansas City about nine o'clock. We spent Sunday in the city, attending a Baptist Church, and driving in the city. At Swope Park in the late afternoon we found thousands of people playing. There were quiet family groups enjoying recreation in the great out-of-doors. Most of the groups had brought their balls and some were pitching "four cornered," or "five cornered" games, while some were brave enough to attempt baseball "family style." And sometimes grandpa could outrun big, fat, puffy papa or the less secure little feet of baby. Swope Park contains more than 14,000 acres, so lots of families can come at one time.

The zoo was quite interesting, too. The hippopotamus had the toothache, or else had eaten too much supper! He spent most of his time groaning out loud!

We left Kansas City at nine o'clock and had lunch in Topeka. At about two o'clock, we were at Fort Riley, the geographical center of the United States. Of course we had to send cards from Fort Riley, so our friends could know we were at "the center of the universe." About five o'clock that afternoon we sighted our first oil wells. This oil field was near Gorham, Kansas, and there were forty wells in the field. We stopped, and the foreman explained the process by which the oil is secured.

For days we have been seeing wheat fields, and, sometimes, as far as we can see in either direction, fields of the golden grain greet us. Much of it will soon be ripe, though little has been cut. Only once or twice have we seen reapers in the field. After we had been through wheat fields for three or four days, one of our party declared that "seeing is not believing," and another knew that we had seen enough wheat to feed the people of the world. Occasionally large fields of potatoes were seen. Sometimes men were working in the potato fields with six-horse teams. Large corn fields were more common than the potato fields. The fields, with their crops, were beautiful.

The territory through which we drove for the next few days is cow-boy land. We saw several cow-boys with their herds. This is also a section once visited by the Jesuite fathers, and occasionally missions come into view. Though we slept near a beautiful Catholic mission, we felt a little nervous about the cow-boy part of the bargain. An ex-cow-boy at a garage told us to be sure to get our rates at the hotel when we went in or there might be trouble in the morning. But there was none.

The country is comparatively flat now. The plains stretch out for miles. We selected a mile-post in full view in the distance, and upon reaching it, found we had come twelve miles. The plains are rolling and we can never guess what may be in view next. The cattle, horses and sheep have acres and acres over which to roam in search of food. The ranches are fenced. The ranch homes are far apart. Lonesomeness must play a big part in the lives of the people who live on these vast farms.

Next we came to Colorado Springs and Pikes Peak. Our struggles in this country will have to be given later. We have already been in thirteen States, and hope to see Canada and about ten or eleven more States before returning home.
